From H. P. Brinkworth.—I intend starting for America the 12th. Shall be pleased to once more mingle with the brethren and sisters of America, if spared by the kind hand of Providence. I can assure you it is lonely to be among strangers in spiritual work, and always when contending for the truth to find opponents thereof. May God speed the time for a return of hearts and hands on the now far distant shores of the Atlantic. May God's blessing rest on you and your labors in editing and publishing the BRETHREN AT WORK. It is highly appreciated by some here, especially the poorer classes. I often have calls for more of "those papers that you gave me a while ago." Hoping to be with some of the Brethren soon, I remain yours in the love of the truth.

Rimpton, England, August 3rd, 1878.

From Sarah Summers.—I am much pleased with the paper, though I have not been permitted to read any of the papers till now, and am glad to know how the work is going on in God's moral vineyard. You have my prayer.

THE KIND OF PREACHING.

The preacher read his text,
And named his subject next,
And soon we felt
Our hearts to melt
Beneath the argument that rolled
A steady stream in words of gold.

Would all the preachers so,
Preach only what they know,
And plainly teach
(It's while they preach)
"The good old way," the preaching then
Would doubtless make us better men.

The Word of God we need;
On that disciples feed,
And live, and glow,
While here below,
Until prepared, beyond the night
Of death, to dwell in heaven's own light.

THE CHRISTIAN'S PATTERN.

BY D. P. SAYLOR.

"See, saith he, that thou make all things according to the pattern shewed to thee in the mount." Heb. 8: 5.

WHEN God gave Israel a law, he came down on Mount Sinai and met his servant Moses there, to whom he delivered the law. Some believe that God gave Moses only the ten commandments. That God gave Moses these written on two tables of stone is sure, for it is written in Deuteronomy 4: 13. But in addition to this I believe that God, during the forty days Moses was with him on the Mount, gave him all the law; so that of the law, as well as of the Gospel, it may be said, "All things are of God." Every precept, every statute and every commandment, with the promises and penalties annexed, are all of God, who delivered them to Moses, his servant. Moses is not even left to prepare an architectural suggestion to the making the tabernacle or tent in which God's service is to be performed; but a pattern of it was shewed him on the Mount by God himself, with the solemn injunction, "Look that thou make them after the pattern which was shewed thee in the Mount." Ex. 25: 40. The margin reads, "Which thou wast caused to see." We need not inquire in what way this pattern was shewed him. It is enough to know that God in a tangible form presented to Moses a pattern of the tabernacle just as he would have it made, and just that way is Moses bid to make it, whether it suits his view or not.

Paul says, "For whatsoever things were written aforetime, were written for our learning, etc. And they are written for our admonition." etc. Rom. 15: 4; 1 Cor. 10: 11. Dare we then presume to do any thing religiously otherwise than according to the pattern of it given in the Scriptures? I believe we dare not. And I am doubtful whether God will accept anything we do if done contrary to the pattern given in the Scriptures how it shall be done, though the object may seem to be attained in the way we do it. I mean in things of which a pattern is given in Scripture how we shall do it. For instance, to give to the support of the poor saints, is a Christian duty clearly enjoined in the Scriptures. And the pattern how to do it, is just as clearly given.

Paul says, "Now, concerning the collection for the poor saints, as I have given order to the churches of Galatia, even so do ye. Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God has prospered him, that there be no gathering when I come." 1 Cor. 16: 1, 2. Now is not this pattern just and equal? Have we not poor saints, and are there not unavoidable expenses associated with the house and services of God? Why then is not this heavenly pattern enjoined upon all the members to observe? "Let every one of you lay by him in store as God has prospered him"—some more, and some less, but every one something. If it be but one cent a week, it will be fifty-two cents a year, and one hundred members will amount to fifty-two dollars a year, but surely none in our land ought to be too poor to give this amount. One stick of candy less a week will make it. And one glass of ice-cream less a week, will save ten cents a week for the Lord's service. This would amount to five dollars and twenty cents a year, and for one hundred members it would amount to five hundred and twenty dollars a year. By this I will not have you understand that I mean you shall not eat ice-cream and candy if you are fond of them, and are able to pay for them; I mean only to tell you how to save money for the Lord's service (the poor saints) when you plead poverty to do so.

In our country where hundreds and thousands of gallons of ice-cream are consumed yearly, I know members who claim to be too poor to give into the Lord's treasury, and never give one cent—spend their fifty cents weekly during the Summer months for ice-cream, and walk a mile to the saloon to get it. Why are not these members required to lay by on the Lord's day something for his service? A few have all the burden to bear; they must do all the giving, and even they do it not after the Scriptural pattern, but in ways of their own choosing. But then, after having borne all the burden, I am not sure that the Lord will accept it as being done for him. I am only sure of the approbation of God when I have done all things according to the pattern given in the Scriptures.

That is a solemn saying of the Savior where he says, "Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils, and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity." Matt. 7: 22, 23. It is manifest that these were working preachers. They were not idlers, but workers; and there is no doubt but they did, apparently, some good things, but they did it not according to the pattern the Lord had given, and hence he says to them, "I know you not," and notwithstanding their many works they must depart from him, for they were workers of iniquity. I know that some brethren think their preachers did not baptize right, did not observe the Lord's Supper and Communion right; did not wash feet, etc. Of course they did not do these right, and I suppose they did nothing according to the Lord's pattern. Therefore, I am urging that we do all things according to the pattern given us in the Scriptures, or we may be like them when the great day of the Lord comes.

I believe the text applies to every thing done in the name of religion; and anything done religiously, and not done after the pattern given in the Scriptures, the Lord will not accept as done to him. I believe that not to give in support of the poor saints, and for unavoidable church expenses, as is wrong as not to wash feet, or not to observe any of the patterns given us in the Scriptures. And I believe that under ordinary circumstances willfully to neglect to lay by in store on the first day of the week, so that there need be no gathering when help is needed, is just as wrong as to wash feet religiously in any other way than according to the pattern given in the Scriptures, or to observe any other precept otherwise than according to the pattern given us. Are there any who think this strong meat? If so, let them know this is the position I occupy.

We have no right to depart from one pattern given in the Scripture more than from the other. The pattern to wash feet, and the Lord's Supper, etc., is given in the Scriptures, even so is the pattern for the collections of the poor saints given, and we have no right to change or depart from either, and if we do, we do it at our peril. See, then, that we do all things according to the patterns given us in the Scriptures, and then do we know that the Lord will accept and not reject us. "Take unto you the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand." Eph. 6: 13.—The Vindicator

REST.

BY L. H. DILLING.

I DO not mean retiring from labor, but that heavenly rest which belongs to the salvation of the soul. How may we obtain that rest? Not by folding our arms and doing nothing; certainly not, but by complying with the baptism of Christ, who is with the Father and carrying it out until death. Not until after death will we receive that rest. Without the baptism of suffering, rest is not promised to one single soul. If it were not so, why should we be so particular to be baptized into Christ; so then we ought to make the Bible our Book in our youthful days, and it will be ours in old age and in eternity. Then we shall have that heavenly rest which Jesus Christ said he would go to prepare for all his children. Let us so live that, when we die, we may obtain that heavenly rest.

One by one we're passing over,
One by one we follow on,
One by one we'll meet together,
On that blissful shore of rest.

Then onward let us march,
Till we'll meet each other there,
Where we'll meet to part no more.

LET YOUR LIGHT SHINE.

BY W. BROWN.

THERE is no doubt in my mind, the Savior had reference to his followers in the text, where he says, "Let your light so shine before men." And if we are what we profess to be, our light will shine. What for? That our neighbors and all the surrounding community may see our good works.

Now brethren and sisters, as meek and lowly followers of the Lamb of God, who demands a work, we are not to be lazy, sleepy servants of Christ, or we will fare like the foolish virgins, when the cry was, "The Bridegroom cometh!"—we will have no oil in our lamps. How are we to get that oil in our lamps? By going to meeting, taking our rest, and soon after the services of the Lord begin, commence nodding or sleeping, so that worldly people begin to whisper to each other, "See Mr. or Mrs. is sleeping." This we often see and hear.

Let us take heed to our ways, and not let our farms and property have our whole heart, that when we go to meeting, we soon commence sleeping under the sound of God's Word, and thus have our light evil spoken of. Here the Savior said, "let your light so shine before men; that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

THE CHILD AND PARENT.

BY M. W. WELCH.

CHILDREN are imitative beings. It is curious to observe the first efforts of a child to extend his powers and enlarge his experience. He begins to show his desire to do something, and to make himself acquainted with everything around him, by prattling and grasping at every object within his view. His tiny fingers are always busy. He rolls and tumbles and battles for hours, and after a hundred falls, he learns to stand. The strong desire to imitate everything he hears and sees, stimulates him to persevere in what he has undertaken.

When the first three years of his life are past, if a proper example has been set before him, he has made himself master of the principles of a difficult language; he has become acquainted with all the common objects of nature; he can readily distinguish between the primary principles of right and wrong, and if properly taught, will have a well defined knowledge of God, and thus in three years of his infancy, and that too when the mind is in the bud of tenderness, he has accomplished more, in the same time, and understands it better than the strong and vigorous student who has just issued from the walls of the college. A child will certainly imitate whatever he hears or sees, not only in the nursery, but when he is old enough to enter society.

The parent is the first and most important instructor of the child, and the maximum of this instruction is given by example. It devolves upon every parent to use his utmost endeavors to impress indelibly upon the mind of his child those intellectual, moral and religious principles, those great truths of God and his Word which will kindle in his soul a heaven-inspiring confidence and assist him to over-ride in safety the dashing billows of the angry sea of life. Every child can be controlled by his parents if the proper time and means are made use of. It is certainly wrong for parents to permit his child to do what the God of heaven has taught him is inconsistent with his holy will. When the sculptor makes a failure on a block of marble, he can go to the quarry and procure another without sustaining any considerable loss; but the parent, shaping and moulding the character of his child, whose immortal soul shall live through endless ages, may never be permitted to eradicate the evil which, by his neglect or untimely care, has been planted in the bosom of that once tender and loving child.

The duty of the parent is a weighty and important one; he is held accountable to God for a proper discharge of duty, so that when he is called to stand before that great white throne and Him that shall sit on it,—His children may not rise up as witnesses against him,—but that all may go up as one happy family, fearing over no common danger, but rejoicing, there to dwell with Jesus and Lazarus forever.

WORSHIPING GOD.

BY G. NEVINGLE.

"God is a Spirit; and they that worship him, must worship him in spirit and in truth."

THIS command, coming from the holy One of God, is of the highest importance; for by obeying it, we have the blessed assurance of receiving, not only blessings in this life, but also a home in heaven, where we can sit around the great white throne of God. And by disobeying it, we shall hear at that great day of judgment, the solemn declaration given to Belshazzar of old, "Thou art weighed in the balance and found wanting." Such a verdict coming from the very throne of Justice, would reverberate in our ears throughout eternity; yet it is the decree from which neither rank nor genius, can release us. If we neglect this injunction of our Savior in time, though we enjoy the very highest rank in society, the wealth of a millionaire or the mind of a Socrates, it will not save us from being banished from the presence of God.

In view of these facts, we should always realize that we are in the presence of an all-seeing eye of Jehovah. "Watch unto prayer."

"PEACE BE STILL."

"And He arose and rebuked the wind, and said unto the sea, Peace be still. And the winds ceased and there was a great calm."

SEE the maddened waters raging,
Lash the shores of Galilee;
Wind and wave in war engaging,
On the dark Tiberian Sea.

See the vessel swiftly flying,
Toward the debris covered shore;
Hear the frightened sailor crying:
"Mid the tempest's awful roar.

Now each heart to grace a stranger,
Breathes a prayer on pallid lip,
But one cries amid the danger,
"Is not Jesus on the ship?"

Yes He slumbers on this pillow,
Nothing daunted, though the breath
Of the tempest, strew the billow,
With the countless seeds of death.

Now His followers gather near Him,
As the waves in fury rage;
For they know that devils fear Him,
Can He not the storm assuage?

See, He rises from His slumber,
Whilst the waves the vessel fill,
And rebukes the ocean's thunder,
With a whisper, "Peace be still."

What a calm pervades the ocean,
It is as hushed as a rill;
Not a breath to make its motion
Since the mandate, "Peace be still."

Oh! that Jesus' love may ever
Each disciple's bosom fill;
When we near death's angry river,
May the whisper, "Peace be still."

LIVING BY FAITH.

BY MATTIE A. LEAR.

"I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life which I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me." Gal. 2: 20.

THE Gospel of our blessed Lord was carried into Galatia, a province of Asia Minor, at a very early period. Paul and Barnabas were the honored instruments of planting the precious seed in that region. It appears from Gal. 4: 15, that they, at first received it with great joy; but some Judaizing teachers having gained access among them, soon after the apostles' departure, their minds became corrupted from the simplicity that was in Christ Jesus; and though mostly Gentiles, they were beginning to mingle circumcision and other Jewish observances with their faith in Christ, in order, as they thought, to render it more available to their salvation.

This declension caused Paul to write an epistle to those churches, his object being to counteract the pernicious influence of those false teachers. Nowhere, perhaps in the apostles' writings, does he display a more firm, determined, and inflexible opposition to all who would corrupt the truth from its simplicity.

The great doctrine which is here assailed, and on which the apostle so eloquently depends, is that of salvation by grace, through faith. He shows them that justification is not by works of the law, but by the faith of Jesus Christ, for, says he, "by the works of the law shall no flesh be justified." He labors to convince them that the object of the law was not to destroy or eradicate sin, but to reveal, to expose sin. "By the law is the knowledge of sin." In verse 19, the apostle says, "For I, through the law am dead to the law, that I might live unto God," that is, for I through the agency or instrumentality of the law, am dead to the law. The law has wrought its work upon me, in that it has caused me to see my sinfulness, and also my impotency, my need of a Savior, my need of a power beyond and above myself. This Savior, this power, to which the law directed me, I have found, consequently I am dead to the law, I have no more to do with it. But the design of all this, in the economy of God's glorious plan of salvation was, "that I might live unto God," that I might be led to the very fountain of life and light, to the very source of all good, that I might repose in the bosom of the Infinite, that my soul might find its only and true resting place.

Then in the language of our text, the apostle says, "I am crucified with Christ," with means, association, connection, partnership. Paul would then tell us, he had become associated with Christ in his sufferings, he had become a co-partner with him. Elsewhere this holy man expresses the wish that he might know his Divine Master in the fellowship of his sufferings, he made conformable unto his death. To know Christ thus, what knowledge! To be in possession of this knowledge, is to have every fiber of our affections weaned from the world. Then indeed would we glorify God in all that we do, as the apostle directs. "Whether therefore ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." Then verily, would we realize, that "we were called with an holy calling," that we were not our own, that our time, our talent, our substance, all belong to God, and that we are only stewards of the manifold grace of God, that he will hold us accountable for all that he has entrusted to our keeping.

To do the will of his Father, was the grand aim of our Savior's life. He steadily and unflinchingly pursued this purpose. He never for a single moment lost sight of this object. He patiently and resignedly did what had been allotted to him to do, suffered all that had been appointed to him to suffer. He went steadily forth and did his Father's will, even if doing that will, exposed him to the bitter malice of enemies, and the disapproval of friends. What a contradiction of sinners did he have to endure! Peter tells us that Christ left us an example that we should follow his steps. "Who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously." Oh, who is sufficient for these things? Who is able to walk in the footsteps of Jesus? Blessed Master impart thy wisdom and strength; in thy strength we can do all that is required of us.

Continues the apostle, "Nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me." "Nevertheless," in spite of the fact that I am crucified, "I live," though I have lost all earthly relish. Though the honors, the wealth, the pleasures of earth, are all insipid to me, though I am dead to these, though they cannot awaken a responsive echo within my soul, yet do not think I am devoid of life or vitality, for in spite of this outward, or seeming deadness, I live, I am in possession of a high and noble life, the life of God, a spiritual life. My soul is drawn out after heavenly objects, after things celestial. But how is this life sustained? Not by my own power, "But Christ liveth in me." Christ the living One, the Vanquisher of death is enthroned within my breast. I am united to him by an indissoluble union. Every thought, every affection, every desire of my heart is under his control. His will is my will. His voice I hear, and that voice I delight to obey. The life of Christ in my soul, is my source of happiness. He dispels all my doubts, all my fears, all my darkness, he fills me with a heavenly light and radiance: in that light I bask, in that glory I exult. When my outward trials and pressures are most severe, then Christ is most copious in the dispensations of his grace; "Therefore, for this cause, I take pleasure in infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecutions, in distresses, for Christ's sake; for when I am weak, then am I strong."

And the life which I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God. Faith is defined, as dependence on the veracity of another; thus trust is called faith; because it relies upon the truth of a promise. Now the apostle had perfect faith or trust in the veracity of the promises contained in God's Word, so much so, that he says he lived by this faith, that is, he was inwardly quickened, nourished, actuated by this divine influence, he rested or reposed in it, he continued in it habitually. It was his life, his vitality. "Without faith," says the apostle, "it is impossible to please God; for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." Unbelief or want of faith, seems to be the besetting sin of the human family, hence Paul admonishes his Hebrew brethren, "to lay aside every weight and the sin that doth so easily beset us."

Peter says, "According as his divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue; whereby, (by which, or through which knowledge) are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises; that by these ye might be partakers of the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust."

"As faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God," the first thing requisite for us, is to acquaint ourselves with the Holy Scriptures, for those "exceeding great and precious promises are given to us, only through the knowledge of him who hath called us to glory and virtue."

We will now notice some of the rich promises, God has given us. An exceeding great one is contained in the above quotation. "His divine power hath given unto us all things that pertain to life and godliness." Precious promise indeed, or for faith to grasp it! All things that relate to our temporal or spiritual life are placed within our reach or at our disposal, by the divine power. "For the Lord God is a Sun and Shield, the Lord will give grace and glory; no good thing will he withhold from them that walk uprightly." Psalms 84: 11. All things are possible to him that believeth." Mark 9: 23. "All things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." Rom. 8: 28. "God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that you are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape; that ye may be able to bear it." 1 Cor. 10: 13. "And whatsoever ye shall ask in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son." John 14: 13; verse 14: 15: 7. Let the above quotations suffice as specimens of the rich and glorious promises which God has given to his church. Well might the apostle say, "He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things." Surely God has manifested his boundless love to us in that most stupendous Gift, his only begotten Son. If his love, his kind regard for our welfare, would prompt him to give up his well beloved Son, to ignominy, to suffering and shame, surely he will not withhold from us minor gifts. And he will not withhold from us any thing that is needful for us, any thing that will promote our interest.

And why will we not trust him, why do we repine, and grieve when our wills are crossed? When our whims or fleshly desires are not all gratified, how prone are we to despond. Unbelief—fatal unbelief is the root of all this evil. Humanly speaking, God has done all that can be done to insure our trust—our unbounded confidence. He has manifested his love to us in such a wonderful manner, yet such is the perversity of the human heart, such its callousness, that it is with the greatest difficulty that it can be brought back to a state of entire trust, and repose in the bosom of the Infinite.

The great apostle of the Gentiles has labored hard to portray to the human family the love of his divine Master, that love, the promptings of which he himself had such a rich experience of. See his eloquent, earnest language in Rom. 5: 6-12. In verses seven and eight, he most forcibly depicts the love of God by comparison: "For scarcely for a righteous man will one die; yet peradventure for a good man some would even dare to die." "For a righteous man." The word righteous, is compounded of right and wise. The original sense was probably, a moral, just and upright man. For the preservation of such an one, one would scarcely, barely, with difficulty be willing to lay down his life. "Yet peradventure some would even dare to die." For a pious, godly, holy man, peradventure, it may be, more probably some might be found who would be willing to sacrifice their life. But for a criminal, a justly condemned, and abandoned criminal, who would make great sacrifices, much less suffer himself the penalty of the law, in order to free such a guilty wretch from deserved punishment. Such love never was conceived by the human mind, yet such love has God manifested toward us. Well may the apostle say, "But God commendeth his love toward us, in that while ye were yet sinners, Christ died for us. The second meaning of commend, as given by Webster, is, "To present as worthy of confidence or regard." And has not God presented his love to us as worthy of our confidence, our utmost confidence?

He has made an abundant provision for us, sufficient to meet our every want, our every necessity. All he now asks of us, is to comply with his requisitions, to trust him, fully trust him. We may not always see the end from the beginning; we may not always understand the why's and wherefore's. But in this world we must walk by faith, not by sight. Our heavenly Father doeth all things well. As all things are intimately known to him, he must know where in the happiness of human beings consists; and may from his goodness, be expected to make every provision for that happiness. Did we have a proper understanding of things, and were we left to choose for ourselves, we would choose precisely what God has chosen for us. It is our ignorance and blindness that causes us to dissent from the divine will. We are incapable of choosing properly for ourselves, and as God desires our happiness, therefore he asks us to place ourselves under his guidance, and it is our privilege to seek that guidance, both in temporal and spiritual matters; hence the apostle's exhortation, "Be careful for nothing; but in every thing by prayer and supplication, with thanksgiving, let your request be made known unto God."

The Christian's faith is designed to uplift him above the fluctuating scenes of earth. No matter what may be his condition or surroundings, no matter what the condition of the world, his trust is in the promises of God, and he knows that if he continues faithful, God will verify his promises. Therefore he can sing with the royal lord of Israel, "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want." Psa. 23: 1. Please read the whole of this Psalm, so expressive of confidence in God. The prophet Habakkuk knew what faith was, as the following language shows: "Although the fig tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be in the vines; the laborer of the olive shall fail, and the field shall yield no meat; the flock shall be cut off from the fold, and there shall be no herd in the stalls; yet will I rejoice in the Lord, I will joy in the God of my salvation." Hab. 3: 17, 18.

The apostle says, "What, if some did not believe? shall their unbelief make the faith of God without effect? God forbid: yea let God be true, but every man a liar." If others do not believe, if others do not trust God, their distrust should not in the least effect us. God will be true as Paul asserts, and our own experience will prove, if we but test his faithfulness. "Every good gift," says James, "And every perfect gift, is from above, and cometh down from the Father of light, with whom is no variable-ness, neither shadow of turning." Faith is the key which unlocks the great storehouse of God's bounty.

To be in possession of a firm, unwavering faith, is to possess infinite resources, because it places the possessor in communication with the great source and fountain of all good. "All things are possible to him that believeth." To be rich in faith, is the best of riches—riches which "neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, nor thieves break through and steal," far better than land or stocks. Oh let us then not "Cast away our confidence which hath great recompense of reward." It is our privilege to seek divine guidance, divine assistance in every thing, and in view of our ignorance and helplessness, it is our duty. But when we approach our heavenly Father, we should, as James admonishes, "Ask in faith, nothing wavering; for he that wavereth, is like the waves of the sea, driven with the wind and tossed." The apostle adds, "Let not that man think that he shall receive any thing of the Lord."

THE EIGHT PERIODS.

BY WILLIAM BOURGHE.

THE New Testament considered as a volume of inspired history contains eight periods or cycles. The first begins with the ministration of John the Baptist, and terminates with his imprisonment. The length of this period was about six months.

During this period, John was the only minister and baptized many unto Christ. He also baptized Christ in the river of Jordan. "And Jesus when he was baptized went up straightway out of the water, and lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of the God, descending like a dove, lighting upon him, and lo a voice from heaven saying, This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased."

The second period begins with the preaching of Jesus in Galilee, John being beheaded about that time, and terminates with the crucifixion of Christ. Length about three years and six months, when Christ began to preach and perform miracles, his fame soon spread throughout the land, for he healed all manner of diseases and raised the dead. His labor so increased that he called twelve men to his assistance. Their labor still increased, and he chose seventy more and sent them two and two. But wicked men in high places became uneasy and jealous. They, filled with wrath, sought to destroy him; but Judas one of the chosen twelve, for money betrayed Christ into the hands of these wicked men who crucified him.

The third period begins with the burial of Christ and terminates with his resurrection. Length three days and three nights. This period was a very gloomy one to the little flock of Christ from the fact that Jesus when he had cried again with a loud voice, yielded up the ghost, and beheld the veil of the temple was rent in twain from top to the bottom; and the earth did quake, and the rocks rent, and the graves were opened, many bodies of saints which slept, arose and came out of the graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city and appeared unto many. What made this period so gloomy to the flock? Was it that their Shepherd was taken away,—the old sheep-fold torn to pieces and the flock scattered. Their condition was a pitiable one. O, imagine their feelings,—no Savior to guide and cheer them, neither would God meet them in the temple; for the veil of the temple was rent from the top to bottom. I have often thought these must have been the darkest moments known to humanity.

The fourth period begins with the resurrection of Christ, and terminates with his ascension. Length, forty days. Now as Jesus had arisen, he gathered his little flock and began to cheer them, although some doubted at first. And Jesus came and spake unto them saying, "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost. Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo I am with you always even unto the end of the world."

During this period he was seen at various times, and at one time by over five hundred brethren; but nowhere have we any account that he was seen by sinners during this period.

The fifth period begins with the ascension of Christ, and terminates with the descent of the Holy Spirit on the first Pentecost after the resurrection of Christ. Length about ten days. Just before Christ's ascension, he spake to his disciples saying, "Ye shall receive power after the Holy Ghost is come upon you, and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem and all Judea, and in Samaria and unto the uttermost part of the earth. And when he had spoken these things, while they beheld, he was taken up and a cloud received him out of their sight." Then they assembled themselves together in an upper room at Jerusalem, where they continued with one accord in prayer and supplication.

Then arose Peter and said, "This Scripture must needs be fulfilled, which the Holy Ghost through David spake before, concerning Judas, which was guide to them that took Jesus, for he was numbered with us and had obtained part of this ministry. For it is written in the book of Psalms, His bishopric let another take. And they gave forth their lots, and the lot fell on Matthias, and he was numbered with the eleven apostles. And when the day of Pentecost had fully come, they were all with one accord in one place; and suddenly there came a sound from heaven as a rushing mighty wind, and it filled the house where they were sitting; and there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them, and they were filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with tongues as the Spirit gave them utterance." Here Peter to whom Christ had given the keys of the kingdom, opened the doors to the Jews.

The sixth period commenced with the preaching of the apostles after they were endued with power from on high, on the first Pentecost after Christ's resurrection, and terminates with the death of the last apostle or the cessation of miracles. The length of this period is not definitely known.

At the beginning of this period Peter preached the kingdom of Christ on earth to the Jews at Jerusalem. It increased rapidly. After a while Peter was peculiarly summoned to open the kingdom to the Gentiles, which took place at the house of Cornelius. After this the kingdom of Christ spread still more rapidly, so that men in high places soon became alarmed, and began to chastise them. Prominent among them was a young man of the Romans, highly educated in science and law, who was authorized and deputed as a high sheriff, to arrest Christians wherever he found them to bring them into their courts, to try and to punish them because they worshipped Christ.

One day as he was on his way to Damascus to arrest some of these, suddenly there shone round about him a light from heaven, and he fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying, "Saul Saul why persecutest thou me?" And he said, "Who art thou Lord." And the Lord said, "I am Jesus whom thou persecuted." And he tremblingly astonished said, "Lord what wilt thou have me to do?" The Lord told him and he obeyed.

From this wonderful conversion we may learn three points: first, The power of righteousness; second, The weakness of sin; third, That man's ways are not God's ways. Here we have an illustration of the power of righteousness coming directly in contact with the power of sin. Sin is changed under the influence of the Sun of righteousness, as a snow flake is changed under the influence of the aerial sun, melted to humble submission. This plainly shows that sin cannot enter heaven.

If one who is out of Christ, were permitted to enter heaven, he would have to suffer the most excruciating torment, for he could not withstand the glory of righteousness; but not so with those in Christ, for they shall be like him.

The seventh period begins with the cessation of the apostolic ministry, and terminates with the end of time. The length of this period is not revealed. At the beginning of this period, miracles cease, and the Word of God was established and written, that it might be spread throughout all the world. Then we have a great work to do. Let us put on the whole armor of faith and work with patience.

The eighth period begins with the end of time and its extent will be of eternal duration. This is the period to which we are all hastening as fast as time can waft us along. Then watch and pray.

lest ye enter into temptation; for ye know neither the hour nor the day wherein the Son of Man cometh.

FEED MY LAMBS.

BY D. A. ROWLAND.

"He saith unto him, feed my lambs." John 21: 15.

SEEING in No. 30 of the BRETHREN AT WORK, an article written by brother Moore, on this subject. I take occasion to offer a few thoughts, which I have in the past meditated upon. Having united with the church, in early life, I have had some experience in that direction. "Feed my lambs," is a positive command to those who are fathers and mothers in Israel. Divine Authority holds it up as a command, but I fear it is not heeded very much by a great many.

After we have been baptized, we are babes in Christ, and need the sincere milk of the Word, but how are we to get it when it is not offered to us? Young members should have the attention of older ones. Those that are older should set examples for the younger, and then show by their actions that they really are concerned for the welfare of the young. When there is a few young members alone, and not cared for, is it any wonder that they get weary and feel like turning back to the flesh pots of Egypt? If I am allowed to express myself, this has been my feelings.

When we leave carnality, turn heavenward and have not the sympathy and kind encouraging words of love to cheer us upon our way it makes us feel lonely, and about that time the devil reasons with us and tells, "you had better give it up and go back to the world where you can enjoy yourself." But then a sweet voice whispers, "trust in me, I will never leave you nor forsake you."

Dear brethren and sisters, we all need words of love and comfort from one another. It is food for the soul. Through this world of sorrow, perplexities and disappointments on every hand, we need to try to build each other up in that faith which was delivered unto the saints. We learn in God's Word, if we offend in one point, we are guilty of all. "Feed my lambs," is one point in the commands of Jehovah, and let us not offend in that.

May God help us gather the young lambs into the fold, and then try to give them proper food. How zealous the apostle Peter was in feeding the sheep; let us follow his example, for I do love to see a congregation made up of young members who live out non-conformity in dress and in every department of life. That shows to the world that they have been with Jesus, and learned of him. Let us, young and old be faithfully bound together in the bonds of love, loving one another with a pure heart fervently and the Lord supremely, and God will be glorified, and the benefit ours. So when our troubles and trials are over, we can reign with him above to praise him through all eternity.

"Let thy kingdom blessed Savior,
Come and bid our jarrings cease;
Come, O come and reign forever,
God of love and Prince of Peace.

Visit now thy precious Zion,
See thy people mourn and weep,
Day and night thy lambs are crying,
Come good Shepherd feed thy sheep."

The revelation, that God has made of His will are not so much for knowledge as they are for practice. He who knows and does not, has many stripes awaiting him.

THE ANNUAL MEETING.

THE necessity of a general assembly among our people occasionally, will not be questioned by many, but how to control and properly entertain such multitudes as usually attend our Annual Meetings, is a grave question. At present there is a strong disposition looking toward the diminishing of the crowd, and in that way curtail the expenses of the meeting. In our humble judgment, this is a dangerous move, and one, when once carried into effect, will greatly mar the general social feeling existing among our people.

Each effort made to diminish the number of members usually attending these meetings is a blow at one of the essential, and long cultivated characteristics of our people. Take us, the country over, and we are a people possessing strong social feelings, and take much pleasure in associating with each other, especially on stated occasions, and there is no place where this feeling can be more fully enjoyed than at Yearly Meetings. To deprive our people of this sacred privilege, would be a severe blow on some of them.

Not a few are in favor of giving the power into the hands of a few chosen delegates who are supposed to possess sufficient wisdom to do the business as well as it is usually done by the great multitudes generally present at such meetings. We entertain serious objections to the delegated power. To start out with, we are satisfied that it is not Scriptural. God certainly never designed that the power in the church—the body—should be delegated to a chosen few. It may be well enough in secular matters, but for spiritual things it will certainly be a prolific source of heresy and priestcraft, from which the cause of Christianity has already suffered much, and it becomes us to learn from the history of the past.

Our Annual meeting, if properly conducted and generally understood, may prove a valuable auxiliary in our method of church government, and, therefore, should be used to the best advantage of the church. To cut off the privilege of the laity attending the meeting, would be, perhaps, the worst thing that could be done for the general peace and prosperity of the brotherhood. I have great faith in the effect of the Christian association we enjoy at these meetings. They would be profitable if not a thing else were accomplished. Here we can meet together from far and near, become acquainted, converse with each other and have a general good, happy, religious season of it. By thus associating we become assimilated and partake more largely of that unanimity of sentiment and action that should characterize the people of God. We are therefore in favor of letting everybody go to the A. M. who wants to, and enjoy it. They may as well have a little foretaste of the great meeting in the world to come, as not. It will not hurt any of them, but may do many of them much good.

There is a way of holding our Annual Meetings possessing the following advantages, which, when once understood, will work like a charm:

1. Everybody can go who wants to.

2. Those who do go can hear and get the full benefit of the meeting.

3. The largeness of the crowd in attendance will in no way interfere with the business of the meeting.

4. All who attend can be well cared for, and the more, the better the meeting.

5. It will pay all its own expenses, and the money can be raised without any difficulty whatever.

6. It can be held year after year without being a burden to any person, church or district.

When all this can be done with such great ease, we see no use in committing the business of the church to a few delegates just to diminish the crowd and save a little money, which would otherwise be spent for no better purpose. The Jews used to, on their feast occasions, have much larger assemblies than we, and they got along finely. We can do the same, if, in our church matters, we use the same wisdom that we do about worldly things. At least ten thousand members can be accommodated year after year without being a burden to any person, church or district. Instead of drafting a plan that will diminish the crowd, and leave the business in the hands of a few delegates, let us have a skillfully arranged system that will accommodate the thousands of devoted members that assemble there year after year and listen to the deliberations of the council, and enjoy the pleasant associations of each other.

If considering queries and making decisions were the only work of the Annual Meeting, the delegated system might do far awhile—though general dissatisfaction will even then be the inevitable result—but when we consider the social nature existing among our people, and the good usually growing out of such friendly greetings as enjoyed there, we are led to conclude that the business of the meeting is only a part of the benefits that we derive from such associations. Let us continue to cultivate this commendable feature so characteristic of devoted Christians, and thus more firmly unite our blessed fraternity. May God bless every lawful effort put forth in this direction until we shall "be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment." J. H. M.

WRITTEN LANGUAGE THE MEDIUM OF CONVEYING TO MEN, DOCTRINE AND DUTY.

A WAY back yonder where God began to reveal His will—His character to man, He said to His servants, "And thou shalt write upon the stones all the words of this law, very plainly." The "thou" was commanded to write upon the stones the words of the law—not only words of the law, but all the words. None were to be left out. And the how to write them was just as explicitly given. Write all the words plainly—"very plainly." Thank God for the art of writing! It bears the seal and pleasure of God, and if properly used by Christian hands and hearts, is a power to dethrone Satan.

The Lord commanded His servant Moses, to take twelve rods, representing the twelve tribes of Israel, and write upon his rod. And more: "Thou shalt write Aaron's name upon the rod of Levi." Num. 17: 1, 2. Rods imply correction, justice, power and in the hands of Wisdom are an effective medicine for "murmurings." Next in order is the fact that "the acts of Uzziah, first and last, did Isaiah the prophet, the son of Amos, write." This is proof that God, for good reasons, caused the biography of wicked rulers as well as that of good men to be written for our learning. Grains of truth are obtainable all through the Book of Inspiration.

To Jeremiah the Lord said: "Write thee all the words that I have spoken unto thee, in a book." Jer. 30: 2. To Isaiah, "Now go, write it before them in a table, and note it in a book, that it may be for the time to come for ever and ever." Isa. 30: 8. And to Ezekiel, "Write it in their sight, that they may keep the whole form thereof, and all the ordinances thereof, and do them." Isa. 43: 11. "Write the vision, and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it." Hab. 2: 2. Who can dispute writing? Bears it not the impress—the sanction of Jehovah? Who then can say, "Write not?" Satan does not like the Lord's writing—does not rest easy under the writings of God's children. We now turn to

The Apostolic Age.

Hear Luke on writing. "It seemed good to me also, having had perfect understanding of all things from the very first, to write unto thee in order, most excellent Theophilus." Luke 1: 3. It seemed good to Luke also, means that it had seemed good to some others to "write in order of all things" pertaining to this glorious dispensation. The voice of God commanded the Apostle, "What thou seest, write in a book." Rev. 1: 11. Need I refer you to him who wrote about the "common salvation?" (Jude 3)—to him who declared that "to write the same things, for you it is safe?"

It must be evident to the reader, that Written Language is God's medium of conveying to mankind the intelligence of God's character—of the demands of God upon the human family—of the great fact of the atonement,—of the goodness and mercy of God. No sooner had Jesus ascended to heaven, than some of His disciples began writing the words brought to their remembrance by the Holy Ghost. These words are the product—the fruit of the Holy Spirit, hence carry with them the power of God. They represent the Son of God—His character, and are to us a perfect system. Men and women are required to believe on Jesus through those words, and then by practice, to believe in Him, being in Him by the transforming power of the Word of God. To His disciples He said: "Now are ye clean through the word which I have spoken unto you." John 15: 3. Ah! behold its cleansing power. Let the Word of God

Cleanse Your Hearts.

Pure hearts are made by the Word of God. Clean hearts, holy hearts, honest hearts come by the same means.

In this age of Written Language when nearly all persons in all civilized countries can read, there should be a strong and vigorous effort made to get the words of God into the hearts of the people. The words of men will not do the work, but the words of God will. Deceive not yourself with the words of men, but be wise with the words of God. Study, learn, meditate, fill the mind with Divine Truth.

Do not become alarmed because Satan is using Written Language to further his cause, and yet you ought to be alarmed. Wrest all the printing presses from him you can. If he should lose every one, and they be turned to God's use, all the better for mankind. Be alarmed because the enemy is doing so much harm, and yet be not afraid to lay hold of Written Language with might and main to rescue the perishing. A better medium cannot be employed to sow the good seed. God used it to reveal Himself to us, and we may use it to reveal His holy character to each other. It is a grand means for our good.

Suppose there was no Written Language, would there be any Bibles? Could we get along very well without the Bible? No, not very well. Without it God would have to reveal His character directly to us—directly to each generation; for if He would not, the revelation would become so perverted by man that it would fail of its purpose. Satan rejoices when he can pervert the Lord's methods, but with Written Language he can do nothing, since God has decreed that it shall stand. With Written Language as a medium for God to enlighten us, man need not say to his neighbor, for all can know Him—know the Lord in His goodness, mercy, justice, long-suffering, unlimited power. Go to many parts of the world, and the people know not Jesus. Why this, since the Apostles and first disciples went everywhere preaching the Gospel? Simply because those people did not retain the Gospel—left the Written Word slip out of their hands, and now we see their off-spring sitting in darkness and the regions of darkness. Why are the Hottentots and other wild tribes of Africa, living in sin and degradation? Because they have not the Bible. Why are they living in forests, or plains without any of the blessings of civilization? Because they have not Written Language. Why do they not sow and reap, plant and cultivate like those who live in civilized countries? Because they know nothing of Written Language. Why do they not know the Lord? Because they know nothing of Written Language, and Written Language is God's means of communicating with man. Only by it and through it can we know the mind of the Lord. What then is our duty? Our duty is to know the Lord. We must know Him by reading, studying the Book which He has given us. Each day should be commenced by studying a portion of the Holy Bible. 'Tis good to end the day thus. Ah! it is very good to meditate all the day long on the mind of the Lord. And it is good to read and think over what is written from that Book. Any thoughts drawn from words in that Book should increase our faith and make us better. Words spoken from that Book—sermons preached should strengthen us in love and good works. In fact we should so hunger and thirst after Truth, that wherever found, whenever handed to us, we should take it gladly. A truth is not truth because this man spoke it or that man wrote it, but because it is founded on the immutable law of God. No one is authorized to boast because he discovers a truth—because God favored him with a good mind to discern between truth and error, or because his talent enables him to present the truth in a clear and attractive manner; these endowments are blessings indeed, and men should be thankful for them. To them much has been given, hence much will be required of them. Nor should any one seem to despise Written Language. It is a blessing—God's means of talking to us. We may be very happy with it; and without it, misery and degradation reign supreme. "Let the words of Christ dwell in you richly," is the injunction of the Apostle. Let them get into your heart: they will do you good. Believe the words of God—keep them in your heart—walk by them and be happy. M. M. E.

WE learn that there are about eighty members in the town of Waynesboro, Pa., and that the church is in a growing condition.

BROTHER Henry Koontz, of Pa., an aged minister of some eighty years, is to settle in some part of Illinois. He is said to still be full of zeal for the cause, and quite active in his Master's work.

So far as our duty is concerned we know it much better than we do it. If everybody would do as well as they know, this world would be a paradise. The great trouble is, too many know and do not.

BROTHER Marcus Fowler, of Yellow Creek, Ill., called on us one day last week, on his way home from Iowa. No preventing providence, he expects to move to Jackson Co., Iowa sometime during the coming Winter. He reports health good in that part of the State.

THE Brethren's Sunday-school in Lanark, in addition to being the largest school in town, is in a very flourishing condition. All the officers and teachers are members. No Lesson Leaves are used in the school. We teach the plain, simple Word as it stands recorded in the Book.

If you would avoid the typhoid fever and many other diseases, keep your premises clear of all unpleasant odors, especially near your dwellings. Pure air, good water and plenty of healthy exercise at some useful employment, is an excellent preventative of disease. Less medicine and more good common sense in obeying the laws of health, will prove serviceable to all.

BROTHER David Wolfe, elder of the congregation in Adams Co., Illinois, has been quite unwell during the Summer, with but little prospects of being able to attend to his ministerial labors for some months to come. He is a son of the aged George Wolfe, the pioneer preacher of the West, who died several years ago. So far as we know, the church in Adams Co., is the oldest in the State, and stands much in need of Bro. Wolfe's labors, though there are other ministers to assist, but their territory is large and the opposition strong.

AN eight-year-old son of Bro. Daniel Miller was killed the first of last week, about five miles South of Lanark. The accident was caused by a runaway team. The boy was thrown head-long against a gate post and so severely injured that he died the same day. The whole neighborhood is in deep sympathy with the afflicted family and relatives. A little incident makes the affair very touching. His mother had told him the day before, that if he would be a good boy he should go with her to Pennsylvania this Fall. He replied, that he would commence being a better boy the next morning, but met with the fatal accident only a few hours after he commenced being a better boy. Let other boys learn a lesson from this.

THE LORD'S DAY.

THE right word in the right place is an important thing when it comes to defending the truth and opposing error.

It is quite common, not only among our people, but others generally, to talk of the Sabbath-school, and in many other ways make use of the term Sabbath in a sense that cannot be defended by the Scripture.

The Sabbath was in its time, a divine institution, and remained in force till Christ "blotted out the handwriting of ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us, and took it out of the way, nailing it to his cross."

Instead of the old law, we have the Gospel in which the first day of the week is practically set apart as the day of religious worship. In the Scriptures, this day is called the first day of the week, or the Lord's day.

Sunday is not a Sabbath in the sense the latter term is used in the Bible. The Sabbath was originally kept in memory of God's rest on the seventh day, and the deliverance of Israel from bondage, but our Sunday, which always comes the next day after the Sabbath, is kept in commemoration of Christ's resurrection from the dead.

On the first day of the week we offer the first fruits of our labor to the Lord—give the first day of each week to him and his services, and the remaining six are devoted to labor.

POETRY AND POETS.

FOR some time we have been wanting to say something about our overstocked poetry box, but on looking over a late number of the Golden Censer, chanced to find just what we wanted to write.

"We get ten times as much poetry from our contributors as we can use. Nearly every mail brings poetry. Here, at our desk, is poetry to the right of us and poetry to the left of us.

Now we are not a poet, and to have to read and decide on such quantities of poetry (?), at the risk of afflicting some of our kind-hearted contributors, is a very delicate task.

BROTHER Hillery called on us one day last week. He will likely start for Kansas this week.

BROTHER D. D. Horner, of Westmoreland Co., Pa., called on us last Thursday afternoon. He, wife and another sister are visiting among relatives.

ALL orders for Bro. Stein's pamphlet on "Non-Conformity to the World," are now filled. The little work deserves an extensive circulation and will do good wherever read.

CONSIDERABLE interest is being manifested regarding the written discussion, and there will be great efforts made to have it extensively circulated outside of the church.

DEATH spares no one; it spares not even Jesus. As we write this, the people are gathering opposite our office to convey to the tomb a dear little boy who has fallen asleep.

THERE is nothing wrong in sounding the trumpet of devotion to old principles and ancient landmarks so that it may be distinctly heard and understood, but when men keep up the constant blowing, even to the neglecting of little Christian duties that they owe to their families and neighbors, we begin to suspect that all is not right.

SOME men are too much disposed to abuse women for attempting to keep a neat, tidy house, and in this way discourage the weaker sex in their earnest efforts at making home pleasant and agreeable.

From a reliable source, information reaches us that certain parties, who ought to know better, are publicly using against us, what Buck, in his Theological Dictionary, says about the Ephrata Dunkers, who, under the leadership of Conrad Beissel, drew off from the Brethren about the year 1726, and established a monastic society at Ephrata, Pa.

ON another page will be found an article from the pen of Bro. D. P. Saylor, setting forth, among other things, some timely remarks regarding the Apostolic method of collecting money.

MOST of our readers have perhaps heard of the "Seventh-day Advents," who date their origin from the year 1844, and now number about 30,000 communicants, having their head quarters at Battle Creek, Mich.

ECHOES FROM THE EAST.

A Small Meeting.—A Precious Promise.—Good Preaching.—Believers Comforted.

YESTERDAY had a rainy morning, but notwithstanding, we gathered into the Snowberger meeting-house to perpetuate the worship of God.

only occasionally, just because they want it so. Others go provided it is near, or if the weather is fair. We have no censure to offer, because their stewardship must be accounted for to God.

SMALL MEETINGS.

we shall find no place so desirable as when we are gathered into the special worship of our God. Though we had a very small meeting yesterday, I am glad to tell that we had a good meeting.

The 91st hymn was the introductory. After prayer the 1st chapter of 1st Corinthians was read. Then the ministering brother present made choice of the 9th verse, and spoke

- 1. Of the faithfulness of God.
2. Of our calling in Christ.
3. Of our fellowship in Christ.

After a few words of testimony the 205th hymn was sung, and we knelt to prayers. We spent the afternoon with several brethren at a brother's house, conversing much of "the things that concern the kingdom."

August 18th.—To-day we attended services at Price's meeting-house. Large attendance and a fine day. The 273rd hymn called forth the praises of the Lord's people.

- 1. Faith—as an active principle.
2. Hope—as an abiding principle.
3. Charity—as an all-pervading and controlling principle.

After testimony upon the operations of charity, the 320th hymn was sung and we engaged in devotion. Thus a season of sacred worship was spent, we trust, to much profit and advancement in the ever unfolding life of grace.

In holy bonds, D. B. M.

A PRIVATE letter, from Lemg, Ill., last week, informs us that Bro. Enoch Eby took sick immediately after his return from Lanark, and was confined to his room. This will delay his trip South, some at least.

A BARREL of beer costs the retailer, eight dollars; he sells it out by the glass for twenty dollars. His profits are, one hundred and fifty per cent., and that must be paid by men whose families need every cent they can get to ward off poverty.

A HUNDRED YEARS FROM NOW.

The surging sea of human life forever onward rolls,
And bears to the eternal shore its daily freight of souls.

Though bravely sails our bark to-day, pale death sits at the prow,

And few shall know we ever lived, a hundred years
from now.

O mighty human brotherhood! why fiercely war and strive,

While God's great world has ample space for every thing alive?

Broad fields, uncultured and unclaimed, are waiting for the plow

Of progress, that shall make them bloom, a hundred years from now.

Why should we try so earnestly in life's short narrow span,

On golden stairs to climb so high above our fellow-man?

Why blindly at an earthly shrine in lavish homage bow,

Our gold will rust, ourselves be dust, a hundred years from now.

Why prize so much the world's applause? Why dread so much its blame?

A fleeting echo is its voice of censure or of fame,
The praise that thrills the heart, the scorn that dyes with shame the brow,

Will be as long-forgotten dreams, a hundred years
from now.

O patient hearts, that meekly bear your weary load of wrong!

O earnest hearts, that bravely dare, and striving, grow more strong.

Press on till perfect peace is won; you'll never dream of how

You struggled o'er life's thorny road, a hundred years from now.

Grand, lofty souls, who live and toil, that freedom, right and truth

Alone may rule the universe, for you is endless youth,

When 'mid the blest, with God you rest, the grateful land shall bow,

Above your clay in reverent love, a hundred years
from now.

Earth's empires rise and fall, O Time, like breakers on thy shore,

They rush upon thy rocks of doom, go down, and
are no more.

The starry wilderness of worlds that gem night's radiant brow,

Will light the skies for other eyes, a hundred years
from now.

Our Father, to whose sleepless eyes the past and future stand

An open page, like leaves we cling to thy protecting hand.

Change, sorrow, death are naught to us, if we can safely bow

Beneath the shadow of Thy throne, a hundred years from now.

SELECTED GEMS.

The sweetest blossoms of all the year
May soonest wither and disappear.

—Be not unmindful of the miseries of others.
—Honor is a divine good; no evil thing is honorable.

—Praise not a worthless man for the sake of his wealth.

—Do nothing which will occasion pain or grief to yourself or others.

—It is a proof of a weak and disordered mind to desire impossibilities.

—The greatest infelicity is, not to be able to endure misfortune patiently.

—Wisdom and justice are desirable, because they procure us the enjoyment of pleasure.

—Lay in wisdom as a store for your journey from youth to old age, for it is the most certain possession.

—"I had rather," said Seneca to Nero, "offend you by speaking the truth, than please you by lying and flattery."

—To detract anything from another, and for one man to multiply his own conveniences of another, is more against nature than death, than poverty, than pain, and the rest of external accidents.

—A man may plunder your home in the dead hour of night, may defraud you of your property, or even rob you on the highway; yet he is a saint, compared to him who would destroy your soul—and that the rum-seller does.

—That every day hath its pains and sorrows is universally experienced, and almost universally confessed; but let us not only attend to mournful truths; if we look impartially about us, we shall find that every day has likewise its pleasures and its joys.

—Peace does not dwell in outward things, but within the soul. We may preserve it in the midst of the bitterest pain, if you will remain firm and submissive. Peace in this life springs from acquiescence even in disagreeable things, not in an exemption from suffering.

ABOUNDING LOVE.

BY WM. EISENBISE.

THE more I learn of Christ and of His great mission in the world, the more I think of His abounding love toward the human family;
not only to those that obey Him, but the sinner also, that is away from Him. Remember, dear reader, you who are away from Christ, aliens and strangers from the commonwealth of Israel, that it is you that Jesus came to call, not the righteous, "but sinners to repentance." You remember that there were ninety and nine that were safely in the fold, but one was gone astray. Jesus leaves the ninety and nine and goes after the one that was lost.

You remember too, dear sinner, that He said on one occasion, "They that are whole need not a physician, but they that are sick." Those that are sick of sin, come to Jesus, who is standing with outstretched arms, and He will make you whole. If the world were all converted but one soul, He would still yearn after that one who is away from Him. If the world could only realize the love of God as it is in Jesus, they would be won by His affection; their eyes would melt to tears; they would join in with the people of His choice, and rejoice in the God of their salvation. Jesus loves you, sinner, with a love past description, such as no earthly friend ever had—loves you in your wickedness, if you are wicked, loves to save you from it. He died upon the cross to save you from your sins.
It is a rare thing that a man lays down his life for his friend, but Jesus died for His enemies.
If I only could make this truth plain to you,
and the importance of obeying Him, it is worth more than all the world; for what can you give in exchange for your soul? If you accept Him and obey Him, it will be well with you in this life and in the life to come.

VENGEANCE IS MINE.

BY S. CORRELL.

THIS subject is so often transgressed by those who profess to be the followers of that great Moral Law. How often do we find men taking revenge—that which belongs to God.
When a brother or neighbor does something wrong, do we take revenge on him? When we find him in the mire, do we help him out according to Scripture? Ah, how many will trample him down farther? Is this the spirit of God? Ah, no; but the spirit of the adversary. If one makes a misstep, the first thing is, we must take revenge on him. The Gospel will not let us go to law, but we will take advantage any how. We will take the coward's plan. We will slip around and tell some lies to the grand jury, and have our revenge in that way. We will cause him some trouble at any rate. Is this the spirit of a true follower of Christ? Ah, no! Paul says, "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good." Rom.
12: 21. We know it is according to the carnal nature to be revengeful, but we must be born again, and walk after the spirit, if we would be free from condemnation. Rom. 8: 1. The Lord would have us fulfill all His Will; this is one reason why David was a man after God's own heart. Acts 13: 22.

We will also mention a few more reasons why we believe that David was a man after God's own heart. One was, because he was not revengeful. When the enemy sought to kill Saul, and the Lord delivered him to David, yet he would do him no harm. 1 Sam. 24: 10, 26, 9. Another reason was because of his candid acknowledgment. We would not have our readers to think that David never did wrong;
but when he did do wrong, he did not try to screen himself, and put the blame on some innocent person. Ah, no; but he acknowledged his wrong, and addressed a throne of grace for forgiveness.

SEEKING THE REPUTATION OF MEN.

BY WM. R. HARRIS.

THERE seems to be a great desire on the part of men to acquire reputation, but we do not believe it is desired by the true and devoted follower of Christ. We read that Jesus, our great exemplar, made Himself of no reputation.
On several occasions He positively refused the honor that men were wont to bestow upon Him, and apparently took a place where He knew honor would not be given Him. He was of humble parentage; His life was one of poverty, and all through His earthly career there was no seeking after honor or reputation. When He went about doing His Father's work. He never sought the applause of the great, but on the other hand, we find Him associating with the lowly of the earth; He sat at meat with those who had been rejected and spurned. In consequence of this, He was maligned, slandered, and reproached by the great, until finally He was brought as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so He opened not His mouth.

But His day of honor came; the days of mockery, shame and persecution came to an end. After He had bowed His head and given up the ghost, His heavenly Father exalted Him and gave Him a name which is above every name; that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is the Lord, to the glory of God the Father.

Now, brethren and sisters, we think, from the life of Christ, we may learn very certainly, that the desire for reputation and honor in the world, is an unholy one. Jesus made Himself of no reputation; He did not desire the applause of the world, and we believe if we are His followers we will not desire it, neither will we have it.
Those who follow the humble teachings of Jesus, cannot expect to be popular in the world.
Christ tells His disciples, "If ye were of the world, the world would love its own, but because ye are not of the world, therefore the world hateth you." Why is it, brethren and sisters, that we are so much concerned about what the world will say about us? Should we not be contented to live beneath the cloud of human displeasure and human reproach for a little while, when we have the assurance that if we are faithful and true to Him who hath redeemed us, our light shall finally break forth like the rays of the morning, and our sun shall never go down?

"WE HAVE NO SUCH CUSTOM."

BY E. A. ORIC.

WHAT would be thought of a minister who would preach a sermon on baptism, demonstrating by the Scriptures with great zeal and firmness that it is a God-given means of salvation and then, before closing, he would rehearse all the evidence, and cry out, "We have no such custom neither the churches of God?" Or, suppose he were to discourse with great force and earnestness on the essentiality and sacredness of the Lord's Supper, and then say it is not necessary to "keep the ordinances as I have delivered them to you." Suppose he should deliver another discourse with equal force and earnestness, on the subject of women praying with their heads covered, proving, beyond a doubt, that it is a dishonor to her head, and an insult to angels not to comply with the commandment, and yet after all of this, just because some one seems to be contentious, he will say, "We have no such custom." Such a minister would be hooted out of the pulpit. But be careful or you will drive brother Paul, the great Apostle out; for if we believe modern theorists' comments on the 11th chapter of Corinthians, he did just such preaching. Better be more on the guard, lest you be found fighting against God.

How does it come that some will be contentious? Let Solomon answer: "Contention cometh only by pride." Prov. 13: 10. This is the whole secret; if you can get pride out of the heart, there will be no more contention—no trouble to get them to do all the Master says.
May the Lord give us humble hearts, for He "resisteth the proud and giveth grace to the humble." 1 Peter 5: 5.

SLURS ON WOMEN.

OF all evils prevalent among young, we know of none more blighting in its moral effects than to speak lightly of the virtues of women.
Nor is there anything in which young men are so thoroughly mistaken as the low estimate they form as to the integrity of women. Not of their own mothers and sisters, but of others, who, they forget, are somebody else's mothers and sisters. As a rule, no person who surrenders to this debasing habit is to be trusted with an enterprise requiring integrity of character.
Plain words should be spoken on this subject,
for the evil is a general one, and deep-rooted.
If young men are sometimes thrown into the society of depraved or thoughtless women, they have no more right to measure all women by what they see of these, than they have to estimate the character of honest and respectable citizens by the developments of crime in our police courts. Let our young men remember that their chief happiness in life depends upon their utter faith in woman. No worldly wisdom, no misanthropic philosophy, no generalization can cover or weaken this truth. It stands like the record of itself—for it is nothing less than this—and should put an everlasting seal upon lips that are wont to speak slightly of woman and her mission. If there were more morality among young men, we might hope for a more virtuous race of women.

LOVE FOR THE CHURCH.

BY N. S. DALE.

WHAT is more beautiful to behold, than to see that we love the church of the living God—His body—the glorious body of believers in Christ, founded on the Gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ? That is a glorious foundation. When we obey, God will give us peace and happiness in this world, and in the world to come, life everlasting. The church below should resemble the glorious church above, united as dear children together. We are reminded in the Gospel, to be as little children in love and union, loving our heavenly Father with a true love, and the body of Christ, as dear children, not to be pulled up one against another, for this is not like children. We should be as children in not doing evil, and in every way be wise as serpents, and harmless as doves. Not wise in worldly wisdom, but in spiritual—not the wisdom of this world, for they are not children that are schooled in the wisdom of this world. Those who are schooled in this world, love not the church of the living God.

How glorious is our lot, when united with the church below and in the one to come. We have regard for each other in our sufferings, and persecutions in this world; and great is the reward of the followers of the Lamb. The treasures in heaven are promised to the faithful servants of the Lord—those who do His commandments.
Those who take hold of the plow and look back, are not fit for the kingdom of heaven. How beautiful to behold the children of God doing their duty with cheerfulness and love. But how sorrowful to see brethren drawing back and disregarding the commandments of the Gospel of our Lord and Savior.

Dear brethren, sisters, and readers, let us all be faithful in our calling, that we may be the children of God, so that we can meet one another in heaven, where parting will be no more.
If we love one another as Christ tells us, we are then called His children or servants.

HE THAT RUNS MAY READ.

BY SAMUEL SALA.

"Neither do men put new wine in old bottles;
else the bottles break, and the wine runneth out and the bottles perish; but they put new wine into new bottles, and both are preserved." Matt. 9: 17.

THE Savior's object in the language above, was to teach John's disciples why His disciples did not fast, and of course He designed that they should understand Him. But if He,
by the old and new bottles, meant the Old and New Covenants they could not understand Him, for they knew but little, if anything, about the New Covenant, as it had not been written at that time, and but a small portion revealed even to the chosen twelve. And if He, by the bottles, meant our bodies, and by the wine, the Holy Spirit, then must there be old and new bodies in this life, (for we now want the Spirit to lead us into all truth), and there must be an old and a new Holy Spirit, which is absurd.
But if He meant that it was impossible for His disciples to fast, (which is an indication of mourning), while enjoying the society of their Deliverer and Messiah, and while their hearts were filled with the glad tidings of great joy which should be to all people, as it was for old bottles to hold new wine, then He meant about what He said and they could easily understand Him.

CROSSING THE RIVER.

A CHRISTIAN man was dying in Scotland,
His daughter Nellie sat by his bedside. It was Sunday evening, and the bell of the Scotch kirk was ringing, calling people to church. The good old man, in his dying dream, thought he was on his way to church as he used to be, when he went in his sleigh across the river, and as the evening bell struck up, in his dying dream he thought it was the call to church.
He said: "Hark, children, the bells are ringing!
we must make the mare step out quick!" He shivered, and then said: "Pull the robe up closer, my lass! It is cold crossing the river, but we will soon be there!" And he smiled as he said: "Just there now!" No wonder he smiled. The good old man had gone to church.
Not to the old Scotch kirk, but to the temple in the skies. Just across the river.

CORRESPONDENCE.

From England to America.

Dear Brethren:—

THROUGH the mercies of our Heavenly Father, in preserving our lives and granting to us a safe voyage and journey from home to the free shores of America, we are enabled to pen you a few lines, which shall be only traveling notes by the way, leaving the important news relative to the Brethren, the accounts of travel in England, and the probable success of an extended and well-directed mission by two or three brethren, for another article.

I started from home, Kington, Somersetshire, on the 9th day of Aug., at 9:40 A. M., traveling through some places of note in England, Clottenham, being the place where father and mother were born and raised; Oxford, where one of the Universities of England is located; Birmingham, one of the central cities, and noted for iron and coal trade, and Birkenhead opposite the large city of Liverpool, where we could see four miles of lights along the beach, filled with the masts of vessels from all parts of the world. We also on the journey passed through Wales. Enjoyed the privileges afforded by scenery, among the Welsh Mountains.

Arrived at Birkenhead, at 11:30 P. M., we were met by Emard Company's agent, and conveyed by the river Mersey to Liverpool, and to the hotel of our friend, where we at once took out a ticket from Liverpool to Chicago, via Pennsylvania Central route. After a few hours refreshing sleep, we awoke and at once commenced moving around, for we were told at 9 A. M., they required all steerage passengers to be on board the steamship, Bohnia. After breakfast some of the boys went up in town to buy a few of the necessaries for the journey, and a few things as relics of old England, which are cheaper and better quality than here. From the City to the docks at 9 A. M., tender Satellite conveyed us to the ship, where we found ninety-nine passengers and two hundred and eighty or more in cabin, the last named arriving at 12 M. The mail, about twenty tons, having arrived, the anchor was hoisted, and at the return of tide, our large vessel weighing and displacing her weight of 4,553 tons, moved gently away about 4:15 P. M. We all looked to see our native country as we passed along, a number thinking they would never return, whilst others may have been sorry to leave. Many of the cabin passengers and some steerage were excursionists to Paris to the Exposition.—Amongst them Captain Bogardus, the crack pigeon shooter of Illinois or America, who has been to England and beaten at several places, the best shots of England. He also showed us all his medals, and the large silver cup, worth 50 guineas, given as a reward to the one who should win at the London match of $2,500 a side. Arrived in Queenstown, Ireland, Sunday afternoon, received mail and passengers, and started at 3 P. M. for Jersey City, our next station, over 2,000 miles distant.

Nothing of note across the Atlantic, pleasant voyage. Had the prophesied rough weather from New York at the day we were to start (11th), and it lasted all night and next day; making many passengers very seasick, ourselves included, but when that was over, which took five days with your correspondent, we were ready to enjoy the remainder of the trip.

Arrived in sight of land 20th inst., Long Island being the point, and soon State of New Jersey on the other side. The cannons sounded the departure of the sun, when we were opposite them, but we had not passed the Quarantine. So we were not allowed in New York till next morning. The U. S. Surgeon arrived at the Quarantine, to examine passengers, accompanied by U. S. Marshal, Berward and another detective, who were on the search of a certain German, who could not bear the cable in travelling. He was found and arrested for murder of a man in Sweden, and forgery, and conveyed back by U. S. Marshal, who took him to Stockholm for trial, etc.

After arrival in New York next morning 21st, we passed the day in the city, visiting Central Park, which is certainly ahead of any nobleman's park in England, for natural scenery and other things. At 5 P. M. we were at Pier No. 1, to again start to Jersey City, and to pass on to Philadelphia. Arrived in the city 12:30 A. M., and at breakfast time, found ourselves at Harrisburg, Pa. At Millin we sent a telegram, to meet editors of Primitive Christian at the depot, which we did; we not having seen any brethren since Bro. Eby and Fry left England, were becoming impatient. Could not stop on account of through ticket, and also had a number of emigrants, who were depending on me to tell them what to do, change their money, and see they get their right change, etc. Arrived in Chicago at 7 P. M., 23rd inst., and took cars next morning for Lanark at 9 A. M.; was obliged to lay over at Freeport, Ill., from 3 P. M. till past one Sunday morning, and only about eighteen miles from Lanark, nevertheless we were there and made the best of it, by going to the post-office, and finding out who took the BRETHERN AT WORK, and also found sister Baker and her estimable husband, who, though not a brother, certainly ought to be one; whose kindness and hospitality I shall not soon forget. At 1:15 for Lanark, where I arrived at 2 A. M. and found Bro. Moore's residence in time to have a few hours rest before going to the Cherry Grove meeting at 10 A. M., the first Brethren's meeting in America on return, the last one being, as some remember in Philadelphia, Bro. J. E. Gish, of Woodford Co., Ill., preached an excellent discourse from Eph. 2: 1, 2.

Truly brethren and sisters I can say, I enjoyed the meeting, I was again with those I could worship with, according to the dictates of our own hearts, those of the same faith, one faith, and I can sympathize with those isolated members who also are deprived of meeting with their brethren and sisters in divine fellowship. A little deprivation of these blessings will enable us to know their real value. More anon.

By-Laws of Ashland College.

At the request of a number of Brethren and for the benefit of all interested in this institution, I submit an abstract of the Preamble and By-Laws attached to the charter by which said institution is to be governed.

PREAMBLE.

Whereas, the Ashland College is permanently organized and the Trustees having met to transact business as set forth in the charter granted Feb. 22nd, 1878. Therefore resolved, that the entire control of said institution shall be in the hands of members of the German Baptist (Brethren) church and all business pertaining to the College be regulated by the following

BY-LAWS.

ART. 1.—None shall be eligible to office but Brethren who are in good standing in the general brotherhood and are zealous advocates of the faith and practice of the Brethren's church.

ART. 2.—SEC. 1. The number of Trustees shall be fifteen, five of whom shall constitute a quorum.

SEC. 2. The present Trustees shall remain in office one year, or until such time as may be suitable to commence the regular annual election, at which time one third of the required number shall be elected for one year, one third for two years and one third for three years.—Voting may be done by proxy.

ART. 3. The officers of the Board shall be President, Vice president, Secretary, Treasurer, Librarian and register of scholarships.

(Article 4th defines the duties of each officer, which is as usual in such bodies.)

ART. 5. The committee of the Board shall be four in number: Executive, Finance, Building and Instruction.

(Article 6th defines the duties of each committee, requiring each to make a full report to the Board.)

ART. 7.—SEC. 1. The meetings of the Board shall be governed by the same Parliamentary rules as other deliberative bodies.

ART. 8. The President of the College shall be ex officio member of the Board.

ART. 9. All papers requiring the College seal shall be signed by the President and Trustees of the College.

Without going into a lengthy description I need only say that the institution is well guarded against running into debt, or into pride, for in regard to the latter, the same rule will be followed in regard to teachers who are members, as directed by the Annual Meeting in reference to evangelists. We would be glad to give the entire Charter and By-laws, did we not fear to trespass on the columns of the paper.

Stray Thoughts.

WHILE "writing for the train," I will arrest a few thoughts for the benefit of those way off readers to whom the BRETHERN AT WORK makes its weekly visits, for I am certain there are thousands of its readers who would like to have a nearer view of the place where it is published and those who publish it, so I will lend them my spectacles, and even my eyes just for a moment.

THE PLACE.

is Lanark, of about fifteen hundred inhabitants, and quite a number of churches, with tall spires, (I mean those not blown down). The Brethren and the Disciples seem to have the chief influence in the town, while the other denominations are struggling to pay their ministers and the ministers are struggling with small salaries to keep up their churches. The Brethren have only of late built a church and already possess the best Sabbath-school and the best filled house during times of preaching.

THE PRINTING-OFFICE.

where the BRETHERN AT WORK and the CHILDREN AT WORK are published, is in a two-story brick building, every available space of which is well occupied. In the lower front room is our Danish brother lending books, with neatness and dispatch to collect honor to himself.—His modest Quaker face and general intelligence makes a good impression on the visitor. In the room just behind, is the steam-power press, which prints three weekly papers, numbering not far from—thousand copies weekly, besides an immense amount of job work, pamphlets, books, etc.—all under the skill of Bro. Sword who has the happy faculty of being engineer, pressman and a man of several other trades combined. In the second story and front room, is the editors' sanctum, where sit our two editors at whom our readers want to take a special look.—Well there is brother Moore, editor-in-chief of the BRETHERN AT WORK. He is a portly man, about 32 years old and weighing over two hundred, with rich brown hair and beard, rather small, restless eyes and a smile always lurking in the corners of his mouth, ready to break out into a good laugh on the slightest provocation, but kept in subjection by something behind. I would tell you more of those piercing eyes, did his modesty not forbid.

At his elbow sits brother Eshelman, the editor of the CHILDREN AT WORK, and if ever a man found his place, Bro. E. did. A small man, pale-faced, of scanty beard and serene countenance with all the manners suited to make the children feel that he is one of their number, in heart, in sympathy, if not in age and knowledge, and I am certain if the children have the chance to select their editor, the CHILDREN AT WORK will be their paper. On the side of the room opposite the editors is the mailing clerk, Bro. S. M. Eshelman, with his addressing machine. Behind the sanctum is the compositors' room, where Bro. Plate, a thorough practical printer, is foreman, and is assisted by the nimble fingers of six female hands. I observed, that if you want work done rapidly and neatly, employ females. Now my paper is full and I have drawn a pretty accurate picture for my readers to look at, but how I am to get it into the paper without the watchful eyes of the editors to detect it I hardly know. I think I will do this: I will be responsible for its very personal character myself and send it to Bro. Plate and tell him to slip it into the paper just as it goes to press, and the editors can't help it.

From McDonalds, Virginia.

Dear Brethren:—

WE are realizing our brightest anticipations to which we gave expression in our former communications. Baptisms are constituents of most of our Lord's day meetings, and as omens of decidedly happier times in the future, our accessions are from the most influential members of the neighboring denominations, persons of deep personal piety and thoughtfulness.

With the intention to the suggestion of prudence on the part of our ministry and members, which means upright lives and industrious application of those agencies appointed for the conversion of sinners, we will be able to establish a combination of influences, that will perpetuate our peculiar principles to remote posterity.

I see in your edition of number thirty-two, page eight, you make me to say substantially that the "Baptists cannot classify their theology of baptism." Did I not say clarify in the manuscript? The fact is, Brethren, the classification of their baptism would be very uncomplimentary. Eusebius' one idea religion third century, English one idea burial sixteenth century. It would better suit their purposes not to attempt to classify it.

They cannot clarify it with much better success. The removal of the corrupt elements would not have enough of the "pale original" to tell what it was. Very much it would be, like the historical pantaloons of the cotton field negro, which had been patched and quilted till there was nothing left of the original article.

I advise them, not to attempt either but to fold them up, baptism and all, label them in large Roman capitals, MAN'S INVENTIONS, put in a neat wrapper on which write the word Error, and deposit alongside with the musty exploded religious, philo-sophical, scientific, and political theories of the departed ages.

I essayed to preach at a place in our field called Den Hill on last Sunday from the 5: 20 of Matt. It was a new theme to the audience, judging from the attention they gave during its delivery. The 23rd chapter was read in connection therewith. The gist of the discourse, was the tendency of modern Christianity to ignore practical and exact the ritual, to burnish the shell and neglect the kernel.

Let your ministerial workers study up the subject of that verse, and report the same to their congregations at their next meeting, and in the application of the significant text let the Brethren's church have the first benefit, for "judgment must begin at the house of God.—We need a severe purging experience in some places just now.
D. W. MOOMAW.

GLEANINGS.

From John C. Mays.—We were out to Baptist meeting a few days ago and had the pleasure of hearing a graduate preach. This man has been studying in college about five years. "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." He said, "This we cannot do and God does not require it of us." If he had been studying the Gospel five years, he would have learned better; we yet think he was studying something else.

From J. J. Hoyer.—On last Sunday the 11th of August, two young men were drowned in the Congress Lake near Hartsville, Ohio. It is supposed they were under the influence of liquor. So much for Sabbath breaking.

From C. H. Balsbaugh.—Wrong impressions should be obliterated as soon as possible. They may seem insignificant, but they have all future history, Eternity included, for their operation, and many minds in which to work, and the result may be tremendous. The difference between Fame and Fame, in the sense in which the word is used in BRETHERN AT WORK, current volume No. 33, first page, second column, 29th line from the top, is just the difference between carnality and holiness, Heaven and Hell. There is indeed an "Eternal Fame of Grace," which is the glory of the Saint, and the marvel of the Trinity but this will not fill out the figure in the passage referred to. To be a Fame of Grace, an Eternal Fane, requires a good deal more chipping and chiseling, and hammering, and testing, than most of us are willing to endure. To be masoned under the hand and hammer and plummet of the Great Architect, means our best blood and all of it, and the blood of Christ besides. Our blood represents our all, as in Christ it represents the all of both Redeemer and redeemed. To be a living gem in the "Eternal Fane of Grace," we must keep the nail and spear wounds of the Cross ever open, crucified with Christ, so that the old man may constantly decrease, "I die daily." "I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me." Where Esau and Jacob wrestle in one matrix, it is a mighty work to keep Esau's heel from slipping out of Jacob's hand. Gen. 25: 21, 26.

From Lemuel Hillery.—Those of you who are interested in us moving West, will please remember that the former notice in the BROTHERS AT WORK did not state that I had found the place where we would locate our colony, but from Jewell Co., Kansas, I would look at the country, making the Solomon River country a special point. We intend yet to do so.—The Lord willing, we shall start next week to fully complete our work. It is our intention to look in Southern Nebraska, if we can not find any thing in Northern Kansas. It is further our intention to settle in as good country as there is in Northern Kansas or Southern Nebraska, where land is cheap, rich soil, good water and some timber or coal. I would also state that our rules will be published in the BROTHERS AT WORK in a few weeks. I am constantly receiving letters of inquiry as to when we will organize and when the colony will start. We will organize between this and January next. Some will move out in Feb. next, while the most will move out one year from this Fall. I have now thirty applicants for membership in our colony, but that will do no good unless they move out. I have written these few lines in order that the many who have written to me for information may be patient until I can answer all. I have just returned home from Central Illinois, and now have much to do before I can answer all of your letters. But you will be informed in the BROTHERS AT WORK as to where I am and what I am doing, and about the prospects.

Shannon, Ill., August 28th.

From Michael Forney.—On the 31st of July, I met with the brethren and sisters near Henderson, Kentucky. Found members in love and union with each other. Had fifteen meetings with them while there. Held a Communion on the 6th of Aug., six precious souls united with the church by baptism. The members are much encouraged, they desire ministers to visit them as often as possible. There seems to be a good opening for doing good. Arrived safe home on the evening of the 14th, enjoyed good health.

From John S. Buck.—A poor man came to my place late one evening, in May last, and wished to stay all night, and I took him in and there was one of your papers lying on the table. He took it up and commenced reading and became very much interested in it, as he had never heard of the Brethren. The next morning he took a paper with him, and wished me to send some to his wife, which I did. His family is in Arkansas. On last Thursday he came this way again on his way home and he had become very much interested in the Brethren. He would like to have the BROTHERS AT WORK sent to him. He was raised a Baptist, and said he belonged to the Baptists; but he said he saw that their persuasion was not right. Said he had become very much enlightened since he has read your paper. He is a man that has been much sick, yet seems to be a good, moral man. Has been very unfortunate, lost every thing he had, and was begging to try and get his family out of Arkansas. If you can, send him the BROTHERS AT WORK.

[We gladly send him the paper, hoping it may be the means of leading him to the whole truth.—Eps.]

From T. D. Lyon.—We are still in the land, and among the living. Are enjoying good health. Our paper finds us regularly, bringing good news from the various parts of the great Brotherhood, and is always hailed with joy by us. And while we are the "Little Sister," perhaps those sailing more smoothly, and more able to overcome opposing obstacles, would be glad to hear, that we too, are made to rejoice occasionally. On last Lord's day, we had the pleasure of receiving by baptism, a young man, in the prime of life, whose complete surrender, and commendable zeal and hearty response to the usual questions in the water, sent a thrill of good feeling to all on the shore. O for more such seasons!

From Middletown, Connecticut.—I arrived at this place three weeks ago. Find spiritual things very low; no Brethren here. Find some that would unite with such a church as I describe, if there was one here. They admit the doctrine to be correct as far as I was able to tell them. I am no minister, but when we read those passages like Rev. 22: 17, how can we sit still and see our fellow-men die with thirst, lost unto all eyes, and we being the ones that have failed to declare what God has made us the stewards of? "Freely ye have received, freely give." A minister may administer all the ordinances, a layman should labor faithfully, wherever the opportunity is offered. We should be a peculiar people, zealous of good works, letting our light shine in the dark places as Christ requires, not neglecting one thing, but fulfilling all that the Gospel sets forth, that they may know we are more than good moral men; yea returning thanks in our families for all things at all times, that we may be faithful servants of Christ; who shall say, "Enter into the joy of thy Lord," when time ends here below.

C. R. COX AND.

From Mary A. Riggle.—I feel that I should add my experimental testimony to your "Thoughts for Christians" in No. 30 of the BROTHERS AT WORK, and many more, I have no doubt, could do the same. I did not wish as the younger girl said, that I had never joined the church, but I often become weary struggling alone; for no one seems to think that I needed anything more, and instead of receiving the milk, that my weakness required, strong meat was dealt out, which I was not able to manage; and therefore had to tug and toil along as best I could, to live through it, or die trying. O, if only the minister would once learn to take care of the tender lambs, as babes of the household of God! how many an innocent soul might be saved, and kind and weary hearts lifted up, which are left to sink into darkness by the perplexities of life, and the neglect of the ministers and fathers and mothers in Israel. Oh I think I must awaken an interest in the hearts of all to look around and see whether there is not some weak one perishing and ready to die for the want of kind words and a little attention to pull them up and help them along.

From Greasy Creek, Va.—According to previous arrangements, our Brethren held a meeting in Patrick, an adjoining Co., on last Sunday, the 11th. Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, there was a large congregation assembled. Being one of the first meetings the Brethren ever held in that vicinity, all seemed to have an anxiety in hearing the word preached. After preaching, we assembled at the water side, where we received one dear Bro. by baptism. Never in my life did I behold such a scene. It was a heart-rending one, to see the anxious lookers-on.—Some ascended the mountain side in order to see the ordinance performed, some ascended bushes and trees to see; all seemed to take an interest in the Brother. We heard the expression made, that a Dunkard baptism would be as much to those people as a circus would. Now we have three dear lambs in that part of God's moral vineyard. May our heavenly Father help them to so live, that others may see their good works and glorify our Father in heaven. We think and even heard it said, if we only had preaching here, we would soon have a large church. Brethren come to our aid.

C. D. HYLTON.

From Marietta Swank.—We were made to rejoice while the A. M. was in progress.—Thought we would have some preaching after meeting was over, but failed. I think it would have had a good effect, as a great many were waked up during the meeting, but I fear they will go to sleep again. Our meeting was as a light to the world; the people in general speak well of the way the work was carried on. Let us be a light to the world, so others may see our good works and glorify our Father in heaven.

So may the unbelieving world,
See how true Christians love
And glory our Saviour's grace
And seek that grace to prove.

North Manchester, Ind.

From D. B. Gibson.—By request of my correspondents, I will say that my address from the 7th to the 15th of Sept. will be, Farmington, Fulton Co., Ill., care Eld. Jacob Negley.—I expect to be at Franklin Grove, Ill., from the 25th of Sept. till the 4th of Oct. That is as far as I have made appointments at present.—The calls that I have, that conflict with the above, will have to be deferred for the present. Am in correspondence with Bro. John Barnhart, in regard to the time, from the 15th to the 27th. Those desiring my labors, will have regard to the above appointments.

Perrin, Mo.

From Little Traverse, Mich.—According to request, I will try and give a short report of our Communion meeting, which was celebrated in the evening of the 10th of August. The ministers present were, Elder Long, Bro. Winnee, and Kepner, from Thorne Apple district, Ionia Co., Mich. This was the first Communion meeting ever held in Emmet Co., Mich., and was one long to be remembered by the little band of brethren and sisters, that assembled at the house of Bro. and sister Noss. Oh how we were made to sympathize with the dear members who have lived here for three long years, and have not had a sermon preached! But now their joy is complete. A choice was held for deacons. The lot fell on Bro. John R. Stutzman and Bro. John Nass. May the Lord bless these two brethren, and give them grace sufficient for their day and trial. Twenty-three members communed, and I must say, we had one of the best little meetings I ever enjoyed. Indeed we felt loath to leave the place, where Jesus showed his smiling face. Now I would say, we are a little flock, scattered far away from the body of the church and have no ministering brethren among us. We pray the Lord to send laborers into his little vineyard here!

LYDIA A. KRUSE.

From Henderson, Ky.—Our Love-feast, the sixth of August, passed off pleasantly. It was a time of refreshing to our little church. We were all made to rejoice. Bro. Michael Forney was with us. He preached the Word in its purity, so that on the sixth, four came out on the Lord's side and were baptized. On Sunday following, two more came over on the Lord's side and were baptized to rise and walk in newness of life. May the work of the Lord revive every-where, is my prayer!

NO FRIEND LIKE JESUS.

There is no friend like Jesus,
In this wide world of ours,
For he from sorrow frees us,
And strews our path with flowers.

There is no friend like Jesus,
When darkness gathers round,
For then with joy and gladness,
He makes our hearts to sound.

There is no friend like Jesus,
So constant true and kind;
So full of love and pity—
So holy and refined.

There is no friend like Jesus
To succor the oppressed,
To help the poor and needy,
And comfort the distressed.

There is no friend like Jesus,
To drive away our fears,
To heal our wounded spirits,
And wipe away our tears.

There'll be no friend like Jesus,
When at death's door we lay,
There'll be no friend like Jesus,
When comes the judgment day.

GROWTH IN GRACE.

BY DANIEL VANIMAN.

"But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. To him be glory both now and forever. Amen."—2 Pet. 3: 18.

THERE can be no growth without life. In the kingdom of grace as well as in the animal and vegetable kingdoms, there must not only be a seed, but a seed having life in it. Man cannot originate life. All life comes from God, the only Source and Fountain of life. In the kingdom of grace, the Word is the living Seed. "My words they are spirit and they are life." Next to the living seed is a congenial soil, (a good and honest heart). With this living Seed in a good and honest heart, we may look for a growth in grace. Without it we might as well look for a field of wheat or corn without living seed to start from. After man is begotten by the Word of truth and born (baptized) into the family of God, he is only a babe, and like the natural babe needs pure atmosphere to breathe, proper food, tender care, and proper exercise. As atmosphere to breathe, the child of grace should have the pure atmosphere of the Spirit of God, and the holy associations of the children of God. The food like that of the natural babe must be such as he can appreciate, the sincere milk of the Word, being the best suited to his infantile state. Like the mother watches over and cares for her tender infant; so should the older members of the church watch over and care for the new-born babes in Christ; and for exercise there is nothing better than earnest work for Jesus, remembering always to work with the older brethren and sisters, who are already at work for Him and not against them.

With all the above and true humility, there will certainly be a rapid growth in grace. Now in addition to a rapid growth in grace, a rapid growth in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, is also desirable. To secure this, an earnest, diligent study of the life, character, and teaching of Jesus, are essential, having at the same time all the curtains removed from the windows of the soul, so that the pure light from the Fountain of life and Truth may pour in without interruption.

He must not, like the papist, shut himself up in the narrow limits assigned him by predecessors, and neglect reading and thinking for himself; but with Bible in hand, soar out into the great world of truth, and by careful reading, meditation, conversation and observation, add daily to his store of knowledge, remembering always that our growth in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior, depends upon our own proper efforts in studying His life, character and teaching, and living out the same as near as possible,

JOHN RANDOLPH AND THE BIBLE.

"I WAS raised by a pious mother (God bless her memory), who taught me the Christian religion in all its requirements. But, alas! I grew up an infidel; if not an infidel complete, a decided deist. But when I became a man, in this, as well as in other matters, I resolved to examine for myself, and never to pin my faith to any other man's sleeve. So I bought that Bible; I pored over it; I examined it carefully; I sought and procured those books for and against; and when my labors were ended, I came to this irresistible conclusion: 'That the Bible is true. It would have been as easy for a mole to have written Sir Isaac Newton's treatise on optics, as for uninspired men to have written the Bible.'"

DO WHAT HE SAYS.

BY A. JULIUS.

"Whatsoever he says unto you, do it."—John 2: 25.

THIS is the language of the mother of our dear Lord and Savior Jesus Christ at the marriage in Canaan of Galilee, thus commanding the servants of the feast, to observe, in order that satisfaction may be given to the guests of the marriage; hence by the obedience to the command given, they were partakers of the good wine that was furnished by our Savior. Do we not see a place to apply this passage of Scripture to ourselves? "Whatsoever he says unto you, do it." When we behold what followed the obedience of this command, we may heartily apply it to ourselves. Let us who confess the Lord Jesus to be our Savior, put Him on in sincerity; take heed that we do not look over this without a thought. Man is so apt to neglect many of the things that attain to salvation, without the least willingness to do the commands of the Savior. How oft we come short in our weakness of doing the will of God! Do we not often even neglect to pause for a moment and see the goodness of God, calculated for our welfare, not thinking that the Lord has any reason to sustain us from day to day? We can plainly see how the Lord does not wish the death of one sinner; for he says, "that he delighteth not in the death of one sinner, but would that all should come to the knowledge of the truth and live."

The Lord was so gracious and kind to us as to suffer even death, which is set forth as the last enemy to overcome. He did this just for our sake, that we might have free access to His grace, and unalloyed sweetness from His truth. We are taught, "Thy word is truth." Do we love our neighbor or do we despise him. Christ says, "do good to them that hate you." Do we still try to give them an opportunity to speak reproachfully of us? Oh my dear reader, let not your good be evil spoken of; and whatsoever He says unto you, do it." Behold the result of the obedience of Abraham, how he endured! There must have been great pain and sorrow in his trial, but God knew for what purpose he called him to go, not knowing whither he went.

Sometimes when we meet with losses and crosses in our temporal affairs, we are almost ready to give up in despair, and when we are called on to lend a helping hand to the furtherance of the Gospel, or the great cause, or duty to be living instruments in the hand of God, to bring souls to Christ, we feel careless about doing whatsoever he says, or even not willing to give of our abundance to defray the expenses of those brethren who are willing to spread the Gospel. Oh let us all feel an interest in the welfare of our fellow-beings.

The Savior says, "One soul is of more value than the whole world." Let us take courage and press forward toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. We have a consolation that will not be denied to us, if we simply remember to do, "Whatsoever He says unto us."

FAMILY WORSHIP.

BY I. H. CRIST.

THIS evening while reading the BRETHREN AT WORK, my soul was stirred within me, by reading brother William Cook's exhortation to duty, No. 3, page 7. He says, "may the spirit of prayer be instilled abundantly into the hearts of all our dear brethren and sisters." This truly is an exhortation that will do us much good. If put into practice, we will receive the blessing in this life, and have a rich treasure laid up in heaven. Where is the brother who cannot tell his desires and confess his faults to a trusty friend of his? It is just as easy to call our dear family together around the family altar, and humbly come before the Lord on our knelt knees and confess our faults and weaknesses and ask Him to grant us such things as we need. An open confession is good for the soul. "Ask in faith and ye shall receive."

Prayer is a command and should be observed. I believe there is more good received by erecting a family altar, dedicated to the Lord, and there present our bodies a living sacrifice, than in any other duty we can engage in. I once heard a brother say, that he and his companion did not erect an altar when they started out in the world; so when they would lie down to rest, sleep would flee from them and their spirits were troubled within them. On a Sabbath evening after they had fed the outer man, they retired for the night, but there was a hungering of the inner man, calling aloud to be fed. The brother spoke to the sister saying, let us arise and erect an altar and offer up prayer to God. They did so, and although years have gone by, that altar is still frequented. Prayer to the soul is as food to the outer man. His returning wants must be satisfied time after time, only to cease in death.

We often feel weak and come short of our duty in many things, then how sweet it is to commune with our best Friend, to ask him to aid and assist us. I heard an aged brother say, when called on to lead in family worship, "I can't pray in public." Perhaps he was like many others, never tried. It is not alone the long and fluent prayer that is attended with the greatest blessing. The Lord wants an humble heart and a contrite spirit, let the words be few or many.

LOVE.

BY G. W. HOTTELER.

THERE was not an act, of our Savior, which does not express love in the highest degree. When we see articles written by brethren (on various subjects) whose views differ from each other, we cannot think that love prompts any to write in a sarcastic manner; we feel that it is too often the case; and hope with brother J. H. Moore (article on Original Ground Again) that the brethren will endeavor to deal more kindly with one another in the future. Love is the well-spring of goodness, the overflowing fountain of all-generous and God-like deeds. Love is the soul of virtue, the moving spirit of every high and holy enterprise, of every plan and undertaking calculated to bless mankind. Love is of God; it is the image of God, and it acts the part of God in the hearts and lives of men. Love is the germ of all things good; it is the fullness and completion of all moral and God-like excellence. Where love is wanting, there can be no true happiness; where love prevails, there everything that is calculated to raise and bless mankind, will abound.

Love alone can dry up the fountain of human tears, and turn the dwellings of our brethren throughout the entire brotherhood into one vast Paradise of joy. Love is the soul of the Gospel, and should be the moving spirit of the whole church. The aim and tendency of the whole system of the Gospel is to destroy the natural selfishness of man, and to fill his soul with pure, and ardent, and eternal charity toward all mankind. It commands us to, "Love our neighbor as ourselves;" "to love not in word and in tongue only, but in deed and in truth." Love illustrates and enforces the duty of charity in the most affecting and powerful manner. Love commands us to exercise charity to the whole human race, to help the afflicted and needy, to do good, as we have opportunity unto all men, "especially to the household of faith."

It requires us to exercise charity toward our enemies; to do good to them that hate us and persecute us, and to overcome evil with good. Love urges us to exercise charity toward the poor and needy; it teaches to regard the bonds of prisoners, the wrongs of the injured, and to spare no pains to extend consolation and relief to the sufferers. Love teaches us to feed the hungry, to clothe the naked; to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction; to entertain strangers, and to shut up the bowels of our compassion from no unhappy brother upon earth. Love of our Savior will enjoin upon all men to do good to the extent of their ability. The rich it requires to be rich in good works, ready to distribute; willing to make their wealth a common blessing; and even those who are not rich, it commands to labor with their hands that they may not only be able to support their families, but may have to give to him that needeth. It requires us especially to look after our fellow-Christians; to distribute to their necessities, to bear their burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ. It requires us to mix charity with all we say, and with all we do; "speaking the truth in love." Charity is made the mark of a true Christian. "By this shall men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." "We know that we have passed from death into life, because we love the brethren."

The word of truth exalts charity above all things, and represents it as the end and fulfillment of all the dispensations of heaven. Love is the first and great commandment, the fulfilling of the law, the sum of the Gospel, the highest, the best beloved, and the most God-like of all Christian graces. Without it, the tongues of men and of angels are but as sounding brass or as a tinkling cymbal; the knowledge of all mysteries and the possession of faith to remove mountains, and all the outward framings of beneficence, are nothing. And to conclude the charity which is enjoined, is a charity that suffereth long and is kind; a charity that envieth not; a charity that vaunteth not itself; is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly; seeketh not her own; is not easily provoked; thinketh no evil; rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth. A charity that beareth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things; a charity that never faileth. "And now abide faith, hope, charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity." 1 Cor. 13: 3.

BELSHAZZAR.

THE midnight hour was drawing on;
Hushed into rest lay Babylon.

All save the royal palace, where
Was the din of revel, and torches' flare.

There high within his royal hall
Belshazzar the king held festival,

His nobles around him in splendor shine,
And drain down goblets of sparkling wine.

The nobles shout, and goblets ring;
'Twas sweet to the heart of the stiff-necked king.

The cheeks of the king, they flushed with fire
And still as he drank, his conceit grew higher.

And, maddened with pride, his lips let fall
Wild words that blaspheme the great Lord of all.

More vaunting he grew, and his blasphemous sneers

Were hailed by his lordly rout with cheers.

Proudly the king has a mandate passed;
Away his slaves, and come back full fast.

Many gold vessels they bring with them,
The spoils of God's house in Jerusalem.

With impious hand the king caught up,
Filled to the brim, a sacred cup;

And down to the bottom he drained it dry,—
And aloud with his mouth foam did cry,

"Jehovah! I scold of Thy greatness gone!
I am the king of Babylon."

The terrible words were ringing still,
When the king at his heart felt a secret chill,

The laughter ceased, the lords held their breath
And all through the hall it was still as death.

And see, see there! on the white wall, see,
Comes forth what seems a man's hand to be!

And it wrote and wrote in letters of flame,
On the white wall, then vanished the way it came.

The king sat staring, he could not speak,
His knees knocked together death-pale, was his check.

With cold fear creeping his lords sat round
They sat dumb-stricken, with never a sound.

The Magians came, but not one of them all
Could interpret the writing upon the wall.

That self-same night—his soul God saint!—
Was Belshazzar the king by his nobles slain.

HISTORY OF THE BEARD.

"FULL beards were cultivated among Eastern nations in early times, and have always been regarded by them as a badge of dignity. The fact that the ancient Egyptian pictures frequently represent the human male figure, especially when of a king or dignitary, without the beard, would seem to indicate that it was a mark of rank in Egypt to be devoid of that appendage. In ancient India, Persia, and Assyria, however, the beard was allowed to grow long, and was always esteemed as a symbol of wisdom and dignity. The Turks let the beard grow in full luxuriance, while the Persians cut and trim that upon the chin and the sides of the face according to fashion. In Turkey it is considered an infamy to have the beard cut off, and the slaves of the seraglio are shaved as a mark of their servile condition.

Previous to the reign of Alexander the Great the Greeks wore beards, but during the wars of that monarch they commenced shaving, the practice having been suggested, it is said, by Alexander for the purpose of depriving the enemy of an opportunity of catching the soldiers by the beard. The fashion thus begun, continued until the reign of Justinian, when long beards again become customary. The year 300 B. C. is given as the time, about which the Romans commenced the practice of shaving, and Scipio Africanus was, according to Pliny, the first of Romans who daily submitted to the razor. The antique busts and coins prove that the Roman Emperors shaved until the time of Hadrian, who is said to have let his beard grow to conceal an ugly scar. The philosophers, however, from the earliest periods seem to have affected the fall-grown beard, it being esteemed by them, as among the Greeks, a symbol of wisdom. All the ancient inhabitants of Europe wore beards at the earliest period of which any record exists. The fashion, however, seems to have varied with them subsequently at different times. The Lombards or Longobards derived their name from the practice of going unshaved. We learn from Tacitus, that the ancient Germans cultivated the beard from its first growth until they had killed an enemy in battle, and from Julius Caesar that the Britons merely allowed the mustache to grow. Until the introduction of Christianity, the Anglo Saxons all wore beards without distinction; but then the clergy were compelled by law to shave.

The English princes were in the habit of wearing mustaches till the conquest of William I., and they felt it to be a very great indignity when the conqueror compelled them to cut them off, in accordance with the Norman fashion. The practice and precepts of Christian fathers, who, like the Jewish rabbis, denounced shaving as a violation of the law of God, made the wearing of the beard during the early mediæval centuries a distinguishing fashion of the continental kings, nobles, and dignitaries. Royal personages were in the habit of weaving gold with the beard, or ornamenting it with the tags of that metal. Of long beards, one of the most wonderful, was that of a German artist by the name of John Mayo, who was called John the Bearded; it reached the ground when he stood up, and he was consequently obliged to tuck it into his girdle. Till the separation of the Greek from the Latin church, which began in the 8th century, the pope, emperors, nobles, and except in England, the priests had scrupulously abstained from the use of the razor. Leo III, to distinguish himself from the patriarch of Constantinople, removed his beard. Thirty years later Gregory IV, pursuing the same system, enjoined fealties upon every bearded priest. In the twelfth century the prescription which required all the clergy to shave their faces, was extended to the laity, and even to monarchs. Godefroi, bishop of Amiens, refused the offerings of any one who wore a beard.

A preacher directed his eloquence against king Henry I of England because he wore a beard, and the monarch yielded. Frederick Barbarossa offered a similar example of resignation. The confession of Louis VII, of France refused him absolution till he submitted to lose his beard. This was not long kept up. In the thirteenth century Pope Honorius III, in order to conceal a disfigured lip, allowed his beard to grow, and inaugurated a new fashion, which became prevalent in Europe in the age of Francis I. The right of the clergy to wear their beards was then again disputed. Francis imposed a heavy tax upon every bearded bishop, and in 1561 the college of the Sorbonne decided after mature deliberation that a beard was contrary to sacerdotal modesty. In the reign of Henry IX, there were various styles, distinguished as the pointed beard, the square beard, the round beard, the aureole beard, the fan-shaped beard, and the artichoke-leaf beard. In England, during the reign of Queen Elizabeth, the beard was worn generally by those of higher ranks, and was trimmed in a style more or less distinctive of each class.

The fashion of wearing the beard declined under the Stuarts, and at the restoration there was no hair worn upon the face, but the mustache, which however, was luxuriantly cultivated by the courtiers and gallants of those days. The decline of the beard in France dates from Louis XIII, and in Spain from the accession of Philip 8. The Russians retained their beards until Peter the Great returned from his Western tour, when one of his first edicts toward the compulsory civilization of his people had reference to the beard. He taxed this appendage, and afterward ordered all those he found bearded to have the hair plucked out with pincers or shaven with a blunt razor. Thus the practice of shaving became almost universal in Europe, until a comparatively recent period.

France was the first to return to the old fashion of wearing the beard, and England was the last.—Am. Encl.

FASHION.

BY JOHN FURNEY.

WHAT is fashion? 1. The make or form of anything: pattern, model, workmanship, execution.

2. Prevailing mode or style, especially of dress. 3. Mode of action, manner, sort way.—Webster.

According to the above definitions, fashion is something of a life-long work to catch or keep up with, as will be seen from this essay. Fashion in its various aspects, is very difficult to learn or keep up with. It costs a great deal of sacrifice of study, labor and money. We will cite the reader to the visible works of God, how wonderful he fashioned the firmament. Behold the sun, moon, and stars innumerable. Then turn your eye and behold this globe, with the animal and vegetable kingdoms—with the watery worlds, and you with me will at once acknowledge that it requires a life-long study to learn fully the form or fashion and beauty of it. You see there is room plenty for the astrologer, the astronomer, the botanist and philosopher to spend a life-time to learn the fashion of God's handiwork. I ask you, dear reader, to spend a few moments with me, and look at the changes of the fashions of this world, and you will see what trouble of mind, what expense of labor and money it costs to keep apace.

Let us stop a little with the farmer, as I am with him just now. He is not so fast as some others, but he, too, is changeable in fashion. I know him more than fifty years, and saw the fashion of his tools and labor. I handled the wooden plow with its wooden mold-board, the cheap harness, collar, bridle, and a leather strap over the back, to hold the iron traces, and a single line; this formed the harness to plow. The reaper was a crooked piece of steel plated iron about two feet long with fine teeth and wooden handle to fit the hand of the man, and cost from fifty to seventy-five cents. This we took in one hand and smote the grain, holding it the same time with the other hand; when all the hand could hold was cut, it was laid on the ground and picked up and bound while walking back, after we had cut to the end of the field. The mower was a thin blade of German steel. This was hammered about once a day by the user, along the edge with a hammer, on a steel-faced stock, to sharpen instead of grinding, as in later years we used English steel scythes as we then called them.

All the hay raking was done with the hand rake by men and women. His threshing machine was two sticks of round wood, one about four feet, the other two feet and a half long bound together by two leather straps, and called a flail. This machine the user took in his hands and brought down on the grain he had laid on the floor, for days and weeks. This machine a man could make in one hour, and use it for years without much repairing. We will not forget the farmer's wife. She too had things in fashion then as well as now. Fifty years ago her musical instrument was a flax heckle, a spinning wheel and weaving loom. These you could hear her sound a great part of her time, and in the cold Winter days from early in the morning till late at night, while she sung her sweet songs for the baby, and if it would sleep then her soul would swell loud songs of praise to God, while her busy hands spun the thread, and the daughter also followed after her mother in the same fashion, in using the same instruments. Methinks I can almost see and hear them now. I have not time nor space to tell you half of the fashion of the farmer's wife in that day; but I can tell you one thing more. Her meals were prepared, simple and healthful and nutritious. And she also knew what side of the plate her husband would eat from, and she had a fashion to always put that side up, when placed on the table. And you would be astonished if I would tell how her bread pans were made, and her washing machine and many other things that were then in fashion, but I forbear at this time. She now has an organ, a piano, costing from two to three hundred dollars, in place of the former articles which cost twenty-five to thirty dollars.

I might here note the mechanic, and see how he has done. He used to make his horse shoes and nails all by hand, and put a shoe on for twenty-five cents. Now he gets both shoe and nail from the factory, and he now charges fifty to seventy-five cents a shoe. And in many other things he has changed his fashion. The cabinet maker used to make what he sold and would sell many things for one half what he now charges. For a bureau, fifty years ago, he charged ten to twelve dollars, now twenty to twenty-five dollars. For a coffin, he used to charge one dollar per foot in length; now from three to five dollars, and so changed his fashion of doing business.

The tobacco consumer also changed fashion. He must now smoke five cent cigars, instead of five for one cent, and one at ten cents, in place of one cent fifty years ago.

We come now into the printing office, and we also find the fashion of things greatly changed since the last fifty years. From the old Washington hand press, we have come to the Hoe cylinder, the Bullock and other noted presses by which from one thousand to twenty thousand copies can be printed in an hour. To get a paper ready, the fashion of writing, the fashion of type-setting, printing, folding and mailing must be followed. These are necessary fashions, and like the farmer who follows the fashion of plowing, must be resorted to in order to do good. The best mode of dressing, we all follow, but we need not follow unnecessary, foolish dressing. This God forbids.

We will next take a look at Christendom. It also has changed its fashions very much in fifty years. I well remember the time when the ministry of nearly all the sects in the Union, wore plain clothing, and the women young and old covered their heads at the time of worship, as Paul instructed in 1 Cor. 11.

Many of the ministers were so conscientious, that they would not perform the marriage ceremony unless the bride had a proper covering on — a cap, such as was in use in the house of worship. One reason for this may have been, the fashion was then, the minister had always prayer before the marriage, 1 Tim. 2:1. Nor would he have broken the bread of Communion to her without being thus covered. Neither would the minister introduce the latest change of dress into the church, or himself belong to any worldly, secret order, or use the mourner's bench. But the fashion of these things has also changed; even the fashion of singing, of praying and of preaching. And I might note a thousand other things by the way that changed its fashion, some for the better and some for the worse. But both editors and the readers would become weary, if I would lead them the rounds and show them how often, and in what way, the world has changed its fashions, in farming, in buying and selling; in shipping goods, by water and land; in sending news with lightning speed. The steam thrasher worth, 2,000 dollars, has taken the place of two round sticks of wood and two little leather straps, in all worth twenty-five cents. The great steam plow steps in place of the one with the wooden mold-board. The three-hundred-dollar self-binding reaper machine, took the place of the seventy-five cent little crooked hand sickle of my boyhood days.

Behold the steam ship, the locomotive, the steam power printing press,—all these are now in fashion. As Paul said, time would fail me, if I would tell of the changes of the fashions, in the various educational departments, and fashions of the world in dress, since my boyhood days. We all know what the fashions of things are at the present time; but who can tell what will be next year?

I will now come to the important part of fashion, that which more particularly interests me and my brethren and sisters, and God-fearing people. I was a boy fond of fashion, when in my unconverted state, but found it very annoying to the mind, trouble to the person and very expensive, because of its frequent changes. One cannot be in fashion unless he conforms pretty closely to the order. As I was a reader of the Bible when a school-boy, I had learned at school that costly array, worldly fashions of gay clothing and pride, were not found among God's people. But Christ said, those in fine and soft raiment are found in king's courts. These things with many others, in which I lived in fashion of the world, in conversation, in jesting, in laughter and in a number of other things which the Scripture forbids, these things became very soul-condemning to me. And a man of fashion I was, and a man of fashion I wanted to be. I found I could be no longer in fashion with the world, because of its opposition to God's Law. What must take place here? A change, a new birth, a new man. This new man must have a new fashion of life, of conduct, of conversation. For a man of fashion I still was, and remain to be one to-day. But the apostle gave advice, 1 Peter 1:13, 14, 15. "Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the Revelation of Jesus Christ, as obedient children, not fashioning yourselves according to the former lusts in your ignorance; but as he which has called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation." This Jesus Christ is the One that has called us to fashion after him. I have covenanted over forty years ago that I would fashion after him, and find it a life-long work; not because he changes his fashion of life or dress yearly, like the world does. That is not the trouble, that it costs me so much labor.

You know dear reader, the world has a book to describe the many fashions of the world. It gives the pictures and describes every article of dress. God also gave us a book, the Holy Bible. In this Book we can learn the whole fashion of Christ, our Elder Brother. This Book I carried in my pocket for a number of years, read it again and again, to learn the conduct of Jesus, that I may be conformed unto him.

You know brethren, the world is very particular to come right up to every fashion, even to the trimming of the hair and beard. How much more should we see to it, that we come up to the whole fashion of Christ's life and image. We should walk as he walked, and talk as he talked, pray as he prayed, love as he loved, weep as he wept, be clothed as he was, with humility, preach like he preached, suffer shame and persecution as he did, bless when we are cursed, pray for those who despitefully use us,—in short, we must fashion after him in every example he gave us, as near as we can learn it; if it comes to the trimming of the hair or the wearing of the beard; for he said, "He that is ashamed of me, and my words, of him will I be ashamed also, before my Father and his holy angels." We have no right to protest against the fashion of our Lord and Master.

I said in the beginning of my article, that fashion is a life-long work to catch up with. So is the fashion of the life of Jesus. I have labored long and hard for many years, and still find plenty to do; to become more fully conformed to his image, that I may be made conformable to his death; that I may be like him when he comes, and see him as he is.

Oh what a pity it is that once in a while, one falls by the way, or gets tired of the fashion of the life of Christ, goes back into the low, filthy and hurtful fashions of the world, to fulfill the lust of the flesh. Let us pray brethren, that we may be led by the Spirit of Christ; that the same Spirit which raised up Christ, will also quicken our mortal body, and fashion it as his own glorious body, is my prayer.

THE RESULT OF GOD'S GRACE IS MANIFESTED IN OBEDIENCE.

BY D. E. WILLIAMS.

"And be not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God." Rom. 12:2.

HERE is a command that is just as binding as any other command in the New Testament, and if disregarded and disobeyed, we certainly will have to account for it, and answer for our rebellious character. It is not safe to deviate a particle from God's holy commands given us by his authorized servants.

See how Moses failed of the promised inheritance, just because he failed to obey God's command in part, in just one single instance, and this is given as an example. We have decided advantage over Moses, of the abundance of God's grace under this the covenant of grace; so we certainly will be more responsible for our disobedience than Moses; for God's grace under the present dispensation, is also sufficient for our ex-ery demand and need, so that we need not excuse ourselves and say that we can't—that we are too weak to obey God, in this as well as all other commands; because we are not to trust or rely upon self in our services to God. If we do, we will always find that we can't—that we are too weak; but Paul says, that, "I can do all things through Christ that strengthens me." When Paul prayed for the thorn in his flesh to be removed, then God told him, you and me, that his grace is sufficient.

So it is dear reader, in every point of duty that is enjoined upon us, and when we find ourselves too weak to obey any of God's commands, we may know that we have not a sufficiency of God's grace to cleanse our hearts and to purify our souls, and to present our bodies a living sacrifice before God, hence our case is critical, deplorable. We claim, we can't, we are too weak, but whose fault is it? Certainly, not God's; for he says, "my grace is sufficient." It is well enough that we feel our weakness in the obedience of every command. Let us go to the inexhaustible fountain of his grace and draw a sufficiency of that divine power to enable us to overcome the weakness of the flesh; then in our obedience to God, we will feel very sensibly that it is no more I that do it, but it is the grace of God which is in me; then we can experimentally say, "My Lord is my helper in every time of need."

The Lord is very gracious and lovingly disposed toward us, that he always makes a way possible for our escape, and it is by and through the power of his grace. We are tempted sometimes of Satan not to obey, and he will do it by working upon our fallen nature, causing us to feel too weak, and at the same time causing us to feel secure; will cause us to reason with ourselves thus, that God is too merciful to condemn us for not doing a thing, that we are even too weak to do; but he fails to impress our minds with the understanding that he has made a way for us to escape this great weakness of ours. If God's grace were not sufficient for all this, I would not give a farthing for it; for without it, we are poor, helpless creatures, so much so that we can do nothing except the Lord be with us. Then in regard to the whole line of duty as commanded us of our Divine Father in the Gospel, we must lean upon his staff, trusting in his strength and the power of his might. Every command naturally draws us to God to find grace and strength to do it. As remarked, the above command is just as binding as any other command; and I will further say, that God has desired something good and noble in commanding us to be non-conformed to this world. And there is just as much importance in it as in every command given. It tends in its nature to mould and form characters; create and establish holiness, and beget within us godly reverence and a filial fear, because we are surrounded with much of the world, and even so much of it in our fallen nature, that we have got to be very watchful and prayerful, so as to abstain from the very appearance of evil, especially in dress; for there is apparently no excess so great in the world in anything else, than there is in dress. And nothing else tends so greatly to destroy the sociability of the human family.

The poor are not able, and cannot cope with the wealthy; and on the account of fashion, of fine dressing they are driven from the sanctuary of the Lord. But, says one, I can't see any harm in dressing fine, just so one is not proud with it; and another will say, there is no harm in having our clothes made in the fashion; for we are not commanded how to cut and make our clothes. But dear reader, we are positively commanded by the great Law-Giver not to conform to this world.

Now to try your assertions as above, suppose that we all at this time belonged to a fashionable church, and about next year the world changes its fashions, can we in the name of our God and in the name of our holy religion, conform to the world in fashion the next year too, and do no violence to this command? Certainly not. Then the next query is, does God give a command and leave it at our option to obey it or not? or can we stand justified in the sight of God, whether we obey or disobey? Certainly not. Then suppose we are determined by the grace of God, to be obedient and faithful servants, though we are fashionable at this time; but about the next year, the world begins to leave us in fashion, and the next a little more and so on; how long do you suppose it would be until we would be odd and peculiar in the sight of the world and fashionable Christians.

Now this is just the way the Brethren got their present order. It was once the fashion of the world, but they, respecting the above command, and fearing to disobey it, stood steadfast and have partly retained it until the present time.

THE INFLUENCE OF FICTION ON THE MIND.

I AM not about to enter upon a crusade against the perusal of works of fiction. I should be sorry to debar any from "Prince of the House of David," or "Pilgrim's Progress." But I do protest against the constant and indiscriminate perusal of romance in which so many indulge. In the use of such stimulants, I am an advocate, not of total abstinence, but of temperance principles.

Carefully read and digest several books of history or of biography, several books of voyages and travels, several books of good theology, and, at least, a book or two of science. If you examine some of our circulating libraries, you will find a very different proportion—far more works of fiction than works of truth. Those who consume this garbage will soon take its hue, as the worm takes the color of the green herbage on which it feeds; and the furnishing of their mind becomes excessively like the circulating libraries to which I have referred; a strange medley, in which the vain and fictitious occupies a far larger place than the real and the solid. Nor let it be urged by the novel reader that he does not believe the tale when he reads it, so no evil can possibly arise from the perusal of it; for the mischief may be produced altogether independent of his belief or disbelief. It arises from the impressions produced, unconsciously abiding and unconsciously operating. Like the poison caught from visiting an infected district, it is drawn into the system without one's being aware of the precise spot from which it comes, or even of its existence.—Sel.

We gain nothing by falsehood, but the disadvantage of not being believed when we speak the truth.

The best and sweetest flowers of Paradise God gives to his people when they are upon their knees. Prayer is the gate of heaven, or key to let us into Paradise.

FRAGMENTS FOR THE HUNGRY.

Anger—Knowing God—A Bottle In The Smoke—First Lord's Day In September—Baptists And Bible Christians—Yellow Fever Sufferers—How We Are Saved—The Bereaved Mother.

SENECA says: "Anger is an agitation of the mind that proceeds to the resolution of a revenge, the mind assenting to it. It is an idle theory to pretend that we cannot govern our anger; for some things that we do, are much harder than others that we ought to do. Thrasippus, in his drink, fell foul upon the cruelties of Pisistratus; who, when he was urged by several to make an example of him said: 'Why should I be angry with a man who stumbles upon me blindfold?' The moderation of Antigonus was remarkable. Some of his soldiers were railing at him one night, where there was but a hanging between them. Antigonus overheard them, and putting it gently aside, 'Soldiers,' said he, 'stand a little further off, for fear the king should hear you.'" At another time his soldiers were taken into a foul road and then they began to curse their leader. He went to them, without making himself known, and helped them out. "Now," said he, "you may curse him who brought you into the mire, provided you bless him who took you out." Philip of Macedonia, the great king, was visited once by ambassadors from Athens. "Tell me, gentlemen," said he, "what is there that I can do to oblige the Athenians?" Demochares, one of the ambassadors replied, that they would regard it as a great favor if he would be pleased to hang himself. Those around the king became very angry at this insult, but Philip coolly replied: "You, the rest of the ambassadors, pray tell the Athenians, that it is worse to speak such things than to hear and forgive them." Many Christian professors could learn lessons from these heathen philosophers. So many cannot understand how a man can endure the hard looks, the hard speeches of those who are angry. It is more easy to bear all in meekness, than to wallow in the mire of anger with them. He who returns anger for anger is no better than he who was first angry. If the outward appearance of anger is so hideous, what must the mind look like? Reason cannot dwell where anger is; nor will good manners, friendship, good counsel and sincere devotion find a lodgment in the angry heart. It is a vice that has neither pleasure nor profit in it.

It is true that "we know that we are of God." 1 John 5: 19. The apostles did not go about in a cringing, doubting manner, saying, "We think that we are of God, or we feel that God is in us," but boldly declared, we know that we are of God. Of God, not of Jupiter, not of Diana, but of God—the true and the living Father. They knew that the Son of God "is come;" they knew that he had given them an understanding; they knew that they were in Him, and He in them; they knew that he who is born of God, sinneth not; they knew that those who believe the Son of God will overcome the world. Yes, they knew, too, that He will come again to receive them where He is. This is the knowledge which is from above,—the knowledge that puffeth not up, but brings forth the fruit of meekness, of godliness, of faithfulness.

David's soul longed for the deliverance of the Lord. Persecuted, driven, tossed about by those who should have befriended him, he declared that he had become "like a bottle in the smoke"—was covered and hid, yet not destroyed. Smoke around a bottle, may make it seem dark and dreary, may, to other eyes, look fearful, yet the bottle is just as much a bottle as ever. Smoke will not consume a bottle; it only makes the bottle look cloudy to us; still the bottle is all right. Though Saul and his hosts were smoke to David—made him trouble and vexation—dug pits for him that were not according to the law of the Lord, yet he was the Lord's David as much as ever. The smoke did him no harm; it only made him the brighter when it cleared away. So with you, dear brother, dear sister; when the smoke of persecution has cleared away—when the hard speeches made in secret against you, when the angry looks, the cold hands, unkind eyes have gone the way of all evil, then you shall shine all the brighter. With these around, above and beneath, you are "like a bottle in the smoke"—still you are a good, sound bottle. Only the Lord has the power to let the smoke do you harm; and we are certain, He will not let, if you longingly, pleadingly, lovingly look to Him. There is still pleasure in being "wrongfully persecuted," and I am certain if those who send the smoke could see how much good the "bottle" gets out of it, they would not send any smoke; for the object of those who treat ill, is to hurt, not to do good. Happy is the one who gets food, who gets patience and eternal hope out of the stripes which others lay on.

THE first "Lord's day" in September was unusually interesting to the writer, it being his thirty-fourth birthday. After reading the 64th of Isaiah, I devoted an hour writing to our beloved brother H. C. Butterbaugh of North Manchester, Ind., who, less than one year ago at this place, set his face to follow Jesus. God bless him and all other young disciples in Christ!

Meeting at 10 A. M. brother Brinkworth first addressed the audience from Eccl. 12: 13. Showed that God gave conclusion to the whole matter: 1. Fear God. 2. Keep His commandments. All know duty, but fail to perform it. The little girl says: "Mother, I love you." "Very well, if you love me," says the mother, "bring me some wood." "O no," says the child, "let some one else do that; I want to stay in here and love you." Does that child love its mother? The child that loves its mother will obey her. The man who loves God will obey Him.

Once on my way to meeting in England, and before I came to the Brethren, I went to a meeting held by a class of people styling themselves, "Bible Christians." This term I liked very well, and while passing along I overtook one of them. In our conversation, he told me he was a "Bible Christian." I replied, then you are a Baptist. "O no," said he, "I am no Baptist." I took the ground that a Bible Christian must be a Baptist, for the Bible teaches baptism, and a Baptist must be a Bible Christian. I could not see how a man could be a Bible Christian, yet no Baptist, no more than I could see how a man could be a Baptist and still no Bible Christian. These things puzzled me some, but I soon solved the matter when I found that those Bible Christians believed in sprinkling a little water on a person for baptism.

Brother Moore followed, stating that we owe duty (1) to God; (2), to one another. To do our duty to our fellow-man, will not save us; we must do our duty to God and to man. A man may be a good, moral man, yet not a Christian; but a man cannot be a Christian without also being a good, moral man. A man should be a Christian,

1. In his worship; 2. In his conversation; 3. In his dealings; 4. In his appearance. To be otherwise, is to be a hypocrite, and a hypocrite is one of the worst persons in the world.

At the close of the meeting an appeal was made in behalf of the Yellow Fever Sufferers in the Southern States, and each seemed willing to lend substantial sympathy. Too often we say, "I pity them," and pray the Lord to bless the sick, and then refuse to lend a helping hand when needed. Remember, God has many ways of trying us, and if He should make use of a pestilence to try our love for money, do not be surprised. When people and nations run into pride, into covetousness, and unholy desires for gain and honor, the Lord knows how to humble them. May the scourge now upon many of our fellow-citizens greatly humble us, and drive us "nearer to God."

The lesson at 3 P. M. was Matt. 6: 24-34. We were taught that the disciples of Jesus cannot serve two masters; that they shall take no thought for life, for food, for raiment, but trust in the living God; to seek first the riches of God and his righteousness and then food, raiment, health, and all the comforts of life will God supply.

At 7:30 P. M. the house was well filled to listen to the preaching of the Gospel. Brother Moore reasoned, that we are saved by faith, saved by repentance, saved by baptism, by the blood of Christ, by grace, by works, by the power of God; not by any one of these means, not by a few or a part of them, but by all of them. Those who are saved by the blood of Christ are also saved by baptism, by grace, by faith, by works—by every other means ordained by the Lord. The question is not, "Am I saved by baptism alone, or by the blood of Christ and baptism, but am I saved by all the means set forth in the Divine Record?" The man that claims to be saved by all the means of inspiration, is not troubled with doubts and perplexities—he knows he is safe beyond question.

KIND, good mother, weep not for your darling child that has gone to rest. Though it was young and tender, your pride, your joy, your hope for future comfort in old age perhaps, yet it belonged to God. How often you looked into its smiling, tender face, and kissed its lips in token of your love, still it was the Lord's. It has gone; God is able to bring it back in His own good time. O how you loved to look after your child's wants! How careful you were to clothe and feed it, to watch its steps lest it be burned, or fall and be hurt, or be injured by some other means. Day and night your thoughts were upon your darling child. Well, who had a better right to be concerned than you? Who could love more? Who could watch better? No one. God bless you for your love, your care, your watchfulness! Over yonder, when the heart-pangs, when the bitter sorrows, the trials of life are all gone, you can join the dear little one in one harmonious song of praise to God for His mercy—His eternal goodness. O will not that be sweet? Look to your beloved Lord—your Savior who will heal all your wounds—soothe every sorrows, dry up every tear. O bless the name of Jesus! M. M. E.

ONE was baptized one-half mile North of Lanark last week. She was quite young, but it is well to "remember thy Creator in the days of thy youth."

ELDERs Martin Meyer and Daniel Fry are North on the Wisconsin mission. They will likely remain about three weeks. The mission is becoming not only profitable but interesting.

MANUSCRIPT TABLETS.—We have just made arrangements to supply a long felt want among our correspondents. We are now prepared to furnish Manuscript Tablets, containing one hundred sheets of manuscript paper, put up in a substantial manner with rules, giving directions how to write for the press. These Tablets will be found useful, not only when writing for the press, but for colleges and counting rooms. Sent post paid for 20 cents each.

THE deacons and holy are sometimes to blame for these "sing song" preachers. It is their duty—especially the deacons—to keep a careful watch over the ministers, and when they observe them falling into an unbecoming habit, calculated to injure their preaching, they should at once gently remind them of it, that the cause be not made to suffer thereby. Any minister of good judgment would gladly receive such advice and profit by it. Do not talk about the preacher's unbecoming habits behind his back, but go to him, and in a brotherly way, tell him all about it, and if he is the right kind of a man it will do him good. Remember, the more you rub good metal the brighter it gets, but do not batter and hammer it around. Preachers, like everything else, need watching and training. If the church would look after the wants of her ministers more, and give them more encouragement, we might have a better set of preachers.

CONVERSION OF CORNELIUS.

CORNELIUS, the centurion of the Italian band, was the best unconverted man of which we have any account in the New Testament. He was devout, and feared God with all his house; gave much alms to the people and prayed to God always. That was much better than many professing Christians do now. Who is it that gives much alms to the people? Who prays to God always?—prays without ceasing? Cornelius did that, and yet he was not in a saved condition, for he was told to send men to Joppa, and call for Peter, "Who shall tell thee words whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved." Acts 11: 14. This is proof that Cornelius was not in a saved condition when he sent for Peter. Peter was to tell him words whereby he might be saved.

He had even seen an angel and conversed with it, and was told that his alms and prayers had gone up for a memorial before God. Most people would have taken an incident of this kind as evidence of special conversion, and of course could have told a nice experience. But if some Gospel preacher would have the boldness to dispute it, he would have been branded as a disturber of the peace, and counted out of the orthodox ring.

Cornelius was honest—he did just what the angel told him. But why should he send to Joppa for a preacher? He might have asked, "What good can a preacher do me? I am a just man and fear God with all my house. I give much alms to the people and keep up regular seasons of prayer. Besides this, the angel has just told me, that my prayers have been heard in heaven. What more do I want? I am not a bad man, and am doing all the good I can. Of what use can that preacher down at Joppa be to me? Supposing I were to die just as I am, I do not see why I would not be saved." Thus he might have reasoned, and had far better excuses for doing so than any of our modern critics.

One may ask, Why did not the angel tell Cornelius words whereby he and his house might be saved, and thus save the trouble of sending down to Joppa for a preacher? We answer, it was not the Lord's way of doing business. He had committed his Word to earthen vessels to be proclaimed, and not to angels. When he wanted the eunuch converted, he sent a preacher to him, not an angel. Even in the case of Saul we find the Lord clinging to this plan, for though he appeared to Saul in person, yet he sent him to Ananias in order that he might be told what he ought to do. The Lord's method is to make use of his preachers, and for that reason he has commanded them to go into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature.

Cornelius being a Gentle, his conversion was to be a special case, for God had made choice of Peter, that by his mouth the Gentiles should hear the word of the Gospel, and believe, Acts 15: 7, and thus break down the middle wall of partition between the Jews and the Gentiles. It was a special occasion of unusual importance, for Peter, to whom the keys of the kingdom had been given by the Savior, was to unlock the kingdom to the Gentiles, that God might take out of them a people for his name.

Peter had to be prepared for that special work, for he was a Jew, and had some Jewish prejudice in him yet, therefore, while upon the house-top, he fell into a trance, and God showed him that he should call nothing common or unclean which he had made, but to go down and go with the men waiting for him at the gate, doubting nothing. When Peter reached the house of Cornelius, and found the congregation assembled to hear the word, he said, "Ye know how that it is an unlawful thing for a man that is a Jew to keep company, or come unto one of another nation; but God has showed me that I should not call any man common or unclean." Acts 10: 28. "Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him." 10: 34, 35. Thus he continued his Gospel discourse, and while yet speaking the Holy Ghost fell on them that heard the word, and astonished the Jews who had accompanied Peter from Joppa, "because that on the Gentiles also was poured out the Holy Ghost. For they heard them speak with tongues and magnify God." Acts 10: 45, 46.

When Peter saw this miraculous manifestation—to him a token that God had accepted the Gentiles—the first thing he thought of was baptism. He did not ask the people to tell their experience, nor did he tell them to wait six months, but said, "Can any man forbid water, that these should not be baptized, who have received the Holy Ghost as well as we?" Acts 10: 47. Why ask that question? Cornelius had already received the Holy Ghost, and why need he be baptized in water? Peter remembered the last words of his Master when he said, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned." Mark 16: 16. He was among those who were commanded to "Go, teach all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." Matt. 28: 19. And desiring to be faithful to the one who had called him, he commanded Cornelius and his household to be baptized in the name of the Lord.

From this case some important lessons may be learned. 1st, Cornelius, the best unconverted man mentioned in the Bible, was not too good to be baptized. Even Christ himself, though without sin, submitted to the same rite. Men and women, who claim they are good enough without baptism, need to study this case carefully. 2nd, Those who claim they have received the Holy Ghost, and therefore do not need baptism, act directly opposite of what Peter commanded Cornelius.

The angel had told Cornelius that Peter would tell him words whereby he and his house should be saved, and among these words of salvation was baptism, to which those who believed cheerfully submitted, thus showing their willingness to surrender to the divine institution. Though the case was an extraordinary one, yet the ordinary means pertaining to salvation were not omitted. Let it be borne in mind that it had been a mystery from ages past "That the Gentiles should be fellow-heirs, and partakers of his promise by Christ in his Gospel." Eph. 3: 6. The opening up of this work was allotted to Peter, and it was needful that there should be some public and extraordinary demonstration of God's divine purpose to receive the Gentiles upon an equality with the Jews in the kingdom.

This extraordinary and supernatural demonstration was not intended for the benefit of Cornelius and his family in particular, but for the benefit of the entire Gentile world to whom the door of the kingdom of God's dear Son was about to be opened. Hence the necessity of the trance into which Peter fell where, it was told him that he should call no man common or unclean, and was thereby made to perceive that God was no respecter of persons, but that even among the Gentile nations he that feared God and worked righteousness should become fellow-heirs of the same inheritance. And to carry the conviction still further in the mind of Peter and other Jews who were with him, the Holy Ghost was poured out on all them that heard the word as spoken by Peter, and they spoke with tongues and magnified God. Peter seeing this, was fully convinced that it was the work of God, and as a minister of the Gospel, proceeded to recommend the ordinary means of salvation, the first of which, in that case, was baptism, the tokens of faith and repentance having already been manifested. The appearing of the angel, Peter's trance, the pouring out of the Holy Ghost before baptism, and the speaking with tongues, were special, divine manifestations—an unmistakable demonstration of God's purpose to receive the Gentiles. It was special, miraculous and extraordinary. But the hearing of the word, believing it, turning to God, and being baptized, were the ordinary and general means of salvation intended for all nations and every creature. Even in the conversion of Saul some extraordinary means were used, but not to the omission of the ordinary or general. Another case like that of Cornelius never has nor will ever occur again. Once for all ages it was demonstrated that those among the Gentiles who believe, have a right to be baptized in water and enjoy the benefits of the kingdom.

We call special attention to "Our Bible Class" department on fifth page. Having on hand more queries than we have time to answer, we give them place on that page, asking our contributors to assist in making that department as interesting as possible. Come let us search the Scriptures.

NAMES for sample copies are beginning to come in from the State of Maine. We will forward samples to all names sent us.

Two persons were recently received into the church by baptism in the Colorado congregation. Success to their efforts.

THE District Meeting of Southern Ill., will be held at Pleasant Hill, Macoupin Co., Oct. 7th, 1878.

THE Brethren of Croton, New Jersey, have torn down their old meeting-house and are erecting a new one 32x48.

ARRANGEMENTS are being made to commence publishing the Children at Work weekly, about the first of October. This will be a nice thing for the little folks.

BROTHER Lemuel Hillery left here last Thursday morning en route for Kansas. He goes by private conveyance, his family remaining at Shannon for the time being.

To keep apples and peaches from spoiling, when you have more than you can take care of, give them to the poor. In this way you will not only save the fruit, but be amply rewarded besides.

WE have sent Non-Conformity to the World, by brother J. W. Stein, to all who have sent in one new subscriber at $1.75, from Oct. 1st to Jan. 1st, 1880. Should any fail to get it, they will please notify us.

LOVE-FEAST notices are quite numerous this Fall. We published 65 last week. Hope to have a short report from all of them. Our readers would like to know how you prosper in the Lord.

MEN who cannot govern their own tongue, are ill qualified to govern others, and he that can successfully govern self is sometimes greater than those who pretend to rule nations. Self-government is an important attainment.

If some men who are doing their utmost to defend the Bible, would spend more time in obeying and teaching it, they would be of much greater worth to the cause of Christianity. Just study the Bible and obey it, and it will defend itself. God will take care of the Book if people will only study and obey it.

AN influx of Mennonites is anticipated between this and 1880, in which year their military service will end in Russia, where they number 200,000. They have the reputation of being industrious and honest. Their non-resistant principles subject them to much persecution in Russia and elsewhere.

SHORT, pointed articles are read and relished far more than long ones. People never get tired reading short, interesting essays. If you want everybody, who gets the paper, to read your article, let it be short and to the point. Short articles, like short sermons, well compacted, make a telling effect. Familiar words and short sentences give an article much power.

He that would live long and enjoy life, must strictly obey the laws of health. If young men, instead of lounging around places of amusement, would spend their leisure time studying some good work on Physiology and Hygiene, we would have a much healthier race of men. Learn to govern self and take good care of the body, which, when properly subdued is the temple of the Holy Ghost.

It is a violation of both economy and good sense for either professing Christians or anybody else to change the fashion of their garments every year. Let them adopt a plain, comfortable and economical mode of dress, and stick to it. This thing of constantly changing, is evidence of instability. Strong-minded people of good, sound judgment, denounce it. Whenever people learn to let good enough alone, and be contented with that which is in exact harmony with reason, they will have gained an important point.

WE sometimes hear members talking about the "presiding elders" of the church. The term is unscriptural, and therefore not supported by Bible usage. We read of "elders," "bishops," "shepherds," "housekeepers," "overseers," and "pastors," but not one word about "presiding elders." Such things were unknown in the apostolic church. To talk about the "heads of the church" is equally unscriptural. Christ is the Head of the church, and is the only divinely authorized Head the church has. The Bible says not one word about elders being the "heads of the church," nor is it right to call them by that name. Call them elders, bishops, &c., but never heads of the church; it is dishonoring Christ.

A GENTLEMAN writes us, "There was one of your brethren in my office telling me of your faith and practice. He told me to send for your paper. Now send me a few copies and if he has told me the truth about it, I will subscribe for it at once." Of course we sent samples, and want the Brethren to continue telling of our faith and practice. Let the sound go out into all the world for it will do good. Do not think you are too weak to do good, there is a work for all.

IT is due the churches of this city to remark that a mistake occurred in Bro. Sharp's "Stray Thoughts," last week, in stating "The Disciples seem to have the chief influence in town," besides the Brethren. The Methodists are pretty well represented. There are also Baptist, Lutheran and Congregational congregations. As we did not see the article till after it was printed we could not correct it in time. Even Sharp people will sometimes make mistakes.

BROTHER S. H. Bashor and wife reached Lanark last Friday noon. He remains here while his book is being printed, that he may have an opportunity of looking over the proof. He is making preparations to travel extensively during the Fall and Winter. Hope success may crown his efforts as in former years. His correspondents will address him at this place the next few weeks.

WHAT would you think of a sheep that would leave the flock and associate with the wolves on certain occasions? You would certainly denounce such an animal. Well, what do you suppose the Lord thinks when he sees professing Christians leaving the Master's flock and associating with and having a high-old time at festivals, theatres and other places of amusement, with sinners of every grade and order? Whenever we see professing Christians running after the ways of the world, it does seem as though they had not yet fully forsaken the world and the sinful pleasures thereof. Heaven speed the time when people will be consistent and stand up to what they profess.

THE Buffalo Express asks: Can these be very hard times? can a country be very "hard up," which consumes fifty million gallons of whisky, ten million barrels of beer, and two thousand million cigars in a single year? That looks bad enough, and in fact too bad, when it is remembered that many professing Christians spend more for these things than they do for the spreading of the Gospel. But look at the money that is spent yearly for fashions, fine churches, rich and costly diet and then talk about hard times! The people of the United States waste and spend enough for luxuries to keep another nation and then grumble about hard times; it is folly. It is more in bad management, poor financiering and downright extravagance and wickedness that is the matter with people than anything else.

SAMUEL Miller, a Richmond miser, left $850,000 as an endowment for a school for the education of one hundred poor children of Albemarle Co., Virginia. This is certainly a commendable act for a miser, and one that others would do well to imitate. Hundreds, even among professing Christians, work hard, accumulate large fortunes and leave them in a shape that they will accomplish but little good when they are dead and gone. A few hundred thousand dollars could be admirably used in the brotherhood at the present time. An "Orphan Home," for the benefit of poor, homeless children is much needed. God pity the thousands of little creatures who are without a home, or even a father or mother to look after their wants. Thousands of dollars could be judiciously spent distributing pamphlets and tracts in defense of the Brethren's faith and practice. We know of one denomination that has distributed 200,000-000 copies of pamphlets and tracts and they are accomplishing wonders in this direction. We can accomplish even more, if the proper efforts are made, and certainly the cause is worthy.

THE length of a minister's sermon has something to do with the effect it produces. Many good sermons are spoiled by their great length. To weary a congregation with a long, tedious sermon does the cause more harm than good. Let every thing be done to edification. That which does not edify is not profitable unto godliness. Long sermons are not always an indication of learning, but often show the want of good judgment. The best way is to quit when you get done, and do not tire the congregation.

Men who hold congregations well, always let the people go away a little hungry. Never aim to tell all you know at one time, but what you do say, tell it well, and be sure that it is the truth. Do your best to make your points distinct, and have the people understand you fully. When you preach, do it with pleasure, just as though you took delight in proclaiming the Gospel. Study the Bible well, and always be ready to proclaim the truth when called on. Frequently consult the deacons and laity regarding improvements in your manner of preaching, and the length of your sermons. If you would learn to be a good workman, learn to do your work well.

THE YELLOW FEVER.—The news from the South during the last ten days has been startling, and the gloom and despair is still increasing, with little prospects of abating soon. Death is said to have visited nearly every door in Memphis, sparing neither rich nor poor, great nor small. Hundreds have died, many of whom could not be buried at the proper time, for the want of help. Grave diggers work day and night. Doctors wear out, drop down and die; others take their places to meet with the same fate. Late news report it necessary to commence burning the dead bodies as the best way to dispose of them. Nurses are employed by the hundreds, many of whom die from over work and the disease. Business is paralyzed, and gloom and despair have settled down upon the plague ridden cities.

New Orleans has had a desperate siege of it. Every part of the city has been visited by the fatal disease, and not far from one thousand deaths have occurred; they continue to die at the rate of nearly one hundred daily. In fact, general despair has spread over that part of the country lying along the Mississippi River, and an appeal for help has gone forth to the civilized world. They need doctors, nurses, money and provisions. Many places have responded liberally. New York has already sent over $175,000, and other cities are doing well.

The calamity is a great one, a sore affliction on the South, but affords the North an excellent opportunity of exhibiting that charity she is so abundantly able to show. The Southern people are said to be much to blame for the disease, as it would seldom, or ever occur if they would keep their cities and premises clean.

"The Worth of Truth no Tongue Can Tell."

This department is designed for asking and answering Bible questions, and for the solution of Scriptural difficulties. All questions should be stated with candor, and answered with as much clearness as possible. In order to promote Bible Truth, articles for this department, must be short and to the point.

Please give an explanation of Matt. 21: 2; also Mark 11: 2. Do both mean the same? If so, what is meant by the ass tied and the colt with her; loose them and bring them unto me? Did he ride both, or only the colt?
I. H. CHASE.

Will some one please give information concerning 1 John 3: 8, 9, 10?
W. H. MILLER.

Please give us your views on the covering spoken of by Paul in 1 Cor. 11; also tell us who, or what that head is, the women dishonor by praying or prophesying with her head uncovered, both the married and unmarried? By doing so you may do a good work for some of our members out here in the far West and oblige

Please explain 2 Thess. 2: 3. It reads thus: "Even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders."

The eight souls that were saved by water, was that water literal water, or was it some other kind of water? 1 Peter 3: 20, 21; also Acts 22: 16, where it is said, Arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins, was this literal water, that was to wash away his sins?

A DIFFICULTY EXPLAINED.

(Review and Remedy)

How is the genealogy of Christ as given in Matt. 1, to be reconciled with the account given in Luke 3?
A. M. O.

THE Jews never allowed the name of a woman in their genealogical tables. Hence, when a line of descendants ended with a woman, they did not put in the name of that woman, but the name of her husband, who was only the son-in-law of the woman's father. Luke reckons according to this custom, and puts into his table two persons who were only sons-in-law of the persons named as their fathers; whereas Matthew confines his table to those who were sons strictly speaking. Thus Joseph is called by Luke the son of Heli, because he having no sons, his daughter Mary married Joseph, and the name of Joseph therefore stands as the son of Heli, whereas he was in reality only his son-in-law, but really the son of Jacob. Again, Luke places Salathiel as the son of Neri, and Matthew makes him the son of Jeconias, but the son-in-law of Neri, having married a daughter of Neri. Their son was Zerobabel, a name which appears in both tables. From Abraham to David the titles of Matthew and Luke agree. From David Matthew comes down through the line of Nathan, both of them sons of David. These lines meet in Zerobabel, a son of Salathiel of the line of Solomon, who married a daughter of Neri, of the line of Nathan. From Zerobabel Matthew comes down through the line of Abiud, his son, and Luke through the line of Bhesa, another son. These two lines again meet in Christ, the reputed son of Joseph of the line of Abiud, who had married Mary, a daughter of Heli, of the line of Bhesa. Thus Luke gives us the genealogy through the line of Mary, and Matthew that through the line of Joseph. These lines meet in Zerobabel and David. From this point the tables agree back to Abraham, with whom Matthew stops, while Luke goes all the way back to Adam. There is really no more discrepancy between the accounts of Matthew and Luke than there would be between the letters of a person who should give to a friend his pedigree on his father's side, and to another on his mother's side. And if the two lines should meet in some celebrated person of past generations, as they do twice in the case of Christ, he would have double proof that he was the descendant of that individual. See Dr. Clarke, and the Religious Encyclopedia.

"NOW WHEN I AM OLD AND GRAY-HEADED."

Psalms 71: 18.
(100th Psalm—Horah.)

Not now as in days long since passed by,
When my step was strong, undimmed my eye;
The dew of my youth lay all around,
And hope leaped forth with joyful bound;
But now I am old, my head is gray,
The days of my youth have passed away.

Like a young lion, my strength is strong,
Fearless I gazed at the journey long;
While my proud heart did exultant beat,
I feared not the frost or Summer's heat;
But now I am old, my head is gray,
The strength of my youth have passed away.

Hope built her castle, fair to my sight,
Painted it o'er with her colors bright;
Gilded the landscape, garnished the sky,
Leading me on as the years rolled by;
But now I am old, my head is gray,
The hopes of my youth have passed away.

Joy filled my heart from the opening morn,
To the evening hours when stars are born;
Too short was the day for all their store,
The morning glow'd with abundance more;
Now when I am old and my head is gray,
All the joys of youth have passed away.

The days of my youth have passed away,
The strength of my youth has gone to decay,
The hopes of my youth have mostly fled,
The joys of my youth are cold and dead;
Oh God, I am old, my head is gray,
Sustain my heart till I pass away.

More blessed my age than in days of youth,
More strong my age in eternal truth,
Hopes of my age have their home on high,
Joys of my age they can never die;
Though I am old and my head is gray,
God will support till I pass away.

THE RESTORATION OF THE JEWS.

UNDER this heading, the following letter, signed by "F. R. G. S.," appears in the London Morning Post, of August 10: "It is a singular coincidence, to say the least of, considering the exertions made of late years by Sir Moses Montefiore on behalf of the Jews in and about Jerusalem for its restoration, and making it literally, if not a Mon te fiore, at least un giardini di fiori by the beauty of such contemplated restoration that the words of the last verse of the 8th chapter of Zachariah, viz., 'In those days it shall come to pass that ten men shall take hold out of all languages of the nations, even shall take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew, saying, We will go with you, for we have heard that God is with you,' should bear so great a resemblance to the doings of the Congress and of him who ruled there. Surely God must have been with the Israeli when He allowed him to secure His greatest of all blessings—peace for mankind in general, and a bright future for Asia. Besides the seven Signatory Powers, the representatives of Greece, Roumania, and Servia, who were admitted to the bar of Congress, made up the 'ten men who shall take hold out of all languages of the nations.' Having lived some years in Roumania, and knowing how shamefully the Jews have been treated in all the Sclavonic States I cannot but feel infinite satisfaction at observing, as a result of all the recent political negotiations, that the lot of the Jew has been cured for, and that their position, social, civil and political, has been relieved from the unjust and tyrannical yoke of oppression which they have been forced to wear."

TRANSGRESSION.

BY N. B. HEETER.

"Whoever committeth sin transgresseth also the law," (1 John 3: 4).

THE first question that presents itself to the mind from reading the above language is, what is it to commit sin? but we need not hesitate long to find an answer to this; read the remainder of the verse, and we find the answer in the following language: "For sin is a transgression of the law." Again in Rom. 4: 15, "Where no law is, there is no transgression." Hence we conclude that where there is law there is transgression, and any transgression of that law is sin. But what is it to transgress? It is nothing more nor less than to disobey the Gospel, and we dare not disobey in one point, from the fact the Apostle James says, "He that keepeth the whole law and yet offendeth in one point, is guilty of all." Hence we find no non-essentials in the Bible; but all that we find in the Gospel is intended for us to observe.

Where then do we get the authority to leave off feet-washing that Jesus says we ought to observe, in order to be His true disciples? We need not observe it, if we do not wish to, just as Peter did, but what is the result if we disobey? Observe the language of Jesus to Peter, and we can find out. Again, where do we find the authority to lay aside the salutation or holy kiss that is so plainly given as a command, not only once, but five times in the Gospel? We think we have none, and if we do not observe it, it is a transgression of the law. Besides the above there are many other points that we have not mentioned; among them is trine immersion, the only valid baptism that can be established by the Gospel, and the only one that dates back beyond the middle of the third century. Also, non-conformity to the world is plainly taught us, when Paul says, "Be ye not conformed to this world, but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good and acceptable and perfect will of God." Therefore let us place our affections upon heaven and not upon this world.

Again Jesus says, "Search the Scriptures." Hence we find it a duty to search the Word of God that we may know what is required of us, for without a knowledge of the Gospel we cannot comply with its ordinances, and if we fail to search it, but hire some one else to search for and teach us, and he tells us that feet-washing, the salutation, the Lord's Supper, and about all the remainder of the principles of the Gospel, are non-essentials, and we thus fail to obey, we will be transgressors, and when we come up to judgment we will be weighed in the balance and found wanting; for whosoever transgresseth the law committeth sin.

"TIS A CASE THAT YOU CAN HOLD."

BY S. T. BUSSEMAN.

OBJECTS suggestive of thought and reflection are incidental to daily life. In everything surrounding us we see the work of a nobler being than that of man. And in this field of nature we find many texts susceptible of reflection and carry the mind aloft to soar among higher and nobler things. To any person who can see God in nature, like the dying Milton, a straw may be an agreeable companion,—teaching him that he too is doomed to pass away. The leaf of the forest growing into size and shades of varied hue, teaches us the solemn fact that this is not our abiding place. Thus everything in nature above and below us; the works of man—everything may teach us many useful and instructive lessons. However comprehensive the finite mind may be, and enthusiastic in its undertakings, it can but faintly grasp the idea of the Infinite. It is something too vast, too wonderful—something that it cannot hold. There are other things that also enchant the mind with suggestive thoughts that mortals cannot hold. Circumstances in life may be ennobling and pleasant—a paradise to the finite mind, yet they charm but for a while. We may have friends that are dear to us whose company is ever agreeable, their instructions are valuable and their words are cheering, yet they, however valuable to us, pass away in silence, death wraps them up in his strong hands and we see them no more. We can go with them down the dark valley to give them words of comfort, but we cannot stay them on their journey. "Tis a case we cannot hold. Wealth and affluence may attend our efforts, we live in easy circumstances, may feel to say, "soul take thine ease, thou hast much goods," but how soon sudden destruction cometh; our wealth and honor is but a dream.

We have secured a great name, honored with distinction everywhere, yet we are not secure from the gossip of enemies, our name is defamed, we lose our honor, though not through any fault of our own, and however much ambitious we were to be honored, it is lost, and all our efforts to retain it, prove futile. While many undertakings in this life may fail, yet there is a case that we can hold. And upon this thought the mind is pleased to dwell. It reveals to us thoughts that are higher and more ennobling than those of earth—it is the religion of Jesus Christ. Man detaching himself from divine power, his efforts will fail. But by placing himself in such relationship with his Master that he may be a co-worker with Him, he can secure and be able to hold that godliness and holiness which is not only profitable in this life, but also of that which is to come. To secure this power, certain conditions must be complied with. If we associate ourselves with others having superior power and success, we are led to inquire into the secret of his success. He being anxious to impart to you says, "By my careful and simple habits of living, I have obtained great strength of body, clearness of mind, and my retentive powers have become strong. And in connection with my careful economy, laboring systematically and trusting in God is the secret of my success." Being desirous of the same power, by living out his principles, he may become assimilated to the character and power of his associate and have the same characteristics of success. We may admire and aspire to his accomplishments, but we must reverence God and worship him. To inquire into His law we find the conditions to be complied with, systematically arranged, not one to be excluded from His law; and by the careful observation of all His divine commands we become assimilated to His character and power, as He is the object of our worship. By this assimilation we have power that is heavenly, it is divine. This, then, is a power, a case we can hold. A tower of strength for us and a refuge in time of trouble. It is my Master that makes me strong. I love Him because He first loved me, and this is but the case of every Christian and the universal result of their experience.

Reader, would you have that power that will enable you to guide your bark safely across the dark waters of the Jordan of death, to "hold your case" at the tribunal bar? I know you would. Then come to Christ. Comply with His commands—the conditions of pardon, and the power is yours. It is then you can realize the truth of the sweet exclamation of the good Mr. Ritchie: "Oh! what must Christ be in himself, when he can sweeten heaven, sweeten Scriptures, sweeten ordinances, sweeten earth, and sweeten trials?" Good old Stephen realized this sweetness, this power when he was stoned to death, and why? Because he obeyed his Master, and though, in the dark hour of his trouble, he could see Jesus, and triumphantly he died. Why was it that the Lady Ann—, when offered a pardon at the place of execution, said, "I came not here to deny my Lord and Master." It was, that she had made her peace with God and girded with this strength she could withstand all. It was a case that she could hold.

This, then, is the confidence of the Christian, that in Christ there is power unexcelled, and as he is about to wind up his pilgrimage of usefulness on earth, hopefully he says, "My journey is almost ended now—old age will win the race. You see my hands are trembly, and I cannot hold a case; but I've made an application to the city built of gold, and I long to hear the answer, 'Tis a case that you can hold."

How sweet the words of truth
Breathed from the lips we love.

- Deeds are fruit; words are but leaves.
- The same sun that melts wax, hardens clay.
- Aim high; but not so high as not to be able to hit anything.
- Time is gold; throw not one minute away, but place each one to account.
- To keep moths out of old clothing, it is recommended to give the clothing to the poor.
- Out of Christ as the way, there is nothing but wandering; out of Christ as the truth, nothing but error; out of Christ as the life, nothing but eternal death.
- Every man, woman and child has got something to do, and an opportunity for doing it. Remember that in a little well done, much has been accomplished.
- There are many more blossoms upon a tree in Spring than there will be apples in Autumn. Yet we are glad to see blossoms, because we know that if there are no blossoms, there can be no fruit.
- A tree will not only lie as it falls, but it will fall as it leans. And the great question every one should bring home to himself is this: "What is the inclination of my soul? Does it, with all its affections, lean toward God, or away from Him?"
- Mr. Spurgeon is reported to have said that, the manner of some clergymen, in addressing the young, made him think they must have understood the Lord to say, "Feed my camelpards," rather than "Feed my lambs," and the hit was a capital one.
- Whether women are inferior, superior, the equals, or the complements of men, is not ours to say; but her physical, moral and mental growth, and culture, can never receive too much aid; and the widest liberty should be given to her usefulness, in the limitless fields of opportunity. A noble and exalted manhood, requires as a precedent, a noble and exalted motherhood.
- We ought to think much more of walking in the right path than of reaching our end. We should desire virtue more than success. If by one wrong deed we could accomplish the liberation of millions, and in no other way, we ought to feel that this good, for which, perhaps, we had prayed with an agony of desire, was deemed us by God, and was reserved for other times and other hands.

Jews of past centuries have always been depicted as bearded, and it was only towards the last century that any of them shaved. For bleeding at the nose, the best remedy, as given by Dr. Gleason, in one of his lectures, is a vigorous motion of the jaws, as it in the act of mastication. This remedy is so very simple that many will feel inclined to laugh at it, but it has never been known to fail in a single instance, even in very severe cases.

HARON.—Died near Hamlin, Brown Co., Kansas, August 9th, 1878, sister Sarah, daughter of Bro. Jacob and sister Mary Haron, aged 22 years, 4 months and 27 days.

Her death was caused by a complication of diseases. She bore her sufferings during a period of four years, with Christian fortitude, and by word and example, admonished her Christian friends to hold out faithful. And from her young friends she received the promise, that they would forsake sin and prepare to meet her in heaven. Such faithful characters of Christianity deserve more than passing notice, and young and old do well to follow the example.

ZOLLERS.—In the Arnold's Grove district, Carroll Co., Ill., August 21st, 1878, sister Mary E. Zollers, aged 33 years, 7 months and 2 days.

The subject of this notice was an example of Christian patience and resignation, while under the most dreadful suffering night and day for near four years, but finally her sufferings ended, and she gently fell asleep in Jesus, in hope of a glorious immortality.

The funeral was attended by a large concourse of relatives and sympathizing friends. Services by Bro. Enoch Ely from Phil. 1: 21-24. J. J. EDWERT.

HARDMAN.—In the Fairview congregation, Appanoose Co., Iowa, July 30th, 1878, Bro. Israel Hardman, aged 76 years, 9 months and 21 days.

He was a deacon of the above named church near 22 years. Faithful to duty to the close of his days on earth. Funeral improved to a large concourse of people by William E. Strickler. JOSEPH ZOOK.

NEWCOMER.—In the Ashland church, Ashland Co., Ohio, sister Catharine, wife of Bro. Peter Newcomer, aged 55 years, 11 months and 23 days.

She leaves a husband and nine children to mourn their loss. A short time before she died, she called her children (that were at home) to her, pressing their hands between her own she bade them the long farewell, telling them, that she was prepared to go, and that she was going home to her two little children that had gone before her. Bro. Peter and sister Catharine were married January 5th, 1841, and lived together as husband and wife 37 years, 7 months, and 16 days, then bidding her husband farewell, she took her flight and went to her long home, after an illness of between six and seven years during which time we often looked for her to say farewell to her kind friends. Her disease was supposed to be consumption. She was buried on the 22nd day of August, 1878. Funeral services by the writer and Bro. I Killbuck from Rev. 14: 13 to a large and very attentive congregation. Oh how hard it seemed to be for her family to give her up; yet they sorrow not as those which have no hope. Some of the children are members and some are not. I do hope that the day will soon come, when all of them will be on their way to meet a Christian mother in a brighter clime. Savior help them, is my prayer. D. N. WORKMAN.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Notes of Travel.

SOME of the brethren and sisters are no doubt waiting to hear something about England the custom of the people, and other things relative to my stay there through last Winter and this Summer. I have promised the editors a few thoughts, and will commence by relating first, in the part I travelled. Around my old home in Somerset, you can always find any kind of soil; there are hills that appear like mountains, gradually arising from the lowlands, and often the ascent to those hills will be covered with a thick growth of underbrush, or woods as called there; also plenty of heavy forest trees. These woods are nearly full of rabbits, foxes, game as pheasants, hares, etc., and furnish sport for the nobleman, lords and squires, who infest the country, and are almost looked up to, as though they were more than mere creatures with the rest of God's creation. They are the land owners; the farmers, the renters, the laboring classes working for each, and of course each party knows its friends and keeps themselves to themselves. You will find none of the social, free and easy disposition that characterizes the people of the United States. I have left the nature of the country, and you can see just where I branched off. I will return to the moors for a few moments. As you have ascended with me, the hills spoken of, you can now from the top look over a vast expanse of country, and such a sight,—almost indescribable! You can see villages every few miles, with perhaps from 200 to 500 inhabitants, the tall spires of the Established Church of England rising amongst the trees. And the sight enchants the eye of the traveler, you can turn your gaze in another direction and see the level, dreary moors, with ditches cut to drain off the water, averaging six feet wide, these are sometimes flooded for a long time. In these fields you find a good many cows, as Somerset is a cheese-making Co. It also makes a lot of cider, which accounts for the many orchards.

THE NATURE OF THE COUNTRY

The observer will also find clay lands on top the hills, which yield fair returns of wheat, barley, peas or beans, to the industrious and frugal farmer. We see red lands that look poor and don't deceive their looks; they are generally with others in their turn, dressed with heavy coats of artificial and other manures.

THE FARM HOUSES

often present a pretty looking appearance; they are not wood, but massive structures of stone or brick. Walls three feet thick, and oftentimes may contain eight to ten bedrooms, kitchen, dairy, and back kitchen, cellars, parlor and sitting-room, with hall and outhouses in abundance to suit the convenience of a large dairy, stock and grain farm. Barns are large, also stone; and covered with thatch, reed and tiles. The residences of the squires are in the country, amidst the farms of their estate, and have splendidly arranged lawns, carriage drives, and private walks, with gardens attached. Many of the houses are very old, and the architecture of course being ancient, is looked upon as grand, but the houses or mansions of modern date, suit my taste the best; they are costly edifices, generally two or three times larger than really needed. The or laborer come next. Are of very low stature as a rule, and thatched with straw, very old-fashioned and none too much room, as generally large families are found occupying the small cottages.

I have now described, I think, the land as a rule through all the part I visited, also the houses. The people I will leave till another article with their customs, and the probable success, attending a well directed mission to the island.

I had forgotten to state when describing the nature of the country, that the fields are irregular in shape. They are not square as here, but just to suit the taste of landowners and tenant; the roads also wind in every direction, with sign-posts at every cross-road, to tell the traveler his way, and the distance. The turnpikes, which keep these roads in order, are nearly done away with, and the expense falls on the farmer. Times with him are very close at present; American competition rendering prices low, in stock, cheese and some of the manufacturing articles of cutlery and other things, so that the English way of hand-labor is superseded by the machinery of other nations. Wearing apparel is much cheaper there, than here. Wages of the laborers are higher than when I left England first in 1869. Hence that class of people might do better now than in years gone by, if they desired to. H. P. BRINKWORTH.

More Light.

THERE are manifold indications of perplexity in the Brotherhood in relation to the Lord's Supper. I am frequently written to for explication of the apparent discrepancies of the Sacred Record on this point. The truth does not lie so near the surface respecting the ordinance as some others. It requires more investigation and collation.

The want of strength and still more the want of means precludes my present elaboration of the subject. It seems to me I can do no better than urge all such members to procure Bro. J. W. Beer's book on the "Lord's Supper." The subject not only requires study but deserves it. Bro. Beer has given the church an excellent monograph, and all who desire light in that direction will find 60 cents a cheap investment for so large a fund of information. The significance of the Divine Institution should incite us to avail ourselves of every ray of light that confirms its authority and perpetuity. No matter what the materials of which the supper was composed, or what the conception of the apostle in its preparation, it was not the passover as to its symbolic purpose. Bro. Beer's book will prove an excellent mental discipline, as well as an exhaustive historical argument for "the truth as it is in Jesus." C. H. BALSBAUGH.

From Ohio.

BY your permission, I will inform the readers of your excellent paper that I am now in Ohio. I left Huntington Co., Indiana, on the 6th of August. Got in the vicinity of Hagerstown, Wayne Co., Indiana on Friday the 9th. Met with the members of the Nettlecreek arm of church, near Hagerstown, on Saturday in church counsel. Not much business. The propriety of building a house for their poor members, was discussed at length and finally postponed till after their next District meeting. A choice was held for visiting brethren, the lot falling on Abraham Holler and a young brother Bowman, two active young Brethren. Daniel and Jacob Bowman and John Holler are the elders here. David Bowman, Lewis Kinney and Jacob Hoover are in the second grade of the ministry, and Lewis W. Teeter and B. F. Wisler in the first; hence the ministry here is strong. On Lord's day morning we met with them in Sabbath-school. Not as large an attendance as I expected. At 10 o'clock A. M. and in the evening we preached for them as best we could. On Monday morning we started for Ohio. Got to Newhope in Preble Co., in the evening where we met some of our relations. Did some visiting in this vicinity. On Tuesday evening we preached in a United Brethren meeting-house in Newhope. A full house, for the short notice. Next day went to Eaton, the county seat of Preble Co. From there went to Winchester, where we visited quite a number of relatives and friends. On Thursday evening we preached in a Methodist church in town. On Friday 16th we went to John Hart's, a brother-in-law of ours. On Saturday did some visiting, one place of visit was the old cemetery where my first wife was buried some forty years ago. This brought fresh to our mind, when we had to stand and see our dear young companion sink in the silent tomb. Oh how sad we felt! In as much as this grave-yard was much neglected, we made some arrangements to have it put in a better condition. Next day being Lord's day we went to church at Sugar-Hill. Tried to preach at 10 A. M. in afternoon visited old Bro. Daniel Miller, who is quite poorly. In the evening came here to our youngest sister. Found all well. We expect to visit two weeks in this county (Montgomery), then to Miami Co. then Darke Co. We expect to get to Huntington Co., Indiana, by the 25th of September. All who desire my help in the ministry in the Fall and Winter, please address me at Huntington, Ind., by the first of Oct. I have been pretty well since I started on my visit, thank the Lord. Oh Lord help all to be faithful. SAMUEL MURRAY.

"Watch, for the night cometh!"

From Fairplay, Washington Co., Md.

THE Brethren of the several churches, composing the Western District of Maryland, are generally aware that at our late District meeting, held in the Bear Creek congregation, Garret Co., Maryland, there was a missionary plan represented and adopted, called the Western District of Maryland Missionary Association. The object being more particularly to get the Gospel preached in the outskirts of our immediate congregation, at places where the Brethren have seldom, if ever preached. And it may be said there are thousands of such places, and in many of these places there are calls for us to come; and yet their wants are not supplied, and why is it? Because we have not the ministers with ability, energy and courage to present the truth of the Gospel in such a manner as to commend them to the consideration and the acceptance of men and women desiring to be saved? Surely we have brethren who are workmen that need not be ashamed, but are able rightly to divide the truth, and can give meat in due season, both to saint and sinner.— Is it then because such brethren already have so much to do, so many appointments to fill that they cannot be sent on a preaching tour of a few weeks, to declare the truths of the Gospel to souls that would only need to hear, and to have an opportunity to obey, and they would be ready to accept of this great salvation? Then if these are not the causes, what are they?— We cannot reason away the necessity of supplying the wants of the soul as long as we recognize the language of Montgomery, the poet:

O, where shall rest be found,
Best for the weary soul?
'Twere vain the ocean depths to sound,
Or pierce to rafter pole,
The world can never give,
The bliss for which we sigh;
'Tis not the whole of life to live,
Nor all of death to die.

And in order that the souls may enjoy the rest that the world cannot give, the Savior has commanded us to go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature; and he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved. And how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? And how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach except they be sent? Rom. 10: 14-15. Now we discover the means whereby this great demand can be supplied, and hungry starving souls can have the bread of life broken into them, and the thirsty that are perishing for the want of the waters of life, may be made to drink deep out of the wells of salvation. And O, who should remind us to the glorious invitation? Now Jesus invites, and the Spirit says come, and angels are waiting to welcome you home. And in these means we find that by the foolishness of preaching, God is pleased to save those that believe. Hence there is a necessity for preaching, but how can we preach except we be sent? We have admitted that there is not as much preaching within our border as there should be, not for the want of preachers altogether, for this want the Lord has, through the church been supplying. If the one means comes through the church, most surely the others do. Then among the other requisite means named in the Word of the Lord, we discover that sending is necessary, and it will be found, not only the direction to go, but also the wherewith to go; hence we are commanded to bear each other's burdens, and also that we be co-workers with God. Now all these things God has given, they are all right at hand. And all that is wanting, is to supply the means, and set the ready materials in operation, and the machinery will work smoothly as running in well grooves, being oiled by the love and grace of God, that all friction will be obliterated.

And now in conclusion, we wish to refer to our Missionary Association, which we designed to more fully fulfill the great commission so far as we can, as an organized district, for it is generally admitted that charity begins at home, and that while large ships may venture more, little boats should keep near the shore.— Therefore that we might endeavor to have the Gospel preached at places where it is desired, and also create a desire for it by offering appointments where places can be found for that purpose, there was provision made in the plan as adopted for our Missionary Association, that district meeting annually appoint an Executive Committee to attend to these duties as set forth in the plan. One brother from each arm of the church comprising the Western District of Maryland to constitute said committee, and I believe a copy of the plan was sent to each member of the committee. But we do not hear that the work is being carried on, although some months have gone by.— Brethren do not sit down, but be up and doing, lest it will be said, "the harvest is passed and the Summer is ended, and souls not saved." In order that all who desire to have preaching through this organized association may know where to apply, I will give the names of the Executive Committee to whom application may be made, and that they may be better able to arrange appointments to greater advantage if they start out Brethren on a preaching tour:

- Abraham Barnhart, Hagerstown.
- Samuel Jennings, Brownsville; David Schindler, Funkstown; Dr. V. Richard, Cor. Secretary, Fairplay, Washington Co., Maryland; David Merrill, Lanconing; Samuel Miller, Engle's Mill, Garret Co., Maryland.

DANIEL WOLF,
Treasurer.

A Peculiar Case.

SISTER Mary Zellers, of whose death an account will be found elsewhere, took sick about four years ago, with a strange disease, that baffled all medical science. Physicians pronounced it something similar to the Asiatic leprosy. The skin on her limbs, and part of the body gradually hardened until about two years ago, it became hard and stiff as side leather, with several openings, as running sores; out of which her life seemed to ooze away. Encased in this coat of mail, some of the joints were perfectly stiff.

That which she suffered for the last several years is utterly indescribable, day and night without a moment of rest. To look upon her was to remind one of the terrible suffering of Job. But her patience was equal to her suffering. Her mind was clear until the end, when she bade adieu to her mother and sister, and trusted, was borne by the angels into Paradise, to come again, when the Lord shall descend from Heaven with a shout, and the dead in Christ shall rise first. J. Y. HECKLER.

Mt. Carroll, Ill.

GLEANINGS.

From David Bowman.—We have had a season of refreshing among us. Brother J. S. and S. S. Mohler were among us and preached the Word with power and demonstration of the Spirit, which made saints rejoice and sinners to reflect upon the future destiny. Our Love-feast was one of the best meetings we ever attended. I will say here that Brethren seeking homes in the West, would do well to give us a call, as land is low here. It can almost be bought for what the improvements are worth.

St. Martins, Mo.

From M. J. Smith.—Those books and pamphlets you sent me came to hand all right and gave entire satisfaction. I think they ought to be distributed around more than they are. The "Passover and Supper," ought to be read by everyone that is not well read in the Scripture, and those pamphlets I love to read. I think there is good reading in all of them, such as all worldly people ought to have before them. I intend to lend mine and see if they will turn some to a saving of the soul. I don't belong to the church, but expect to soon; perhaps before this reaches you, and my husband is going with me. We expect to be baptized next Sunday.

Northampton, Ohio.

From John Metzger.—The first day of Aug. I started for Pennfield, Champaign Co., Ill. Came to Pennfield the second. The people soon made arrangements to have meeting. After preaching several times, two Campbellites came forward and said they wanted to be baptized. After making the necessary arrangements, to go to the water to administer the holy ordinance of baptism, quite a crowd of people accompanied us to the water, as it was the first time the Brethren ever baptized at that place. After all met in a beautiful grove at the water side, we sang a few verses, then I made a few remarks of the necessity of prayer at the water side. Then I told the people it would be pleasant, and do them good, if we would all kneel down and have a word of prayer. So they all knelt down, old and young, and many tears were shed. Brethren go and preach for them.

From Donnell Creek church, Ohio.—Our church seems to be in a healthy condition, still contending for the faith once delivered to the saints. With all the earnest labors of our ministers, accessions have been few this Summer. Thanks be to God, prospects are looking up favorably for an ingathering. Within the last two weeks four precious souls have been brought in favor and fellowship with the blessed Redeemer. Quite a number assembled at the water side to witness the baptismal ordinance. One had formerly been a member of the Baptist church, two had belonged to the German Reformed church. I think we all felt rejoiced to see them leave the elements of this world and join in with the people of God. Hope they with us, will grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth, and finally be so unspeakably happy as to reach the immortal climes of glory, where we may ever be enabled to sing the songs of praises to the Lamb forever and ever.

D. B. HURT.

From Levi Stump.—Samuel Croy of Newaygo Co., Mich., Elba P. O., Whitecloud Station, wants some brother to come and preach, as he and his companion are all alone.

From Limestone, Tenn.—We have just passed through a series of meetings, commencing with harvest or thanksgiving meeting on Friday the 23rd inst. Annual visit meeting on Saturday, and regular exercises on Sunday. The meetings were well attended and interesting.— Bro. C. Diehl of Pleasant Valley labored with us. J. B. PENCE.

From Marshall Co., Iowa.—On the 24th of August, Bro. Bashor came to us, but am sorry to say, that he had taken cold and was scarcely able to preach the first four days, but happy to say that his health improved, the last two sermons were strong and powerful. Only two baptized and one reclaimed while he was here, but we do not attribute the cause of no ingathering to the preaching as much as to a trouble that has just taken place in the neighborhood. Trust Bro. Bashor will be spared, and at a time when things are more favorably, will come to us again, and I ask the Brethren every-where to remember us in their prayers, that God may grant us grace and ability, that the cloud may soon be removed from us.

The Brethren at Work.

A RELIGIOUS WEEKLY.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED BY

J. H. MOORE & M. M. ESHELMAN.

THE BRETHERN AT WORK is an uncompromising advocate of Primitive Christianity in all its ancient purity.

It recognizes the New Testament as the only infallible rule of faith and practice.

And maintains that the sovereign, unmerited, unsolicited grace of God is the only source of pardon, and

That the vicarious sufferings and meritorious works of Christ are the only price of redemption.

That Faith, Repentance and Baptism are conditions of pardon, and hence for the remission of sins.

That Trine Immersion or dipping the candidate three times face-forward is Christian Baptism.

That Feet-Washing, as taught in John 13, is a divine command to be observed in the church.

That the Lord's Supper is a full meal, and, in connection with the Communion, should be taken in the evening, or after the close of the day.

That the Salutation of the Holy Kiss, or Kiss of Charity, is binding upon the followers of Christ.

That War and Retaliation are contrary to the spirit and self-denying principles of the religion of Jesus Christ.

That a Non-Conformity to the world in dress, customs, daily walk and conversation is essential to true holiness and Christian piety.

It maintains that in public worship, or religious exercises, Christians should appear as directed in 1 Cor. 11: 14, 5.

It also advocates the scriptural duty of Anointing the sick with oil in the name of the Lord.

In short it is a vindicator of all that Christ and the Apostles have enjoined upon us, and aims, amid the conflicting theories and disorders of modern Christendom, to point out ground that all must concede to be infallibly safe.

THEY'RE DEAR TO GOD.

Oh, how I wish I could tell you, that it may make our hearts glad without us, to think of the Lamb's little party, who are to sit through the world, in the presence of the Father, and shall they in fact be no more, in judgment, the most joyful of all? Is not this what the little ones of Jesus Christ, the Lamb of Jesus Christ, should have another name for? "Christians" either by your name, or by the God will be your name, or the both, from the time of us at this day, to our great sorrow." — Lucy, 1855.

Oh that, when Christians meet and part,
These words were played on every heart—
"They're dear to God!"
However wild an unwise,
We'll look on them with loving eyes—
"They're dear to God!"
Oh wonder! to the Eternal One,
Dear as His own beloved Son;
Dearest to Jesus that His own blood,
Dear as the Spirit's loved abode—
"They're dear to God!"

When tempted to give pain for pain,
How would this thought our words restrain,
"They're dear to God!"
When truth compels us to contend,
What love with all our strife should blend—
"They're dear to God!"
When they would shun the pilgrim's lot
For this vain world, forget them not;
But win them back with love and prayer,
They never can be happy here,
"They're dear to God!"

Oh how return a leader's blow!
The heart whose harshness wounds thee so "Is dear to God!"
Oh! who beneath the cross can stand,
And there from one bold back the hand—
"Dear to God!"
How with rough words can we conflict,
Knowing each pang our words inflict,
Touches the heart once pierced for us?
The hearts we wing and torture thus,
"Are dear to God!"

For is there here no strength in love—
The love that knits in joy above
"All dear to God!"
Shall we be there so near, so dear,
And be estranged and cold whilst here—
"All dear to God!"
By the same cares and toils oppress,
We lean upon one faithful breast,
We hasten to the same repose,
How dear of do thou for those
"So dear to God!"

THE center of attraction to every true Christian is Christ. He has ever been the nucleus of Christianity, and has been the "center" prospectively to the faithful in the past. Directly after the fall of man, this Day-star was placed in a prominent position in the dim vista of the future, and all the types and economies shadowed forth of the good things to come.
All pointed to the revelation of the Son of Man when He should bring salvation to a sin-cursed world. His mission upon earth was one of affection, love and power, though He died, He yet lives, and now has all power in heaven and upon earth. His altar is the center around which the hale of Christian worship radiates, spreading the news of God's will to man, and preparing souls to revolve around the great center, in the regions of ethereal bliss.

Christ is the Sun of righteousness, shedding His rays into the hearts of men. And like the luminary of the day, His orbit is higher than that of earth, it is elevating, and as He is thus lifted up, will draw all men unto Him. We learn that the great planet of the day, is the center of attraction around which the orbs of lesser magnitude, revolve in humble obedience to the will of the Creator. So man may learn, and to be in harmony with nature's laws, must obey the great Head of the church in all His divine commands, whether it be in the giving of a cup of cold water, visiting the sick or of greater magnitude. All are essential to complete the worship of the Master, and by His humble obedience, we become assimilated to the character of the object worshiped, and when He comes, the saints of God shall appear with Him, and be like Him.

It affords me pleasure to leave the "hurry-drum" of business and resort to the country to enjoy the life of a rural home for a season, and with those anticipations of pleasure, in company with my family, we drove out in the country to visit our worthy brother J. Witmore and family. Found them reasonably well, and slowly improving. They also have been placed in the crucible of affliction, for sometime in the past, brother W., not being able to engage in his ministerial duties for the past eighteen months. But trusting in God, he says there is yet a brighter day coming, and that he yet will be able to pursue his calling as watchman on the walls of Zion proclaiming the news of salvation to a dying world. He humbly desires the prayers of all God's people, believing that there is great efficacy in the prayers of the righteous. Let us, my dear brethren and sisters, remember this family as God's afflicted.

Upon our return home, we found brother Packer, of Ashland, Ohio awaiting us. He remained with us over night, and had a pleasant interview together, in the interests of the Christian religion, social worship and the cause of education. He is soliciting in the interests of the Ashland College. He finds many friends to the cause, and is receiving contributions for the enterprise. We are glad that institutions of learning are under the instruction of the brethren, and we hope that they may prove a blessing to the church. Let us pray that they may be managed judiciously and hold the distinctions they claim, that while our youth may there receive superior advantages for mental improvement, they may also learn the plain, practical truths of the Gospel, and that that humility and pure religion may be taught them which is so characteristic of our fraternity.

Next day was Lord's day, and early in the morning we wended our way to the church (Eagle Creek) and arrived in time to engage in the exercises. Had a good attendance and interesting workers. Our lesson was the trial and persecution of our blessed Master. How our hearts were melted with sympathy for Jesus as we read of his betrayal and sufferings. Who could not love such a patient and holy Being? Oh, he was lifted up. "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me."
Yes, how frequently He draws by His sweet influence. We feel the drawings of the Spirit in the Sunday-school room. How the little ones love to ask and answer questions? How their little minds are filled with useful instructions, drawing them to Jesus. The Sunday-school is an auxiliary to the church, and we are glad the noble work is carried on in the brotherhood, and hope the day is not far distant when every church district will join the army of workers for the benefit of the youth of our land. After a few minutes intermission, we met for preaching. A part of the 12th chapter of John's Gospel was read by one of the usual readers.
Brother Beagle then selected, as a motto upon which to base his sermon, the 18th verse of the chapter read. "He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him; the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day." We learned from his discourse, that the Word of Jesus in his counsels and commands, and to reject them, it will be our own peril. He portrayed to our minds the solemn scene at the judgment, is such strong terms that it made us feel that we wanted to be prepared for the final day.

Oh dear brethren, let us be animated to greater action in the matter of spreading the Gospel, that all may be warned to shun the awful doom of the wicked. Brother B., was followed by one of the ministers present, selecting as a closing song of praise, the 27th hymn, portraying the judgment.

"That awful day will surely come,

Th' appointed hour makes haste," and then went to prayer, which was offered up in a very affecting manner in behalf of the security of the saints on earth, the spread of the Gospel and the salvation of the sinner. After dismissal, we dispersed, and repairing to our homes, we thought over the work of this another Lord's day gone to eternity, and of its improvement. And by close examination, we yet find room for improvement, and pray God for more light to guide us into the perfect way.

While in this reflection, I thought of the many moments that are spent in vain, and that they are gone never more to return, and if unimproved by us, it is time lost forever. The present is ours, and by proper improvement, may prove a blessing to us and our associates. Why then be idle? Why act the part of the slug-gard, that not even the temporal wants may be supplied? Why depend upon the cold charities of the public, that will neither clothe nor feed the destitute? Self-exertion and self-reliance must be at command to energize the body and soul into action. Then is not man wholly dependent upon his fellows, but within himself lies that power that will give him momentum sufficient to bear him onward and upward to a higher and nobler life, and will have that commanding principle within himself, that it is "God who helps those who help themselves," i. e., He does that which man cannot do.

The proper improvement of present moments will strengthen our mental as well as our physical powers. It will qualify the mind for a higher and a nobler life. It is the only means of fitting us to reign in a nobler and holier sphere than that of earth. And if we would live in heaven, that life must be begun upon earth. By proper application the soul becomes stronger and stronger, as we go down the stream of time, affection for earth is lost, and that of heaven gained. Our pathway will be lit up by that light that shineth brighter and brighter unto the perfect day, and as mortality is coming to a close while at the brink of time, that holy and well-improved life will verge from mortal to immortality, and the triumphant song can be sung, "O death where is thy sting, oh grave where is thy victory?" for immortality is gained, and an eternity of happiness is ours to enjoy.

To-day went to visit the sick. Our dear Bro.
King is much afflicted and is apparently growing weaker; disease, consumption. Brother Daniel feels that a better day is coming, and is resigned to his fate. He expresses his willingness to go when the Master calls. What a consolation in the religion of Jesus, it alays all pain, expels all fear and swells the soul with confidence, that to the departing it is just the happy exchanging of the cross, for the taking up of the crown, and to spend an eternity free from all affliction, and back in the sunshine of the heavenly city forever.

TRUTH.

BY J. S. MOHLER.

"And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." John 8: 32.

WHAT is truth? This question was asked by Pilate at the time of Christ's trial.
Truth has a large application, and is somewhat difficult to define. It is from Aletheia, defined truth, verity. In opposition to what is false.
Love of truth, veracity, uprightness, probity, integrity, sincerity. This is a very general definition. It might be added that truth is never contradictory; but is always consistent with itself, and harmonious in its results, and is as unchangeable as God Himself. To get the nature of religious truth before our minds fairly, we shall first refer to truth in nature, with which we are familiar. In the first place we might refer to

ASTRONOMICAL TRUTH.

By this we mean the order and harmony of all the heavenly bodies; the sun rises and sets at its regular time, and has for thousands of years, without the variation of a moment. The moon appears and disappears at its appointed seasons; the starry worlds are all governed by order and regularity; the seasons come and go as we need them. Were it not for astronomical truth i. e., the order of the heavenly bodies, all would be confusion and disorder on earth.
Suppose the sun was to rise to-morrow morning at six o'clock, the next morning at eight o'clock, the next at ten o'clock, the next back at four o'clock; what would the result be? We could make no calculation, could transact no business with certainty. Next we might notice

MATHEMATICAL TRUTH.

By this we mean the accuracy of numbers, their harmony. We say twice two make four.
This is a simple mathematical truth the world over, and no law in the universe can change it without seriously affecting the whole commercial world, and introducing error. By mathematical truths being the same the world over, and all harmonizing in their result, the various nations of the world are prepared to enter into commercial transactions with each other in an intelligent, consistent manner, and mutually profitable. But suppose one nation would teach that twice two made five; another that twice two made six, and so on; the whole commercial machinery would be unhinged, confusion and disorder would be the result. Next we might notice

GEOGRAPHICAL TRUTH.

All truthful geographers locate the same towns and cities, rivers and oceans, countries and kingdoms in the same latitude and longitude. If this were not so, we could not tell which way to go to find any particular place. Suppose one author would locate Washington city on the Northern lakes; another on the Gulf of Mexico;
another on the Pacific coast, the traveler would be at a loss to know which way to proceed to find the place. Hence the importance of geographical truth. We next notice

HISTORICAL TRUTH.

Unless historical readers agree in the main,
history loses its importance. Suppose one author would place the birth of Christ at five hundred years; another at one thousand years;
another at one thousand five hundred years;
which one of these authors should we believe, had we no other source of information? Their record of facts would be so vastly at variance, that their testimony would be worthless. Thus we discover the importance of historical truth.

To be continued next week.

Learn in childhood, it you can, that happiness is not outside, but inside. A good heart and a clear conscience bring happiness, which no riches and no circumstances can ever do.

A LOUD CALL.

THERE lived a parson, as we're told
But when or where we know not,
Who oft his snoring flock would scold,
Threatening that they to heaven should go not
But rather down to hell be hurled,
If they would not abjure the world,
And count as dross its filthy mammon.—gold.

It chanced at length, this goodly wight,
Who stoutly fought the Christian fight,
Elsewhere received a louder call,
What though the stipend was a trifle more;
To one who placed in wealth so little store,
This had no weight, you know, at all;
'Twas not the cash, oh! no,
But 'twas the Lord commanded;
And though 'twas hard to go away,
Should he refuse the Lord to obey,
And be a careless servant branded?
No, sure, so he must go.

The parting Sabbath now arrived,
And all his simple flock contrived
To hear their priest's farewell,
He pled them long in righteous strain,
Bade them from durling sins refrain,
And in sweet concord dwell;
To hate the world, in holy ways be bold,
And shun the soul's seducer,—glittering gold.

The service o'er,
Before the door

The parish gentry gathered round,
Spoiling the good man came among them,
Seized on their offered hands, and wrung them
"A saint on earth!" the grannies cried,
Then rolled their eye-balls up, and sighed,
And dropped their farewell courtesies to the ground.

Behind the rest,

To bid the priest good-bye,
In nature's sooty jacket dressed,
Old Caesar came, a wag, and mighty sly,
Bowling, the stick of ebony began
A confid' with the gold-de-pising man.

"And how good massa parson do?
Me hope me find him bery well."
"Well, Caesar, well; and how do you?"
"Ah! massa, Caesar hardly tell;
Dis good long twenty year,
Wid you he worship here,
And now he sorry from you flock you go."

"Ah! honest Caesar, yes, it must be so,
I'm sorry, too, that I am forced away;
But then, you know, 'twould never do,
The Lord's loud call for me to disobey."
"Who? massa, who you say?"
"De Lord call you away?"
"Massa, low many year's a year
De peoples pay for preaching here?"
"Two hundred." "Fodder place gib any more?"
"Why, Caesar, yes; I think they offer four."

"Ah! may be 'tis the Lord who call;
But don't you think more loud you bet him howl,
Ay, call and call, fill all be true,
Fore you come back from four to four?
De loud he holler till he dumb,
Fore massa parson eber come!"

HOW IS THE UNPARDONABLE SIN COMMITTED?

BY EMMA WATSON.

"Whosoever I say unto you, all manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men; but blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, shall not be forgiven unto men." Matt. 12: 31; Mark 3: 28; Luke 12: 10.

THE above quotation from Matthew, and to which the reader is also referred in Mark and Luke, has called forth probably, as much difference of opinion, as upon any other passage of Scripture, if not more; and to-day, there is likely more division of views, concerning it, among Christians, than upon any single thought or idea in the Scriptures. We may therefore not be in harmony with all the readers of this article, but we shall nevertheless briefly set forth our views upon the passage referred to, and give our reasons therefor. The preceding declaration of our Saviour was made in response to the Pharisees, who said, "This fellow doth not cast out devils, but by Beelzebub, the prince of the devils," Matt. 12: 24, which blasphemy issued from their evil hearts, and was prompted on account of Christ healing one "possessed with a devil." The Pharisees assailed the very Spirit of Christ, the holiest of the holy, the purest of the pure, yes, wickedly and maliciously assailing the very essence of the Godhead from which emanate the quickening and life-giving principle of the Trinity.

"Because they said, He hath an unclean spirit," Mark 3: 30, and that "He casteth out devils through Beelzebub, the chief of devils," Luke 11: 15, calling the Spirit of God the spirit of the devil, when from the very act of healing the blind and dumb, and casting out a devil, was so miraculous and supernatural, that it should have brought conviction of the Divinity of Christ, to each person not utterly given over "To hardness of heart and reprobacy of mind," and they, the Pharisees, must have known and been inwardly conscious of the Divinity of Christ, after seeing the miracles wrought by our Saviour; but their hearts were so full of evil, and so steeped in prejudice, that they were swayed by the blackness and most infernal passions, so much so, that they called the Spirit of God the spirit of the devil. Can greater blasphemy and a more aggravated crime or sin be conceived against our Lord, than the Pharisees committed in charging the Spirit of God with the attributes of the powers of darkness, when the most callous wretch could have seen divine power evinced in the act that provoked them to commit the unpardonable sin? We shall now leave the subject of direct blasphemy against the Holy Spirit, and touch other sins, which we class in the catalogue of unpardonable sins although committed different from the above.

Paul says, "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?" "If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are." 1 Cor. 3: 16, 17. Who is this temple, for which, we shall be destroyed? (And destroy here means, the death or eternal damnation of the soul). We think the temple, just mentioned, has a two-fold meaning: first, we, the members of the church of God, as a body, constitute the temple of God. Second the body of each believer is the temple of God; to further substantiate which, we quote 1 Cor. 6: 19. "What know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own?" How can we defile the temple of God in the first sense referred to? "In whom ye are also builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit." Eph. 2: 29. "Ye also, as lively stones, are built upon a spiritual house, an holy priesthood to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God by Jesus Christ." 1 Peter 2: 5. We, the members of the church of Christ, "as lively stones" "are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner-stone." Eph. 2: 20.

What vast responsibilities rest upon us members, "as lively stones" of the temple of God? How extremely careful should we be lest we defile the temple of God (the church of Christ) by bringing contention into the church, by preaching false doctrine, in the name of Christ; by stirring the brethren to strifes and wranglings. 1 Cor. 12: 12, 13, 14, 25, 26, 27. "For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body being many, are one body; so also is Christ." "For by one spirit, are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have all been made to drink into one spirit." "For the body is not one member, but many." "That there should be no schism in the body; but that the members should have the same care one for another, and whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it, or one member be honored, all the members rejoice with it." "Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular."

The preceding quotations are rather copious, but so apt and pertinent to our subject, that we feel justified in giving them place. We are one in Christ, and when one member is disowned all suffer. When one is honored all rejoice. How exceedingly jealous then, should we be of one another's welfare and reputation. As children of God, we should watch each other with tender care, and give timely warning, of the first approach of threatening danger to each other; for our interests are one in common in Christ, as we constitute the body of the church of Christ; and if a single member of the body be injured the integrity of the whole structure is so much impaired. "There should be no schism in the body." Schism means literally cutting in two; secondly and in the common acceptance of the word, divisions, strifes, wranglings, altercations and bitterness of feeling among the members of Christ; and how easily may they arise by giving offense on certain points of the doctrine of Christ: "For it must needs be that offenses come; but woe unto that man by whom the offense cometh."

"Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation." Matt. 26: 41. Again, Paul 1 Cor. 1: 10 says, "Now I beseech you brethren by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment." What a touching, tender, and solemn appeal of Paul to the church, to avoid divisions: an appeal in the sacred name of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Were the sin of schism or division not of such vast magnitude, Paul would not have appealed to the church in such awful solemnity and tender pathos. Strifes and divisions, are the birth of Satan, the medium through which he seeks to pull down or defile the holy temple of God, "which temple ye are," Christ being the chief corner-stone. Then will we desecrate the holy temple of God? far be it from us; but we shall rather guard it with jealous and tender vigilance. What a glorious privilege; what a condescension of our dear Saviour, in choosing sinful men, even us as "lively stones" of his holy temple. Let each of us be ever vigilant and "watch and pray" at our posts; and sound the alarm of coming danger to the holy temple of God, like faithful sentinels on the "watch tower" of truth; guarding the very outposts and inclosures of the temple. Then will none of us ever defile it, nor bring eternal destruction down upon any of us; but it will stand there in all its beauty, holiness and perfection, unmarred and unblemished, until it shall have accomplished its great mission; and its working members be ushered from the church militant below, into the church triumphant above.

We will now come to the last proposition viz., the defiling of one's body or the temple of the Holy Ghost. We now refer the reader again to 1st Cor. 6: 19 quoted above, which verse follows the 18th of the same chapter, which reads as follows: "Flee fornication." "Every sin that a man doeth is without the body, but he that committeth fornication, sinneth against his own body." The 15th and 16th verses of the same chapter declare the following: "Know ye not that your bodies are the members of Christ? Shall I then take the members of Christ and make them the members of a harlot? God forbid." "What! know ye not, that he which is joined to a harlot is one body? for two (saith he) shall be one flesh. 1 Cor. 6: 20. "For ye are bought with a price; therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's." Yes we are redeemed with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb without blemish and without spot." Will we brethren walk in the flesh after being washed and cleansed of our sins? "Will we continue in sin that grace may abound? God forbid." "How shall we that are dead to sin continue any longer therein?" Moreover, the Holy Spirit will not dwell in an impure mansion, if we would have it dwell in us, we must keep our bodies pure and undefiled, a fit temple for the Holiest of the holy. Will pure water mingle with the stagnant pool of filth and stench, and retain its purity? The question is its own answer. "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God." Rom. 8: 16. Will the Holy Spirit bear witness that we are the children of God, if we live after the flesh? Never, the Spirit of God cannot, nor will it bear witness of a lie, which belongs to the power of darkness.

Let us as members of the church of Christ, who is the Author and Finisher of our faith, mind the things of the Spirit, lest it take its flight from us never to return. And we owe it to him, who redeemed us with his own life, never to betray the trust reposed in us; but we should look to him in filial affection, and let him be our guide in every thing that we do. If we pamper the diverse lusts of the flesh, we can never have a share with Christ; for if we would live, we must abide in him, and he in us. "If we have not the Spirit of Christ, we are none of his." Ye who worship mammon; ye who mingle with the world and bow at the shrine of fashion; ye who live in secret licentiousness; ye who hate your brethren; does the Spirit of Christ dwell in you? He who has the Spirit of Christ will follow his ways. "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." To a safe, we should "avoid the very appearance of evil," "and work out our salvation with fear and trembling." A true child of God will not "crucify Christ in his body," no, "but delighteth in the law of God after the inward man." "For, to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace; because the carnal mind is at enmity with God; for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be." "So then, they that are in the flesh cannot please God." Rom. 8: 6, 7, 8. Yes they who defile the temple of the Holy Spirit (their bodies) shall be destroyed and never inherit eternal life. "For if Christ be in us, the body is dead because of sin; but the Spirit is life because of righteousness." "Therefore, if we are Christ's, we will walk in his footsteps and bring forth good fruit; but a corrupt body bringeth forth corrupt fruit."

Doubtless many people never think when they are pampering the flesh, that they are surely drifting back with the world and to eternal destruction. "For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come. If they fall away, to renew them unto repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame." "For the earth drinketh in the rain that cometh oft upon it, and bringeth forth herbs meet for them by whom it is dressed, receiveth blessings from God. But that which beareth thorns and briars, is rejected, and is nigh unto cursing, whose end is to be burned." Heb. 6: 4-8. How surpassingly important it is that we keep our lights burning on the vestal altars of purity; and keep our hearts free and spotless from all manner of evil and corruption. "We must mortify the deeds of the body," and even be on the alert for foes from without and from within; for the tiger of human passion is ever ready to devour us; therefore let us "watch and pray," and lest ere we are aware, we shall have committed the unpardonable sin, and the Spirit of Christ flee from us forevermore; or if we only yield to a single temptation, it may be our eternal death, as one sin prepares the way for another; until we become less able and fit to resist the evil one, and finally be given over to the desire of the flesh and the powers of Satan. The first sin we commit is only a little thread twined around us, then another and another, until they coil around us like iron cables, and we struggle in vain to free ourselves, but are held there forever and forever.

Habits of any kind, once formed, are almost impossible to break off; much less are we powerful enough to break off evil habits and practices, which become part of our very being, and are fully inwrought into our very souls; so that we cannot do good, if we would, but are held as helpless captives to the powers of darkness.

Let us be "Looking diligently, lest any man fail of the grace of God—lest any root of bitterness springing up, trouble you, and hereby many be defiled; lest there be any fornicator or profane person, as Esau, who for one morsel of meat sold his birthright." "For ye know how that afterward when he would have inherited the blessing, he was rejected; for he found no place of repentance, though he carefully sought it with tears." Heb. 12: 15-17. Who of us will sell his priceless birthright of Christ Jesus, for a miserable mess of pottage as Esau did, yielding his body to unrighteousness and uncleanness, making (the temple of the Holy Spirit) the dwelling-place of evil, lust and unrighteousness, all of which are born of the devil and whose abiding-place is hell.

Let us examine ourselves closely, and see if any one of us, is trampling under foot the Son of God, if the prince of darkness sways or controls any of our minds? We can readily see whom we serve. If we serve Christ, then will our works be good and pure, if Satan, then will they be corrupt and evil, and with such a one, Christ's Spirit will not come to abide, for if we have his Spirit, we will follow the ways of the Spirit, and not of the flesh.

We may have been liberal with quotations, but the subject is a deep one; and one on which there is so much difference of views, that we think it justifiable. To sum up, we think there are three different ways of committing the "unpardonable sin."

1. By direct assault upon the very entity and purity of the Trinity or blasphemy against the Holy Spirit, charging it with uncleanness and satanic attributes.

2. By defiling the temple of God (which temple ye are), by bringing divisions, contentions, schisms and finally separation into the church of Christ.

3. By defiling our own bodies, following the yearnings of the flesh; "sinning willfully after we have received the knowledge of the truth, grieving the Spirit, corrupting our bodies which were bought with a great price; even by the blood of Christ, therefore are we not our own. We cannot walk too closely with our Savior, but if we follow the impulses of the natural man; worship the mammon of fashion; mingle with the world in their various amusements; our pure sentiments and holy qualities will surely become choked, and we believe of the world, worldly and sensual, and the Spirit of truth leaves us to our everlasting destruction. "Be not deceived, God is not mocked; for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." "For he that soweth to the flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth to the Spirit, shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." Gal. 6: 7, 8. May none of us ever betray his trust, but rather exclaim with Paul, "For I am persuaded, that neither life, nor death, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus, our Lord."

CHRISTIAN RELIGION.

BY E. K. BOWMAN.

THE religion of Christ is the perfection of human nature, and the foundation of uniform Christianity, is the most excellent and the most useful institution, having the promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come. It is the voice of reason, it is also the language of Scripture. The ways of wisdom, are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace.

Our blessed Savior himself assures us, that his precepts are easy, and his burden of religion light. The sum of our duty consists in the love of God and of our neighbor, in denying ungodliness and worldly lusts and living soberly, righteously and godly in this present world. James says, "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father, is this, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world." James 1: 27. This it inculcates most earnestly, and upon this lays the greatest stress. This commandment no doubt, has been neglected by many Christian professors, though in many cases persons have degraded themselves that we could not visit them at all times. But we are commanded to visit them in their afflictions, and by so doing, we may be the means of reforming them.

The Gospel does not enjoin any duty, but what is fit and reasonable. It calls upon all its professors to do justice, speak the truth, be kind and affectionate toward all mankind, to practice reverence, submission and gratitude to God, to maintain the government of our own minds. This is the constant strain and tenor of the Gospel. Let us prove that we believe the superior excellency of the Christian dispensation by conforming to its precepts. Will we show that we are Christians in deed and in truth? not by endless disputes about trifles, which have no bearing except to turn us from the truth and make shipwreck of our faith but by abounding in those traits of righteousness which lead us to the honor and glory of God.

THE PRAISE OF MEN.

BY WILFRED RICE.

"For they loved the praise of men more than the praise of God." John 12: 43.

THESE words our blessed Redeemer spake at Jerusalem, after telling the people what Esau said, in verse forty of this chapter, "He hath blinded their eyes, and hardened their hearts; that they should not see with their eyes, nor understand with their hearts and be converted, and I should heal them." What a lamentable condition we are in, when the Lord once hardens our hearts and blinds our eyes! Methinks we could not find wisdom's pleasant ways, if we should make an effort. And how could we get in the way of that One that says, "I am the way, the truth and the life?"

Brethren, sisters and friends, we should always try and do what Jesus requires of us, at all times; for if we become neglectful of our duty, the Lord will perhaps blind our eyes and harden our hearts and leave us in a fearful situation, especially those who have not been converted, and received the Holy Spirit, which will lead us in the right way under all circumstances. If we will only give heed to its gentle warning and admonitions, which we as believing children can do, if we only don't give way to big self, or the carnal mind, and let that lead us. (I said big self, but it should be little self, for what can we do of ourselves?) If self gets the control of things right, once; we can easily be persuaded to do wrong, to neglect the assembling of ourselves together as the manner of some is. A little cloudy weather keeps us home, if it looks that way in the morning, when perhaps by noon it will be clear. But if it were to work for the wonderful dollar, we would go at once, either with the ax or plow—go to market or teach pupils in school, which I have done on rainy, cold, snowy days, and walked three or four miles to do it.

Perhaps, if we stay at home, we will study how to be men-pleasers, and thereby have the praise of men. Self may say, "you needn't be so particular about conforming to the Gospel, but say I can wear what I please; that will not hurt me, or any of the brethren." We may offend in deed; and woe unto him by whom offense cometh. Self may tell us we can dress plain, and be transformed by the renewing of our minds on Sunday or meeting days, but when we go to the city or towns, we can dress superfluous and it will not make any difference. Yes, but it will show that we love "the praise of men more than the praise of God."

It makes one feel sad to think that any of us should give the world such a chance, to see works of this kind, and we profess to do otherwise. Not long ago I heard a person say, they would like to be what they profess, better than Mr. and Mrs. so and so, do. We all know that worldly-minded people are inclined to hunt something to hide behind. If they can find some brother or sister or myself to hide behind, or justify themselves, they will do it and say, they are just as good as so and so who belong to the church. We know that is a poor excuse for a sinner to offer, or even for us as Christians. We should at all times imitate our Savior, as he became our Exemplar. We should not carry water on two shoulders, or try to please God and man. Christ says, "He that is ashamed of me, and of my words, of him will I also be ashamed before my Father and his holy angels."

Jesus says, "the world hated me before it hated you." So we should not wonder if the world hate us. In John 12: 42, we can read where the chief rulers believed on him; but because of the Pharisees they did not confess him, lest they should be put out of the synagogue. See, what will not the praise of men cause us to do!

TRUE REPENTANCE.

BY J. C. MUMBERT.

TRUE repentance is something that every child of God ought to have, but we are made to think as passing through this world, that some people's actions show that they got into Christ's church without first repenting of their sins. Our Lord and Master has told us in his sacred Volume, that we must truly repent of our sins and believe on the Lord with all our strength, and with all our might, and then we have the promise of being his children. Next to true repentance, is faith in the Lord of heaven and earth. If we have truly repented of our sins, then we are required of God to have faith in him who is mighty and able and willing to save even unto the uttermost part of the earth. We have the language of the apostle on this subject, after we have become God's children by adoption and by grace, when we have come in possession of that love which none but the children of God can have, then the apostle's words come home to us, and we are made to exclaim, with all the power that is in us, just like the apostle Paul did in Rom. 8: 38, 39, "I am persuaded that neither life, nor death, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate us from the love of God." Oh let us repent of our sins in an acceptable way to God, our heavenly Father.

Oh, I often think of my home over there, and know that my redemption draweth nigh. Soon we will have to lay our bodies down; our work will soon be finished, our tongues that are now speaking, will soon be cold and silent in the grave, and then who will give us credit for holding our peace? Perhaps I am talking too fast when I say something about this important subject. I think that there are better folks that could write a more promising letter; but our young members are backward in doing so.

I feel sometimes that there is too much resting on our ministers of the church. If our young members would take a part in trying to advance the cause of Christ, we would have a better neighborhood, better meetings and better Christians. Sometimes when I think over past and bygone days, even back to that time when my mother died and left me a wanderer through this wilderness of woe, and she knew that these words would be her last. She said, "take care of that little boy and see that he is brought up in the admonition of the Lord." My life since my mother's death has been very unfruitful, and oh, how many times I called to memory those words, although she has been dead over eighteen years; it seems to me that they were only spoken yesterday.

ELECTIONEERING.

I DO not mean political electioneering, for that belongs to the world, and they have a right to their own. It is not my prerogative to interfere with their business, nor at present to dictate for them. I mean to talk of the church and her work, setting forth what is conceived to be her duty, regarding some features sometimes connected with the election of church officers. On this subject we cannot be too well posted. It is not written and preached on as much as circumstances demand.

There are two ways of electing officers, both of which are mentioned in the New Testament, but only the one is intended for us. 1. By lot; a method in which the party casting the lot has no choice in determining the result. 2. By vote; a method making the voter responsible for his vote. The latter we conceive to be the method fully sanctioned by the Scriptures, and intended for the church during the present dispensation.

From the narrative given in Acts 1: 15-26, regarding the election of Matthias, it is clear that the choice was made by lot and not by voting, for "they gave forth their lots, and the lot fell upon Matthias." But when the "seven" were chosen (Acts 6) it was done by voting, for they chose seven, having certain known qualifications, whom they set before the Apostles to be installed into office. This injunction, "Look ye out among you seven men of good report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business," is proof that the choice was made by voting, and a careful consideration of the directions, to govern the choosing of church officers, laid down in the epistolary writings, is further proof in favor of voting instead of casting lots. But we have not time to consider this branch of the subject just now.

If our method of electing church officers were by lot, there would be no necessity of warning any against electioneering, for it is something that no one can effectually bring to bear where the choice is made by lot. But since God, in his infinite wisdom, has deemed it best that we elect our officers by vote, it is in our place to deal with things as they are, and not as we might suppose they should have been. With us there are chances for electioneering, and from what we occasionally learn, we have reason for supposing that it is sometimes done, and much to the injury of the cause too, at that. Believing it to be contrary to the tenor of the Gospel, and the cause of much and many evils, we deem it a duty to raise our voice against it, and save the church from what may prove a grievous sin.

Our readers are conscious of the evils resulting from electioneering in the political world, and know the extreme to which it is at times carried. With much propriety we may conclude that equal dangers and evils await the church, should she fall into the same habit, and permit her members to indulge in electioneering when a speaker or deacon is to be elected. The tendency of electioneering is to create strife, discord, and produce a hard and unfeeling may take a life-time to remove. It often divides the church into two parties, each having its representative, and whether elected or not, there remains an unpleasant and antagonistic feeling that seeks every opportunity to retaliate and carry its points.

Another tendency of electioneering is, to permit one or two persons, who understand how to influence other minds, to control the election and thus have the man chosen they select whether he is the right man or not. To do this they will talk up and magnify some one's qualifications, and run down and defame the character of another who may be equally as good, and as well qualified for the position as the other. There is too much talking about my man and not enough about the Lord's man. We talk a great deal about our choice and not enough of the Master's choice. To keep peace and harmony in the church, members do not want to tell each other who they are going to vote for, but keep it a secret between themselves and the Lord. If this is done, no evils will ever result from electioneering, nor will elections ever cause discord and contention in the church.

It is well that members frequently talk of the Bible qualifications that officers should possess, and in this way become much better acquainted with the will of God regarding the kind of men he wants in office. This subject is not studied as it ought to be, nor do our ministers preach on it as much as they should. How many of our readers ever heard a sermon, on the Bible qualifications of church officers?

The most dangerous piece of electioneering is, when the ministers get at it; for when once into it, and having more privileges than the laity, they may go still farther, and take the advantage of the laity, and thus bring reproach upon the church, besides setting a bad example, which, if followed by the members, would soon ruin any congregation.

The time for electing officers should be set, and the members requested to search the Scriptures carefully and learn the qualifications required of such. On the day of the election, and before taking the votes, all the Scripture relating to the qualifications of such officers as are to be chosen, should be read and clearly explained, that every member may know just what kind of men the Lord wants, and then instructed to cast their vote accordingly. Were this done more than what it is, the churches would make less mistakes. This thing of holding the election first, and then relate the qualifications afterwards, has no Bible precedent, and should be abandoned at once. Let us learn to do the Lord's work in the Lord's way. J. H. M.

WRITING FOR THE PRESS.

Whatever is worth doing at all, is worth doing well. If at first you don't succeed, try, try again.

NEVER write for publication until you have something to write about, and be sure that something will be interesting and profitable to the reader. Understand your subject fully before you commence writing, and then do your best to make the article say just what you want printed. Be sure that you have the matter down correctly.

If you want your article read by every reader who gets the paper, make it short and to the point. People never get tired reading short articles. Good writers frequently rewrite their articles several times before sending them to the printer. Few preachers have over 400 hearers at their regular meetings, but those who have articles in the BRETHREN AT WORK address many thousand readers, hence the importance of using great care in preparing matter for publication.

1. Write with black ink on white paper. Please do not use a pencil.
2. The sheets of paper on which you write, should not be over five inches wide. If foolscap is used, cut each sheet in two lengthwise.
3. Write on but one side of the paper.
4. Always dot the i's and cross the t's.
5. Separate your matter into suitable paragraphs.
6. Make no apologies at either the beginning or the close of your articles. They are not edifying.
7. Punctuate your articles the best you know how. If you do not understand punctuation, just omit it, and the printer will do that for you.
8. When quoting Scripture, be sure you have it just as it stands in the Book. Do not guess at it, but be sure of it.

9. When quoting Scripture or anything else, do not fail to place quotation marks before and after the parts quoted;—thus, "Jesus wept."

10. The names of persons and places should be written with great care, so that there may be no chance of misunderstanding them.

11. Never write between the lines, and if the paper is very closely ruled, it is best to write on every other line.

12. Write in as plain a hand as you can. We ask not for beauty, but something that can be easily read.

13. Do not use unfamiliar terms, but words that are simple and easy to be understood.

14. If you are not used to writing for the press, get some one to read your article over to you and see how it sounds.

15. Never write about business on the same paper that contains matter for the press. If you have anything to say to the editor, write it on a separate slip of paper.

16. Number the pages in the proper order and pin them together at the top.

17. Each article or essay should have a suitable heading.

18. Notes of travel should be as short as possible. You need not tell at what hour you took the train, where you ate dinner, nor where you put up at night, etc. Such things are not interesting, nor do they edify.

19. Church News should be brief, and as interesting as possible. Make no excuses, but write plainly just what you want in the paper.

20. Carefully guard against writing long Obituaries. The shorter, the better.

21. Do not waste time writing poetry, unless you are certain that you are a "born poet." "Poets are born, not made."

22. Avoid personalities and local reflections. If you have anything against a brother or sister go to them according to Matt: 18; do not write about them.

23. Do not mix business with matter intended for publication. Keep each item separate.

24. When writing for publication, keep constantly in view the fact, that you are writing for thousands of readers, and not just for a few individuals.

Those who write their articles over two or three times before sending them to the printer, will find it to their advantage to get a large slate, first write their articles on that and then copy them on paper. By doing this, they have better chances of improving their matter.

THE Brethren in Christian Co., Ill., have purchased a new tent 40x50, in which they expect to hold their communion meeting this Fall.

BROTHER John B. Wrightman has changed his address from South Bend, Ind., to Huntingdon, Pa., and brother J. S. Mohler has changed his from La Due, Mo., to Clinton, same State.

BROTHER J. W. Stein will remain at his home in Mo. the coming Winter, thinking it best not to make any change before Spring. He will soon have his work on baptism ready for the press. It will be a valuable book when published.

BROTHER John Metzger, in addition to his former and present labors in the missionary field, is building a meeting-house in Cerro Gordo at his own expense, excepting a part of the basement story. The house is expected to be ready for services sometime this Fall.

"NON-CONFORMITY TO THE WORLD, by brother Stein, should be extensively circulated," so says S. S. Mohler, of Johnson Co., Mo., after having ordered one dozen for use in his own neighborhood. Let some one in each congregation send one dollar and get a dozen. Every member should read the work and profit thereby.

JEWETT ON BAPTISM is the title of an interesting little volume on the mode and subject of baptism, by Milton P. Jewett. The author handles his question well, making his arguments brief, but to the point. The book is well worth its price—40 cents. Address, Dr. Geo. Ross, Lebanon, Lebanon Co., Pa.

WHAT is religion in the United States coming to? In place of a fair, or festival, a church in Wis. is reported to have had a horse-race to aid its funds. This is just about what church festivals will yet lead to—a small and horse-like beginning, but strong and lion-like, when fully matured.

A DREAM.

WE are not much of a believer in modern dreams, but the following clipped from an exchange, contains a lesson too valuable to be lost:

It is said that a minister who lived in the time of Wesley, being wearied of his morning sermon, he lay down to rest, and had a dream: He saw a man coming in the garden, a special friend of his, a minister of the Gospel, a man of great gifts, and high callings as a successful preacher. He went towards him and was not a little surprised that the face of his friend appeared very sad, which was something unusual with him.

After saluting each other, he asked his friend what time it was, and it was just twenty-five minutes after four o'clock. His friend said: "It is just one hour after my death, and I am condemned forever. Not because I did not preach the Gospel; not that I was not successful, for there are now many sheaves which through me have been gathered into the store-house of God, that will bear witness to my success.—But I am lost because I did not give God the honor, but sought to win the applause of the people to myself. Now I have my reward."

As he said this, he withdrew quickly, and I saw him no more. I then awakened, and the dream lay heavily on my mind. It was now time that I should again go to church to preach, and on my way thither a friend came to me and asked me if I had heard that Rev.—— had died. I answered no; and upon further inquiry as to when he had died, I received the answer, "that to-day, afternoon, at twenty-five minutes after three o'clock." To preach to others and to be ones self a castaway, is according to the Holy Scriptures, possible.

THE Arnold's Grove feast last week, about eight miles West of here, was a very enjoyable affair. The interest was good and the attendance fair. The ministerial force was large, there being about 16 in attendance. Some of our Western churches will think this rather large, but in countries thickly settled with Brethren like this, it will frequently so happen, and of course they enjoy Christian associations as do others. During the meeting an election was held for one minister and one deacon. The choice for minister fell on Bro. Frank Meyers, and for deacon, on Bro. Noah Blough. — They are not only earnest workers in the Master's cause, but stand well as men of influence and Christian integrity, and will, no doubt, prove important helps to the other officials in the church. We would that all officers could fully realize the importance of serving the cause with the whole heart.

OUR nation has a world-wide fame for its freedom of speech and freedom to worship according to the dictates of our own consciences, and from this national characteristic not a few have concluded that they have a right to do about as they please, especially in talking. Freedom of speech is made to mean far more than either reason or revelation admits of. Not one of us is at liberty to swear, lie, slander or defame the good name of our neighbor, or any body else. In the freedom of speech no one has a right to go beyond the truth, and prudence should govern us under all circumstances, that we do not say things that are unbecoming. He who slanders his neighbor is abusing his liberties, and transcends the limits of justice, beyond which the liberties of speech should never extend.

WHILE in conversation with a gentleman, not long since, he remarked, when speaking of religion, that he was particularly given to the habit of having things arranged to suit his ideas, and therefore aimed to explain Scripture accordingly. He had fallen into a common error that is no less popular than it is dangerous, and is becoming a prolific source of disobedience. Instead of bending ourselves to suit the Book we are inclined to bend the Book to suit us, thinking the Word of the Lord is more easily changed than our carnal natures. Persisting in this course has a tendency of not only weakening the influence of divine revelation over us, but is a prolific generator of infidelity. Let us study the Word of the Lord with the intention of bending to it, for it is straight while we are crooked and perverse, but when we, in all departments of life, bend to the requirements of the Gospel, we become straight and upright in our life and character, and thereby partake more largely of the divine nature.

RAYS OF GOSPEL LIGHT.

Buddhism and Christianity—Unequal Burdens—The Value of a Sinner—Fearless Papers—Choir Singing—Go to the Church—The Dying Paine—Taking out What Hurts.

Buddhism is a failure, because it can only bring the soul in contact with the laws of nature. There is no grace in the system, and he who believes in it, expects to be saved by his own righteousness. Its builder came from beneath the skies, hence its system is too low. It addresses itself to cold intellect, and has no power to warm the soul. It inspires no faith in the living God, hence can give no real hope for the future. It has no provisions for the emotional nature of man, other than purely selfish purposes. No Father, no Son, no Holy Ghost in Buddhism. It is only fit to be rejected.

There are altogether too many unequal burdens in the church. The minister is expected to do all the teaching—spend half or more of his time in looking after the wants of members—in attending funerals, visiting the sick, and comforting the dying. Sometimes a very strong horse refuses to pull because the load is a little heavy, and then the other horse must do both his and the other's share. So in the church. Those who ought to pull, and pull hard, too, sometimes refuse to pull a pound, and then some other one must do double work. This is not dividing the burden. A man is required to work according to his ability; and if two men have equal abilities they should bear equal burdens. Do not ask a few to do all the praying—all the singing—all the visiting of the sick, but take hold and help. You do not expect a few to get all the reward. You want to share in this, hence you should manfully help to bear the burdens.

Should you lose a gold dollar, its intrinsic value would be the same; still it is valueless because it is entirely out of relation with the circulating medium. It does not represent anything in the commercial world. So with the sinner. He is of no value in his lost condition, because he is not in relation with the plan of salvation,—because his will is not in harmony with God's will. But when he is found, he is of the same value as he was before he was lost. Will you, my dear sinner, remember this, and at once turn to the living God?

We are trying to make a paper to do good—one that fears not to reflect the whole counsel of God, and not one simply to please. A paper that will please the disciples of Christ by its fearlessness on God-given subjects, which are not popular, cannot fail to do good. A fearless exponent of divine things must deal with men and things as they are, and not attempt to cover up the insidious workings of evil, with the glamour of false charity. A paper that "holds men's persons in admiration because of advantage" can never be one that speaks out boldly upon all subjects. Nor should it be a medium for brethren to carry on strifes over matters of judgment; but it should be able to say, "We have conquered a peace in this respect." But in holding this peace, we should not forget to watch. The camp-fires must be kept burning as brightly as ever, and the trained soldiers cannot afford to lay down their weapons and turn to dancing and music. Every man and woman should stand to the Post. It is no time to desert heaven's colors.

There is a church in Boston which pays six thousand five hundred dollars a year for a quartette choir; and the good professors go there to hear the tweedledee and the tweedledum that the choir grinds out. They are able to say it is a grand concert, but not Gospel singing. Go from the Atlantic to the Pacific, stop in the churches that dot our towns and cities; there you will see the organs and in many instances, the organically player or organically leader to lead out the hallelujah of Zion. How the number sound any of the Gospel of Jesus Christ under such circumstances is almost a mystery, and the lazy Christians will stand or sit there and look on, no hymn books in the pews, no Testaments, no hearts to sing—all at ease. The organically are hired to sing and play, after having spent the week in singing minstrel tunes. I can only wonder that the Spirit of God is grieved, and the people of His choice made sad?

Where is the proper place for a Christian to labor? In and out of the church. Do you want temperance enforced? Go to the church. Do you want the poor fed and clothed? Go to the church. Do you want the sick and imprisoned visited? Go to the church. Do you want widows and orphans helped and cared for? Look to the church. Do you want the marriage relation maintained in its divine purity? Go to the church. Do you want warning against covetousness, gambling, horse-racing, theatre-going, drunkenness, and every other evil? Look to the church of God. Do you want the Gospel set before all men in its primitive purity? Go to the pillar and ground of the Truth—the church of the living God. If there is a church that will not uphold these holy principles, it has not built on the True Foundation. The church of Christ has in it every idea of reform and good works that is needful for the human family. To go out of it for divine principles is to go away from pure gold. There is work enough in the church for him who wants only what God gives him.

The dying Paine said to his female attendant: "If ever the devil had an agent on earth, I have been one," and then asked her opinion of the "Age of Reason." She replied, that, believing it to have an evil tendency, she had burned it. He replied: "I wish all its readers had been as wise." One of his own faith said to him: "You have lived like a man; I hope you will die like one." Paine turned to others near by, and replied: "You see what miserable comforters I have." Yes, there is no comfort from those who fail to bring with them Jesus. Reason is a poor comforter on a dying bed. Had Paine put on Christ as he was commanded, he would not have had occasion to die among "miserable comforters." Sinner, go not Paine-way; but go the way of safety—the way of the Lord. Infidels say: "Take the Scriptures out of the schools, they hurt our consciences and the Catholics; take the New Testament out of the Scriptures, it hurts the Jews; take out all that condemns division, for it hurts the sects; take out all referring to obedience, for as a man thinketh, so is he; take out all relating to hell and heaven, and creed and church." And then what? eat, drink, dance and hop into the dark at death. M. M. E.

MONDAY NOON, SEPT. 16.—We are just in the midst of a glorious meeting. House crowded to its utmost capacity. One baptized yesterday, and other applicants to be baptized this afternoon, among them is Bro. Bashor's wife.—Great rejoicing among the saints.

We hope all our readers will canvass their neighborhoods thoroughly so as to get all the names possible by the first of October, when the debate commences. We should like to have all the names sent to us in good time that all new subscribers may be able to commence with the beginning of the discussion. If each reader will make a little effort a few thousand new names can be secured and sent by the first of October. From our agents who have written us, we learn that they intend to canvass the towns where they live. This is a good idea, and may accomplish good. Thousands in both towns and country would subscribe if solicited to do so. We make this suggestion in order that all may be induced to enter on the work at once. New subscribers are coming in pretty fast already and promises to be still better the next few weeks.

The Yellow Fever continues to rage in many places in the South. On the 11th inst there were 3,500 sick in Memphis, and 10,000 persons to provide for. About $11,000 are required each day to properly care for this great number of dependent persons, and if the fever continues one month longer, which is probable, it will require about $200,000 to feed and care for them. One thousand coffins have been ordered in which to bury the dead, over one hundred dying daily. In New Orleans about the same number die daily, and the small towns that have been visited, fare about the same. This is a time for prayer and intercession and by all, and we are glad to know that the hearts of the people everywhere are nobly responding.

It is quite common to hear men and women, who do not work, say, "The world owes me a living, and I am bound to have it," but these very people seldom stop to conclude that many of them have not yet had paid for their raising

Those who are poor, crippled and unable to make a living, are entitled to the charities of those who have plenty and to spare, but for men who are able to work and then will not, and yet claim that the world owes them a living, is ridiculous. Paul settles the matter fully when he says, "For even when we were with you, this we commanded you, that if any would not work, neither should he eat." 2 Thess. 3: 10. Men and women who talk so much about what the world owes them, would better consider what they owe the world for having fed and clothed them. We wonder if such people have ever done the world much good?

ECHOES FROM THE EAST.

NUMBER IV.

Visiting the Sick—The Comforts of our Holy Religion—Our Sabbath Meetings—Interesting Jottings.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

ON the 22nd ult., we were called upon to accompany a brother to the country to the bedside of one of our dear young sisters in Christ, who has been laid low by the hand of affliction. We were made glad to find this dear youthful disciple strong in the grace of God, though weak in the body. We were made to think that her snowy-white couch, as she sat upon it, was an emblem of the pure garments of the saints above. Less than two years ago this dear sister found Christ, and pledged obedience to His commandments. O what comfort is thrown around the sick-bed, when Jesus is near, and is the chosen physician of the soul! By request, we read the tenth chapter of John's Gospel, and found much consolation together in the great truth, that Jesus is ours and we are His. Verses 28 and 29, suggest that we are in our Father's House and in our Savior's Hand, and "no man is able to pluck them out" of that Refuge. What comfort, what grace we have in the words of Jesus! Our holy religion is worth everything. From life's dawn to its close, the religion of Jesus spreads its healing, saving wings over us. After a season of fervent communion with God, and words of encouragement to each other, we had to return.

OUR SABBATH MEETING.

Our meeting to-day, August 25th, was in the Welty meeting-house.

"How sweet the name of Jesus sounds, In a believer's ear!"

With these soothing words our exercises opened this morning. What joy is imparted to our in-ner man by such sacred words! This is true joy to the soul; but its sweetness is not realized without "singing with the spirit and the understanding also." If we sing such a hymn of sweet sentiments without thinking much and steadfastly of Jesus, what does He think of us? for we must remember that He is in the congregation of His Church. But when our thoughts are fixed on Him, O what comfort such holy words bring to our hearts! Weaned with the daily cares of the week and perverted by the goodness of God to gather into the place of prayer, such an exercise of praise is well calculated to bring us near the throne of grace, and into that communion of the saints and our Heavenly Master, which is the essential life of the Christian.

After kneeling in devotions, a stanza was sung:

"Father, I stretch my hands to Thee, No other help I know."

By the usual request of the minister, a deacon brother read to the congregation, the chapter chosen for the lesson of the hour. A ministering brother then made use of the thirty-ninth verse as the basis of his remarks. He spoke of

- 1st. The mission of the Savior.
2nd. The power of His words.
3rd. The blindness of unfaithful professors of religion.

Then followed a testimonial of appropriate deductions, showing that the "judgment" spoken of, was vested in the word of God. Also that they who, in this time, judge themselves by the Word, shall be free from the great judgment in the end of the world. All were exhorted to "come and see," and live.

The 336th hymn was then sung, being very suggestive to all. After a season of devotion the first verse of the 114th hymn was sung, being a very beautiful closing sentiment. The announcements were made, and the congregation was dismissed.

We spent the afternoon, in the family of a very dear brother, our youngest minister. May God bless our Christian conversation, and grant him the gift he so much seems to feel the need of. O my brethren and sisters, let us sympathize with and encourage our ministers who feel their unworthiness and inability. Such deserve our greatest sympathy, for with them is the least danger of a vain ambition or ill motive. Bear them up on your hands of peace and arms of prayer and faith, when you are secretly engaged with the Holy One of Israel. And don't forget when opportunity offers, to express your sympathy and solicitude. They beg your prayers. O give them more than they ask.

On last Lord's day, Sept. 1st, our services were in the Amsterdam meeting-house. The 158th hymn was sung by way of introduction. The 428th was then lined and sung. After prayer, we joined in

"Come, Holy Spirit, Heavenly Dove,"

A deacon brother then read Matthew 6. A minister then chose for a text, the words: "Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors." The following points are deduced:

- 1st. We are trespassers against God.
2nd. Others trespass against us.
3rd. We must needs forgive others before God will forgive us.

An applying testimonial was given, and the 555th hymn announced. After singing and prayer, a verse was sung, and the meeting dismissed.

PERSONAL.

A few evenings ago, we had the pleasure of entertaining our dear sister Barbara Royer, of Mt. Morris, Ill., who is on a visit here to her many friends, and is enjoying her visit very much. Yours in Christ.

BROTHER BASHOR'S NEW BOOK,

Entitled THE GOSPEL HAMMER AND HIGHWAY GRADER, or Rubbish Cleared from the Way of Life, is now in press. The book is neatly bound in cloth, and will be issued by Sept. 25th. It should occupy a place in the library of every seeker after truth in the land. Buy it, read it, and it will do you good. Not only buy it yourself, but get your neighbor to purchase one too. During Bro. Bashor's rest, on account of weakness, from labor, he has written this defense of Gospel truth. He spends all his time in preaching, and now buy the work and help him along. The price of the work is 50 cents. The Highway of Holiness spoken of in Isaiah 35: 8, 9, and Nahum 2: 1, The hammer is come up before thy face; keep the munitions; watch the way; make thy joints strong; fortify thy power mightily, suggested the work. The title is characteristic of the contents of the work. We will be ready to fill orders by Sept. 25. Send them along at once. Address this office.

"The Worth of Truth no Tongue Can Tell."

This department is designed for asking and answering Bible questions, and for the solution of Scriptural difficulties. All questions should be stated with candor, and answered with as much clearness as possible, in order to promote Bible Truth. Articles for this department, must be short and to the point.

Please give an explanation of Matt. 21: 2; also Mark 11: 2. Do both mean the same? If so, what is meant by the ass tied and the colt with her; loose them and bring them unto me? Did he ride both, or only the colt? L. H. CRIST.

Will some one please give information concerning 1 John 3: 8, 9, 10? W. H. MILLER.

Please give us your views on the covering spoken of by Paul in 1 Cor. 11; also tell us who, or what that head is, the woman discover by praying or prophesying with her head uncovered, both the married and unmarried? MARRIAGE.

Please give your opinion of 1 Cor. 7: 15. R. S.

THE management of cases where a husband or wife became a Christian, and the other party remained a heathen, was troublesome, Paul taught that the marriage relation ought not to be disturbed on that account (verses 10-14). Yet he recognizes that under some circumstances the Christian husband or wife would be justified in leaving the other party, provided he or she remained unmarried. These were exceptional cases. The rule was, let them continue to live together. But another case comes up; suppose the heathen party breaks up the relationship, and goes away—what then? "Let him depart," says Paul: "a brother or sister is not bound to follow them, or to continue to live with them. But we take it in this case, as in that mentioned in verse 11, while released from the bondage of such a heathen companionship, they are not at liberty to marry again. As God has called them to peace, they must seek peace in the relationship in which the Gospel found them; if this could not be had, and the heathen party went away, they were at liberty to enjoy the peace that came from their absence—Isaac Errett.

WHAT WE SEE AND HEAR.

BY LYDIA M. ULFENBERGER.

IT is a conceded fact, that we all exert an influence, either for good or evil; yet quite often do we hear persons say, "I am tired of life; it possesses no charms for me." Such speech might well be termed despondency, and when uttered by lips that have named the name of God, how it chills to the heart's core, all the energy and zeal of every true Christian. How our sympathies go out for them; that they live not to spend a life-time in God's service; to leave behind them an influence for good; a beacon light for others to follow; and that they do not enjoy all the grandeur and beauty of nature, which certainly was brought into existence for our pleasure and comfort,—we the crowning piece of His workmanship. Yet, after all that has been done to make us happy, we often hear it said, "Life is only a burden, and everything is vexation;" perfectly ignoring the fact, that our lives ought to be one continual round of pleasure, and benefit to our fellow-man, instead of a positive stumbling-block.

We walk away from care at evening time, and view the glorious sunset. How it fills the breast of the good with an emotion unutterable, and we feel within us something that does not belong to earth; as we watch the ever changing hues of a glorious sunset, ever new, ever changing; yet always the same. This is our time to think and wonder. How our breath almost ceases, when we suddenly recollect that it is the death of a day, and that it has hurried us one step farther toward the time when friends will watch the setting of life's sun for us; and whether it will be one of glory to witness, or like the sun suddenly vanishing behind the terrible storm cloud, that rolls with awful majesty through the atmosphere, and is set before the proper time; telling in thunder tones, that death, to some, is terrible, depends entirely upon our conduct through life.

Then we turn to the grand old hills and mountains, and view them in all their sublimity. At times we think there never was anything so grand and sublime. Look at the huge rocks, and the giant trees; the little pebble and the shrub; the blades of grass, and the beautiful little flower which we may probably have almost crushed beneath our foot. If we should take the pains to pluck it, we would find a new field to study, probably conclude it the most beautiful of all, because of its silent helplessness, for had we not seen it, we would, no doubt, have passed it by unnoticed. Then, too, we find innumerable insects, and the birds of every description provided for by nature, they make our earth almost a paradise of song.

The waters are teeming with millions, from the huge sea monster to the tiny animalcula, each filling the place that has been allotted to him. In the grand ocean of water we find superior and inferior races of creatures. Some soar away upward, and enjoy all that is fresh and pure, while those of their inferior neighbors are forever wallowing in the dregs and mire at the bottom of the sea; yet they are forever among the untold riches that abound there, even if they know nothing of the beauties that abound at the surface. All creation is contented with that which has been allotted him, except man, who was the noblest part of His work; and we still refuse to give Him the praise. We ever imagine that we are of vast importance, forgetting that we, like the inferior races at the bottom of the sea, are ever plunging through the dregs of the base of the grand ocean of air, and must be content therewith; God has designed it so, and we must ever remain here while the birds are permitted to soar away into the ethereal blue-ness, among the majestic clouds that we are permitted only to see and admire. But He has promised to exalt us in due time, if we obey His law and commandments. But, "Oh!" says some one, "how are we to know what He requires of us?" The Savior says, "Search the Scriptures, for in them ye shall find eternal life; and they are they which testify of me." And it also says, "The wise shall understand," and Solomon says, "In all thy getting, get wisdom."

We walk into the popular church and we hear long prayers offered. We see much devotion, and the minister will read his text, and deliver a lengthy and polished discourse from his notes. He will tell of all the wickedness that is going on in the world abroad, but never touches that which is at home. He will tell of the heathen Chinese, who are groping in the darkness, torturing their bodies, binding their feet in iron shoes, disfiguring themselves, worshipping at the shrine of idolatry, and that they are much in need of the light of the Gospel. He will tell of many other nations who are yet groping in the dark, while he entirely neglects those at home, sitting under the sound of his voice, with ribbons and faces, and flowers, and feathers and jewels, and not only their feet, but their bodies tortured out of symmetry, thus despoiling the figure which God has given to them, and which He pronounced "very good, and perfect," as are all His works. They are sacrificing health at the shrine of fashion, and when they are wasting away prematurely to the grave, they call it a "dispensation of Providence," and think they are objects of pity, when it is their own fault. For God is a God of order, and His laws are not to be gaudied; for with every one there is a penalty attached, and sure to be inflicted when those laws are violated. He knows our every thought, and sees our every action, be they good or bad. Some will say, "It is impossible to be good—there is too much required." This is not so, for He is just and merciful, and He requires of us just what will fit us for His celestial abode, and the capacity to do all He requires of us is given, if it is our will. To some are more talents given than to others, but to whom there is much given, there will be much required.

While we are seeking to know our duty, we turn from the popular churches to the professed meek and lowly—those who profess to be a separate people. Surely, we conclude, we have found the right people. We will see how their light shines. They walk into their places of worship, perfect patterns of humility. If you ask them, What is the first duty of man? they will tell you, "Son, give me thy heart." "Fear God and keep his commandments." "But how are we to do that?" By doing justly, loving mercy, and walking humbly before our God; all this they say, and much more. But how often do we find it, that they fail to let their lights shine by not exerting the right influence. They dress plainly, give much to the poor, visit the sick, and one thinks this certainly is right. We watch more closely, and lo! spots there are, and blemishes to be seen; for although they pray much in their churches, and look very pious, when they are alone at home, they do not have worship, neither do they return thanks at their tables, and instead of a quiet, peaceful circle, there are quarrels and dissensions. Either they strive to accumulate great wealth, or they loiter in idleness. If they bestow alms, they are sure to tell of it, that others may know of their good works. They are ever telling their neighbors, brethren and sisters, and other people's children to become more humble, and dress more plainly when they are proud themselves and lavish all manner of extravagance on their own children. When those children are seen, they are perfect fashion plates, are haughty and vain, and would not be taken for children of pious parents. All this we see and hear, and much more, and an evil influence is exerted. One who is indeed an earnest seeker after righteousness, exclaims, "Where is Christ to be found?" But, sinner, despair not, for Christ stooped low. He has prepared for you a Mansion eternal, and those who love God and obey His commandments, in His own time, He will exalt. As the birds you shall rise and soar away into the ethereal blue-ness of the heavens and be forever blessed, in that homestead over whose spires and pinnacles there fall no shadows or even clouds, and whose threshold the voice of sorrow is never heard, neither sickness, pain or death can enter there.

WE ARE ONLY SOJOURNERS HERE ON EARTH.

BY ANNA SMITHS.

WE are only sojourners in this world; we dwell here as strangers and pilgrims, only for a short time; we have no continuing city, no abiding home here. Soon we must be called from our weary pilgrimage, and go to try the realities of a vast eternity, there to be happy or miserable forever. O, how much depends upon the way in which we spend our short lives in this world! How needful that we heed the admonition, to pass the time of our sojourning here in fear, as it is so very short, and is the only time we have wherein to prepare for eternity! Death often comes suddenly and unexpectedly, and spoils our plans and calculations of finding a more convenient time or season to prepare for eternity. Therefore, "While it is called to-day, harden not your hearts;" "Prepare to meet thy God," as we know not what a day, much less what a year may bring forth. Another year will soon have passed by, which brings us so much nearer to the grave and eternal judgment. So much of the short time of our sojourning here will then have fled, never to return. Time is never standing still, but is continually hurrying us onward.

"When'er we go, where'er we be,
We're traving to the grave."

Perhaps, before this year will have closed, some of us who are reading these lines, will die. Are we, then, ready for such a great change? Do we feel that we could meet our God in peace? O! how important it is, that we pass the remainder of the time of our sojourning here in peace. Fear God and keep His commandments, which is the whole duty of man; for God will bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good or whether it be evil. Let us bear in mind, that this world is not our home; that we are but strangers and pilgrims on earth and that we are speedily travelling to eternity. The evening of our short life may suddenly close upon us. Let us not neglect, while it is yet to-day, to seek for ourselves a sweet home in heaven.

CHRIST WILL COME.

LEAVE TELLMAN.

BEHOLD, saith the Lord, I come as a thief, that is, unexpectedly; but know this, that if the good man of the house had known what hour the thief would come, he would have watched, and would not have suffered his house to be broken up. Therefore be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh. Behold, I come as a thief, that is, in the dead of night, when men are all fast asleep, so will the Lord Jesus come at a time when the world is altogether asleep in spirit, altogether unaware and thoughtless; none of them thinking of any such thing at all,—all just thinking that things are going on as usual, and will go on as usual for their time at least. Behold, I come as a thief, that is, to find men unprepared for as in the days that were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and given in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of God be. Behold, I come as a thief, that is, suddenly, for as the lightning cometh out of the East and shineth even to the West, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. Solemn, awful, startling words! Full of comfort, indeed to those who know and love the Lord Jesus Christ as their Savior and their Friend, whose they are and whom they serve; but full of terror, alarm, destruction and despair, to those who know Him not, and love Him not. To those who love Him and are looking for Him, Christ will come to bring blessings and glory. To those who love Him not, but love the world and live for it, He will come to bring judgment and punishment, the day of perdition of ungodly men. Yes, there is an awful day coming for the world. Some morning when all are going about their day's business or pleasure just as usual, or some night when people are asleep in their beds, or awake for deeds of darkness; when the adulterer has waited for the twilight, saying, "No eye shall see me," and thieves in the dark break through houses, which they marked for themselves in the day-time,—suddenly in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, the heavens will open,—a light brighter than the sun will make the noontide look pale, or break in upon the darkness of night. And then shall they see the Son of God coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. Then what will sinners do, when the angels' trumpet blast shall resound through earth and heaven, and they shall feel in that tremendous moment, that they have trifled too long, and that now it is too late and all is lost forever and ever?

HOME OF THE SOUL.

C. H. BALSALICH, Respected Friend.—In complimentary to your article entitled "Home of the Soul," in BRETHREN AT WORK, No. 33, I will copy a song which I sing, and think it appropriate.

"I will sing you a song of that beautiful land,
The far away home of the soul,
Where no storms ever beat on that glittering strand,
While the years of eternity roll.

Oh, that home of the soul, in my visions and dreams,
Its bright jasper walls I can see,
Till I fancy but think, the veil intervenes,
Between the far city and me.

That unchangeable house is for you and for me,
Where Jesus of Nazareth stands;
The King of all kingdoms forever is He,
And he holdeth our crowns in His hands.

O how sweet will it be on that beautiful land,
So free from all sorrow and pain,
With songs on our lips and with harps in our hands,
To meet one another again.

To all lovers of the pure Word of God," says the Canadian Baptist, "it will be a matter of congratulation that we are assured of two important features in the new Bible Revision.—While the text will be preserved, so far as is consistent with accuracy, the absurd and utterly indefensible verse system—by which every rule of continuity is violated, will disappear, and instead the text will be divided into proper chapters and paragraphs. The poetry of the Bible will also be put into proper metrical form. This will give the revised Bible a little more bulk than the present Bible. But it can scarcely be doubted that to scholars and intelligent readers these changes will be welcome, and ultimately will prevail universally."

CORRESPONDENCE.

Customs of the Country and People of England.

SUMMER II.

I HARDLY know how to commence, but I brethren and sisters when you stop on English shores remember this, you will undoubtedly have to leave your American customs on the ship you leave. They will not correspond, therefore better learn that whilst in Rome, you also will be, Roman.

One custom I hardly can recommend, is the RAISING OF THE HAT.

or hitting the hand to the hat to all of the nobility or even squires. We must pay the respect to the gentlemen of our land, else we would undoubtedly lose favor with them. Some might think I will not do that. In order to sometimes do our neighbors good, it is necessary to not be always looking for our own interest, as I shall show further on, when describing my efforts to introduce the doctrine of the Brethren in the old country. Another custom of the country, is to meet a certain day of the week at

and like we do here, any day. You will find that one will take Tuesday, another Friday and Saturday and so on. Each being known to the farming community, they all that day are in town, put up at some hotel, for there we are not allowed to have our teams on the street, then to go in a shop or store, as you would say. Now we must put our team and conveyance away, and huggies, flour, and the hostler will charge you for taking care of everything, and bringing your horses and conveyance to you, six cents or three pence. This I think

for it saves a person's clothes, if they go down to meeting. When the town market is a butter market, you will find the farmers' wives assembled, and such a chatter! you can hardly hear your own ears. They have their baskets of butter, their eggs, and poultry, and now they set their price, and the dealers have a time. I assure you. So also with monthly cheese markets and cattle, only farmers here may be found, instead of their "better halves."

In farming, the custom is to rent for a lease of seven, fourteen or twenty-one years, the crops to be alternately divided, and specified, so as not to injure the land, but on the contrary rather improve.

LARGE FLOCKS OF SHEEP

are pastured on arable land, to enrich the same, and large quantities of artificial and home manures are used on the pastures and arable land.

THE ESTABLISHED CHURCH

is a State church, and of course all farmers feel it to be so, for in conversation the week I left England with the farmer, my brother rents his dairy of, he told me the amount of tithes he paid to two of the State churches. To the one he was living close to, and attending, about £20 or $100, to the opposite district, which was a mile distant, £40 or $200, thus making a tithe of $300, to be paid to the clergy-man on a certain evening named; and now let me tell you in conclusion this farmer was and his landlord went up with him, for I saw them both go, and he also had to pay a much larger amount as he owned all the village of Rampton. Now see the "Lines on the Times" in Bro. Eshelman's book, don't come true.—

ONLY A RENTER,

"They keep dumb dogs in pomp and ease,
Who will not bark without large fees."

And these very churches are becoming so ritualistic, there's no keeping up with them: requiring, or at least desiring the congregation to rise as they enter the church, with their long flowing surplice, of white cambric, with black and red or blue thrown over, and candles and crucifixes in abundance on the altar. But I will leave this for the religious part of my conversation with you, when I shall minutely detail the proceedings of each body of believers. I am getting a little lengthy and am afraid some will say, "when are you going to quit?" They like short sermons, short essays, and in fact short everything, even short people.

The people of England are

A PECULIAR PEOPLE.

and you will think so when I tell you, that many a one knows not his neighbor's name, and they join houses, and if that neighbor should die they would no more think of attending the funeral than I would think of going back to the old country. Relatives alone, with doctor, undertaker, pall-bearers and coffin-bearers attending funerals,

ALL DRESSED IN BLACK.

Trimmed according to the relative, whether close or distant, in craps. Again we find those who often visit their friends, act not like Americans. They do not feel so much at home as we do here, in conversation etc., but on the other hand are particular in what they say; and one thing sure is this, we might copy, they talk but little about their neighbors, brethren or sisters in the church; in fact, I don't believe I ever heard one say any thing against his fellow-members. This is commendable, and should be practiced more by us.

In visiting or at home, you will find the head of the house sitting invariably at the head of the table and carve; that income helps themselves, the worthy wife assisting at the other end of the table to vegetables, etc., and always to the pastry alone. After a week as we do here, only more slowly, and when through, we wait on one another, as some return thanks before rising from the table, never rising unless business calls away, and all will excuse them. Customary also if you have visitors on Sunday, to tab them all to church, for we don't stay at home for any one. The variety is small at table, yet substantial; and Sunday visitors generally get a good supper after church, of cold cutlets, as we do not believe in some do, of cooking all day Sunday, and then in the evening so. Well I am tired of them on any day of the week.

Brethren and sisters I would not to say,

you can if you like. Don't think it a preacher should come to your party, that you must prevail extra. Don't you know you kill your own preaching? You expect him to preach, and to do the best. Well, then that is my advice, and if you are going along, don't eat more than your preacher, and you will bear and understand better, and he will undoubtedly speak better. A word to the wise is sufficient.

HAVE YOUR OWN.

The custom or fashion is, to dress according to your rank in life. The clothes that suit some best, are the most costly. And we often find those that could barely afford to dress costly, do so. This, brethren and sisters, we will not follow. We live not far from Paris, where fashions start, and it does not take long to come here to England, and then to your country. The prevailing fashion now, is, long trails for the ladies. I often have stepped on the same, thinking they were in the other room, or further on, and accidentally pulled out the tacking. Well I apologized of course, and then told them, I do hope they will carry their dresses over their arms, or some where else. Enough of fashion, — and hope soon to see sensible people walking in sensible clothes.

The custom is for any one to give their seat to an older person, and where the ladies are. In fact we would not think of doing so; and as the only way of using the same is smoking, they have their smoking rooms. It is bad enough to make a chimney of their mouths, but when it comes to fairly eating it, that they will not do. We, as an English people stand aloof, we don't believe in it, neither will we practice it, for the Scripture says, "nothing unclean," and so say we. If the female portion of our people would say so, and stick to it, we should have amongst our people equal to Luther in Germany. Hundreds of dollars would be saved, now unnecessarily used, if our people would not be under the influence of the narcotic weed, and would then have a free use of their reasoning faculties, not being dulled by the use of a stupefying and altogether useless article, costly too, and which becomes no one. I speak plainly, for I am a plain person, and this is a and tobacco users know it, but the trouble is they want their own way. I ask if you are following Jesus, did you ever read of him smoking a cigar or chewing tobacco? If so, when and where? I want to follow Him.

A REFORMATION

I might communicate custom of people all day and then not have done, and I know that you are getting tired of this censuring what is not just right. Well, all I have to say is this, let us all try and be better and do better, for we all know what is right.

H. P. BRINKWORTH.

From Salem, Marion Co., Oregon.

I WILL say to your many readers, that on last Sunday there was one more accession to the church here, by baptism, who united with Christ in his very old age. His name is, George Ulevy. Was 85 years old last December. In his younger days he was a coverlet weaver. He resided near Dayton, Ohio at one time, at another time in Northern Indiana, at a late time in Butler Co, Iowa. Came to this valley in 1865. He now resides with his son-in-law, near Aurora, Marion Co, Oregon, about thirty miles North of us. As soon as he heard of us up here, in this part of the country, he made arrangements to become united with the church. Last Sunday was the first meeting of the Brethren, he has had the privilege to attend for many years. He seemed to have a very great desire to become united with the Brethren, but had no chance since leaving Indiana in 1852. I believe I can safely say the members here are generally in love and union. Health in general very good, except sister Mary Leedy, wife of Bro. Daniel Leedy, of Albany, Linn Co, was very low, the 21st of this month and not expected to recover. We are still trying to labor for the advancement of our dear Redeemer's kingdom, have meeting every Sunday. God willing expect to hold a series of meetings in Multnomah Co, Oregon, seventeen miles East of Portland, to commence on the evening of the 6th of September, and continue over Sunday. Truly the harvest is very great here in the far West, but the laborers are very few. Brethren think of us and pray earnestly in our behalf.

David Brower.

From Gainesville, Texas.

As I am asked so much how I like Texas, I will cry and give your readers some idea of this country. I came to Grayson Co. in 1876, and remained there till January 1878.

Then I moved to Cook Co. In Grayson I lived on sandy land. I now live on what is called, black-sandy or lime land. I like the black land the best for most things. It is the best for most all grains, and especially for wheat. The section that I am in at this time is just settling up, but as far as I have been able to try, everything does well here. All kinds of grain and vegetables do well when cared for, I think I can safely say for Texas. There are not many farmers yet in Texas; the most that farm, only farm at it. One reason that this country has such a bad name, is because many have come here thinking that they could make money without labor, find the mistake, and become dissatisfied and return home and give all the bad traits and none of the good.

I have had meeting in several counties, and better behavior I never saw. I think if care is taken, the day is not far distant when we can have a church here. When I got in the State there were two members, and at this time we have twenty-four. I will not persuade any one to come here, but I am satisfied it would be much the best for many to come here.

As for the health of the country there is not enough care taken in a wet Summer, and the consequence is, as Summer closes there are chills and fevers along the creeks and timber. When young men come to Texas, they ought to remember that father, mother, and sister are not with them to keep every thing in order. They must rely on themselves, and men with families must not think that in a new country like this, they are going to find fine dwellings ready prepared for them, unless they have a large roll of money to back them. Men must remember that a child must crawl before it can walk, so must men be contented to put up with a cabin, till they can do better. As for myself and family, and all the members that are here, are well pleased with Texas. There are many drawbacks in all new countries, but to my knowledge there are less here than in others. Short Winters and long Summers here, the hottest day of this Summer at my place, was 96° in the shade and 103° in the sun, but in the timber it is some warmer. I prefer the prairie. As for fruit when it has been cared for, it does well, especially peaches. You can raise any thing here in Texas, that can be raised in the United States. The crops this year are fine. Brother Jacob Berkey has been down this month; he came to look at Grayson, Cook, Montague and Clay counties, but by the time he reached my place, it being the Western part of Cook Co., he said he had seen enough to satisfy him, that this was a good county and he would return home and get ready and move down this Fall. He will bring as many as five or seven families with him. This is cheering to the few members that are here; it won't be long I hope, till the Gospel is preached in the South as it is in the East and West. I think the people here, will like it as well as any where. Brother Jacob Berkey says, he was surprised to find the people as kind as he did.

Now Brethren and friends, you who contemplate moving, I want you to have some thought in regard to Texas, and if you decide to come to Texas, just come along, but if you are bent on some other place, go ahead, I won't persuade you to come here, for fear you might not like it, but I am satisfied that a man can do here with as little labor as any where. I have been here two seasons. The health last year was fine, but not so good now. Some fevers this year, but not fatal; some chills, lasting but a few days.

I will say this, all who write to me after this, instead of writing to me at Gainesville, Cook Co., direct to St. Joe, Montague Co., Texas.

JOSEPH H. SOWDER.

I TAKE this brief, yet extensive method of answering many inquiries: "How did you and your ass about come on?" At one of our regular points we spoke on the subject of baptism, and at some length on the mode of true and forward immersion. At the conclusion of our services Mr. Uder, of the Disciples rose and announced that in three weeks from that day he would review our sermon and prove to the people, that single immersion was valid Christian baptism, and would prove that we do not baptize by true immersion, but, very half do so. Thereupon I announced, that on Sunday after his "review" I would continue the subject, by a reply to his review and by leaving him more to review. So I attended his review, after which I renewed my intention of replying on Sunday after, but proposed, that if our occasional appointments for that evening were too tedious, that I would rather see day and try and answer all the objections as they were of hand; when upon Mr. Uder rose and said he would discuss these questions with me, provided we could agree upon the propositions. Next I made the three following requests prerequisite to further arrangements, to wit:

1. That both be indorsed by our respective churches as responsible and properly authorized ministers of the Gospel, and that each so engage in this work in the name of his respective church.

2. That each claim to be able to show from history, that his mode of baptism contended for, was practiced during first two centuries of the Christian era.

3. That each claim to be able to show from history, the origin of the other's mode contended for, this side of the apostolic age.

But when I went back the 8th day after, to finish up what was commenced and to hear farther from them, and Mr. Hider came not forth, and the rest saw and heard from our books, and saw our assailant's arguments cast in a balance, and themselves instructed more perfectly in the ways of the Lord, they simply but publicly asked us to "quit!" and said they would not endorse their man on the ground, that he had not his membership there, although he lives within a mile of their church, where all this occurred. Others of them objected to indorsing it, because there was history to be used, just as if their great men, even their leader, Campbell, never used history in defending his position on baptism. So we dismissed the subject and pronounced it concluded for the present.

C. C. ROOT.

GLEANINGS.

From George Witwer.—Having just returned home after a week's labor in the church, we feel pressed to drop a few items for the BRETHREN AT WORK. Elder D. B. Gibson and the writer commenced a series of meetings at the Union church, Davis Co., Mo., on the evening of the 10th of August, and continued to the evening of the 15th. The glorious result was five additions, and a general reviving and building up of the members. An excellent interest was manifested by those attending with the best of order. We only regretted that other duties and engagements in the vineyard of the Lord called us away so soon. We think the seed sown will produce a copious fruit. This place is in the bounds of the Hamilton church. On the 17th we left Hamilton (Bro. Gibson remaining with us over the 16th) for Log Creek church. Met in council with the members, advanced Bro. Zachens Henricks to the second degree of the ministry, and ordained Bro. C. C. Root by the imposition of hands. Returned to our home at Hamilton same evening, Bro. D. B. Gibson leaving on the morning train, 18th, expecting to reach the Plattsburg meeting-house in time for morning service. Thus ended our week's labors, to God be all the praise.

Hamilton, Mo.

From James R. Gish.—We left our home in Woodford Co., Ill., on the 6th of August, 1878, for a tour through the central mission of Illinois, visiting the scattered members and churches, as we could; traveling by private conveyance, through the counties of Marshall, Bureau, White, Ogle, Carroll, Ogle, Lee, LaSalle and Putnam; then through the Eastern part of Marshall. Arrived home on the evening of September the 2nd. Were out just four weeks. Made a short visit at the office of the BRETHREN AT WORK, found all hands busy as usual. Called with Bro. Lemuel Hillery at Shannon. Feel sorry that he has decided to go West, but hope the blessings of the Lord may go with him to his new field of labor. In all had rather a pleasant trip. Formed or renewed the acquaintance of many kind brethren and sisters, who have our thanks for their kindness to us while we were with them, and if we meet no more on earth, may we all meet in heaven, is my prayer.

Riverton, Ill.

From the Logerville church.—Health is good. As a church we have our butters and our sweets, but are still moving slowly hoping for the better.

Had some excitement a few weeks ago about the Red man, as he is called, but all is calm now. Some hundreds came into camp only seventy miles East of this. They said they were not warriors, that they were good Indians, and that they had to fight if they stand with the tribe and that they were to come in their own country before the resurrection. They were powerless, got tired of waiting for the resurrection; and they were wrong it wasn't the time yet. These poor creatures a number of years ago at a total eclipse of the sun, supposing the resurrection to be at hand, made up a fire, knelt around it with their hands stretched toward heaven, making a terrible noise, they came offering tobacco, by laying it on the fire and, at the end of the ring they had one of their children ready to lay on for an offering to the Great Spirit if the tobacco was not good enough. But it is said the sun began to shine just before they got around to the child. The child would surely have been sacrificed if the sun had not begun to shine at that time.

Many wonder how the Indian got here on this Island, or from whom did they spring.—My father used to tell me he believed they were a part of the tribe of Manasseh because of their general customs. But we see something in them worthy of our notice. One thing we certainly see, is poor fallen humanity.

DAVID BARKLOW.

From Wabash church, Ind.—It is through the kind mercies of God, that I am spared to inform you that the ark of the Lord is still moving onward and upward. We were made to rejoice some time since, by the aid of Eld. Samuel Murray, who delivered two able discourses, the result of which is, two young men were persuaded to forsake sin and the world, and close in with the people of God. The church rejoiced and we have reason to believe the angels in heaven rejoiced. My prayer to God is they may ever prove faithful looking to God, who is the Author and Finisher of our eternal salvation through Christ our Redeemer, amen. We had our council meeting yesterday and there was such a union prevailed among us that I could say with Peter, it was good to be there.

N. F. BREBAKER.

From E. Showalter.—On Tuesday evening, the 3rd inst, Bro. S. H. Bashor preached a two-well sermon in the South Waterloo church to a vast assembly of people. He read for the basis of his remarks the last three verses of the 8th chapter of Paul to the Romans. The address was delivered with power, designed for the encouragement of those present, who were in the fold of Christ and a caution to such as had not yet embraced Christianity. The many friends he has made while with us, wish for him abundant success in his ministerial labors, wherever he may be called to declare the Gospel of Christ.

Bro. J. A. Murray is slowly recovering and is now able to get about some, by the aid of crutches. It will be a long while before he gets the full use of his injured limb, in walking, if he ever gets it.

From Beech Grove, Ohio.—Our church is in a healthy condition. We have lately received four into the fold. Our Sunday-school is doing well.

GEORGE HAVIN.

From Nora Springs, Iowa.—Having been urged by many to give myself over to evangelistic labors, I have concluded to do so during the coming Fall and Winter, and take this method of informing those who have requested me to labor for them, that I will if still desired, comply with their request, if life and health are spared. Please address me at once so that I may be enabled to make my arrangements accordingly.

W. J. H. BAUMAS.

From Grenada, Miss.—There have been two hundred and twenty-five deaths in our town and seventy-five cases on hand, averaging from six to fifteen deaths per day. There are about six well men in town, the others have taken refuge in the country and other towns. The resident doctors and nurses have taken the disease and several of them have died. Undertakers have all fled and no burial ceremonies are had. Some pass into eternity with no one to close their eyes. It is beyond the power of man to describe the misery and sufferings of the people.

J. E. LAYCOCK.

From Swedonia, Sumner Co., Kan.—At Bro. Abija Holloways, on State Creek, fourteen miles West of Wellington, on the 20th day of Sept. we will hold our love-feast.

We shall be pleased to have Brethren traveling West in search of homes to stop with us. There is plenty of good government land within eight or ten miles of us, and a railroad within thirty miles. Our country is settling up fast and it can not be long until we shall have plenty of railroads. Health is good, crops splendid and we think fruit will do well.

There are many calls for preaching though we have but one speaker. Those attending on Love-feast, will address J. Troxel, A. Holloway or Stewart Humbarger, Swedonia, Sumner Co., Kan. Any of these brethren will meet you at Wichita.

FRANCIS RICHMOND.

From Jacob Mishler. I hereby acknowledge the receipt of a package of valuable work for the Ashland College Library, kindly donated by the editors of the BRETHREN AT WORK. Also several valuable books donated by brother Kinsey of the Vindicator. A copy of the "Doctrine of the Brethren Defended," donated by the author, Bro. R. H. Miller. Two copies of the "Passover and Lord's Supper," donated by the author, Bro. J. W. Beer. Thirty-five volumes on various subjects, donated by Van Antwerp, Bragg & Co., Cincinnati, Ohio. Twenty-five volumes, donated by Harper & Brothers, N. Y. One copy "Worcester's unabridged Dictionary," donated by the publishers, J. B. Lippencott & Co., Phil. One copy "Webster's unabridged Dictionary," donated by the publishers, Springfield, Mass. Brethren Isaac Price and D. P. Saylor have each signified their willingness to donate a suitable copy of the "Holy Scriptures" for the use of the College.

A good many of the friends of the school have consented to donate books, and I hope by a little effort of the friends of education we shall be able to have a library commensurate with the design of the college.

The Brethren at Work.

A RELIGIOUS WEEKLY.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED BY J. H. MOORE & M. M. ESHELMAN.

THE BRETHERN AT WORK is an uncompromising advocate of Primitive Christianity in all its ancient purity.

It recognizes the New Testament as the only infallible rule of faith and practice.

And maintains that the sovereign, unmerited, unsolicited grace of God is the only source of pardon, and

That the vicarious sufferings and meritorious works of Christ are the only price of redemption:

That Faith, Repentance and Baptism are conditions of pardon, and hence for the remission of sins.

That Trine Immersion or dipping the candidate three times face-forward is Christian Baptism:

That Feet-Washing, as taught in John 13, is a divine command to be observed in the church

That the Lord's Supper is a full meal, and, in connection with the Communion, should be taken in the evening, or after the close of the day:

That the Salutation of the Holy Kiss, or Kiss of Charity, is binding upon the followers of Christ:

That War and Retaliation are contrary to the spirit and self-denying principles of the religion of Jesus Christ:

That a Non-Conformity to the world in dress, customs, daily walk and conversation is essential to true holiness and Christian piety

It maintains that in public worship, or religious exercises, Christians should appear as directed in 1 Cor. 11:4-5.

It also advocates the scriptural duty of Anointing the sick with oil in the name of the Lord

In short it is a vindicator of all that Christ and the Apostles have enjoined upon us, and aims, amid the conflicting theories and discards of modern Christendom, to point out ground that all must concede to be infallibly safe.

BE CAREFUL WHAT YOU SAY.

IN speaking of a person's faults,
Pray don't forget your own.
Remember those with homes of glass,
Should seldom throw a stone,
If we have nothing else to do,
But to talk of those who sin,
'Tis better we commence at home,
And from that point begin.

We have no right to judge a man,
Until he's fairly tried,
Should we not like his company,
We know the world is wide,
Some may have faults and who have not?
The old as well as young,
Perhaps ye may, for aught we know,
Have fifty to their one.

I'll tell you of a better plan,
And one that works full well,
I try my own defects to cure
Ere I of others tell;
And though I sometimes hope to be
No more than some I know;
My own short-comings bid me let
The faults of others go.

Then let us all when we commence
To slander friend or foe,
Think of the harm one word may do
To those who little know,
Remember curses, sometimes like
Our chickens, roost at home;
Don't speak of other's faults until
We have none of our own.

TRUTH.

BY J. S. MOHLER.

"And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." John 8: 32.

WHEN, while astronomical, mathematical, geographical, historical as well as all truths harmonize in their results, and are always consistent, can we not expect the same result from religious truth? Is religious truth not as harmonious in its results, and as consistent as other truths? Certainly! If this were not so, we would not have religious truth in the Gospel, but a bungling error. Christ says, "I am the truth." But the question arises, where shall we go to learn religious truth? "To the Bible, says one. Very well, to the Bible we will go. Then we understand that the Bible, or rather the Gospel, teaches a system of religious truth. It is because of this that Christ prayed, "That they all be one." John 17: 21. This oneness is the result of religious truth. Paul says, "So we being many are one body in Christ." Rom. 12: 5. Again, "Be of the same mind one toward another." Rom. 12: 16. Again, "that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment." 1 Cor. 1: 10. "There is one body and one spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling." Eph. 4: 4. These, and many other kindred Scriptures, all prove the harmony, or sameness, of the result of religious truth; that if the Gospel is obeyed in its simplicity, it will mould a sameness of character, uniting us in love into one body, all speaking the same thing.

But while this is the nature of religious truth, why is it that there are so many divisions of the church? Being divided and subdivided into hundreds of fragments. One will say, this is just right, it gives a person an opportunity of joining just that church he likes best. He considers the divided state of the church, a great privilege; but how does this accord with Paul's teaching? "Now I beseech you brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offenses contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned, and avoid them." Rom. 16: 17. Again, "Now I beseech you brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you." 1 Cor. 1: 10. From these Scriptures, it is clear, that the apostle would not countenance any division, but would have the members mark the man that caused the division, and avoid him, i. e., disregard him as unworthy of your association, because of his heresy. But if the modern doctrine be true, that the division of the church is a blessing, then the apostle should have written, "honor the man that causeth division among you, for this is in harmony with the divine Will and suits the convenience of the people." It is clear that either the apostle instructed wrong, or our theologians are much at variance with divine truth.

Again, if one man has the right to divide the church to suit his convenience, so has another. If the various churches now in existence, do not suit me, I can make one that does; if division is the criterion to go by, so can my neighbor and everybody else. The doctrine of division, is from the devil; is heresy of the worst kind. It is a sad commentary on Christianity that the church is divided as it is; it has been a prolific source of infidelity. But another will say, that it makes no difference what our church relations are, just so we are sincere; that all those divisions of the church are similar to the various tributaries that form the mighty river; after the water gets into the river, from the various branches or divisions, it is all water, and there is no difference from what tributary it came. Let us examine this comparison briefly. Suppose that all the tributaries on one side of the river pour in salt water, and all those on the other side pour in fresh water; now what is the character of the water? It is neither salt nor fresh, but is perfectly adulterated. The water in the river can only be the same as the water in the tributaries, when the water in tributaries are all alike. It is thus with the divisions of the church; when they are all brought together, they cannot form one united body in Christ, because the elements of division still remain, and the body would be adulterated. First remove the cause of division, and make the branches all the same in doctrine, faith and practice; then, and then only will the entire body be perfectly joined together, because the elements of unity and truth were in the branches.

Another prolific source of division is, the modern doctrine that men and women are so constituted, that they cannot see alike. A defect is in our organization, that Christ and the apostles failed to discover, when they so earnestly urge unity in all things. This doctrine is very dangerous. As soon as people are taught they cannot see the Scriptures alike, just that soon they will begin to interpret them to suit their own inclinations. What would be thought of the teacher who would tell his pupils to solve all the problems just as they understood them? From that time on, there would be but little hard study, and there would be as much division in the result of their solutions, as there is in the religious world. It is clear that there is an unwillingness to yield to the more humiliating part of the Gospel, hence their excuses and divisions. Another source of division is, a high-salaried ministry. When men have spent from one to five years at some collegiate institution, in the interest of some particular church, for the ministry, they are brought under the influence of such a church largely; and if the salary is good, they will de-send the tenets of their church to the very utmost, when their craft is in danger. Reduce the salary to an ordinary living, and if such ministers continue to preach, they will preach more independent and more truthful, than while under the influence of a fat purse.

We have, we think, briefly referred to some of the causes of division in the churches, and how people are striving to justify themselves in their peculiar notion of things. But while men and women are trying to justify themselves by raising excuses, in not obeying all the doctrine of Christ, let it be understood that religious truth will not allow itself to be divided and contradicted. There is as much unity in it to-day, as in the days of Christ, though men and women are divided among themselves, religiously on account of error. We do not mean, that to understand religious truth so as to make it available for our salvation, we must also understand astronomical, mathematical, geographical and historical truth. A man's knowledge of these truths may be very limited, yet he may understand religious truth sufficiently well for his salvation. We have only referred to these truths to show, if possible the harmony and unity of all truth. One of the very best ways to understand religious truth, is to obey it. But one will say, "What must I do?" This is an important question, and concerns us all. One of the most eminent apostles asked this question, when he was in search of religious truth. At Damascus, he was told to arise and be baptized. The safe way is to do what Jesus, the Author of religious truth bids us do. Jesus bids us repent, believe, be baptized, wash one another's feet, observe the Lord's Supper and Communion, be non-conformed to the world, non-resistant, non-lawing, non-swearing, humble obedient, prayerful, charitable, sociable, honest, truthful &c. If all professors of religion would strictly obey the Gospel in these plain commands, there would soon be as much unity and consistency in the church as there is in any natural truth. Harmony, union and love, would be the result, and religious truth with all its excellency would be manifested.

But one is ready to say, "If we obeyed the Gospel in all its requirements, we would all become members of the Dunkard church; for that is the very way they do." Suppose that to be the result, what of it? What is a Dunkard? I never knew one in my life. Never saw one as a Dunkard, but we have seen a great many persons who loved the Lord Jesus just well enough to obey him in all things, and because of this, somebody else calls them Dunkards. But the mere name, is a very small matter. It makes us neither better nor worse. "If they have called the householder Beelzebub, what will they call those of his household," says Christ; hence to be called an odd or ugly name, whether it be Dunkard, Lollard, Waldens, Pentitist, or any other outlandish name, is no evidence that we are not Christians, or obeying the truth. Our whole aim should be to obey the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, and the result is, Christian character produced from the Gospel mould, harmonizing in all its parts, and in full unison with the body spiritual; and let the world call us just what it pleases. Christians do not measure their character from a worldly standpoint, but from the standard of divine truth.

AWAKE AND REPENT.

BY W. W. WARNER.

WHEN we take the Bible in our hand and read the sacred teachings, and then look at the ways of the world, we see much that is very distressing, we see many persons about whose souls, we are exceedingly afraid. We see many, who, if Bible words mean any thing, have not yet been converted and born again. They are not satisfied; they have not the Spirit; they have no grace; their sins are not forgiven; their hearts are not changed; they are not ready to die; they are not ready for heaven; they are neither godly nor righteous, nor saints. If they are, Bible words mean nothing at all. Reader, are you one of these? If you are, awake and repent.

We see many who to all appearance think no more about their souls than the beasts that perish; there is nothing to show that they think of a life to come, any more than the dumb brutes which have no understanding. Their treasure is evidently upon earth; their good things are plainly all on this side of the grave; their attention is swallowed up by the perishable things of time, meat, drink, clothing, money, lands, politics—these are the things which fill their hearts. They live as though there was no such a Book as the Bible. They go on as if the resurrection and eternal judgment were not true. As to grace, and conversion, and justification, and truth, and holiness, they are things which, like Gallileo, they care not for; they are only words and names to be despised; they are all going to die; they are all going to be judged, and yet they seem to be even more hardened than the devil, for they appear neither to believe nor tremble. Alas! what a state this is for an immortal soul; but how common.

Reader, are you one of these? If you are, awake and repent. We see many who have a form of religion, but after all is nothing but a form; they profess and call themselves Christians; they go to a place of worship, on Sabbath and when you have said that, you have said all. Where is the religion of the New Testament to be seen in their lives? nowhere at all. Sin is plainly not considered their worst enemy, nor the Lord Jesus, their best Friend, nor the will of God their rule of life, nor salvation the great end of their existence. The spirit of slumber keeps possession of their hearts and they are at ease, self-satisfied and contented. They are in a Lollardian form of mind, and fancy they have enough religion. Reader, are you one of these? If you are, awake and repent. We put it solemnly to your conscience, as in the sight of God. Are you one of those persons whom we have just described? There are thousands of such people in our land, in our towns, in our churches, and among rich and poor; now are you one of them? If you are, we fear for you, we tremble for you, we are alarmed for you, we fear lest you be given over to a reprobate mind and awake no more; lest you come to such deadness and hardness of heart, that nothing but the voice of the arch-angel and the trumpet of God will break your sleep, lest you cling to this vain world so closely that nothing but death will part it and you. We fear lest you should live without Christ, die without pardon, rise again without hope, receive judgment without mercy, and sink into everlasting punishment without remedy.

We entreat you to remember that Christ's teachings are all true, and most all be fulfilled, that the end of your present ways, is misery and sorrow, "that without holiness no man shall see the Lord," that "the wicked shall be turned into hell and all the nations that forget God;" will one day take account of all your doings, and that a sinner can never stand in his sight.

Oh! that we might consider these things. Who shall dwell with everlasting burning? We beseech you in all affliction to break off your sins, to repent and be converted, change your course. No man was left to invent a religion for his own use, and after his own mind. If God did not give a revelation of himself, the inventions of men, in religious things would be endless error, involving itself in contortions of unlimited confusion. But God gives, in his mercy to man, a form of sound words or doctrine,—a perfect plan of salvation, well defined outlines of everything which concerns the present and eternal welfare of man and his own glory. Search the Scriptures,—read them and make them your study. It cleanses us from all unrighteousness, it purifies us unto God, and makes us fervent and abundant in good works. Awake, do not the work of the Lord carelessly. And when this Gospel is preached faithfully and zealously, how shall the people escape who neglect so great a salvation? To neglect, in such a case, is the highest contempt which man can offer to his Maker. Surely such conduct, must expect judgment without a mixture of mercy.

Reader, lay this to heart, awake and repent, believe, pray while it is called to-day, and be saved.

GOD'S GRACIOUSNESS.

BY RUTH L. BLUE.

"O Lord how manifold are thy works. In wisdom hast thou made them all: the earth is full of thy riches." Psalm 114: 24.

TRULY how grand, how sublime are the works of God. We cannot cast our eyes in any direction without beholding some object to show his great wisdom and power. If we look above us, we behold the beautiful moon and stars, all performing their work that he has in his wisdom appointed for them to do. When we look over the beautiful earth, we see that it is full of his riches. When we ramble through the forest, we hear the little birds warbling their beautiful songs, they seem as if trying to praise their Creator. When our eyes behold the wide spread prairies decorated with pretty flowers and beautiful fields of waving grain, and when we consider what wonderful power he has over all things, and how manifold are all his works, we feel to exclaim, "What is man that thou art mindful of him, or the Son of man that thou visitest him."

Man is his noblest works, and yet he seems to be the most disobedient. Why should we be so disobedient? Just think for a moment how much he has done for us. He has even sent his only Son into the world to suffer and die upon the cross, that poor, sinful man might be saved from everlasting punishment. Sinner, do you ever think of these things? Do you ever think what a sacrifice has been made for you, what wondrous love God has shown to you? If you have never thought of this, it is certainly time you were beginning to think. Perhaps you think, well, I am young yet, when I have enjoyed all the pleasures this world can afford, then I will give my heart to the Savior; when I get too old to go to balls, picnics, shows and all such places, then I will devote the rest of my time to the cause of Christ. But how ungrateful, after you have spent the most useful part of your life in the service of Satan—then, after you are almost old enough to go to your grave, to turn to the Savior. We have no assurance of our lives,—we may be in good health to-day and to-morrow we may be wrapt in the winding sheet. God is no respecter of persons, he calls the young as well as the old. If you walk into the graveyard, you will there see that he takes from the old down to the little innocent child.

Dear reader, if you have never made a start for heaven, do not put it off any longer. "To-day, if ye will hear his voice, harden not your heart." "Remember thy Creator in the days of thy youth, while the evil days come not; or the years draw nigh when thou shalt say, I have no pleasure in them."

A SUGGESTION.

BY M. A. RIGGLE.

"And the Scribes and Pharisees murmured saying, this man receiveth sinners and eateth with them." Luke 15: 2.

AS the mission of Jesus to this earth was to call sinners home to God, it became necessary for him to call their attention to his work by going to them or by receiving them when they came to him, then show his love for them that He might win them over to the Father, through his teaching; and he said otherwise the world never had known Him and his mission upon this earth.

While we travel over the world among people of all professions and customs, we learn to understand the reason why the Savior made use of the various ways and means to draw the attention of the world to his teaching. I think if those who are traveling and living in different neighborhoods would work on the same plan, and teach those around them of the evil in the customs of the world, then teach Christ and him crucified, instead of abruptly rebuking and condemning all for doing what they were brought up to do, and yet without giving a Gospel reason, no doubt many a one might be won over kindly, instead of driven away, feeling grieved, which is more apt to make infidels than Christians.

A brother and sister were living all alone in a neighborhood with a large family of children, and only one daughter, no other members living in that part. As surprise parties were the order of evening amusements, the young people together with their parties, agreed to give them a surprise, for the benefit of the daughter, but the mother hearing of their intended visit, sent word they should not come, which wounded the feelings of all very much.

People who are not acquainted with our ways and manners, do not know that we oppose all such amusements, as they are practiced among a large number of professing people, and wish to show us this respect with all others; we can expect such, while out in the world, and should always be ready to give an answer of the hope that is within us. When it becomes necessary to denounce their customs, do it with kindness, to the respect they manifest towards us and our children, accompanied with our reasons by the Gospel, and perhaps they would see the error of their ways and join in with us, or at least retain a good feeling toward us, and try to learn more of our peculiarities. Would not this have been a great opportunity to receive them kindly as the Savior did? Then after learning their object is coming, tell them of our disapproval of such amusements, giving our reasons for our belief. Then pass the hymn books around and make use of the time in singing and talking upon Scripture; for while in our own house we can make use of the time according to our own wishes. This might have made lasting impressions upon the young of that neighborhood, as well as the older who were of a different faith and never considered the folly of such amusements, and the daughter have retained a good feeling toward her mother and confirmed her in her confidence to rely upon her counsel, and the modesty of the daughter won the confidence of her associates, and all see a beauty in the change of amusements which perhaps would have aroused the feelings of the people of that neighborhood to seek and search after the things most needful.

We find the apostles in the midst of sinners and unbelievers, teaching the Gospel of Christ. I find in my travels, that we can often awake an alarm in the minds of the people by going to their homes and talking to them kindly of a loving Savior. Then with the same spirit we can sharply rebuke the sinfulness of the worldly amusements, by applying the Word of God, or by receiving them into our houses. We can do as much to convert souls in this way, as the greatest orator could by preaching a powerful sermon. Paul says, he became a Jew that he might gain the Jews, but we need not become an infidel. May we all learn to become "wise as serpents and harmless as doves."

THOU GOD SEEST ME.

BY H. P. BRINKWORTH.

"And she called the name of the Lord that spake unto her, Thou God seest me; for she said, Have I also here looked after him that seeth me?"

WHEN we can thoroughly realize the truth of the above words, and feel conscious of the fact, that our God is an omniscient as well as omnipresent Being; then, and not until then, will our moral actions be restrained by the force of Scriptural language. We are sensible of the fact that it is wrong to transgress the laws of nature, and that a violation of the same, brings its punishment; also, that it is wrong in us to rebel, or set at naught the wise counsels and admonitions of our older brethren, especially when they are sent for our good, and their labors are to promote health in the affected parts of the brotherhood; oftentimes they incur our displeasure. This should not be, for they are in duty bound to act as they do, and cannot please both parties, but with an eye single to the good of the church, and to the glory of God, they labor, and watch, and pray. Should we not then turn our eyes within, and for a moment think to ourselves, what are we doing? Are we contending against Scriptural truth, against brotherly love and advice; thereby wounding the feelings of many, and wounding also the Spirit, (for the church, we believe has the Spirit of Christ), opening the wounds of a crucified, yet risen and pleading Savior? Are we doing all this? "Thou God seest me." Are we tempted to give up part of our work in the ministry, to gratify our own selfish appetites? "Thou God seest me." Are we willing to leave our Sunday-school work for others, or care not to go at all?

The thought again arises, yes, Thou all-seeing God; Thou knowest the heart, Thou seest all things. But perhaps we don't belong to the church, and therefore none of these things touch our condition; we are without and intend remaining there. The awful thought, must again be heard, the language to both saint and sinner, "Thou God seest me." Yes, unconverted ones, he sees you every day, and not only sees you, but declares he is angry with the wicked every day. He loves you, through the work of a Savior, and pleads with you to return. Have you not felt the gentle drawing of the Spirit, saying to you in unmistakable words, "come now?" Have you not felt yourselves almost persuaded to join in with the people of God? It is the Spirit. Grieve not that Spirit. It will not always strive with you. Let it not take its sad departure to return no more. Remember, how God sees you. How do you expect to meet him in your sins? Where God and Christ are, you can never go. You have heard Gospel sermons,—Gospel invitations, and earnest pleadings in your behalf; doubtless your mother talks, invites and reasons, but all to no purpose. Why is it? And now as you read this, think within yourselves, oh, will we have plenty of time? You carelessly read it, and carelessly go on, or throw aside the paper. Well, never mind, the thought, the heading of this article, I hope you will not forget, "Thou God seest me," and should you forget it, God will not. In eternity it stands for or against you.

Brethren and sisters, let this thought keep us out of danger. Our members may be far away, God sees us. Young men and young ladies, with myself, I say to all: remember, "Thou God seest me."

DREAMS.

WHAT wondrous consolation comes to us in those blessed hours when the body lies resting. The spirit roams at will, no distance, space nor time can separate us from our loved. The treasures snatched away by death are ours again. Forms only dust to-day are with us as in by-gone years. The same tint of hair, the same shade of eyes; the same rich coloring of lip and expanse of brow; the same expression; the little peculiarities which endeared them to our hearts, make dreaming a blessed reality.

How apt we are to exclaim, when waking, "Oh how I wish I could dream the same again!" bereaved mother, you are comforted when your babe nestles in your arms again; the little fingers thrill you when wandering as of old. The wee face breaks into smiles at your caress! You would hold baby thus forever. Alas! you must awake—awake to find an empty cradle, empty arms, and a longing heart.

There is more pleasure in dreams than in realities. The awakening embitters both. My sister, my brother, have you awakened from the sunny dreams of youth? Are the hopes you cherished dead? Have friends forsaken you? Has disease claimed you for its prey? Because that was so bright, and this so dark, will you allow your life to be a failure? If you cannot be what you would, will you not be what you can? Can you kindle ashes? Will you live aright?—No.

If you would win success, be punctual, courteous, honest, economical, agreeable in your personal habits and respectful of your health.

Wickedness resides in the very hesitation about an act, even though it be not perpetrated.

"STAND ASIDE.—GET AWAY. OR KEEP QUIET."

POSITIVE commands indeed! Turning to the Holy Oracles we learn that we should "stand, having our loins girt about with truth" (Eph. 6: 14); that we should "stand fast in the liberty wherewith Christ has made us free" (Eph. 5: 1); "stand fast in one spirit" (Phil. 1: 27); that our faith should not "stand in the wisdom of men" (1 Cor. 2: 5); that Paul and Epaphras labored fervently in prayers that their brethren might "stand perfect in the will of God" (Col. 4: 12); but nowhere do we find apostles, prophets and men of God commanding and declaring that their "mistaken old brethren must stand aside,—get away, or keep quiet." Not that the "mistaken old brethren would better stand aside,—get away or keep quiet," but that they must. There is meaning in that word must. Not that the reformers simply ask them to stand aside, but they must. This is the decree; there is no evading it. Reform talks not of persuading men, but the other word that commences with a p— "pushing." God calls upon men to repent, to turn and do right, but he nowhere talks about pushing men to repent—to reform.

When I find a pious, humble, devoted man, trying to persuade others to adopt better methods of working—trying to induce all to come closer to the apostolic order, I conclude that reform under his counsels would be grandly glorious; but when men who hold positions are approached by would-be reformers and are told that, "If you want to be considered in this move, and have the benefits that will accrue," by way of temporal gain, there is a screw loose in that reform machine. Bribery may do for this world—may set a man up in ease, honor and plenty, but it counts nothing for glory in the world to come. When self-conceit, love of honor from men, and obstinacy enwrap a man's heart, so that he begins to talk about "damning with faint praise," and making men stand aside, it takes all the genuine reformatory power out of him. The reformatory power of God's Word needs to be turned on such; they need to be laid under the fountain of Divine truth and receive a glorious shower of Divine grace.

The Divine Spirit that tells of the love of God—of the suffering of Jesus—of the way of life—how men must believe, live and act to be saved, also tells of those who "are not afraid to speak evil of dignities, who speak evil of the things which they understand not"—who take pleasure in "sporting themselves with their own deceivings while they feast with you."

The apostles were annoyed with such, and we may look for the same class to annoy the faithful. You may say we are unduly harsh—are unnecessarily alarmed—are whining. Not at all! We know whereof we affirm, and loving the praise of God more than the praise of men, we voice boldly for your sakes. There never was an age so withholding the truth—there never will be one; the last trumpet calling forth the dead, shall find us as heralds of the whole counsel of God, and "we who watch for your feet, and not for your account, we must give no uncertain sound. The dilly-dallying to sin—the cringing for mere peace-on-the-surface sake counts nothing for God or mankind.

Under the plea of reform, the political place-seeker attempts to hoist himself into positions of honor and profit. The more he desires position and power, the more he will cry "Reform!" yet at the same time his hands may not be free of public plunder. Such are not safe leaders—make poor laws, and cannot be trusted with administering justice. So in the church of the living God; men who are not established in the whole doctrine of the cross, are tossed to and fro by every wind of doctrine as well as the doctrines themselves. Such are poor leaders. Bible reform—Bible progression, getting back to the original ground, the primitive religious practice,—back to the apostolic order of things, will make the heart rejoice and grow fat in the Lord. But if, under the plea of reform, men declare that "mistaken old brethren must stand aside—get away or keep quiet," then the plea amounts to nothing, and such men can make no headway; for not only will the church be against them, but God will withstand them also. It is not maintained by those self-styled reformers that the "mistaken old brethren" ought to change, come and do better and help rescue the perishing, but they "must stand aside—get away, or keep quiet."

Now why are any of those old, gray-headed veterans mistaken? Are they mistaken because, for the past one hundred and fifty years, they have gone into the mountains, the villages and on the plains and declared the unsearchable riches of Christ without money and without price? Is it because they have labored to maintain the purity of the church, sought to circumscribe pride, cheating, worldliness in general by the Word of Truth—the power of God? Are they mistaken because they have planted and watered hundreds of churches from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and put them to work in no uncertain manner? Are they mistaken because in their humble, unpretentious way they sent conviction to thousands of precious souls, and helped to make them lively stones in the grand temple of God? Are they mistaken because, in seeing the rapid speed with which others have gone over to the world in pride, debt and extravagance, they aimed to restrain those of like precious faith from going that way too? Or should they "stand aside—get away, or keep quiet," so that the would-be reformers may heap to themselves honor and position? Must they "stand aside" so that the pocket-books of the inexperienced may be more readily opened for "reform movements?" Must they "get away or keep quiet" so that a great and ineffectual door may be opened to pride, extravagance and vanity? "O, no, no!" replies the reformer, "but that souls may be saved—that those on the mountains, in the valleys and on the plains may have the sincere milk of the Word, the faith and practice set up in Palestine more than eighteen hundred years ago." Very well, if this be the object—the pure motive that moves the great wheel of reform, we thank God and take courage. We are always glad to get "nearer to God"—to turn from error and receive the right. But pray why must certain ones stand aside—get away or keep quiet, in order to persuade those who are out on the barren ground? Why not ask "the mistaken old brethren" to change their views a little and come over and help to plant the standard of primitive Christianity on the mountains, in the valleys and on plains? Why insist that they "must stand aside" in the grand reformatory movement, when every soldier is so greatly needed?

Reformers generally have large hearts—naturally feel to have "mistaken brethren," whether old or young, to reform and come to labor for the conversion of those who are smitten with blindness? Can they all tell why they are so anxious—have such an abounding love for sinners, who are eating husks, and are so little concerned about the "mistaken" sheep—the sheep whom they maintain are feeding on noxious weeds? This is the key that unlocks the motives. Let him that will unlock, open the door and look in. Mistaken brethren need to be set right, (not aside) as well as those who have not yet put on Christ. How can they be set in the apostolic order if they are made to "stand aside"—made to "get away?" Come now, ye who would reform the world—the church—and all the inhabitants of the Island—and Continents, drink of the Fountain of Life, and then shall ye clearly see to cast out the mistakes from the lives of your brethren. Less presumption, less self-will and arrogance and more meekness and patient submission will weigh tons for reform. No one need be set aside, no one need be told to get away or keep quiet, when Christ is the center and circumference of the motive.

Do not understand me as condoning the intentional and premeditated faults of any one, whether old or young. Not by any means, for wilful sinning deserves the denunciations hurled against it by the Law of the Lord; and if any class deserves severer chastisement than others, the old do, for they have more knowledge, more experience than the young, hence better prepared to shun the evils. But we are not of those who denounce the faithful veterans of the cross simply because they may chance to differ from us as to the best method of doing certain things. Because some "old brethren" may hold the reins a little tight and cause us to clump on the bits, I see no necessity of commanding them to "stand aside." Because they do not allow us to run at a gallop, but try to hold us back at a good, lively walking pace so that they may keep up, I see no reason why they should be made to "get away." They love our company, want to go along with us and work with us, hence we should not ask them to "stand aside, or get away." Every man is needed to present a solid front to the enemy. The ranks should not be broken. No one should be asked to "stand aside—get away"—fall back or run ahead. Keep in line. Pell-mell, helter-skelter marching will do for Satan's soldiers, but not for the Lord's.

To be successful in Bible work a man must first be converted himself. This is self-evident. Second, his motives must be right. Third, he must have experience, judgment, stability.—Fourth, he must love the work. And if he would remedy evils, there must be concert of action—a pulling together, a oneness of spirit, doing the same things, following the One Rule. No one should be made to "stand aside" because he will not make large leaps at our command. The Lord knows how to command—has set the bounds, established the points and we do our duty when we point these out. No one shall be pushed aside, nor be told to "get away." Whom the Lord accepteth, we must. So long as a man walks by the Law of the Lord, complies with all of its demands, but differs from us in opinion, we have no divinely authorized right to tell him to "stand aside." We are for giving the inhabitants of the vales, the mountains and plains the pure Gospel, but it must be in harmony with the prescribed rules of the Lord. We go to the apostolic age, see how they did the work, their success, the rejoicing of God's people, the conflicts, the buffetings, the separateness from the world, and then we get the idea. Extensive organizations with "plans" and "resolves" and "rules" were unknown to the grand laborers in the apostolic age. Prescribed limits in which to work, "orders upon treasury for services rendered," concern as to the source from which myself, my family and my work are to be supported, was not known among those heroes in the Lord's cause. They "went everywhere preaching the Gospel of the kingdom," persuading men to turn to Christ and live. And all their wants were supplied. Stones for fallows, locusts for meat, imprisonments the results in many instances—all because they loved the Lord. Faith. This tells the story. Unbelief always wants to walk by sight—must see where the bread and butter, the railroad fare, the pay for fallows, the delicacies—where all the support comes from.

"Now, stop your croaking—stop your whining or you will lose subscribers," cries a reformer. Is that your best answer to the undeniable facts given you? A few will not get much meat from our very plainly presented arguments, but then the church will. The great majority are for the old doctrine—the old Gospel, and are not quite ready to strike out after the new and the uncertain. Bible equality, Bible progression, Bible humility, Bible living, Bible missions, Bible work—who is not for them? We have planted ourselves squarely upon the Bible—are for all its poetry, doctrine, prophecy—the facts, commands and promises of God. Upon and for these, His people stand. They will not be moved to follow uncertain-thanks be to God who gives us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. M. M. E.

REASON COOLLY.

IN order to succeed there are many questions that must be handled with great care, otherwise no good will grow out of considering them. The mere denouncing of sin of certain kinds, is not always sufficient. The people want to know the reason for opposing it, and why it is wrong. I believe it our duty to give good reason for that which we teach and do, believing it to have more effect on other minds. To illustrate: a man preaches against the use of tobacco—denounces it, calls it filthy, indecent, unchristian and many other hard names, and woefully abuses the man who has fallen into the habit of using it. However true this may be, such talk will not likely convert any body, nor does it add to the credit of the cause of Christianity.

I am no advocate of tobacco,—never used it, nor is it allowed in this office, but I do believe that cool and candid reasoning will have more effect on men than all the severe terms that can be hurled against their practice. I find that most people would like to do right about things of this kind, and when once convinced that using tobacco is not altogether becoming, will make an effort to quit it. But they do not want to be abused about it, but are willing to reason the question.

My method of working is this: I do not talk much with old people about it, for I am aware that it is difficult for them to quit, though I believe by the grace of God they could do it, and what a noble example to the young if older persons would make some sacrifice in this. But I feel it my duty to talk much with the ministers, and younger and middle-aged men. These are the classes I prefer working with, and work in a way that good, instead of evil may grow out of the effort.

I prefer telling the minister, that there are several reasons why it would be advisable for him not to use tobacco. 1st. It is spending the Lord's money in a way that does not advance His cause. 2nd. If used to excess, it may paralyze the nerves to a certain extent, and even render saluting with the kiss of love a little unpleasant to some good brethren. 3rd. It is not a good example to set before the rising generation. Faithful and earnest ministers have their influence, and others will imitate them, therefore they should be very careful what kind of examples they set before the church and the world. Talking to a minister in this way will accomplish more good than all the abusive language that can be used against the habit into which he has fallen.

I also prefer talking kindly to the young brethren. They can be told how much easier it is to break off from a habit while young, than after becoming old. It is good to talk of the practice from a financial point of view. This they will comprehend fully, and it is an excellent feature to put to practice.

With the middle aged, and those having families, it is well to reason coolly. They want to raise their children so they will grow up to usefulness, and will listen to good advice if presented in a Christian spirit. It does little or no good to expose habits of this character in abusive language. What we most need, is soft words and hard arguments. "A soft answer turneth away wrath, but grievous words stirreth up strife." J. H. M.

GENTLE reader, do not heap too much blame on young members. Sometimes they are not able to hear it, not having so much experience as others. If you see them do that which is wrong, go to them in the spirit of meekness, and admonish them in gentle terms, doing what you can to win them over to that which is right and good. Remember that you was once young too, and perhaps, had it not been for the gentle admonitions of some kind-hearted brother or sister you might have been enticed into things sinful. Let us learn to help each other and thus fulfill the law of Christ.

LATEST reports from the South, show that the Yellow Fever suffering is slightly subsiding in Memphis, but little or no change in New Orleans and other places. The people of the North have responded nobly to the repeated calls for help. The total deaths throughout the South, from the scourge, up to the present time, is nearly 6,000.

PRIMITIVE PRACTICE.

With Bro. A. S. Hayden's conclusion as to the obligation of the Lord's day, I fully concur, but not with his method of arriving at it. He emphasizes the preliminary principle, "Hence the practice of the primitive church is binding on the saints for all time." Not making any distinction, we suppose it is meant that the practice is binding. This would impose upon us "feet washing," (John 13: 14; 1 Tim. 5: 9, the "holy kiss," 1 Cor. 16: 20; 2 Cor. 13: 12; 1 Thess. 5: 26; 1 Peter 5: 14, and our practice will be found sadly in fault both in what it contains and what it omits.

THE above is clipped from a late issue of the Christian Standard, was written by A. M. Weston, and shows how sensitive some men are about certain commands not practiced in their church. This Mr. Hayden had written, "Hence the practice of the primitive church is binding on the saints for all time," but to leave it stand that way would prove feet-washing and the holy kiss, and that does not suit carnality; it does not suit the man-made churches of modern times, hence Mr. Hayden had to write to the Standard and get the thing corrected.

These men are extremely careful about what goes before the world through their papers; it would never do to have feet-washing and the holy kiss proven binding on the saints for all time for that would be contrary to the teaching of their church. Of course it makes no difference what the Bible says for they have the peculiar faculty of reading to suit the occasion, for "Some read to prove a pre-adopted creed, Thus understand but little what they read, For every passage in the Book they bend, To make it suit that all important end".

Among them it is understood, that feet-washing and the holy kiss must be evaded with great care, for if that part of the Bible is not very adroitly handled, people will finally come to the conclusion, that "the practice of the primitive church is binding on the saints for all time."—This is the conclusion that Mr. Hayden came to, but it would seem that he had not so fully learned the art of deceiving the hearts of the simple by vain words and fair speeches. These men who are so particular, fearing the propositions of others will result in teaching feet-washing and the holy kiss, need be watched; they have another gospel—if it be lawful to call it a gospel (good news)—a gospel that is of men and not of God. Had not such God speed, but withstand them with the truth. A. H. M.

AN EVENTFUL WEEK IN LANARK.

THE past week has been one of particular interest to the saints at Lanark. We began a series of meetings on the 11th inst., with the assistance of Bro. Bashor, which increased in interest from the beginning until the house was filled to overflowing, and a few times many could not obtain sitting room.

Bro. Bashor, after his Summer's rest, labored with all the power and force of his nature, and wielded the sword of the Spirit with a vigorous hand. The members were much revived on their way Zionward. Some were made to feel the need of a Savior, and came out on the Lord's side. Among them was Bro. Bashor's wife, whose coming to the church was hailed with general good feeling, as it will be a great help to him in his ministerial work. May her life be one of great usefulness, as the companions of ministers can be of much assistance to them in their ministerial labors.

THE ELECTION.

For sometime the Brethren here have felt the need of more help in the ministry and deacons' office, hence set apart Wednesday, Sept. 15th for the purpose of electing one minister and two deacons. Four adjoining elders were present by invitation. Enoch Eby and J. J. Knapp officiated in the election duties and modulation services.

Before the election was entered into, the Scriptures relating to the qualifications of ministers and deacons, was read and carefully explained, showing just what kind of men the Lord wants. It was mentioned that the New Testament was written under the influence of the Spirit, laying down the qualifications, church officers should possess, and it is our duty to examine the Scriptures with care, to see what kind of men the Spirit wants, and then to our own judgment in finding and casting our vote for that man. In this way the home will be filled by the authority of the Spirit. If our readers will examine the selection of Mathias and the election of the seven, they will find that the needed qualifications were mentioned before the election was held. This is the Bible order and should be heeded by all the congregations in the brotherhood.

The election resulted in choosing M. M. Eshelman to the ministry and David F. Eby and John H. Peck deacons. They accepted the positions, to which they were duly installed according to the regular established order of the church.

Our meetings closed on Thursday evening with the best of feelings. On Friday morning we went to where there was much water and baptized two more young sisters. Thus ended our week's work.

The church here looks forward with zeal to the conversion of many souls. Altogether we have had an eventful week and may the day of final accounts demonstrate that the transpiring events here were to the glory of God and Gospel success. J. H. M.

SEVERAL have requested us to publish the "Stein and Rey Debate" in pamphlet form. This we cannot do, as the discussion when completed will be sufficient to fill one large volume of over four hundred pages. What may be done after the discussion is finished we cannot tell, hence every person who wants to read the discussion should subscribe for the paper.

A LIVING language like ours is constantly changing. Formerly "imp" meant a most lovely child, hence Bacon once prayed the Lord to bless the King's "most angelic imp," meaning the King's beloved little son. "Rascal" at one time meant servant, and in an early translation of the New Testament, Titus 1: 1 is rendered: "Paul, a rascal of God, etc.," meaning "Paul a servant of God."

A NUMBER of our correspondents when writing to this office on business, address their letters to one or the other of the editors, which does well enough when we are both at home, but quite frequently one of us is away, and the other does not open letters addressed to him.—Any thing pertaining to business with the office or paper, should be addressed Moore & Eshelman. Private letters should be addressed to the party for whom they are intended.

It does seem to us, that there are chances for improvements in the manner of conducting the preaching exercises at some of our communion meetings. As a general thing, the more preachers there are behind the table, the more difficult it is to get any of them to lead off, thus often throwing a chill over the meeting at the very commencement. Of course no one wants to take the lead, and it does not look prudent to name any one out, though it is frequently done. When a number of ministers are present it would be wisdom for them to get together before the meeting commences, and decide who should speak first, and who next and so on to the close of the meeting, and then when the meeting is opened the work might go on smoothly and to the edification of all. Hope our older Brethren will give this matter some attention, and see if the preaching exercises at some of our meetings cannot be made a little more edifying.

GIVING.

BY DANIEL ANDMAN.

"As I have given order to the churches of Galatia, even so do ye; upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store as God hath prospered him."—1 Cor. 16: 1, 2.

FROM the above language we learn:

- 1st. Who should give something, "every one of you." Greek, "Each one of you."
- 2nd. The time to give, "on the first day of the week." Greek, "every first of week."
- 3rd. How much to give, "as God has prospered him."
- 4th. Where to put it, "lay by him in store." Greek, "by itself let him place."

Reasons why every one should give something:

- 1st. Because commanded by the Holy Ghost, and therefore right.
- 2nd. Because there is a reward, or blessing attached to giving when done as commanded, and every one should have that blessing. Even the giving of a cup of cold water shall in no wise be without a reward, if properly given. The liberal soul shall be made fat; and he that watereth shall be watered also himself (Prov. 11: 25).

3rd. Because when everyone gives, means for benevolent purposes will be more abundant.

Reasons why it should be done on the first day of the week:

- 1st. Because commanded and therefore right.
- 2nd. Because being on that day freed from ordinary labor and business care, it is therefore the most favorable to contemplate the wants of the poor and determine how much the Lord has prospered us.

Reasons why it should be "laid by him in store"—placed by itself:

- 1st. Because commanded and therefore right.
- 2nd. Because it will then be ready when needed. The language "lay by him in store," or "by itself let him place," does not imply that it must necessarily be put into the common treasury of the church every first day of the week, but simply laid by in store, or "placed by itself." In the Maccopin Creek church it is understood that each one may deposit his or her portion in the common treasury on a regular contribution day, or at any other convenient time.

Reasons why the giving should be as God has prospered us:

- 1st. Because commanded and therefore right.
- 2nd. Because it will cultivate a liberality of soul that will be a noble safe-guard against covetousness. Under the Mosaic dispensation the Lord specified even the per cent, that must be given. One tenth of all the income must be given to the Lord.

Oh! that all the redeemed of the present day would stop giving weekly contributions for tobacco and other soul-destroying superfluities, and would regulate all their giving as well as everything else, by the Word of the Lord, and thus do "all that we do to the glory of God." Then would we go forth in our strength, and to Satan's hosts be more terrible than an army with lances.

ECHOES FROM THE EAST.

NUMBER V.

At Home—A Comforting Reflection—An Evening Meeting—A Farewell Sermon—The Last Farewell.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

WE know by many happy experiences that it is a very pleasant thing to meet with the believers in the public congregation to pray and praise, to hear and learn. But sometimes this loved privilege is denied us individually.—This may happen for numerous reasons. But when we are kept from the house of Divine worship on account of illness, we must admit such are excusable for the time being. For we must believe that such also will spend the day profitably at home.

ALONE WITH JESUS,

is the motto of a Christian indeed, and often will he be found in the closet of prayer, talking with his Master. When we remain at home from preaching, we should think of the duties of the day of rest and worship. About the hour of meeting, we should be there too "in spirit." Our minds, our thoughts, our sympathies should be there. What a comfort it is in illness on the Lord's day morning to sing or read a hymn about the time our brethren and sisters are convening in the house of the Lord! Then to pray and read and reflect. O, what consolation there is in Christ at home or abroad! We can pray for the minister, or the preaching of the Word, probably more fervently than if we were present. And the Master of solemn assemblies will hear such prayers. This is indeed. Our Lord is with his children whether they are at home or away, provided indeed they are with Him. Our God is everywhere present, and His presence shall go with us if our feet walk in His foot-prints. To-day I am thinking of my brethren far and near who seldom have the pleasure of meeting with those of like precious faith. To such I would offer a word of comfort. You are cut off from the main, visible Body, but are you indeed united by faith and practice, with the Body of Christ? Then, be of good cheer. Though you seem desolate and alone, you have Christ near you, Christ with you, "Christ in you, the Hope of Glory." You can sing in very earnest,

A COMFORTING THOUGHT

"Persons would praise us poorly,

"If Jesus would dwell with me there."

Let me recommend to you Phil. 2: 15, 16, according to the marginal reading: "Shine ye as lights in the world; holding forth the work of life." Many hold it forth by a dim light, and it attracts little attention. Rather do much and say little, than say much and do little.—Shine ye, O, ye dear disciples of Jesus, shine ye as lights, that those who sit in darkness may see plainly how to come to Jesus. This is a comforting thought to you that you can do such blessed service for the Master. Never give up. Grow in grace, and the God of grace will be with you.

This evening we attended our meeting in the village, in our meeting-house, to hear the

of our loved, and venerable brother Henry Koontz. He is about to leave us and make the home of his last days in the neighborhood of Mt. Morris, Ill., not far from Lanark. He has been so well known to our Brotherhood that I need not specify much of the past. He has been a servant of the church for many years, both as a minister and a bishop. He is now old and almost blind, yet he has "the preaching of the Word" at heart. We shall not soon forget this farewell address. After the services were inaugurated, he arose and opened not The Book, but quoted a familiar scripture: "I take you to record this day, that I am free from the blood of all men, for I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God." He said many good words, and we felt edified.—Among other things he said that though he was once a lively and leading young man, he never swore an oath in his life. He was at one time a class-leader in the — church, but was a diligent reader of the Scriptures. A few years before he united with the Brethren, he took sick, and when nigh unto death, he saw a dove appear, and it alighted upon his breast, and spoke to him the marvelous message: "You shall not die; you shall yet preach the Gospel of the Son of God." No one else knew of the vision, and he soon began to recover. He told us many things from his personal experience, claiming that he had the right to do so as it is apostolic. With many words he admonished us, and expressed a hope of a blessed reunion in heaven. May peace go with him.

THE LAST FAREWELL

of our earthly career, I was made to think of. Soon, ah! soon, the parting hour will come to all of us, when we must take our little all, and depart. We brought nothing, and with nothing we shall go—nothing but a soul to be saved or lost. What yawning gulf between the two words—saved—lost! We can not think of loss, but we love to cherish the "hope of salvation." O may our life be such indeed that we can say a glad "Farewell" to earth at last, and without one lingering look, "soar away and be at rest"—sweet rest. In joyous hope, D. B. M.

Waynesboro, Pa., Sept. 4, 1878.

BROTHERS Daniel Frey and Martin Meyer have returned from their trip to the Wisconsin Mission field, and report excellent meetings and the best of prospects. While there they held seventeen meetings, four council meetings and two elections. The church was divided into two congregations, by a line running North and South. Bro. Caleb Fogle was advanced to the second degree, and George Turner elected to the ministry. One was expelled, two reclaimed, and seven others baptized. Those baptized were from other denominations, excepting one. There are about seventy members in that part of Wis. They have two deacons in each congregation. The prospects for many more members are said to be excellent.

BROTHER Bashor commenced meeting at the Milledgeville church last Friday evening. Interest good and congregations large. Two were baptized Sunday afternoon.

All questions should be stated with candor, and answered with as much clearness as possible, in order to promote Bible Truth. Articles for this department, must be short and to the point.

Please give an explanation of Matt. 21: 2; also Mark 11: 2. Do both mean the same? If so, what is meant by the ass tied and the colt with her; loose them and bring them unto me? Did he ride both, or only the colt? I. H. CRIST.

THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS.

BY KATE KEINER.

WE read of a rich man clothed in purple and fine linen, who fared sumptuously every day, and of a beggar named Lazarus who had at the rich man's gate, full of sores, desiring to be fed from the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table. The greatest attention given this poor man, was from dogs which licked his sores.

These men died. Lazarus was carried by the angels to Abraham's bosom. The rich man was tormented and in hell he lifted up his eyes, being in torment. He saw Lazarus in Abraham's bosom, and cried, "Father Abraham, have mercy on me, send Lazarus that he may dip the tip of his finger in water and cool my tongue, for I am tormented in this flame."

Kind reader, did you ever think how the cry went, "O for water to cool my burning tongue?" It seems that little wretched member was suffering the most. It we seem to be religious and terrible not our tongue, our religion is vain.

EXPLANATION.

BY G. W. BRIDGER.

"If any man's work be burned, he shall suffer loss, but he himself shall be saved, yet so as by fire."

THE apostle as a wise master builder laid on the foundation, but other men built on the same foundation, and if the material was good, he received a reward, if it was bad he suffered loss, because he labored and toiled and all his labor was lost, and as every man's work shall be tried by fire, it must be such material as will stand the test, if not, it will be all lost. If he, as a minister of the Gospel, stands firm he shall be saved, although all his labor be lost, he "shall be saved yet so as by fire." The "fire" will try his work as well as the material, which is his members. Paul was speaking to the Corinthians, and was trying to show the danger of not fully complying with all the requirements of the Gospel, and Paul says that in a great house there are not only vessels of gold and of silver, but also of wood and of earth; some to honor and some to dishonor. Now, as every man's work shall be tried by fire, if it is not gold or silver and precious stones, it will be burnt up. Yet he, as a preacher, shall be saved, "yet so as by fire," and as being tried by fire and stands the test. Understand the apostle to mean teachers, when he said "every man's work shall be tried." He, the builder; the members, the material.

ASSYRIAN ANTIQUITIES.

MR. Rassam has just deposited his latest collection of Assyrian antiquities in the British Museum. The excavations carried on by him on the site of Ninevah proper have, says the Manchester Guardian, produced more than 1,400 specimens of cuneiform inscriptions, among which are many fragments of great value. There are, for instance, some portions of the famous Creation series. The explorations carried on at Nimroud have produced valuable results to students of archaeology. There it was that Mr. Rassam discovered a vast edifice, with seats, altar, and all the arrangements of a temple, which was contemporaneous with that of Solomon. New sites and scenes of discovery have been opened up. At the Mount of Balawat there has been found a temple exclusively dedicated to the male and female deities of battle, where were deposited the trophies of the expeditions of the kings of the middle Assyrian Empire. Amongst them may be noticed a monument perfectly unique in character, a bronze of over 20 feet high, recording the particulars of a warlike expedition of the ninth century, B. C.—The Reformer.

CHARITY.

BY JESSE CULBERTSON.

WHAT is charity? It is love to God and man. Charity "suffereth long with patience under injuries, and it is kind, not to friends only, but to foes." It is not uneasy at the prosperity of others, and it does not boast of its own excellence. It seeketh not its own as the chief end; is not selfish, but benevolent; it is not disposed to impute to others evil designs; it rejoiceth not in the vices or calamities even of enemies, nor in hearing or reporting evil concerning them. Whoever may be the instruments, and whatever the effect on us, charity beareth all things implied by others, so far as is consistent with duty, without being disposed to publish their misconduct or to punish it. Charity is disposed to put the best construction upon men's conduct, and hopes the best concerning them. Charity will continue to eternity, and will outlive all miraculous gifts of faith, hope, and charity; it sees that the latter is the greatest in influence and importance, for love is so active in its nature and marked in its effects, that none need or ought to be in doubt whether to possess it, for things which are only temporary should never awaken our deepest interest or be our chief concern. Nothing should do this that will not last forever.

OBEDIENCE.

BY JAMES WIRT.

THE Creator has given sufficient motives and invested man with the power to comply with all of the mandates required at his hand. He does not require impossibilities. The Christian should feel grateful that the yoke of Christ is easy and that His burden is light, enabling him to perform all the commands. A contemplation of the subject permits us to freely acknowledge the wisdom manifested in the great plan of salvation, to restore finite man to a reconciled relation to God, his Maker.

Obedience to his laws will always accomplish the wise designs intended in their promulgation among the children of men.

We should be willing to obey from the heart that form of doctrine once delivered to the saints. It is through great tribulation that we enter the kingdom of heaven.

Our duties are many, and by a judicious application of the means given into our hands we can obtain that incorruptible crown reserved in heaven for all the faithful followers of Christ.

It is necessary to appreciate the many advantages enjoyed by those who are fellow-heirs of heaven. Man is susceptible of many inherent powers that are latent in his nature, and are capable of various degrees of improvement in the line of spiritual progress towards a higher and better life. Considering all the difficulties and obstructions thrown in his way, it appears marvelous that so much can be performed by mortal man.

Now it will appear evident to all that a full compliance to the truth as it is in Jesus will insure to us an approbation from Him with whom we have to do. There can no inconsistency arise by fully obeying the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. We should earnestly contend for the faith as it is in Jesus, who was obedient in all things, even the death of the cross, that by thus suffering He might draw all men unto Him. He says, "No man cometh to the Father but by me." Then let us persuade others to embrace Christianity and enjoy its blessed influence. Let us live a life devoted to the cause of our blessed Master who has done so much for us, who gave Himself for us as a ransom to redeem fallen man from the penalty incurred by violating the law of God, enabling man to come into a reconciled relation to God who willeth not that any should die in their sins, but that all would repent and live in strict obedience to all the requirements of the New Testament.

Obedience to God's law insures to us the approbation of Him with whom we have to do.—In working out our soul's salvation we set examples of piety; this will be a motive for others to imitate us and cause them to adhere to Christian principles.

PRAY WITHOUT CEASING.

THESE is reference made to the above subject in No. 6, of its excellence and propriety, of which it is so full and in our weak understanding implies more, oft times, than we apprehend or put to practice. Hence our inability to do it justice.

The word "prayer" is very prominent in the Bible, being frequently used as a direct command. Doubtless the inspired writers knew man's proneness to evil, to deceitfulness and the doing of his own will.

Luke says, "Watch and pray always," that we may be accounted worthy to escape the temptations, cares and besetting sins, and that we may stand acceptable before the Son of man.

In Paul's writing to the Thessalonians, expressing his love for them, his desire to see them, and in his hortatory calls to holiness and brotherly love, he says to them "pray without ceasing." He having prayed night and day exceedingly that he might see them and perfect them in what was lacking in their faith, inviting them also to pray for him that the word of the Lord may have free course, and that he may be delivered from wicked and unreasonable men, and while we ever have the wicked and unreasonable among us, trying to prevent and confound, it is evident that Paul's idea would convey the idea that we cease not praying, that we cease not seeking the unforbidden paths, and in as much as we are ever ready, and the evil spirit with its various delements is continually on the alert, seeking, alluring and enticing man, trying to increase haughtiness and to swell proud hearts, and to bring man to forget the elements needful and reasonable in God's service, it becomes man, at least a true disciple of Christ, to watch carefully and pray unceasingly, pleading continually for God's blessing, grace and assistance in the lawful striving for a temporal livelihood and a home in the world eternal. A FEW THOUGHTS TO OUR YOUNG FRIENDS.

BY S. BRUMBAUGH.

AS I am left alone this afternoon, and meditating upon the good lessons I heard last evening and to-day by brethren Jesse Stultman and John Fitzgerald, I am made to think of the many young men and women that are spending their best days in the service of the enemy. I am also young, but, thank God, I have taken passage on the other side zion, and I feel as one of old, that I would rather be a door-keeper in the house of my God than to dwell in the tent of sin. A few days ago I attended a church meeting when I was made glad to see an old man, well stricken in years, take passage on the "old ship," concluding to give God the service of his few last days here upon earth. But oh! young friends do not wait on old age to work for the Lord. The Master has need of all your time. How many we see giving Satan the service of their young and vigorous days. Why not come into the vineyard of the Lord and work there.

Last Sunday I was made to rejoice to hear the good news that my brother and his wife concluded to work for Jesus. This takes in the last one of our family, consisting of seven children, father and mother, making one undivided family on the "old ship," sailing for glory, with Jesus for our Captain. Oh! how rejoicing it must be to a father and mother to have all their family on board, leaving none behind. Brethren, pray for us that we may hold out faithful to our journey's end. Do you not believe that we have relieved our poor old father and mother of a heavy load? Children, did you ever stop and think how many long, long nights your parents have passed, lying upon their beds, thinking about the welfare of their dear children, breathing prayers to their good Master in heaven, to draw you by his love, but you would not come, but still refused? Oh! dear children how sad it must be for your dear old father and mother who has brought you up and cared for you from time to time, and ministered unto your wants in time of need, how sad it must be now to them to see you on your way down, down, down toward that awful place of destruction where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched! Many a tear is shed for you but you heed them not. Children, how would you enjoy yourselves were you to get on board the train for some far-distant place and your dear parents be left behind, never to see you any more? Could you enjoy yourselves? No. So it is also sad and mournful to your parents who have stepped on board the "old ship" to sail for heaven to look back and see you still sporting on the banks of ruin, with no God in the world. It is sad indeed. But a short time ago a beloved brother was talking to me with his eyes filled with tears, concerning his children which he loved so dearly, about how happy he would be to see them come flocking home. How many cheerful hours could be spent together as one undivided family in Christ! What a pleasure it would be to him when they surrounded the family altar for worship, to see them all in Christ asking for His blessings.—Oh! dear children, how much good counsel from your parents do you reject! How will it be, when that great day of judgment comes, when your mother and father will be seen flying off with the angels, crowned with glory, dressed in a lily-white robe, with palms of victory in their hands, singing the sweet songs of Moses and the Lamb, and you must take up your abode in darkness forever, and hear nothing but groaning and gnashing of teeth from such great pain, burning forever and ever? Horrible thought! Now is your time, while you are yet living, to prepare for that hour of death which will take you before the Judge just as you are. Oh! prepare! prepare! You would even cause the angels in heaven to rejoice were you to step on board the vessel, and when death comes with his sickle keen, you need not fear him, for if he strike you, your Father will send his angels to carry you home, where you can meet your little brothers and sisters, father and mother, and wear a lily-white robe, walking the golden streets of that New Jerusalem with a golden harp within your hand and a crown of glory on your head, singing with the holy angels and praising God. Blessed thought! What a happy time that will be! Now, consider these thoughts, because I am concerned about you. I am also young and we want more young soldiers in Christ's army; so come and enlist and we will fight together until the end, and then we can go home to glory.—Amen.

THE regular monthly meeting of the Trustees of this institution took place on Sept. 10th. The members in a body carefully inspected the building in process of construction and expressed themselves very much pleased with the excellent work done. In the selection of materials and of workmen, the building committee deserve much credit thus far. There are thirty hands engaged in making and laying, and have at this time laid more than half a million into the wall. The building is up to the top of the second story, and from its elevated position ranges above the top of the highest church steeple in town. This position was chosen to afford good drainage and promote health. It is the aim of the Trustees, to put the building under roof, floor it, and let it settle until Spring, before plastering it. Among the most important actions taken by the Trustees, was to authorize the building committee to have two hundred thousand bricks burnt this Autumn, with a view of putting up a boarding-house early next Summer, and have the institution ready for a teachers' normal class, by the middle of next Summer. The money needed just now, is for the building of boarding-halls, and as the Trustees wish to "square up" each Saturday evening, all funds donated and dues paid in, are received with the best thanks.

Dear Brethren—
OUR annual visit was a few weeks ago. Had our council meeting on Saturday, the 15th of August. The church is in a healthy condition. Nothing but love and union prevail. Business all passed off pleasantly.
As the harvest is plentiful, and the laborers are few, the church set apart more laborers in the vineyard of the Lord. So we chose a speaker and a deacon. The choice for speaker was John W. Chick, who accepted the call, and was legally installed into office. The choice for deacon was a brother who would not accept the call at that time, and has not yet been installed into office.
The time was here and then fixed for our Communion meeting, which will be held at our Old Brick meeting-house, near New Hope, on the 11th day of October, next. The meeting to continue over Lord's day.
In connection with this district, we have charge of a small body of members in Nelson, and Amherst counties, a place where we commenced preaching about two years ago, where the Brethren never were known to preach before. But there seems to be considerable interest manifested among the people. There have been twenty-six added since we have labored in that field. By the blessing of God, the writer in company with brother A. D. Garber, were permitted to meet with the little band, on the 24th of Aug., where we examined them in regard to their faith in the Gospel. We found them in full faith, peace and love. We then proceeded to hold an election for deacon, all of which passed off pleasantly. Brother Jacob Hamilton was unanimously elected, accepted the call, and was duly installed into office.

In the evening we conducted services in commemoration of the sufferings and death of our Lord and Savior. It was the first Communion meeting ever held in that section of country by the Brethren. The meeting was well attended. It was altogether a pleasant, and we hope a profitable one. The next day being Lord's day, had preaching in the forenoon and afternoon. Closed Monday morning with one addition by baptism. Returned to our neighborhood on Tuesday, just in time to attend the funeral services of brother Abraham May, aged 84 years. He had been a great sufferer for many years, having lost his eyesight some twenty years ago, and suffered other bodily afflictions in his last days. But his sufferings are now over, and we hope he has gone to rest. Reached home in the evening, found all well, for which we have great cause to thank the Lord. Just five weeks previous to this time, I had been from home one week in the same section of country above named, and on my return home, found my dear companion very ill, which illness resulted in her death in eight days thereafter.—Her obituary notice was published in No. 35 of the BROTHERS AT WORK, giving her age 55 years, 5 months and 7 days, which should have been 53 years, 5 months and 7 days.

IT was so called from the township in which its meeting-house stands, in Hunterdon Co., New Jersey, built in 1747. One of these families, who first settled the tract, now called Hopewell, was that of Jonathan Stout, a Primitive Baptist, who arrived here from Middletown about 1706. The place was a wilderness and full of Indians. He had nine children; and as the Brethren's church of Hunterdon was not organized then yet, six of them went over to Pennsylvania for baptism. Thus the Stout's family including the father and mother furnished eight of the fifteen members. Among the seven others were Benjamin Drake, Ruth Stout, Alice Curtis, Rachel Hyde and Mary Drake. These fifteen, with the assistance of Abel Morgan, were organized into a church in April, 1715. The preaching of believers' baptism had such an effect, that out of a thinly settled country fifty-five were added to their number by 1747, when the meeting-house was built.—They also had several remarkable revivals since. But the most remarkable part of its history, is that of the Stout's family, of which we will give a brief sketch. Romantic as it may appear, we believe it strictly true; and furnishes a most remarkable instance of the watchful care and protection of an over-ruling Providence for a special purpose.

As already seen Jonathan Stout and family were the seed of the church and the beginning of the settlement; and also, that of the fifteen, which constituted the church, nine were Stouts, that it was constituted at the house of a Stout, the meetings were held in the dwellings of the Stouts for forty-one years, or till the meeting-house was built—from first to last about half the members were Stouts—for in looking over the church books we find about two hundred of the name. Besides about as many were of the blood, who had lost the name by marriage. And what is wonderful—all spring from one woman, and she as good as dead. Her history is carefully preserved by her posterity, and is told as following: she was born at Amsterdam, about the year 1602. Her father's name was Vanprincis. She and her first husband (whose name is lost) sailed for New York (then called New Amsterdam) about the year 1620. The vessel was stranded at Sandy Hook about eighteen miles South of the harbor, the crew got ashore and marched towards the said New York. But Penelope's (that was her name) husband being so badly hurt in the wreck could not march with them. Therefore he and the wife, tarried in the woods;—they had not been long in the place, before the Indians killed them both (as they thought) and stripped them both naked to the skin. However Penelope came to life again, though her skull was fractured and her left shoulder so hacked, that she could never use that arm like the other, she was also cut across the abdomen, so that her bowels appeared; these she kept in with her hand. She continued in this miserable situation for seven days, taking shelter in a hollow tree, and eating the excrement of it. The seventh day she saw a deer passing by with arrows sticking in it, and soon after two Indians appeared, whom she was glad to see, hoping they would put her out of her misery: accordingly one made towards her, to knock her on the head, but the other, who was an elderly man, prevented him, and throwing his match-coat about her to cover her nakedness, he carried her to his wigwam, and cured her of her wounds and bruises, after that, he took her to New York and made a present of her, to her country-men, that is an Indian present—expecting ten times the value in return. It was in New York not long after her arrival, that one Richard Stout married her. He was a native of England and of a good family. She was now in her 22nd year and he in his fortieth. She bore him seven sons and three daughters, viz. Jonathan, the founder of Hopewell, John, Richard, James, Peter, David, Benjamin, Mary, Sarah and Alice. The daughters married into the families of the Bounds', Pikes' and Skeltons'. The sons also married and had many children. The mother lived to the extraordinary age of one hundred and ten years and saw her offspring multiplied into five hundred and two, in about eighty-eight years.

From the Abilene Church.

WE had our Communion meeting in the Abilene church August 24th, without any ministerial help from any other district, not even one member, except one sister from Pennsylvania, which makes us think that this branch of church is but little known by the Brethren of other districts. I will say here to the brotherhood, this church was organized nine years ago with seven members; Jonas Dehaven minister in the second degree, now deceased. By election, John Hunberger was then elected to the ministry of first degree, and is now ordained to the eldership; while Michael Forney, and Abraham Bear are since chosen and put into the second degree of the ministry. We have five deacons, and myself, assistant elder, with a membership of seventy-six at present. One sister was added by baptism at our Love-feast, and one man since. So we have still reason to rejoice with the angels in heaven, because sinners repent and the labors of the Brethren prosper under God's blessings. I had forgotten Lewis Jordan, minister in second degree, also moved into this district. I think not one of the minister's names, of this church are in the Brethren's Almanac, except my own. I hope the ministers of other districts will make a note of this, and assist at another Love-feast.

Dear Brethren—
THE health of this country is the most distressing I have ever known. I have lived here forty years and have never known so many deaths in this section, in so short a time. Notwithstanding the many warnings we have, the health of the people spiritually is just as bad as it is physically, and it has reached the Brethren spiritually, making great slaughter among us. The most lamentable case that I ever experienced, was here the 3rd of August. The whole clergy showed plainly that they were deranged and badly diseased in mind. As typhoid fever and diphtheria are carrying a great many of our best citizens, young and old, just so is the disease of malice and envy cutting off some of the best members of our church; and the people are becoming hardened, so that few tears are shed when the messenger of death takes out of the family its best member, so

MARY.

BY GEORGE H. ZOLLERS.

Through death's dark sullen stream,
Has passed the afflicted one;
Her life has vanished like a dream,
Her death, who can bemoan?

I'm glad her soul is free
From that poor mangled frame
To stay the raging malady,
Our efforts proved in vain.

May her dark hours of pain,
So lonely with patience borne;
Invite her friends the crown to gain,
In the celestial morn.

May blessings ever flow,
And love adorn the home,
Those minutes all her anguish saw,
And heard her weep and groan.

God bless my mother dear,
Whose life was meek and mild,
Who toiled 'mid tears, and grief, and care,
To solace her poor child.

We hope to meet again,
In that pure blessed clime,
Where none shall ever grieve in pain
Nor life nor health decline.

Christian Festivals—One Idea Professors—A Race of Dwarfs—Practical Vs. Theoretical Religion — The Wants of the Age — Hard Times.

From the special correspondents.

THE happy "remission" period is drawing near, when the scattered children will gather together around the Father's table, to feed up on the soul's food that flows so bounteously from the treasure-house above. Already the cleansing work is being pushed forward, and the tidings come from all parts of the vineyard: "We are preparing for the sacred feast." The messages of love speed their way by every mail, calling to the CHRISTIAN FESTIVAL.

Multitern are the styles through which these eagles of light and love execute their mission. One before me says, "Dear brother, our feast will be on the first Saturday and Sunday in October. Hope to see you with many other brethren and sisters." Another says, "Our Love-feast is appointed on the second Saturday and Sunday in October. All of your brethren and sisters are invited, especially the ministering brethren."

These are precious seasons for our souls. I remember when I first sat around the soul's festive board, I felt very near our Lord. I used then to wish they would last forever, they were so sweet. Once I wept while I sat there, at the thought that soon I would have to go out into the rough, cold world, and battle with Satan. Now, I do not have those feelings. Then I thought it was the sum of a Christian life to enjoy heavenly delights, now I know it is the sum of a Christian life to fight the Lord's battles on the arena of this world, and to wait for the joys in the future world.

If our neighboring professors knew the great loss they sustain in neglecting these precious duties, the Deipnon would, with its accompaniments, be celebrated, where now the noting and hilarity of the picnic, the charade, the semi-theatrical, with their usual etceteras, hold supreme sway. Shake off the sloth of your long and restless slumbers, oh, erring brethren, and tread the hallowed walks of Christ and His apostles. They are absorbed with concerning the agencies of redemption, and that is faith, faith first, faith last, faith intermediate. We proclaim the heaven-born triumvirate, faith first, works or obedience, intermediate, and grace, thrice blessed, last. This is a good ticket, with the broad seal of heaven and God's signature written with the blood of Christ. Are any of the sheep spotted with the plague, one idea? How many are there who think a skillful manipulation of the hair brush and the scissors is the prime consideration. How many are now engaged in the useless work of white-washing and burnishing the decaying shell, while the worms of covetousness or jealousy or self-love is consuming the precious kernel? "These things ye ought to do and not leave the others undone."

Dear brethren and sisters, on the gentle zephyrs of faith, send a prayer to heaven for your weary brother, when you feel happy around the Father's table.

A RACE OF DWARVES,

is the progeny of that style of serving God. We thus become only half developed, hump-backed, weak-minded, reel-footed, scrimp, and halt, we go through life, limping and stumpling. Oh, why should we forever be satisfied with the weak milk, soured by our admixture of the incongruous elements of whims and traditions, when the Father's table is crowned with the rich meats of faith, charity, benevolence etc. It would be far better to plume our pinions and soar up to the pure atmosphere of the exalting and ennobling virtues that crown the royal children with princely glory.

THEORETICAL RELIGION

is the order of the day now. A belief in the fundamentals, so called of the Bible, just about enough to enable them to say when they come to die, "I die a protestant," "I die a Christian." It seems never to have occurred to them that the religion of Jesus

a chain in which should be woven the web of life, and that a person cannot die a Christian, unless they live one. Judging from the actions of many who figure conspicuously in this category, we would suppose their highest conception of religion, was to utilize it to the important purpose of filling their own coffers, and floating on the crest of the top-most wave of society.

THE WANTS OF THE AGE.

demand a removal of this order. Let it be thundered from every pulpit in Christendom, that it is a misnomer to call a person a Christian who does not illustrate the virtues and morality of the Gospel in their daily conduct. Things should be called by their right names. Call a bankrupt, a man who takes the benefit of that act for the purpose of defrauding their creditors, and who still lives in an extravagant style, a thief. It would take a metaphysician more astute than I claim to be, to see the real difference between him and the man who breaks into my house during the night watches and transfers the contents of my pocket book to his. A man that manipulates his accounts to perpetrate a fraud, and the man who is a voluntary beneficiary of such a transaction should be stigmatized and labeled "thief," so that the world would know to whom they belonged. Let the church withdraw her velvety embraces from them, and then men will realize the inevitable results of their dishonesty.

We need not expect deliverance from which is giving people a world of trouble just now, till the churches cease their patronage of, and fawning and adulterous dalliance with fashion and pride in all its multifarious forms, and dishonestly in its thousand and one manifestations, and falsehood and deceit and hypocrisy. Publish it to the world, shout it from the mountain tops, emblazon it in letters of fire on every bulletin board of Christendom, write on every rock and fence, along every highway and mountain-path, that things are the foul progeny of sin. Let them stink in the nostrils of God's people, as they do in the nostrils of God Himself.

The professed Christian church to-day is responsible, more than any other agency, for the wide-spread moral and financial ruin that is swallowing up all that is good in our once prosperous and happy country. Men, in the open light of day, under the broad glare of the light of the Gospel, will defalcate and liquidate and bankrupt their creditors out of hundreds of thousands of dollars and read their doom in the tears and curses of thousands of destitute widows and orphans and impoverished fathers, and from this scene of perfidy and legalized villany, they pass to the Communion table, and a liveried, and salaried minister of the Gospel, so called, with full knowledge of his shameful guilt, presses to his lips the blessed consecrated blood of the Lord Jesus Christ.

Manufacturers of intoxicating liquors, wholesale and retail venders of this accursed fire, bankrupts both in morals and money, votaries and slaves of the most shameless and immodest fashions, and sin and vice in every form (except those forms that immure their victims in a felon's cell), are honored recipients of the blessings of popular Christianity, not the Christianity of apostolic times, but the gilded, whitewashed, painted, bedizened Christianity of the nineteenth century.

Let us see that such things make no entrance into our fold. While we attempt to perpetuate the simplicity of past generations, let us also perpetuate their honesty and integrity, and thus entitle ourselves justly to their spotless reputation.

GOD'S POWER AND GLORY.

BY J. R. HOFFER.

IT cannot be possible that the All-wise, Omnipotent God of love, can fail in any of His purposes; or that He can do anything in the result of which he might be disappointed; for He controls both cause and effect. How is it, however, that His Word assures us that many persons will be lost, and yet, that He wants all to be saved? Also that He repented having made man? Gen. 6: 6. And surely He who "is love," cannot have an evil design with any of His creatures. How then is His Word to be understood where it apparently teaches that men frustrated the divine object? where God seemed to have raised up men for perdition, as Pharaoh and Judas Iscariot? and when He is declared as angry.

In regard to Pharaoh, the Lord said, "And in very deed, for this cause have I raised thee up, to show in thee my power; and that my name may be declared throughout all the earth." Ex. 9: 16. The purpose, therefore, was not the destruction of Pharaoh, but to show the power of God and declare His name throughout all the earth. Had Pharaoh obeyed the voice of God and allowed the Israelites to depart in peace, the divine purposes would have been attained without His destruction. But the object of heaven could not fail, and on account of Pharaoh's resistance it could evidently not be accomplished except by destroying him and his host. Judas Iscariot was chosen by the Lord Jesus as one of His disciples, no doubt for some special purpose; and had he proved faithful that purpose would have been attained without his destruction. The tree of the knowledge of good and evil was planted in the midst of the garden for a divine end; and if Adam and Eve had been obedient, that end could have been attained without the necessity of driving them out.

God surely has a good work for every individual human being that He brings into the world; not only that each should do something for himself, but also for others, so that all might be saved "from their sins," and made happy. But how is this object attained with those who refuse to do their work, and be saved?

We are taught that in Christ Jesus salvation is brought to all men. Luke 3: 6. Is not the heavenly end here attained? Salvation is brought to all, and if some refuse to accept it, the work of giving is nevertheless accomplished. And in accomplishing His purposes through the destruction of those who refuse to accept salvation, the words of David are fulfilled, "Surely the wrath of man shall praise thee." Ps. 76: 10. But in the Lord's parables He said, that the talent of him who refused to make it productive should be given to the one who had the most, which seems to indicate that He accomplishes His objects also by giving the powers of the disobedient to those who will render the services required.

When the Lord Jesus came, He said, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand," and on the cross He cried out, "It is finished." A comparatively few had repented when these last words were said, yet the work of saving was accomplished. Though many refuse to accept salvation from their sins, and from the sure wages thereof, this salvation is nevertheless fully provided for all; and on the side of Him who provides it, all are therefore saved.

The Lord said, "He is the life." Where there is no life, there can be no suffering; hence if the Lord would, or could, entirely withdraw from a person, then no doubt all suffering would cease. In this sense, therefore, does God punish, by not withholding existence from those who refuse to live to such a degree as to be truly happy. The Lord taught the people to pray to the Father of love, "Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil." This seems to imply that God does lead into temptation. Prosperity and health tempt the evil to do wrong; and indeed by all the good things which make those that love God happy, are the wicked tempted to do evil. And since even the best are not exempt from evil inclinations, all find reason to pray the Father not to lead them into temptation; to make which prayer from the heart, implies a willingness that such blessings as might be abused should be withheld. But surely all would much rather be delivered from such evil inclinations, and therefore they can heartily pray, "But deliver us from evil," which implies a desire to be prepared for the reception of the best gifts from the Lord.

God surely is not angry, as men are, or Jesus could not have said, "For the wrath of man worketh not the righteousness of God," James 1: 20. That "God is love" excludes everything from Him that has the semblance of human anger. Human anger is love turned towards evil; and God's blessings turned to evil purposes are called the anger of God, for to the wicked God appears to be angry, because what they love makes them unhappy. But it is no less from the love of God that wrong doing causes pain than that to do right makes happy; for by the pain men are warned that they are doing wrong, and by happiness they know that they are living right; providing they are sufficiently alive to feel their pain, and do not call evil good, darkness light, and bitter sweet, Is. 5: 20.

Keep constantly before you a firm intention of serving God always and with your whole heart, and then "take no thought for the morrow." Only strive or be concerned to do your very best to-day.

Rich happiness is cheap enough, yet how dearly we pay for its counterfeit!

PRAYER AND POTATOES.

"If a brother or sister be naked, and destitute of daily food, and one of you say unto them, depart in peace, and be ye warmed and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things which are needful for the body; what doth it profit?" James 2: 15, 16.

An old lady sat in her old arm-chair,
With wrinkled visage, disheveled hair,
And hunger-worn features;
For days and for weeks her only fare,
As she sat in her old arm-chair,
Had been potatoes.

But now they were gone; of bad or good,
Not one was left for the old lady's food.

Of those potatoes:
And she sighed and said, "What shall I do?
Where shall I send, and to whom shall I go
For more potatoes?"

And she thought of the deacon over the way,
The deacon so ready to worship and pray,
Whose cellar was full of potatoes,
And she said, "I will send for the deacon to come,
He'll not mind much to give me some
Of such a store of potatoes."

And the deacon came over as fast as he could,
Thinking to do the old lady some good,
But never, for once, of potatoes;
He asked her at once what was her chief want,
And she, poor soul, expecting a grant,
Immediately answered, "Potatoes."

But the deacon's religion didn't lie that way;
He was more accustomed to preach and to pray
Than to give of his hoarded potatoes;
So, not hearing, of course what the old lady said,
He rose to pray with uncovered head,
But she only thought of potatoes.

He prayed for patience, and wisdom, and grace;
But when he prayed, "Lord give her power,"
She audibly sighed, "Give potatoes!"
At the end of each prayer which he said,
He heard, or thought that he heard, in its stead
The same request for potatoes.

The deacon was troubled; knew not what to do,
'Twas very embarrassing to have her feel so
About "those eternal potatoes."
So, ending his prayer, he started for home,
But, as the door closed, he heard a deep groan,
"Oh, give to the hungry potatoes."

And that groan followed him all the way home;
In the midst of the night it haunted his room—
"O, give to the hungry potatoes!"
He could bear it no longer, arose and dressed;
From his well-filled cellar taking in haste
A bag of his best potatoes.

Again he went to the widow's lone hut,
Her sleepless eyes she had not yet shut;
But there she sat, in that old arm-chair,
With the same wan features; the same sad air,
And, entering, he poured on the floor
A bushel or more from his goodly store
Of choice potatoes.

The widow's heart leaped up for joy,
Her face was haggard and wan no more,
"Now," said the deacon, "shall we pray?"
"Yes," said the widow, "Now you may,"
And he knelt him down on the sanded floor,
Where he poured this goodly store,
And such a prayer the deacon prayed
As never before his lips essayed;
No longer embarrassed, but free and full,
He poured out the voice of a liberal soul,
And the widow responded a loud "Amen,"
But said no more of potatoes.

And would you who hear this simple tale:
Pray for the poor, and praying "prevail,"
Then preface your prayers with alms and deeds:
Search out the poor, their wants and their needs;
Pray for peace, and grace, and spiritual food,
For wisdom, and guidance, for all these are good,
But don't forget the potatoes.

REPLY OF BRO. S. H. BASHOR TO
ELD. P. BERGSTRESSER, D. D.

[The following communication published in a late number of the Waynesboro Village Record (Pa) is copied into the BROTHERS AT WORK by request. The discussion has been going on through that paper for sometime, and will now likely terminate in a public, oral discussion between the parties to take place at Waynesboro, sometime during the Fall or Winter. Mr. Bergstresser is a Lutheran minister of acknowledged ability.—Eus.]

DEAR SIR:—I received your last communication in the Record, of July 18th, but owing to circumstances which I could not control, have delayed replying until now. You need not be surprised if many of your criticisms (?) are passed in silence, as they have appeared again and again, in your articles, during this discussion, and you must not be discouraged, or feel offended, if I do not refute them again.

I do not understand why it is that you say that you "hoped to meet me in debate according to the time appointed," when we had neither appointed a time nor decided upon propositions for discussion. If we had, will you please inform me when and what they—the propositions—were? You deny having solicited me to discuss the propositions on the Lord's Supper, in its negative form, and assert that I agreed so to discuss it, but the facts in the case are to the contrary, as you well know, and as every one knows who has carefully perused the discussion. The reason I refer again to this, is, because your statement bears the truth and is made for effect. Had you agreed to discuss, upon fair propositions, the discussion would now be a thing of the past; but you have refused every proposition handed you, that had a semblance of fairness, and planted yourself behind one single one, on baptism all the time, which you knew was unfair, thus showing that you did not wish to debate, and did this purposely to avoid a discussion.

That baptize is an active, transitive verb, you denied, squarely denied it, until now, and expressly asserted in your previous articles, that it belonged to that class of verbs expressing "condition or state," and when your scholarship suffered from the effects of the blunder, you deny your previous assertions, and now admit that baptize is a transitive verb, throughout the sacred Scriptures, used either in its active or passive form. Webster in his definition of the verb baptize says, it means to immerse, but in defining the noun, baptism, the name of the Christian ordinance, he says, "It is usually performed by sprinkling or immersion." He gives the manner of performing the rite in his day, which is by sprinkling or immersion, but this does not prove that the classical or sacred use of the Greek baptizo signifies sprinkling and immersion, his dealing with the noun baptism has nothing to do with the original meaning of the verb baptizo. Webster only tells us how the clergy administer baptism in his day, and does not give its meaning philologically. Any candid gentleman and scholar must and will admit this. I have admitted all along that bapto and baptizo are different words; that bapto is the root and that it is never applied to the Christian ordinance; that as far as I know all critics and Lexicographers are agreed in this. But, that baptizo is a derivative of bapto, and derives its specific meaning, as well as its radical and immutable form from that word," I have repeatedly asserted and do so again; and also assert, that baptizo, with its derivatives, is the only word used in the New Testament to indicate this ordinance. That baptizo has both a proper and figurative sense, I admit; so have all other words in current use, but in derivatives direct the original, natural and proper meaning of the term is invariably transmitted. That baptizo is a direct derivative of bapto you dare not deny, and this being true, the word is only properly rendered in the sense of an immersion. In confirmation of this, I refer you to some of the leading lexicographers of the world, such as Scapula (a Pedobaptist of 1579, and, in fact, I shall refer you to none but Pedobaptists), Henricus, Stephanus, Robertson, Schleusner, Pasor, Parkhurst, Donagan, Dr. John Jones of England, Greenfield, Bretschneider, Stokes and Stuart of Andover. These men, without one single exception, translate this word in a sense foreign to sprinkle, and not one of them ever translated the word by the term pour. All—every single one of them, were Pedobaptists, and, notwithstanding their strong prejudices in favor of sprinkling and pouring, they could find no authority for translating the word, sprinkle, or pour, but against their practice and prejudices, they were compelled to give the meaning of the word to be immerse, and in that sense alone they were forced to translate it. The word baptizo during the entire existence of the Greek as a spoken language, had an unvarying and defined import. It was a word in daily use among the Greeks, and in its liberal use, it meant to put into or under a penetrable substance, so that the object was wholly covered by the inclosing element.

It was a daily household word, employed in any and numberless cases, such as, a man was baptized when he was ducked in sport of revenge, as in case of the boy, Aristobulus, referred to in the early part of this discussion. A man was baptized in debt when he owed large sums and had no means of paying them. A man was baptized in calamities, when swallowed up by them as by a flood. All these examples are given in the metaphorical sense of the word, save one instance. It was a familiar word understood by all, in every day life among the Greeks, and when the Savior employed it in prescribing the initiatory rite of the Christian church, it conveyed a clear, definite and tangible meaning to the minds of the disciples, as clear and definite as the words to eat and to drink. The claim that you and all others of your school make, that it was used by our Lord in any other sense than that of immerse, originated in ignorance of the literature of the word. I am satisfied that no intelligent, unprejudiced mind, with a full knowledge of the case, will assert that the Savior employed the term in a new sense, unknown to the persons he addressed, for that would charge him with using it with the intention of being misunderstood. To that mystical sense (called by you, "A state of rest in Christ,") which you suppose was shadowed forth in the Lord's command, looms up in the most powerful possible contrast; the distinct, intelligible, simple and corporeal sense to which the word was appropriated by unbroken usage. The act which it designates was selected for its adaptation to set forth, "in lively symbolism the ground thought of Christianity." The change in the character and conditions of the believer was complete. The sufferings and death of our Lord, along with those overwhelming sorrows, expressed in Luke 12: 50, were the basis and procuring cause of this change, and these related ideas; and comprehending in their reference, the entire work and wealth of redemption, were each shadowed by the immersion of believers in water.

This was the sense of the word and ordinance in the mind of the evangelist of Jesus Christ, when he preached the Gospel to the Ethiopian officer; for "when they," says the Bible, "came unto a certain water," (this places them, at or near to, or by the water), the officer requested baptism at the hands of Philip. He, with the idea in his mind, conveyed by the word baptize, led the "officer down into the water." This takes them a little farther than at or near by the water.

They were already "at" or "near the water," and then going into the water, placed them in the proper element for the act of baptizing. The going into the water, and their being there, was not baptism, but after they were in the water, "He baptized him." Philip baptized the Eunuch. "How was that performed," do you ask? Paul says in Colossians 2: 12, "You are buried, with him in baptism." That is a plain transaction. Any one learned or unlearned can tell when that is done. Rom. 6: 4, says, "We are buried with him by baptism." Any man can tell whether that is done or not, if he is an eye witness, if he is only present. What followed after baptism? Philip and the eunuch "came up out of the water, and as a result the body was washed with water." Heb. 10: 22. Hence we argue that, Philip, with a view to full obedience to his divine Master, and with the true, literal and corporeal meaning of the word baptizo before his mind, conducted the eunuch into—the water. After they were in the water, he, in the awful name of the Trinity, baptized or buried him in baptism, after which he led him "up out of the water."

This utterly refutes the idea advanced by you, and the act we are describing forms quite a contrast to some of the baptisms you profess to perform. Philip found the water in its native place. When you baptize, you do not go, like he did, "unto the water," but have a little water brought unto you. You do not bury in baptism, as he did, but sprinkle a little water upon the child or candidate. You do not, like Philip, come up out of the water after baptism, for you never get into the water, on baptism occasions, as he did. You are too afraid of water. Are you not Dr.? Is not that it? or are you ashamed of it? You do not see, as a result of the baptism you perform, as Philip did, the body of the believer washed with water. And another difference between the persons you baptize and those Philip baptized, is, that his convert was immersed, while yours are sprinkled upon. The one he baptized went on his way rejoicing, while the greater number of those you baptize, do not rejoice, for want of the knowledge on their part, that they are baptized. The mind of the one Philip baptized was forever settled on the subject of baptism. He lived and died rejoicing, so far as the action on baptism was concerned. This you cannot say of many of those you baptize. Whenever they hear or read anything on the subject of baptism, their minds are harassed with doubts and fears as to whether they have been baptized or not. Many of them, by force of surroundings, never change, but live on in a dissatisfied state of mind. Others break loose and go to Baptist churches and make application for admission into the church. They make a confession of faith, as the eunuch did. They and the minister go "unto the water," after they come "unto the water," they proceed like Philip and the officer "down into the water." The believer is then buried in baptism, after which they come "up out of the water" and the body is "washed with water," and like the eunuch he goes on his way rejoicing, not a doubt or cloud gathers around his mind. And amid all the preaching Pedobaptists may do, on this or any other soil, his mind will remain, as far as the action in baptism is concerned, calm and serene. And you will admit that his baptism, trine immersion, makes him infallibly safe for all time and eternity.

A STRING OF FACTS.

The Island of Cyprus—A Bonnet Show—About Marrying—Ministerial Authority—What Faith Accepts—Innovations Forbidden—Literal Hell, Literal Devil—Do you believe Any thing?

THE Island of Cyprus, which recently passed into the hands of England, will be remembered by Biblical students as being the place through which the apostle Paul passed, and where he converted the Roman Governor Sergius Paulus. Barnabas was a native of this island. Through its present occupation it is recovering something of its long-lost fame.

Not long since the "ladies" of Clay county, Mo., held a "Bonnet Show." The day was not at all a pleasant one, for an occasional shower came passing along, making the "show" a little damp. But it was bonnet-day in Clay county, and all the gay ones of "Little Shoal Creek" and "Big Shoal Creek" came forth to exhibit their head-dresses. The feud originated between two Baptist congregations in the above named places, several years ago, and has not been permitted to die to this day. "On the first Saturday and Sunday in May the Baptists on Little Shoal Creek have a 'Bonnet Show.' This is a picnic at which the ladies appear in the best bonnets their means and Kansas City milliners can produce. The young men come there of course, and not a few carriage loads of young gentlemen and ladies from Kansas City and adjoining cities attend. Big Shoal Creek meeting-house holds its 'Bonnet Show' on the second Saturday and Sunday in May, and then there is a sensation all over the country, for Big Shoal Creek has seldom been surpassed for bonnets." It is said that people for miles come there to look at each other's bonnets, and while the preacher holds forth the law set forth in the Gospel, the "ladies" criticize each other's spring bonnets.—Verily the world has got fast hold of those congregations. To go to meeting and sit and gaze at another's dress—to envy and whisper—to find fault with others and to imitate style, is to sin with open eyes. God forbid that any of our readers—yea, any who have been born of the incorruptible seed, should peril their souls by impure motives—impure actions, and bonnet shows.

Never marry a man who has only his love for you to recommend him. It is very fascinating, but it does not make the man. If he is not otherwise what he should be, you will never be happy. The most perfect man who did not love you should never be your husband. But though marriage without love is terrible, love only will not do. If the man is dishonorable to other men, or mean, or given to any vice, the time will come when you will either loathe him or sink to his level. It is hard to remember, amid kisses and praises, that there is anything else in the world to be thought of but love-making; but the days of life are many, and the husband must be a guide to be trusted—a companion, a friend, as well as a lover. Many a girl has married a man whom she knew to be anything but good, because he loved her so. And the flame has died out on the hearth-stone of home before long, and beside it there has been sitting one that she could never hope would lead her heavenward, or who if she followed him as a wife should, would guide her steps to perdition. Marriage is a solemn thing—a choice for life; be careful in choosing.—Helgraven.

No minister has a right to reprove, rebuke, exhort, comfort, and warn without Divine authority. He has no authority of his own to interfere for good. All his authority comes from God and as long as he acts within the limits, his brethren and sisters are, by the same authority, under obligations to hear him. They are as much under obligation to come and hear him as he is to come and deal out spiritual food. Their relations are mutual—one depends on the other. The Divine command is, "Feed the flock of God, which is among you, taking the oversight thereof, not only by constraint, but willingly, not for filthy lucre, but of a ready mind, neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being examples to the flock." Body demonstration is needed. Love and respect to each other is required, and while he receives it, if he believes himself in and out of the church of God.

FAITH accepts whatever the Lord says without doubt or evasion. Reader, do you believe the Lord Jesus, or are you floating about among the mists and doubts of sectism? Come out squarely and say whether you are for or against the regulation that came by Jesus Christ. Or have you come with a load of innovations—with a map of prepared revolutionary matters—with a loud-sounding trumpet of "Reform!"—with a high-sounding voice proclaiming your determination to turn things over in general? Is this your mission? If you wish to become noted—if you aim to have the eternal praise instead of the transient praise, why not strike out on the meek way, in the humble foot-steps of the Master, who made Himself of no reputation? Why not become noted for the enforcement of the Gospel that came by grace?—the only rule of faith and practice that is absolutely right? The man who manifests great zeal and performs much labor to push forward something not at all mentioned in the law of the Lord, seldom finds a calm and sweet end.—He who persistently aims to enforce an innovation upon the people of God, usually goes down covered only with his innovation. We are limited by a law; and more, we are limited by Divine law. No man is authorized to go beyond the Divine law nor to stop short of it. Let everyone, therefore, be careful what he presses into the body, for God's people are free and no man has Divine authority to put them in bondage.

No hell? Who says so? Turn to the Divine Record. Does it say there is no literal fire? "Jesus did not say so, nor make any such explanation. We take it as He gave it, and leave it as He left it. Let there be no caviling about literal fire, nor any other backing down; but stand by the language of Jesus, and maintain it.—Was it literal death that fell upon Adam and his posterity? Was it literal water that deluged the earth? Was it literal sea that overwhelmed the Egyptians and drowned them? Was it literal fire that burned up Korah, Dathan and Abiram, and their comrades in rebellion against Moses, which was also against God? Was it literal earth that opened and swallowed them down? Was it literal fire that destroyed Sodom? Were they literal serpents that bit the Israelites? Was that mighty calamity that fell on the Jews at the destruction of the devoted city, the type of the eternal judgment, literal or were all these figurative? What were they figures of? Be careful about tampering with the Divine penalties. Strengthen not the hands of sinners, and make not the heart of the righteous sad, by promising the wicked life.

But I do not believe there is any literal, local hell burning with fire and brimstone," says a man. Do you believe there is any hell at all? If you do, what is it? If not literal, what then? If not local, it is no place, and has no existence.—Is that what you mean? Did our Lord mean anything by the gehennim of fire prepared for the devil and his angels? If he did, what was it? When a man is thus backed down by Universalists and infidels, he is nothing, and his preaching is nothing. Remember what Jesus says of him who shall be ashamed of Him and His Word.

But I do not believe there is any literal, personal devil. What then? a devil that is not literal, not personal, nobody? Do you believe there is any literal, personal Satan? any literal, local heaven? Do you believe anything? M. M. F.

REMEMBER that we send a copy free of Bro. Stern's Non-Continuity to each old subscriber who will send us one new subscriber and $1.75. Subscriptions to commence Oct. 1st, and end Dec. 31st, 1878. Always state whether you want the pamphlet when sending in the name. A number are availing themselves of this offer in order to get the pamphlet.

BROTHER J. W. BEER is publishing a pamphlet entitled, "A Summary of Religious Faith and Practice," the advanced sheets of which have been received and examined. From what we have read, we would infer that it will be an interesting work.

The October number of the Home Mirror contains an interesting account of Bro. Flory's ascent of Long's Peak—or being above the clouds—trout fishing, etc. A copy free to all who apply for it. Address, "Home Mirror," Longmont, Colo.

We have made arrangements with several special contributors, in different parts of the brotherhood, to keep our readers posted on the religious work in and around their fields of labor, and hope the brethren and sisters, who live near these contributors, will aid them in gathering such matter for the paper as may be interesting and profitable.

BROTHER Eshelman, in company with Bro. Bashor, left Lanark last Friday morning for Southern Illinois. Bro. E. expects to spend some days with the Brethren in Christian, Sangamon and Macoupin counties, and also attend their district meeting, to be held Oct. 8th, in Macoupin county. Bro. Bashor is called to that part of the State to hold several series of meetings, and will return here some time in October.

SOME of our readers are mistaken in supposing that the BRETHREN AT WORK is sent to outsiders for one dollar per year. The price of the paper to outsiders is the same as to others, but in order to circulate the truth as much as possible among those who are not members, and do not feel disposed to subscribe, we are working up a fund to be applied to sending the paper to such, if the names are furnished us, and take but one dollar out of that fund for each name to whom the paper is thus sent.

BROTHER Bashor's book entitled, "The Gospel Hammer," is now completed, and orders will be promptly filled. The work advocates and maintains the doctrine of Christ, the infallible Word of truth, as viewed and practiced by the Brethren. The style of reasoning is clear and forcible; and the way brother Bashor strikes at sin, unbelief and corruption, no doubt many will conclude that the "hammer," has truly come up before their faces. If you would know all about its contents, the arguments and conclusions, send fifty cents to this office and we will forward it, post-paid, to any part of the United States or Canada. Owing to the low price of the book, no agents will be employed in its sale, nor will the book be sold on credit.

If you would advance the cause of religion, please do not abuse and talk unbecomingly about young ministers, for some of them are very easily discouraged, and have a heavy burden to bear at best. Better stand under their arms and help them along. They need your assistance and all the encouraging words they can get. Let us bear in mind that all our aged veterans, and able defenders of the truth, were once young men, and perhaps some of them a little fast, but by careful handling have been made useful proclaimers of the Word. If we would talk and pray more with young preachers, and thus endeavor to assist them in some of their arduous duties, instead of talking about and spreading their faults, it would be far better for both them and us. Let those who are strong, labor to restore and strengthen the weak.

ECHOES FROM THE EAST.

NUMBER VI.

A lost one found—A church business meeting—Sunday services near and in Waynesboro—The suffering remembered.

[From Our Special Correspondent.]

IN our last we neglected to echo the news of joy that on Sunday, the 8th, one more soul was added to them that love the Lord. May our sister in Christ have abundant grace to endure the hardships of the life of faith, and at last come up with all the faithful to hear the sweet greeting from the Master: "Well done—enter thou into the joys of thy Lord."

A special council being appointed for the 12th inst., the church came together to dispose of its business. The morning threatened rain, but the day passed away with favorable weather.—The ministering and visiting brethren met at 8:30 A. M., to receive and arrange the business for the meeting, according to the Annual Meeting Minutes of 1872, Art. 7, and of 1877, Art. 6.

The council was opened at 9:30 A. M., by singing the 320th hymn, and exhortation to prayer by our loved elder, saying among other words that "we are accountable to God for our doings in the deliberations of this day, and need to ask the Lord's aid and direction." Prayer being offered we sang the very significant lines:

"Guide me, O, Thou great Jehovah,
Pilgrim through this barren land;
I am weak, but Thou art mighty,
Hold me with Thy powerful hand."

An introductory was delivered by the elder, stating that we had come together to transact church business in the fear of the Lord—that no one should have sinister views—that we should seek the welfare of each other and the welfare of the church—that love should control us,—and if so, our meeting would be both pleasant and profitable.

Over a hundred members were present, and the day's work was done with much unanimity, and a more general good feeling than might have been expected. Much important business was disposed of, some of which we could note with profit for many readers, if we felt allowed to make mention. Some people speak against council meetings, but we have this to say, that when these meetings are held in the fear to do evil and the love to do well, they are the very safe-guards of the church. The authority exercised should be that vested in the Body of Christ by the Head, Himself; and when used to maintain the distinctive features of the church and its doctrines, and dissipate elements that would prove to be reproaches and distresses, the duty of the Body has only then been discharged. Thus shall the church everywhere preserve her integrity with God and men.

On Sunday last (the 15th) our regular meeting for Divine services was at the Price meeting-house. Hymn 424 opened the services. Few hymns are more beautifully comprehensive.—After exhortation and prayer, a visiting brother, by request, read Gal. 6. A ministering brother then made choice of the 10th verse, and we drew the following inferences:

- The subject was
DOING GOOD.
1. Our opportunity—"Let us," etc.
2. Our impartiality—"To all men."
3. Our special care—"The household of Faith."

Remarks by another minister followed and the 145th hymn was sung, and the meeting closed in the usual manner.

In the evening we attended our meeting in town. The 145th hymn was offered, and after prayer a minister spoke on Heb. 12: 2. We had pleasant reflections, O, that we could all look with unclouded vision of faith onto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our Faith.—Let each study to see the "weight" that hinders us on our journey, and lay it aside in the Name of the Great King of Glory, and then look unto Him, and we shall "dwell in peace," and receive the crown. The 65th hymn was sung, (see 2nd verse), and at dismissal, a remainder was announced that there is good suffering and want at the South among the Yellow-Kever victims. After being dismissed not a few members came forward and contributed for the need of the sufferers. May the Lord open the hearts of all His children!

Peace be with you all in Christ,

PREPARE FOR ETERNITY.

BY C. RABSHART.

THE wisdom of God is beyond the comprehension of mortal man. We can only trace man from the cradle to the grave; he closes his eyes in death; his spirit goes to God who gave it. It is then beyond the reach of the human mind. Paul, in speaking to the Romans, says: "O, the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God; how unsearchable are His judgments and His ways past finding out. For who hath known the mind of the Lord, or who hath been His counselor?" When we reflect upon the countless number of spirits that have gone to eternity, our minds are carried away with wonder and amazement. Eternity! O, eternity! What a thought! This life is only as a moment compared to that of eternity; and yet how unconcerned, and how thoughtlessly are we living! We live as though death would never come. Oh! could we realize the fact that every breath and every throb of the heart, is one of the numberless it would prompt us to a greater degree of self-consideration. Soon, soon will we be numbered with the millions that are now sleeping in the dust. How true,

"Time is winging us away
To our eternal home,
Life is but a water's day,
A journey to the tomb."

Yes, it is a decree long gone forth that it is appointed unto man once to die. Death is a thing we look upon as a mighty terror, and yet we are all hastening to the tomb, and there is no escape. Kind reader are you in a prepared state? If you should be called to meet it, can you step off into the dark confines of eternity with the hope that should characterize the children of God? "Which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast, and which entereth into that within the veil," (Heb. 6: 19). Oh! what a happy thought to the true child of God, to realize the fact that if he has dedicated his life to the service of God, there is happiness beyond the grave! Oh! brethren and sisters, let us all try, by the help of the divine grace of God, to devote our life more and more to the service of God. If we are in full possession of that true and genuine faith, repentance and baptism, we should press forward with greater zeal and energy for the cause of our great Redeemer, for the crown is not at the beginning, neither in the middle, but at the end. Our prayer to God is that we may all attain unto that rest that remaineth to the children of God, there to meet and enjoy the presence of loved ones long gone before.

COULD JESUS BE TOUCHED?

[From the Bible Beacon.]

WE learn from Matt. 28: 9 that this same Mary Magdalene and another Mary did both touch him. This is the record: "And they came and held him by the feet, and worshipped him."

From a careful examination of this subject, I became long since satisfied that John is made to speak incorrectly when we read, "Jesus saith unto her, Touch me not; for I have not yet ascended to my Father," etc. The same reason existed why two persons should not touch Him, that did why one should not. The same reason should have prevented Thomas and all others to whom he extended the privilege; and hence no such opportunity would have been afforded, unless we are prepared to believe that it was all a mere pretence of Christ; i. e. that he offered a test of his personal identity that he did not intend to allow. There may be those who can believe this—I do not.

What should John say? Simply this: "Jesus saith unto her, Cling not to me, but go tell my brethren," etc. This view, or this reading, will harmonize the 17th verse not only with the 27th, but with all the passages referred to, especially Matt. 28: 9; and there is no other way that I can see to do it.

I believe such a reading of the text is allowable by the original. A. DREWER.

A HOME IN HEAVEN.

BY JULIA STOFFER.

Oh! what a joyful thought! Who does not want a home in heaven? Not one in all this world that does not; and we dear sisters who have just enlisted in the battle of the Lord, strive hard to win that home, although we have many trials and temptations to endure here; but if we hold out faithful ours will be a home in heaven, and there we shall not have trials and temptations. No, no more sorrows, no more tears. But who are they who have a home in heaven? All on earth? No, only those who do the will of God. Oh, it pains my heart when I think of so many who are so near and dear to us, and are not preparing themselves for that beautiful home, but are out in the dark, dark world, walking in the ways of sin. Oh, if I could persuade all to go with us, and walk that narrow way, and then inherit that beautiful home in heaven that God has prepared for all His children. Our earthly home is only momentary and our heavenly home is eternity. There we shall live forever. O, just think for one moment, dear friends, although you have all you desire here on earth, you will have to leave it all, and then if you will not that hope of a home in heaven, what will it profit you? Nothing at all. The poor, although they have scarcely a home here on earth, if they only prepare themselves, they shall have a home in heaven, for there is neither rich nor poor, but are all made alike. So let us all strive to reach that home.

"A home in heaven, what a joyful thought,
As the poor man treads on his weary bed,
His heart oppressed and with anguish driven,
From his home below to his home in heaven."

"A home in heaven, when our friends are dead,
To the cheerful gleam of the smiling dead,
We wait in hope on the promise given,
We will meet up there in our home in heaven."

SWEARING.

BY J. H. SULL.

WONDER if the young readers of the Brethren at Work know what a sin it is to swear? I hope they do, as it is the duty of parents to teach their children when young, what a sin it is to indulge in such a degrading habit, and how God forbids them to swear. He says, "Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord in vain." Swear not at all, but let your communications be yea, yea, and nay, nay, for whatsoever is more than this, cometh of evil. Some little boys are so unfortunate as not to have parents to teach them of the wisdom and goodness of God, and how wicked it is to swear; but if they read and obey the commandments of their heavenly Parent they will never swear.

Oh! how it must grieve the tender heart of Jesus when he hears boys and men swearing.— Surely His wrath will be kindled against them; and if they do not repent, they will have to suffer the penalty of a just law, for He says, "Every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened to a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand; and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell; and great was the fall of it." When a young man swears in the presence of respectable society, he is looked upon as one of a low, degraded class of people, and it is just as wicked for a man to swear in secret, as in public; because there is One that hears him, whose Word will judge him at the great day of judgment.— It makes one shudder to hear the oaths that are uttered by some old men. Therefore never swear while you are young, for if you do, it will be hard for you to quit when you are old, and likely you will never quit, and the consequence is, you will be lost forever.

AMEN,—SO BE IT.

BY W. J. H. BAUMAN.

WHAT is what we feel to say to Bro. Moore's late article on Annual Meeting. The Christian religion is for, and in the hands of, the common people. It is especially adapted to their wants; and to leave it in their hands is safe, and is leaving it where it belongs. Officers are necessary in the church, but not to lord it over God's heritage, but to enforce the will of the church. The church, and not an assembly of Bishops and Elders, is the pillar and ground of the truth. The history of the church in the past proves that when too much power is vested in a few, because of official rank, corruption is the result.

Solomon says, "In multitude of counselors there is safety," and our prayer is that the time may never come in our beloved fraternity, when the doors of our general council will become closed against the masses of the church. We hope that a spirit of rebellion will manifest itself on the part of the masses in the church against such an invasion of their rights. The poisonous fangs of the viper are secreted in the doctrine of submitting the government of the church into the hands of a chosen few. Priestcraft and corruption will be the inevitable result. In all free governments, officers are servants, not lords. Where the spirit of God dwells, there is liberty.—liberty for all.

A FEW THOUGHTS ON EDUCATION.

BY JAMES M. NEFF.

WE must educate, if we want to live a happy life, for what is the life of the uneducated? It must be a life of loneliness and sorrow to those who cannot read or write. Then we should remember that youth is the seed-time of life, and when God blesses us with such glorious opportunities as we have to improve our time and obtain an education, we think it is a sin to spend our time in idleness and play. We should be very thankful to God, who has blessed us with these blessings; but instead of that we know boys and girls who spend most of their time in idleness. We are afraid that such boys and girls, when they rise to manhood and womanhood, will reap the harvest of idleness. It would not be so necessary to educate, if when we see that we have not improved our time as we should, we could recall it and better it.— But as this is not the case, we should improve every moment of our lives to the very best of our ability.

We think it is the will of God that we should educate, for how could we serve the Lord if we did not? It would be impossible. If we could not read, how could we learn His holy will? Some one might think we could go to church, and there learn the law of the Lord; but the Scripture says we should take the Word of God for the man of our counsel. We think it is all right and our duty to go to church, but we should not have too much confidence in the minister until we find out whether the words which he has spoken are in accordance with the Word of God or not. But how shall we find out? We cannot without education. Since we know that we cannot serve the Lord without education, it should create joy in our hearts that we have such opportunities. But how are we to get an education? Shall we sit down and say, "Come to me?" I answer, no, but we must go to work and study our books whenever we have an opportunity. I do not believe there ever was a lazy man or woman, who was a true Christian or had an education. We must educate, if we want to rise in the love and respect of society. Those who are improperly bred are, as a general thing, of a low and degraded class of people. How many of the rising generation would like to become men and women in this condition? We do not think there are any. If this be the case, we should study very diligently while we have the opportunity.

I am only sixteen years of age, but I came out from among the world, and am trying to serve the Lord. I hope the brethren will pray for me, that I may live a quiet and a peaceful life in all godliness and honesty.

A FEW WORDS ON FEMALE EDUCATION.

Translated from the German by F. H. Lehman.]

GIVE your daughters a thorough education. Teach them to prepare a nourishing diet. Teach them to wash, to iron, to darn stockings, to sew on buttons, to make their own dresses. Teach them to bake bread, and that a good kitchen lessens the apothecary's account. Teach them that one dollar is one hundred cents, that one only lays up money whose expenses are less than his income, and that all grow poor who have to spend more than they receive. Teach them that a calico dress paid for, fits better than a silken one unpaid for. Teach them that a full, round face displays a greater luster than fifty consumptive beauties. Teach them to wear strong shoes. Teach them to purchase, and to see that the account corresponds with the purchase. Teach them that they ruin God's image by tight lacing. Teach them good, common sense, self-trust, self-help, and industry. Teach them that an honest mechanic in his working dress is a better object of our esteem than a dozen haughty, finely dressed idlers. Teach them gardening and the pleasures of nature. Teach them, if you can afford it, music, painting, and all other arts, but consider these as secondary objects only. Teach them that a walk is more salutary than a ride in a carriage; and that wild flowers are a worthy object of admiration. Teach them to reject with disdain all appearances; and to use only yes or no in good earnest. Teach that the happiness of matrimony depends neither on external appearance nor on wealth, but on the man's character. If you have instructed your daughters in these principles, and they have comprehended them, fearlessly allow them to marry, —they will make their way through the world.

Nothing is meant than a wretch of state,
The happy only are the truly great."

CORRESPONDENCE.

From Georgia.

Dear Brethren:—
YOUR paper, card and circulars reached me a few days ago. Thanks for the same. It is the first of your papers I have ever had the pleasure of seeing. As to myself I have been living in this State nearly nine years, although it does not seem that length of time. I moved here from Beaver Dam congregation, Frederick Co., Maryland. Said church is presided over by Bro. Isaac Pfontz, Bro. D. K. Saylor and others. I have been a member thirty years. I hope to grow stronger in faith as I near my journey's end. There is a brother living seventy miles from here in Madison, Morgan Co., Ga. His name is Emanuel Heyser, from Green Tree church, Pennsylvania. I visited him five years ago in July, on which occasion he baptized my youngest daughter and made her very happy indeed, though her privileges as a church member are not within reach, she has never regretted that she has done her duty so far. Her husband is a Catholic and very much opposed to her joining our church, but she has, in the face of all trials and oppositions, kept the faith and has in some measure, overcome the violence of his opposition; nevertheless it is hard to hear. I also heard of a brother living in Rutledge, Georgia, between this and Madison, but I have never met him and have forgotten the name, but no doubt brother Heyser knows his name. The church here has never been heard of so far. We have distributed papers; some seem interested and some not, but that there could be much good done here, I have no doubt. The people nearly all are church goers, and the principal churches are the Methodists, Presbyterians and Missionary Baptists. I don't know that they differ much from Methodists, except that they immerse once backward, and the Methodists do the same if the candidate requests it. There is also another sect, called Primitive Baptists or generally Hardshell Baptists; they wash feet at Communion, which they hold in May and August. They are little thought of, as they are not considered of much character. Don't understand me to say it is their religion. There may be churches of that denomination in the South, but none about here. In the city of Atlanta there are all denominations.

There is a delightful climate here, don't think it can be surpassed by many places. The warm weather is always tempered by cool breezes and cool nights.

SARAH HARE.

From Iowa Centre, Iowa.

OUR Love-feast is now past. We had an unusually good meeting and very largely attended; some two hundred members present, and a mixed multitude of from 1,000 to 1,200. A very efficient corps of ministerial help.—One very unpleasant feature to me during the meeting, was the fact that we had not prepared room enough for all the members present to be seated at the tables, a fact which brought to mind the ample provisions that have been made to celebrate the great ante-type fore-shadowed by the Lord's Supper. How comforting to know that none will need there to sit back for want of room, but perhaps multitudes may sit back for want of preparation; the want of a wedding garment. Our beloved brother Lemuel Hillery, very unexpectedly dropped in among us yesterday, (Saturday) and lays over until Monday; preached last night a telling discourse to an attentive audience, on the "Power of God's word." Brother W. J. H. Bauman of Nora Springs, has been conducting a series of meetings for us through the past week. Five precious souls so far, have signified a willingness to take up the cross,—to day we expect to see several more make the good confession. We have announced, that baptism will be administered this afternoon. We have a bright prospect for a large ingathering. The church in love and peace.

A Few Thoughts.

THERE is a proposition before the legislative committee to pass a law prohibiting the prevalent practice of "treating." If such a law was enacted and then enforced, it would remove one of the greatest promulgators of intemperate drinking.—Primitive Christian, May 9th.

Legislatures and Committees will seriously entertain propositions and pass laws to prohibit the manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks and then adjourn to go to the saloon and take their social glass together. Well, gentlemen when you stop the devil by grasping his horns, be so kind as to drop me a line. The recipe to stop the manufacture and sale of intoxicating beverages—to prevent drunkenness in the land—to remove every drinking saloon from the United States and to sweep away all the curses that follow, is rendered at once simple and easy, and these italicized words are true as Gospel, which I will send to any address for the small sum of— Now right here is a chance to make money, but I forbear. "Freely ye have received, freely give."

Here is the recipe: Let every young man and every young woman and every old man and every old woman stop pouring liquor down their throats and stop their children from doing so.

JAMES L. SWITZER.

From Lamotte Prairie, Ill.

NOT having seen any notice of the death of Absalom Hyer, I feel it due to his memory, that his death should be published in the denomination paper. He died suddenly on the 28th of August, 1878. He was taken with cramp in his limbs about 11 A. M. and was a corpse before 1 P. M. of the same day. He was conscious to the last, and died in full hope of a blessed immortality. He was born August 14th, 1814, and died August 28th, 1878. His sufferings were greater than I ever before witnessed, and continued from the time he was taken sick till death came to his relief, with occasionally a few minutes of rest. During one of these intervals, about fifteen minutes before he died, he said, I have a desire to depart and be with Christ. He was bishop of the Lamotte Prairie church, his charge extended also over the Allison Prairie and Cumberland churches. His death has cast a gloom over the entire community, especially over the churches under his charge, to whom he was justly regarded as a father. The place he has left vacant will be hard to fill.

Letter to A Sister.

IT is truly amazing what conjunctions of events and agencies Divine Providence effects. How little did the brutal Roman soldier think he was fulfilling prophecy, when he wantonly thrust his spear into the side of the God-man's corpse. How little did I think that my pinching wants of stationary and postal necessities co-existed with a painful struggle in the bosom of a saint two thousand miles distant, as to the disposition of the title she had consecrated to the Lord. The higher superintendence was so shaped, that you came to a decision just at the time I was awaiting God's raven with his beak full of heaven's currency. Your bounty will be converted into an essay in behalf of the extension of the kingdom of soul and righteousness and purity. If half of the members would open their beings without reserve to the Divine direction, how many a morsel would reach the needy; how many a raven would wing his flight to some lonely dweller on the banks of Cherith. Had I but all that is spent in the brotherhood for demoralizing life-curtailling superfluities, how many a crumb of heaven's loaf, and I might scatter among the hungry. God is not stinted in resources, but the ravens are wanting. Love is essentially, self-oblivious and self-sacrificing. A true cross-born love, is ever filling and feasting itself by distribution. Thousands in the church are afraid to take God at his word; they have not yet learned the lesson of Pi-habioth, and thousands never will. Ex. 14. The "Go forward" of the 15th verse is the great test of faith in such an apparently hopeless dilemma. Blessed and honored are the noble believing few.

Our Mission to Indiana.

I LEFT home on Friday, August 20th. We took the morning train for Indiana, but had a call at Van West, by M. C. Elson, of that place, who met us at the depot, and kindly escorted us to his residence, where we had the pleasure of talking some length of time, on the all-important subject, the salvation of the soul. We then made arrangements to meet him at Lima, which was done on Saturday, Sept. 14th, and on the following day, our regular meeting, received him into the fold of Christ by baptism according to the Gospel. On Monday morning we took brother Elson to the train, which he took for his place of abode, rejoicing that he had found a precious friend in the person of Jesus, our only Savior. Hope he may prove faithful and in the end, hear the happy welcome "Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." On account of delicate health, his companion could not come with him, but her desire is, as soon as she can, she will also enter the fold of Christ. In the afternoon of Aug. 30th, I again took the train at Van West for North Manchester, Indiana, where I was met by my brother-in-law and sister Cupp, who conveyed me to Eld. Jacob Kearns', who had been complaining for some days; however we had quite a pleasant interview together for a short season. Being again refreshed by a very plentiful repast, we were soon found at the church, where our late A. M. was held. Here we had a pleasant season of worship. After services, we were again conveyed by our brother-in-law to his residence. Next morning met with the Brethren of the Eel River and adjoining churches to look after the business assigned to us by the late A. M., but on account of some delay, Bro. R. H. Miller did not arrive until about noon. But in his absence, we made every arrangement necessary for the business of the meeting. Soon in the afternoon, being fully organized, we entered the arduous labors of the day, but as there seemed to be much business before us, we appointed a night session, which we continued at a late hour; then after committing ourselves into the care of an All-wise Creator, we dispersed through rain and mud; however some of us soon found ourselves snugly housed from the inclement weather in carriages of our Brethren, who conveyed us to the house of Bro. C. Fruit, our relative. The next morning, Sunday Sept. 1st, we were again separated, some going North some South and some West to fill the several appointments made by the Brethren of the Eel River and surrounding churches. Thus after spending the Lord's day in the service of the Lord, and we trust to the honor of his great name, after being cared for by the brethren and being refreshed by a good night's rest, we again met at the above named church, and in the evening at about half past four o'clock, we had our report made out and then read it to the church. But just here my time expired and before submitting the report to the church for its approval or rejection, I was kindly conveyed to the R. R. station, where at half past six I took the train for Lower Deer Creek church, Carroll Co., Ind., where on Tuesday the 3rd of Sept., we again met with the committee, appointed by A. M. to investigate the matter concerning the division or dividing lines of two churches, which had been established in the year 1841; but circumstances having changed things so as to seem necessary to make some changes, the committee took considerable pains to look into the matter. In the afternoon about four o'clock, we made out and read our report to the church or churches and it was unanimously agreed to by all present.

Thus having spent the day among the members of these churches and finding such a union of sentiment in that, of receiving our report, we thought it was good for us to be there. May God grant his blessings among these churches, and may the result of our labor be a means of a continuation of union and fellowship among them is our prayer. Amen.

On the next morning, Sept. 14th, we were conveyed to the R. R. station, when we took the train, and the same evening arrived home; found all well, praise the Lord.

DANIEL BROWER.

GLEANINGS.

From Portland, Oregon.—On last Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 7th and 8th, brother David Brower held a meeting at the Orient school-house, sixteen miles East of Portland, being the second meeting the Brethren ever held in that vicinity. All seemed to have an anxiety in hearing the Word preached. On Monday morning one brother was received in the church, by baptism and one more made application to be received into the church. We have five members here. God help us so to live that others may see our good work and join in with us to serve God and glorify his name.

JOSEPH HEINRY.

From Samuel Murray.—I visited an uncle of mine eighty-three years old, and a sister of mine seventy-seven years old. She is quite active for her age. Visited two brothers and many other relatives, did not find them all enjoying good health, some being afflicted with chronic diseases, cannot ever expect to get much better; others who had fevers were convalescent. Our visit in Ohio was short but pleasant, and will be long remembered by me. Did not preach much in Ohio; we have visited a good many churches since we started on our visit. We think they all need a good tonic of the Holy Spirit, and the love of God to excite the Christian life a little more. O may God help all of us to wake up to a full sense of our duties each one in his and her place, is my prayer. I came here to a Communion in the Bear Creek arm of church, in Jay Co., Ind. Met quite a number of ministers at this meeting, some from Ohio and some from different parts of Indiana. Thomas Wenrich, from Ohio is their Elder here. The church was only organized about one year ago, are numbering some fifty; had selected brother Daniel Waltz to the ministry at the time of organization, and A. Cable, deacon. At this meeting a choice was held for one minister and two deacons; the lot for speaker fell on Bro. Eli Renner, and for deacons on Henry Gurner and Daniel Renner. Brother Waltz was advanced to the second degree of the ministry. Their members all being present, they were all received in their respective offices at the same time, which made the scene very solemn. May God bless them and enable them to fully appreciate the responsibilities of their offices, and enable them to fully discharge the duties in their respective offices. This is my first visit to this church. I must say so far, I have enjoyed my visit. The acquaintances I have made with brethren and sisters are pleasant. I expect to preach for them this evening and tomorrow at ten A. M. Our Communion will be on the 3rd of Oct.; we hope the ministering brethren will come and help us.

From Lydia C. Lesh.—At our new home and not having the privilege of meeting with brethren and sisters in worship, we would love to hear what is done in the good cause. Your paper is a welcome visitor in our broken family. We feel that we need help here. Other denominations are stronger in number but few that profess to take the Word of God in its purity. Remember us in your prayers, and when any of the Brethren are traveling to preach the Word, we would be glad if they could stop a few days and help to build up this once-promising church. You that travel in the missionary cause remember us. We live near Goshen, Clermont Co., Ohio.

From James V. Heckler.—Church news are scarce. We cannot speak of sinners turning to God at present. Seasons of drouth will come over the country for awhile, but after the soil has been parched, there come, also, seasons of copious rains. The same is applicable to the church. We have the Word preached with power sometimes, but it seems as though summer's hearts were callous and unable to receive the truth. We must therefore wait for a season of spiritual rain, when the hearts will be moistened and the truth shall take root. Our church district has been divided; the territory was too large for convenience. The Indian Creek Church included parts of four counties, namely: Montgomery, Bucks, Northampton and Lehigh. But now the new district, called Springfield, includes parts of the three latter counties. There is no church of the Brethren further North than the latter, but there are thousands of precious souls, bought with the same price as we have been, sitting in darkness, worshipping idols and holding the traditions of men, North of the Springfield district.

From Hiram Berkman.—Sister Samantha Beebe departed this life July 12th, aged about forty years. She was a faithful sister. Our Communion was held on the 10th of August. Many spectators were present, and trust great good was done. Health not so good this fall, as many have chills and fever. Are doing what we can to maintain the Master's cause here in Monroe Co., Iowa, and find our Master a sure support in time of need.

From Union Church, Plymouth, Ind.—Gothome, to-day from a Communion meeting in the Brecken district of church, Marshall Co., Ind. The meeting was a good one. We believe the Lord was with us while we were together. Two were added to the church, by baptism. The Love-feast was held where the Brethren never had any such meetings before.

Had very good order. The health is good in our country. Crops are good, and we have nothing to complain of but ourselves, not being half thankful enough for the blessings the good Lord bestows on us poor mortals.—Dear brethren and sisters let us all labor a little more, for the good of souls, and God will be honored, and we will lay up treasures in heaven, which is worth more than this world. I do hope the members will all subscribe for BRETHREN AT WORK and get all others that are not members to take the paper, as the debate is to be published, and we believe Bro. Stein is able to defend the truth, and the truth will make us free, and this we want all to see.

JOHN KNISLEY.

"Any University College or Academy, that may become a body corporate, under the provision of this act, the property of which is not derived by donation, gift, devise or subscription, but is owned by individuals in shape of stock, subscribed or taken. The owner of said stock shall be individually liable for the debts of said corporation to the amount of their stock respectively, and also in a sum equal thereto, over and above the amount of their said stock.—Provided that the trustees or directors of any corporation organized under the provision of this act; the property of which is not owned by individuals, in the shape of stock subscribed or taken, is held upon trust, or derived by devise, donation gift or subscription, shall not contract any indebtedness beyond the actual means or assets of said corporation. The trustees or directors so contracting, shall be held liable in their undivided capacity for the payment of the same; but the property of said corporation shall first be exhausted."

It will be seen from the above law, that all subscribers are only responsible for what they subscribe, and the trustees for all their contracts over and above what is donated or subscribed. Under this act the Ashland College was chartered. Some of the leading lawyers of Ashland say that there is no law to compel any one but trustees to pay more than their subscription. WILLIAM SADLER.

SHAM.—In the same congregation, in Wayne Co., Ohio, Sept. 6th, Sarah Sham, wife of John Sham, aged 70 years, 9 months and three days.

She was a consistent member of the Mennonite church for many years. She was the mother of sixteen children and had seventy-seven grand children and 19 great grand children. Funeral occasion from Rev. 14: 13.

FUNDT.—In Dupage Co., Ill., Aug. 6th, Jacob Fundt, aged 75 years, two months and 5 days.

He was born in Elizabeth township, Lancaster Co., Pa., June 1st, 1803. He usually drove a one-horse wagon, and endeavored one morning to take his son, Samuel out in the country, a distance of three and one half miles to his son Simons', which he did. On his return home, nearing the railroad track his horse took fright, turning short around, threw him out of the wagon upon his head. When found he had one line in his hand but was unconscious, dying fifteen hours afterward. In 1856 with his family, emigrated to Illinois, Dupage Co., where he remained until his death. He was a consistent member of the Mennonite church for the last forty-six years. He was the father of nine children, of which two are dead, thirty grand children and eight great grand children; with these he also leaves an aged companion to mourn their loss. Funeral occasion improved by Bro. George Mourer and John Hollinger from the 11th and 12th verses of the last chapter of Revelation. NOAH EARLY.

HORNISH.—In the Poplar Ridge congregation, Sept. 6th, 1878, Eli, son of John and Eve Hornish, aged 28 years, five months and nine days.

He complained for some time, but nothing serious until about 3 o'clock in the morning of the 6th, he became deranged—so much so that it took three men to keep him on the bed. At five o'clock in the evening he died. He met with a serious accident about the 29th of March, 1877, having a double-barreled shot gun, both barrels being loaded with shot, and holding the gun in his left hand a little space from the floor and putting the ram-rod in the thimble with his right hand, the gun dropped on the floor, with breech end downward. One barrel discharged, the load going through his right hand fracturing it so it had to be taken off.

He was a young man much respected by all who knew him. But like many others, he walked in the broad road that leadeth to destruction. We leave him in the hands of a merciful God. Let this be a warning to others. Funeral services by Bro. Jacob Kintner from Ecclesiastes 12: 7.

CLEAR.—In the same congregation, Aug. 14, Alice S., daughter of Zadok and Maria Clear, aged 5 months and 10 days.

CLEAR.—In the same congregation, August 19th, 1878, brother George W., son of Zadok and Maria Clear, aged 18 years, 10 months and 6 days.

The subject of this notice was one of much suffering, but he bore it with Christian fortitude. He sent for the elders of the church and was anointed in the name of the Lord. He also had a desire to wash feet but he thought he was too weak. He loved to speak about the Savior and engaged in singing and praying. Although so young yet he was faithful to his duty. Dear friends weep not by the bedside of such a dying friend, but weep tears of joy. Funeral services by Eld. Jacob Brown. G. FOREMAN.

The Brethren at Work.

A RELIGIOUS WEEKLY.

EDITED AND PUBLISHED BY

J. H. MOORE & M. M. ESHELMAN.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK is an uncompromising advocate of Primitive Christianity in all its ancient purity.

It recognizes the New Testament as the only infallible rule of faith and practice.

And maintains that the sovereign, unmerited, unsolicited grace of God is the only source of pardon, and

That the vicarious sufferings and meritorious works of Christ are the only price of redemption:

That Faith, Repentance and Baptism are conditions of pardon, and hence for the remission of sins:

That Trine immersion or dipping the candidate three times face-forward is Christian Baptism:

That Feet-Washing, as taught in John 13, is a divine command to be observed in the church:

That the Lord's Supper is a full meal, and, in connection with the Communion, should be taken in the evening, or after the close of the day:

That the Salutation of the Holy Kiss, or Kiss of Charity, is binding upon the followers of Christ.

That War and Retaliation are contrary to the spirit and self-denying principles of the religion of Jesus Christ.

That a Non-Conformity to the world in dress, customs, daily walk and conversation is essential to true holiness and Christian piety.

It maintains that in public worship, or religious exercises, Christians should appear as directed in 1 Cor. 14: 5.

It also advocates the scriptural duty of Anointing the sick with oil in the name of the Lord.

In short it is a vindicator of all that Christ and the Apostles have enjoined upon us, and aims, amid the conflicting theories and discords of modern Christendom, to point out ground that all must concede to be infallibly safe.

THE TONGUE.

BY JAS. Y. HECKLER.

It seems no man can tame the tongue,
Save he to whom it doth belong;
He can, through watchfulness and prayer,
Bridle his tongue with godly fear.

'Tis strange that such a little thing
Should people into trouble bring;
Since each his tongue could bridle well,
Were it not touched with fire of hell.

Of beasts and birds without a soul,
Mankind can tame them and control—
But less in size, though not in fame,
'Tis said, "The tongue can no man tame."

It will run wild to the extreme,
Take things for granted as they seem,
And in excitement oft surmise,
Through vicious malice, strenuous lies.

A little member is the tongue,
It boasts of greatness, vainly long,
And in its word we sometimes see
A world of vast iniquity.

The tongue that flatters men with praise,
Will turn their infancy to raise;
And oft in secret, speak a word,
Which from that tongue should never be heard.

But then the secret will come out
For other folks to talk about;
The evil news will spread as soon
As chaff that by the wind is blown.

Much can be done by effort strong,
To govern and control the tongue;
When evil thoughts pervade the heart,
Speak not until those thoughts depart.

Resolve to keep your passions down,
Subdue all feelings, do not frown—
Take this advice while you are young,
If you love peace, refrain your tongue.

FROM C. H. BALSBAUGH.

To Ira Bell Rypph, of Sacramento, Cal.—

It became a proverb, "Is Saul also among the prophets?" I would it were a proverb among angels and men, C. H. Balsbaugh is also among the children. This is my highest ambition. I care not to ride in the chariot of Caesar, or to rock on the wave of popularity, but my soul yearns to get back into my little petticoat, into the life of innocence and purity that filled my happy child-heart when I sat on my smatted mother's lap.

I received your former letter, but had no stamps to reply. I have a pack of letters ready for mail, waiting for some raven to bring me a beak full of stamps. I wish some of the fine ladies and gentlemen of Sacramento would follow the example of Exodus 35: 22, and let me share the result for the maintenance of my penmanship. Millions of souls are starved because the gold of the Great Proprietor is turned into trinkets for the lust of the eye.

I am too weak and in suffering to write you a long letter. I am under the harrow of nostalgia. My head and face and mouth are so bruised under the flail of affliction, that to partake of food is agony. In a most loving way, well I will call your attention to a passage of great beauty and import, which is adapted to little girls and boys, no less than to the hoary head. It is found in 1 Pet. 3: 4. "THE ORNAMENT of a meek and quiet spirit, which is IN THE SIGHT OF GOD OF GREAT PRICE." You can find nothing in all Sacramento city, or in all the fashion-marts in the world, that will adorn you like this. It is the most precious pearl-gem in the cabinet of redemption. Wear it in your heart of hearts, and on your forehead, and you will have a passport that will admit you at the crystal Gate into the bliss and glory of God's own eternity.

THE EVIDENCE OF FAITH.

BY LEWIS O. HUMMER.

IS there any way of knowing whether we really have faith? We answer that there is. Well what constitutes the evidence? We answer, our works. If we obey God in all things, we know of a surety that we have faith. If we repent and are baptized according to the directions, into each name of the Trinity, and wash the saint's feet, and salute the Brethren with the kiss of charity, and anoint the sick, and feed the hungry, and clothe the poor, and send the Gospel to the ends of the earth—with many more good deeds, we may rest assured that we are in the faith. But if Christianity is left to take care of itself, our money squandered in paying taxes for the slaughtering of millions of lives, and the distress of millions of widows and orphan children—happy homes made desolate, happy families dissevered and cast upon the merciless for protection,—the country filled with beggars, that is enough to fill the soul of the philanthropist with grief that hastens him to an untimely grave.

How much better to have spent our money for the spread of the Gospel of the Son of God, than to be paying these high taxes, and witnessing the misery of the race from the influence of a cruel war. Will we take warning from the past, and make an effort to avoid all future war, or will we hoard up our money for another war and high taxes? If Christians would spend half their money for the spread of the peaceable doctrine of the Son of God, that they spend for taxes, they would soon find their pockets filled and running over, instead of dragging through a horrible existence. The past war ought to be a lesson for all, and every effort made to acquaint the rising generation with the doleful influence of war, and the advantage of accepting the teachings of Christ. Can we all feel guiltless of the blood of the past war, and the miseries it has brought over our land; or will the Savior say, to those whom He has given the talents or knowledge of His peace and good will on earth, "you slothful servant depart from me, you have not made use of the talents I gave you in the other world, and I have no evidence that you will do better in this world." The fact that we are faithful in this life, constitutes the evidence in the next world.

For the church to say, go teach and baptize, etc., without furnishing the means to go with, is the same as to say, "be clothed and fed," and give nothing to clothe and feed with. The Brethren seem to be awakening from their slumbers, by a sense of their duty, as well as their negligence, and thus we see an effort for better schooling, and better modes of evangelizing, and all that is necessary to carry on the work, is more schooling and money. Let each one tuck a little, and send the money thus saved into the treasury of the Lord. Obony are a perfect menials, eating out the very life of Christ. We can all do something toward aiding in the work of the Lord. If you can write for our periodicals—write. If you can preach the Gospel—preach. If you can distribute the Brethren's periodicals—spread them. If you can pay for a paper for some poor soul—pay for it. If you can aid the ministry—aid it. And so you can always find some profitable employment in the vineyard of the Lord. There is no excuse for our indolence, or for keeping our money to spend for our carnalities. Keep the ark of the Lord moving at the sacrifice of all earthly pleasures.

This God requires at our hand; and anything short of this, will number us with the slothful servant; and cast us into outer darkness where there is mourning, weeping and gnashing of teeth. While we may have faith to go to Jordan and be baptized, we must also have charity or else our baptism will do us no good. While we may humble ourselves to the washing of the saint's feet, and have not charity, it profiteth nothing. And while we have faith, humility, and charity, and have not energy, we are as dead as a stone. Faith, humility, and charity, must be quickened or energized by the Spirit of God, or else we are dead in the end; and judgment will awaken our slumbers in the pit that burneth with fire and brimstone.

Let us all ponder over these things, and see if the evidence of faith is on our side or against us. Have we the FAITH that will stand the TEST in a DYING HOUR?

ETERNITY.

BY S. S. W. HAMMERS.

WHAT are we to understand by eternity? Eternity is duration without limit. As such it has neither beginning nor end. In this sense it is only applicable to God, for Jehovah is alone, truly and properly, eternal. Other beings, as angels and men, have a sort of prospective eternity, are immortal and will exist forever, but as they were not always in existence, they are not strictly eternal. Eternity has been likened to a ring which has no beginning or end. Eternity is not unaptly said to resemble the scene presented to the mariner when out at sea, and he looks abroad in every direction and perceives nothing but the surges—the mighty ocean. Eternity necessarily includes duration beyond all that figures can describe or ideas conceive. There are a certain number of grains of sand on the sea shore, a certain number of drops in the mighty ocean, a certain number of blades of grass and leaves, and were myriads of ages to pass between the annihilation of each of these, there would finally cease to be a grain of sand, etc. But eternity would then be no nearer its termination than at first.

SOME SHARP REBUKES

(Selected.)

MR. Axley stood silently surveying the congregation until every eye was riveted. He then began: "It may be a very painful duty, but it is a very solemn one, for a minister of the Gospel to reprove vice, misconduct, and sins whenever and wherever he sees it, but especially is this his duty on Sunday and at church." "And now," continued the speaker, pointing with his long finger in the direction indicated; "that man sitting out yonder behind the door, who got up and went out while the brother was preaching, stayed out as long as he wanted to, got his boots full of mud, came back and stamped the mud off at the door, making all the noise he could to disturb the attention of the congregation, and then took his seat; that man thinks I mean him. No wonder he does. It doesn't look as if he had been raised in the white settlements, does it, to behave that way at meeting? Now, my friend, I advise you to learn better manners before you come to church next time. But I don't mean him."

"And now," again pointing at her mark, "that little girl sitting there about half way of the house—I should judge her to be about sixteen years old—that's her, with the artificial flowers on the outside of her bonnet, and on the inside of her bonnet. She has a broast-pin on too (they were very severe upon all superfluities of dress), she that was giggling and chattering all the time the brother was preaching, so that even the old sisters in the neighborhood could not hear what he was saying, though they tried to. She thinks I mean her. I am sorry from the bottom of my heart, for any parents that have raised that girl, you have disgraced your parents as well as yourself. Behave better next time, won't you? But I don't mean her."

Directing his finger to another aim, he said, "that man sitting there, that looks so bright as if he never was asleep in his life, and never expected to be, laid his head down on the back of the seat in front of him, went sound asleep, slept the whole time, and snored; that man thinks I mean him. My friend, don't you know the church is not the place to sleep? If you needed rest, why did you not stay at home, and go to bed? That's the place to sleep, not in church. The next time you have a chance to hear a sermon, I advise you to keep awake. But I don't mean him." Thus did he proceed, pointing out every man, woman and child, who had in the slightest deviated from a befitting line of conduct; characterizing the misdemeanor and reading sharp lessons of rebuke.

Judge White was all this time sitting at the front end of the front seat, just under the speaker, enjoying the old gentleman's disquisition, to the last degree; twisting his neck around to note if the audience relished the "down-comings," as much as he had; smiling, chuckling inwardly. Between his teeth and cheek was a monstrous quid of tobacco, when he was the better pleased, the more he chewed, the more he spit, and behold the floor bore witness to the results. At length the old gentleman straightening himself up to his full height, continued, with great gravity, "And now I reckon you want to know what do mean? I mean that dirty, nasty, filthy tobacco-chewer sitting on the end of that front seat," his finger meanwhile pointing true as the needle to the pole, "see what he has been about! Look at those puddles on the floor; a frog would not get into them; think of the trails of the sister's dresses dragged through that muck." The crest-fallen judge averred that he never chewed any more tobacco in church.

I trust enough has been said to afford you a truthful and vivid notion as to what these men were. I honor them for their chivalric heroism. I revere them for their lofty faith, their burning zeal, their simple-hearted piety—a practical character that knew no limits. I love and bless them, for they were my own fathers in the ministry.

MARRIED LIFE.

(GOOD counsel from a wise and mother: "I try to make myself and all around me agreeable. It will not do to have a man to himself till he comes to you, to take no pains to attract him, or to appear before him with a long face. It is not so difficult as you think, dear child, to behave to a husband so that he shall remain forever in some measure a husband." I am an old woman; but you can still do what you like, a word from you at the right time will not fail of its effect; what need have you to play the sullying viro? "The pair of a loving girl," says an old book, "is like a dew drop on a rose, but that on the cheek of a wife, is a drop of poison to her husband." Try to feel cheerful and contented, and your husband will be so, and when you have made him happy, you will become so, not in appearance, but in reality. Nothing flatters a man more than the happiness of his wife, he is always proud of himself as the source of it. As soon as you are cheerful, you will be lively and alert, and every moment will afford you an opportunity to let fall an agreeable word. Your education, which gives you an immense advantage will greatly assist you.—Schubel.)

Whenever the Bible is made the foundation-stone of education, of science and of every form of life, there is no literature for children or for the people.

THE ROMISH LADY.

THERE was a Romish lady brought up in popery. Her mother always taught her, the priest she must obey.
O pardon me dear mother, I humbly pray thee now,
For unto these false idols, I can no longer bow.
Assisted by her hand-maid, a Bible she concealed,
And there she gained instruction, till God His love revealed,
No more she prostrates herself to pictures decked with gold,
But soon she was betrayed, and her Bible from her stole.

I'll bow to my Jesus, I'll worship God unseen,
I'll live by faith forever, the works of men are vain,
I cannot worship angels nor pictures made by men,
Dear mother use your pleasure, but pardon if you can.

With grief and great vexation, her mother straight did go,
To inform the Roman clergy, the cause of all her woe,
The priests were soon assembled, and for the maid did call,
And forced her in the dungeon to fright her soul withal.

The more they strove to fright her, the more she did endure,
Although her age was tender, her faith was strong and sure,
The chains of gold so costly, they from the lady took,
And she with all her spirits, the pride of life forsook.

Before the pope they brought her, in hopes of her return,
And there she was condemned in horrid flames to burn,
Before the place of torment, they brought her speedily,
With lifted hands to heaven, she then agreed to die.

There being many ladies assembled at the place,
She raised her eyes to heaven, and begged supplying grace,
Weep not ye tender ladies, shed not a tear for me
While my poor body's burning, my soul the Lord shall see.

Yourselves you need to pity, and Zion's deep decay,
Dear ladies turn to Jesus, no longer make delay;
In comes her raving mother, her daughter to behold,
And in her hands she brought her pictures decked with gold.

O take from me those idols, remove them far from my sight!
Restore to me my Bible, wherein I take delight,
Ah! my aged mother, why on my ruin bent!
'Twas you that did betray me, but I am innocent.

Tormentors use your pleasure, and do as you think best,
I hope my blessed Jesus will take my soul to rest;
Soon as these words were spoken, up steps the man of death,
And kindles up the fire, to stop the mortal breath.

Instead of golden bracelets, with chains they bound her fast,
She cried my God, give power, now must I die at last,
With Jesus and His angels, I shall dwell;
God pardon priest and people, and so I bid farewell.

WORDS OF COMFORT FOR THE LONELY.

BY J. S. FLORY.

To Sister M. E. H., Gallio Co. O.:

YOUR isolation from the community of the faithful, being similar to many others who read the BRETHREN AT WORK, is, we trust a sufficient excuse for thus addressing you. What may be a crumb of comfort to you, may be to hundreds of others. Experience has taught us, that it tries one's soul to be isolated from those he loves—no ties of love more lasting than those that knit together the kindred in Christ. While there is in the tenor of your late letter a spirit of holy and confiding trust in God and his great mercy, there is an evidence of sadness because you have not the blessed privilege of meeting and enjoying the sweet associations of the brethren and sisters of like precious faith. You say, "I have watched and prayed faithfully over you, as I said before, where oh! where would we have been, had it not been for your kind care and labors of love. It makes me feel very sad indeed when I think that I might have to leave this world without one of God's dear children to watch by my dying bed or give me one cheering word while battling with the last enemy. I would so much like to commune once at the Lord's table in this life—oh how I feel it would strengthen my drooping soul."

Give God all the praise and glory for having brought you out of Babylon into the fold of our Lord and Master. We well remember the great struggle, while yet in the bloom of youth; it cost you to break away from associates in that other faith and cast your lot with that people who were "evil spoken of," and we have often admired that religious heroism manifested on your part when so sorely persecuted; and through all the trials of life, God has sustained you and your faith has been confirmed. Well might you say, in speaking of your trials and afflictions, "I know that God will enable me to endure it all, if I will only trust Him in the right way." What a powerful sermon in those few words, "trust him in the right way." That is the key note that should sound its blessed music in every burdened soul. Trust Him aright and He will never forsake thee. Though you may feel lonely, Jesus and a host of angels—ministering spirits, are near you so long as you cast your all on the side of Jesus Christ, your Savior. It is a joyful feast to sit at the Lord's table and commune with God's children, but when this cannot be, seek that blessed, sweet communion with the Lord in the secret chamber. How many there are that have entered the church with a heavy burdened heart, and there, while in sweet communion with their God, had the burden rolled away and came forth with joy and gladness in the soul. "Draw nigh to God and He will draw nigh to you." Oh what a blessed promise. Dear sister when you feel cast down, and heavy clouds seem to shut out the rays of divine glory, go to your best friend, Jesus,—the Lord of life and peace, and you will not go away empty. His ears are ever open to the lisping prayers of His brethren and sisters. He will plead your cause, and God, the Father will greatly bless you. Fear not though the waters be deep and the storms fierce, out of all God will deliver you. "He shall deliver thee in six troubles; yea, in seven there shall no evil touch thee." Job. 5: 19.

Though you be denied the opportunity to eat at the Lord's table with His people, your soul may feast on the heavenly manna that God breaks to His children in the wilderness, and you may drink of the life-blood of your Redeemer, so that you may even in your solitude, have spiritual life, and the blessed assurance of immortality beyond the grave. Though no elders call to anoint you, God will anoint you with the oil of gladness and the holy unction from above, that your sins may be forgiven, and you be raised up in the great day of redemption.

May God bless you, and comfort you with His divine grace, and through all the vicissitudes of this life, may you lean on the promises of God, worshipping your Creator as did Jacob, leaning upon his staff. Remember too, that though wide plains, high mountains and deep waters, intervene between you and many of the chosen of God, that love that unites us all in one common brotherhood, embraces you and all the scattered sheep of the flock into one fold with Jesus Christ as one Shepherd; and He leadeth all alike into green pastures, and to drink of the pure waters of eternal life. "Be of good cheer, Christ has overcome the world."

THE FOREKNOWLEDGE OF GOD.

BY PETER DEARBORFF.

AFTER reading the article in No. 34 of the BRETHREN AT WORK, headed, "Esau have I hated," my mind was drawn to a subject, upon which it has often dwelt, and one as I think of vast importance. The writer of this article, has no doubt put to silence the erroneous idea that has arisen from a careless examination of the subject; that is, of the Lord's hating Esau before he was born. The writer says, "There is not a passage in the whole Bible that says God hated Esau, or anybody else, before he was born," yea I continue, nor after they are born, and have lived a long life in sin; that is in the sense we generally use the word, "hate." But we will attach a different meaning to the word "hate" in this matter. We will say, the Lord loved Jacob better than Esau, or preferred him before him. But while we are willing to admit, that the writer of said article, has destroyed the erroneous idea, that has arisen from a superficial or careless study of the holy Scriptures on this subject, we cannot see how this view of the matter can or will reconcile or explain the great principle that lies at the foundation of this vast subject. The question comes vividly back again, why did God prefer Jacob before Esau? for it is said to Rebecca, "before the children were born, the elder shall serve the younger." Gen. 25. Why did God say, to Pharaoh, through Moses, "For this cause have I raised thee up, for to shew thee my power; and that my name may be declared throughout all the earth?" Why did the Lord, by the mouth of the "man of God," speak in favorable terms of Josiah, even before he was born? saying to the altar which Jeroboam had built in Bethel contrary to the will of God, "O altar, altar! thus saith the Lord; behold a child shall be born unto the house of David, Josiah by name; and upon thee shall he offer the priests of the high places that burn incense upon thee, and men's bones shall be burnt upon thee." 1 Kings 13: 2. How is it, that the Lord, by the mouth of Isaiah, spake of a man whom he named Cyrus, and called him his shepherd, and that he should perform all his pleasure? Is. 44: 28; 25: 1-4. This was spoken by Isaiah, at least one hundred years before Cyrus was born, according to the Bible chronology; for it was about one hundred and sixty years before he issued the edict for the restoration of the children of Israel.

All such questions tend to the same center, and emerge from the same source; and we see through them that God did in former times show his good pleasure of some, and his displeasure of others before they came into the world. We, therefore, with doubled zeal and energy trace the Sacred Pages, in search of a principle that will explain this mystery.

Paul says, "For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son." Rom. 8: 29. And Peter says, when writing to certain churches, that they were, "Elect according to the foreknowledge of God, the Father," Peter 1: 2. And Christ in his high-priestly prayer, says, "None of them is lost, but the son of perdition; that the Scriptures might be fulfilled." John 17: 12. Therefore, we see through the Volume of truth, that these things are done upon the principles of foreknowledge, and the only difference there is since Christ and before Christ, is, that he has classified the children of men since Christ; one under the name of the "Son of God," the other under the name of the "son of perdition." Hence it becomes no more necessary, since Christ, to show his displeasure of some, and his good pleasure of others, through his foreknowledge of their subsequent actions, as in the case of Pharaoh who was a vessel to dishonor, and in other cases, which I have already cited, who were vessels to honor. Therefore we are made to exclaim with Paul, "O the depth of the riches, both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out! For who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who hath been his counsellor? Or who hath first given to him, and it shall be recompensed unto him again? For of him, and through him, and to him are all things; to whom be glory forever Amen."

ECHOES FROM THE CENTER.

In the Vineyard—Special Seasons—Visit to the Brethren—An Ordination—Choice for a Speaker—Anointing the Sick—The Tomb—Lord's day.

(From Our Special Correspondent.)

LABORING for the Master is one of great pleasure to the earnest Christian. He is full of zeal and earnestness in the work of salvation. And in order to make his labor effectual, he prays for the accompaniment of divine influence. Hence to be successful, the minister must frequent a throne of grace. And though it may encourage him to preach to a large multitude, yet to him it is no mark of condescension when the occasion demands that he speak the truths of the Gospel to a few listeners. The two or three assembled in the name of Jesus have the promise of his sacred presence, and when he is present, we have no little meeting.

At this season of the year as per the announcements in our periodicals, the brethren and sisters are meeting on the special occasions of "breaking of bread," and to show forth the Lord's death till he come. Many seasons of rejoicing are in prospect wherein saints may be made stronger in the Lord, and sinners awakened to flee the wrath to come.

By solicitation of the brethren, we wended our way to Portage church, Wood Co., O., and on the 14th inst., met with our dear brethren and sisters in a Love-feast meeting. It was truly a refreshing season to my soul, and felt it was good to be there. The propriety of a choice for a speaker, had been previously considered, and in the afternoon the selection was made, and resulted in the choice of brother John W. Reese.

The elders present, after a brief consultation, decided upon advancing one of the number to the office of the bishopric, whereupon the announcement was made that brother Jonathan C. Whitmore was the chosen vessel. Then followed the solemn, ceremonial performance of the ordination and of the installation of the minister chosen. Oh the holy calling of the minister, yet how hard it appeared to fall. May God bless brother Reese, and may the church encourage him in the noble work. The qualifications of the bishop, first Tim. 3, how pure, how blameless. May God enable them all to be wise, exercise righteous judgment in caring for the church, its aged, its poor and the tender lambs. In the evening assembled to celebrate the suffering and death of our blessed Master; had a good meeting. Elder J. P. Ebersole officiated with all the gravity of a saint, and the meeting was one of profit and proved effectual.

Next day was Lord's day, and we re-assembled for divine services, after which we took the parting hand and returned home.

Yesterday in company with my companion, we met with the brethren and sisters at the house of brother J. B. Bames's to visit our dear brother Daniel King, who is now placed in the crucible of affliction. Upon his request, he was anointed with oil in the name of the Lord. Brother Daniel feels that he is nearing the golden shore, and already sees the silver lining of the blest abode of the faithful. He is much resigned to the will of God and is waiting his gentle call. May God bless his dear wife in this, her day of sore affliction. The pleasing promise attached to the compliance of this holy command, "If he has committed sins, they shall be forgiven him." James 5: 15. The last work the Christian can do, and how sweet the thought that all sins and impurities are pardoned, and the departing saints are qualified for the glory world.

Next day visited the house of mourning to speak words of comfort to the bereft, to encourage the saint and warn the sinner. The little sufferer is gone to rest, to sleep in Jesus, awaiting the sorrowful parents. After services, we wended our way to the cemetery to deposit the dead, and as the sun was nearing the horizon, nature soon to go into stillness of even, we deposited the fair sleeper in the tomb, to await the summons of Gabriel, the last invitation, the last "come ye blessed." Farewell Arminda, by the grace of God we will meet you in that sun-lit clime, where sorrow, sickness and death can never come. What a struggle for the fond parents to give her up! Why this prolonged love for the dead, after the spirit has gone to God who gave it? "Is it not really God's witness in the soul of every man - the echo which nature herself gives back in response to the glorious revealed truth, that the body we love so well is bound to the spirit by ties that death can never dissolve; and that it will rise and live again when mortality is swallowed up of life?" Then, mouner shed thy tear, imprint thy kiss upon the marble brow of the sacred dead, manifest your continued love to the departed, this is but proof that they shall live again, though now they go back to dust. Thus is the mortality of man manifest to our eyes. Earth is not our abiding place, we seek a city whose builder and maker is God, in that far off clime. Reader, art thou prepared for this dissolution of soul and body, art thou fully equipped when that sleeping dust is called forth to the bar of God, to have a remission and ever enjoy the presence of God and his mighty hosts?

As the work is nearing to a close, we look forward more especially to the labor connected with the worship of the saints. And in order that we may not appear before the auditors in "great weakness," and an entire "empty vessel," we make the Bible our companion and useful books next neighbor. And thus well-seasoned with prayer, we are aided materially to appear in the strength of the Lord, and at least have some oil in our vessel. To-day we met for divine service in the Gardner school-house. The speaker selected from Isaiah 34: 17. "His hand hath divided it unto them by line:" and deliberated upon the same from the following principal deductions:

1. The line of our being.
2. The line of regeneration.
3. The line of death.

The speaker remarked that those were the most important features of the text, and that they are lines which all must cross before they can reach their final abode with God. The lines of being, of accountability and of death may be crossed and finish up the career of earth. But to be eternally happy, that is, to be fortified so as not to lament our passing the line of being and fear to pass the line of death, we must all pass through the line of regeneration. Our Savior says, that this is necessary, and positively says, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." John 3: 5. The Law is from heaven and positive, and hence to be happy, this line must be passed. Brother E. Bosserman followed in a few brief remarks and closed with an appeal to the sinner to come to Christ. He chose the 450th hymn.

"Our heavenly Father calls.

And Christ invites us near &c., which was sung with earnestness by the audience. Then went to prayer, dismissed, and as usual gave the brethren, sisters and friends our usual farewell greeting and returned home. Thus another Lord's day is passed with its labor, its joys and its sorrows, but its results are known to God. S. T. B.

PRAYER.

BY ABRAHAM NELSON.

PRAYER is the life of the soul and the key to heaven. If we neglect prayer, we will soon die a spiritual death. If we want the Lord to help us and bless us, we must ask him for it: "Therefore I say unto you, what things soever ye desire when ye pray, believe that ye will receive them and ye shall have them." "Ask and it shall be given; seek and ye shall find; knock and it shall be opened unto you." Ask freely that your joys may be full. Let us come boldly to a throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need. The more we pray and work for Jesus in the vineyard of the Lord, and improve our time, and talent, and means of grace to the honor and glory of God, the happier we are. Secret prayer is one of the means of grace we should not neglect. We read, "when thou prayest, enter into thy closet; and when thou hast shut the door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly." We are to watch and pray lest we be led into temptation and be overcome by the enemy. We are to put on the whole armor of God, that we may be able to withstand the wiles of the devil. "For the spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak." Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints." We read Daniel prayed three times a day; and David says, "seven times a day will I praise thee because of thy righteous judgment; mourning noon and evening do I praise thee."

"O come let us worship and bow down, let us kneel before the Lord our Maker. The Lord is nigh unto them that call upon him in truth. And the prayers of the upright are his delight."

Every family should have morning and evening worship. Pray for, and with, their children: train and bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, "before the evil days come, nor the years draw nigh in which they shall say, I have no pleasure in them." Prayer-meeting or social-meeting is another means of grace which should not be neglected by the Brethren. Lay members as well as the ministers, can pray in public and take up their cross, work and improve their gifts, time and talents to the glory of God. Some will say that they have no gift to pray, and cannot do this or that. We read, "open thy mouth and I will fill it." If we are not willing to make the effort and do what we can, and work with what we have, our talents will be taken from us and given to those that will work. We are only to be willing to work with what we have, and then we will get more.

When Peter was delivered out of prison they had something of a prayer-meeting: for we read, "Peter was therefore in prison, but prayer was made without ceasing of the church unto God for him. And when he had considered the thing, he came to the house of Mary the mother of Jesus, whose surname was Mark, where many were gathered together praying." We read, "I exhort therefore that first of all supplications, prayers, intercessions and giving of thanks be made for all men. I will therefore that men pray everywhere, lifting up holy hands without wrath and doubting. Finally, brethren pray for us, that the word of the Lord may have free course, and be glorified even as it is with you." "Speaking to yourselves in Psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your heart to the Lord." "Giving thanks always for all things unto God the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom, teaching and admonishing one another in Psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord." "And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of our Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God, the Father by him." "Confess your faults one to another and pray one for another that ye may be healed." "The effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. If any lack wisdom let him ask of God who giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not, and it shall be given him. But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering, for he that wavereth is like the wave of the sea, driven and tossed."

I did not give the Scripture reference, but hope all are Bible readers; therefore I say, "search the Scriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify of me."

LET YOUR LIGHT SHINE.

BY J. H. MYERS.

"Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on a hill cannot be hid." Matt. 5: 14

HERE the Christian is compared to a city on a hill, and just as little as a city on a hill can be hid, can the true, lively, zealous Christian be hid from the world's view. He carries something with him that can be seen and felt. This can be proven from the fact that the world can soon point you to one that does not live very strict to his or her profession, they can tell you almost every misstep, such a one makes. How can this be done unless they know what belongs to a true Christian? Now when this is known by those who are not interested in the cause, how much more important that we, who have started out in the great work, should know what our profession requires of us and live it out in every particular, avoiding every appearance of evil.

The Savior said, "watch and pray. I have often said, if we fail in this, need we wonder if others watch us? The world has a right to watch us, if we do not watch ourselves.

Again, the Savior said, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven." Now if we are devoid of good works, what will our influence be on others? Here the great responsibility rests upon us, if we allow our influence to go out in a wrong direction. If any think they have been baptized, go to Communion (sometimes), go to meeting, perhaps just because they might fall into the council of the church, and not because they love to go and be benefited, or go with the world just as far as they can, only so the church cannot get hold of them, and what kind of a light do they show before the world? "If the light be darkness, how great is that darkness."

On the other hand, if we engage in the service of the Lord with a heart full of love for our Master, and a zeal that will be manifested to all, carry religion with us wherever we go, we can mingle with the world (so far as it does not conflict with our principles). Let our lights shine brightly and others seeing there is a beauty in "holiness" may be attracted to the great light above, and share the glories that are reserved for all who make themselves worthy.

Oh that we might all be found faithful workers in the Master's kingdom, that our influence might be felt wherever we are, reviving the drooping, discouraged Christian on his journey heavenward, and winning many to Christ, now exposed to the wrath of an angry God; for we read, "God is angry with the wicked every day."

RULES FOR PROMOTING PERFECT HARMONY.

1. We may be quite sure that our will is likely to be crossed during the day; so let us prepare for it.
2. Every person in the house has an evil nature, as well as ourselves, so we must not expect too much.
3. Look upon each member of the family as one for whom Christ died.
4. When inclined to give an angry answer, lift up the heart in prayer.
5. If from sickness, pain or infirmity we feel irritable, let us keep a very strict watch over ourselves.
6. Observe when others are suffering, and drop a word of kindness.
7. Watch for little opportunities of pleasing, and put little annoyances out of the way.
8. Take a cheerful view of everything, and encourage hope.
9. Speak kindly to servants, and praise them when you can.
10. In all little pleasures which may occur, put self last.
11. Try for the soft answer that turneth away wrath.
12. When we have been pained by an unkind word or deed, let us ask ourselves, "have I not sinned the same, and been forgiven?" — 8 7.

MOORE & ESHELMAN,
Lazark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL. OCTOBER 10, 1878.

BROTHER Jesse Calvert will enter the field this Fall, and expects to be gone about two months, attending meetings in the East. May much good result from his labors.

HARD TIMES: the Cause and Remedy, is the title of an interesting little ten cent pamphlet, published at this place by Mr. E. Stover. The reasoning is good and the theory looks plausible.

THE yellow fever still continues its deadly work in the South, and is spreading in some localities. The deaths, however, are not so numerous as in the past. The weather is not very favorable to the disease at present.

BROTHER Bashor's book is not sold on credit, nor is there any discount on quantities. Our instructions are, to sell for cash only. We cannot send the book unless the order is accompanied by the money. From these instructions we cannot vary.

It is due our correspondents to remark, that the articles sent us for publication are being examined and decided upon pretty fast, and our manuscript drawer will soon be empty. Several articles will not appear for some weeks, as they will have to be rewritten.

Our readers must not forget the cause in Denmark. More funds will be needed soon, and we all want to see the good work go on. It may seem slow to us, but the efforts there tend to form a centre from which the truth may spread still farther and farther. Small beginnings sometimes end in great results.

THE yellow fever plague, though disastrous to certain parts of the South, may yet prove a blessing to this country. The nearly two million dollars so willingly given by the North, show a bright side to human nature. It is an expression of the warm feeling and great regard the people of the North have for those in the South, and has a tendency to bind them together in still stronger ties of love and good will for the welfare of the country at large.

A LETTER just received from Bro. Sharp, informs us that the Sunday-school meeting held at the Beech Grove church, Ohio, was a grand success, the attendance large and great unanimity of sentiment prevailed. We are further informed, that some feeling exists on the account of us not publishing the programme of the meeting. For this we are sorry, but are not to blame, as we have never seen anything of the programme only as it appeared in the P. C. It sent to this office it did not reach us. Hope this explanation will set the matter right on our part.

SOME people never know when to let good enough alone. They not only strike out, but bore clear through and let it run out on the other side. The age is proverbially fast, my how, especially in making haste to get rich, and an attempt at keeping up with it often places men far in advance of prudence. A little of the steady spirit of our forefathers would not be amiss just now.

MEN and women who have wholly dedicated themselves to the Lord and his services, have no time to stop and peep with every little fault-finder and critic that chances to spring up by the way. Lay hold of the Gospel plow with a steady grasp, and don't look back at the critic, for he will only criticize you the more for making a crooked furrow while looking back at him. Do your utmost to perform the Lord's work aright, letting others say what they please.

WHAT NEXT?

ONE may well ask, what will come next? The following shows that even individuals one mile away from the place of meeting may get all the benefit of the services:

"A microphone was placed in the pulpit of a chapel in England on a recent Sunday, and connected by a private telegraph line with the residence of a gentleman over a mile distant. Every part of the service was distinctly heard at the gentleman's house, with the exception of a few words rendered indistinct by the preacher's becoming a little excited and shaking the microphone. So faithfully did the instrument do its work, that the chapel-keeper was heard to close the doors after the service, walk up the aisle and up the pulpit steps, in conversation with some one else. The idea is about to be put to practical use, the gentleman already referred to, having given instructions that his house should be connected with another in the neighborhood, in order that an invalid may hear the service from one of the churches in the town."

DR. SCHAFF IN THE JORDAN.

DR. Philip Schaff gives in the Christian Intelligencer an account of his visit to the river Jordan, the following being the first paragraph: "A fatiguing ride of an hour and a half in the tropical sun over a barren plain brings us from the Dead Sea to the river Jordan, at the bathing place of the pilgrims, the traditional site of Christ's baptism. The river is here 80 feet broad and 9 feet deep. The banks are covered with oleanders, tamarisks, willows, and balsam wood. The water is muddy, the current very swift. There are no conveniences for bathing except a strong rope tied to the trees. Holding on to this rope, I took a most refreshing bath beneath the shadow of the trees. After the salt bath in the lake of death, it was truly a bath of regeneration. I immersed myself ten times and felt so comfortable that I almost imagined I was miraculously delivered from rheumatism. I have plunged into many a river and many a lake, and into the waves of the ocean, but of all the baths, that in the Jordan will linger longest in my memory."

EDITORIAL CORRESPONDENCE.

BROTHER Bashor and the writer left Lanark on the morning of the 27th, to spend a few weeks with the brethren in Christian and Macoupin counties, Illinois. Expected to make close connection at Beardstown and get through to Morrisonville without much inconvenience and loss of rest, for rest and quietness are essential factors in reaching success in ministerial labor. But on nearing Beardstown we were informed by the courteous conductor, that the railroads, at the latter place, had ceased to accommodate the public in that matter, hence we were obliged to reach our destination via of Clapton, Springfield and Decatur. We cheerfully submitted, charging the discontinuance of favoring the public at Beardstown to the jealousy and envy on account of the competing railroads. We think it not strange that these evils show themselves in the hearts of worldly men, but when they creep out and expose their hideous heads in the church, the ground and pillar of the truth, sorrow fills our hearts. In this vast universe, where each man can feel and toil for his and other's welfare, there is no excuse for envyings and bitter jealousies.

At 1 P. M., 28th, the meeting was opened in the new and commodious tent, three miles east of Morrisonville. Brother Bashor addressed the audience on the subject of Bible qualifications of communicants. In the evening, about one hundred members assembled around the Lord's table to do what the Master taught and commanded. The brethren here, practice feet-washing in the manner termed the "single order," that is, each brother washes feet, wipe, and has his feet washed. It was one of the most solemn and dignified occasions that the writer ever attended. At no time was there necessity for more than several on the floor at once, hence no confusion. On the brethren's side the practice of the ordinance was commenced at two places and the same on the sister's side. We give these plain, simple facts, because we believe the order and work, and are fully persuaded that every ordinance in the house of God should be practiced in order, that is, with quietness, simplicity and godly reverence.

On Sunday 10 A. M., brother Bashor preached to a large audience. Theme, "The Resurrection." Meeting again at 3 P. M. Subject, "Grace and Truth." The interest manifested was good, and the work of divine truth bid fair to assert its power and supremacy in the hearts of the people here. For the many kindnesses and words of love which we received from those whom God loves, we are grateful. Peace and good will ever attend the precious souls who worship according to the will of God.

NON-CONFORMITY.

TO all our readers it is generally known that the BRETHREN AT WORK is an uncompromising advocate of the doctrine of non-conformity to the world, and aims to give no uncertain sound to its readers. We want to be understood distinctly and present our arguments and conclusions in a way that will show on which side we stand. We are for God, but not for Bad. On this question, like all other Gospel questions, we are not halting between two opinions, but are decided fully, and want to be understood distinctly.

Paul says, "Be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God." Rom. 12: 2. From this we learn that non-conformity, to begin with, is a heart work, consisting in the renewing of our minds. It is a principle that must commence in the heart and work its way out; otherwise there can be no non-conformity. The first thing to be done, is to get the heart right.

Paul well knew that if he could get the mind and heart renewed, there would be little trouble about the outside. He not only teaches non-conformity, but tells just how it must be done: "Be ye transformed by the renewing of your minds." If there is a transformation without renewing the mind, it amounts to nothing in the sight of God. He wants a heart religion—a religious principle that is deep seated and cannot be easily rooted out.

If we can succeed in getting non-conformity into the heart, there will be no difficulty about getting it on the body and in our actions. Here is just where some people make a mistake—they get the outside right while the heart remains unchanged. God wants no such work as that. He wants non-conformity practiced, but it must be by a renewing of the mind, that it may be done willingly and to the glory and honor of God.

The way this subject is sometimes treated by preachers, one would infer that they were confining it to dress only, and not to the daily walk and talk of life, as it should be. There is plenty of preaching about non-conformity externally, but very little about the non-conformity of the mind and heart. In fact, this is the very doctrine taught in the text, and is the very doctrine that is not preached enough. Whenever we succeed in getting this principle at work in the heart, the clothing will come right of itself. It is just like a stream of water flowing from a fountain. Get the fountain pure and the water will take care of itself, but as long as the fountain is impure it is folly to spend time trying to purify the water.

The doctrine of non-conformity wants to be planted in the minds of the people—they want to be made believe that it is a Bible doctrine, and carries with it the sanction of divine authority. It is useless to tell them that old Bro. so and so used to do this way. That has no weight in the minds of deep thinking people.

What they want, is Bible authority, and it is our duty to give it just as it stands in the Book. Our text does not say what constitutes that non-conformity, but does say that it must commence in the mind—the mind to be renewed. But elsewhere the Jews are given such detail that he whose mind has been renewed, will say, but little difficulty in keeping within the limits of the Gospel order. The only trouble is with those whose minds have not yet been renewed—whose hearts are not right. There is no non-conformity in their hearts, and it is vain to attempt to get it on their bodies, till the hearts are converted. The first work needs to be done over.

The reason some people wear gold is because it is in their hearts. This is why they dress fine and wear costly array, following the vain and foolish fashions of the world. The fountain is corrupt—the mind not yet renewed, and we cannot reasonably expect anything better from their actions.

There are hundreds who are very strict about their dress, but seemingly about nothing else. It would appear that they have centered all their ideas of non-conformity in a few clothes. When it comes to conversation, they are just like the world. They buy and sell like the world, using their wits to drive sharp bargains, and every and any way to make a little money, just like the world, too, at that. Were it not for their dress, you would never think about them being professors. They can talk about their neighbors; do a little tattling now and then; use rough language. In fact, conform to the world out and out, all but in dress.

Such characters are a disgrace to any church. There is no Bible non-conformity about them. It is all outside, and but little of that, while the mind remains full of corruption and deceit—has not been renewed.

Then there is another class who are very strict about the cut of their clothes. They purchase fine, costly handkerchiefs and have it cut in the order, thinking this is non-conformity. Such work is mockery. God has forbidden the use of fine apparel and costly array, and all the non-conformity cutting in the world will not make it right. If we are going to follow the Bible, let us be consistent about it, and not attempt to take advantage of circumstances.

Then there are sisters who seem to have too much respect for the church to wear a fine dress bonnet or hat, but will take their otherwise plain bonnet and ruffle and trim it until it is just as bad as a fashionably trimmed hat. Their dresses must be ruffled and trimmed until what little non-conformity they ever had is completely destroyed. This is worse than following the fashions of the world. It is polluting and bringing shame on a religious thing. It is degrading God's order. If we are going to be non-conformed to the world, let us be consistent about it, and not try and mix things up—half religion and half world. J. H. M.

A MISTAKE.

QUITE an error occurs in the last number of the Primitive Christian which has just come to hand. The editors say, the "Stem and Ray Debate" is to be published in that paper. This is to inform our readers, that no arrangements of the kind have been made with us. We have been at all the expenses and trouble of getting things arranged for the written discussion, and have obligated ourselves to foot the bill on the Brethren's side, and of course no one can lawfully publish the discussion without our consent, nor would it be right and Christian-like to do so. In addition to this, we will not permit the debate to be published in two of the Brethren's papers and only one of the Baptists'. The thing would be contrary to the rules of right. There is a full understanding between brother Stein, Mr. Ray and ourselves, regarding the papers it is to be published in, and no one has a right to publish it without consulting us. This the P. C. has not yet done. Therefore the announcement in the Primitive Christian is a mistake. The only two papers the discussion is to be published in, are the BRETHREN AT WORK and the Baptist Bath Flag. And those who want to read it will have to get it out of one of these papers.

A mission house in Paris, is preparing an edition of the Lord's prayer in more than twelve hundred languages and dialects. That is a good thing, but praying that prayer aright, and then living up to it, is far better.

We fear many ministers do too much traveling for the amount of preaching. Some of them will hold two or three meetings at one point, and then off they go for another place. Thus they travel and nothing, comparatively is done. If they would select some good point, and spend a week or two, they might accomplish something. Then when through, go to some other point and do likewise. A Winter is now coming on, and most of our preachers will travel and preach more or less, they will do well to give this matter some thought. Ministers, as chosen vessels of the Lord, must be accountable for how they use their office, and it is, therefore, needful that they adopt the best method of doing the work.

HE THAT REAPETH, RECEIVETH WAGES.

Scripture Text

"Say not ye, There are yet four months, and then cometh harvest? Behold, I say unto you, Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest. And he that reapeth receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto life eternal, that both he that soweth and he that reapeth may rejoice together." Luke 11: 35, 36

THIS text may have a general application to all times in which men have labored in the cause of human salvation. Since sin entered into the world, and the great plan of redemption was laid, there has ever been reaping to do, and the gatherers with Christ will receive their wages. But at the first advent, a sort of reckoning time with the Jewish people came, and hence, in a peculiar sense, the fields were ready for the harvest. And at the present time, as the final judgment is pending, the demand for labor in the harvest was never more urgent.

But men are apt to make good resolves for some future time. Some four months hence, they intend to enter the field. But the work is all ready, the fields are white.

The reaper receives wages. Who are the reapers? Every one, minister or others, who are instrumental in the work of saving men. All may have a share in the work, and consequently a share in the wages. But what are the wages? Are they one thousand, three thousand, five, ten or twenty thousand dollars a year? By no means. They that covet a great salary and get it, "have their reward." Such was not the wages of the apostles and martyrs. Yet they will have their reward.

But what will be the wages? The next clause explains it; they gather "fruit unto life eternal." They will see the souls, they have been instrumental in bringing to eternal life, safe with themselves in the kingdom of God. As it will be the Savior's joy to see of "the travail of his soul," to see the redeemed by His blood in everlasting life; so the reapers in the harvest will see of the fruit of their labors, and "enter into the joy" of their Lord. And thus shall "he that soweth," the Lord Jesus Christ, and "he that reapeth," His faithful servants, rejoice together.

Reader, do you not want a share in the wages? a part in the general joy, when the Sower and the reaper shall rejoice together? The fields are white already for the harvest. Enter into the work. Do not say there are yet four months. You may be too late. Go to work and you shall receive your wages. As we would have a part, when the harvest is brought home with rejoicing, let us at once enter into the work, that we may bring some sheaves with us—gather some fruit to eternal life. There is no doubt about the wages, if the work is only done. Now is the time to work.

PREACHING THE GOSPEL.

BY J. E. SPRINGER.

WE should lend a helping hand in sending missionaries over the land to preach the everlasting Gospel of Jesus Christ to a dying people. I fear too many calls are not heeded, and if sinners die out of Christ, who will be to blame? I believe the Brethren will be in part. Christ said to His disciples, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." This is a plain command. Now then, "faith cometh by hearing, and how shall they hear without a preacher?" According to God's directions we are bound to serve them, and if we fail to do it, we violate one of Christ's commands. Some may look at this as a great burden to the brotherhood. If each one of us would give one dollar annually, we could support a large number of laborers, and we would not feel the loss of one dollar, and for aught we know, God would bless us ten fold. God loveth a cheerful giver.

Now brethren, don't think you can do too much for the Lord. All that we have the Lord gave to us. Then let us make good use of it. Why do we not send more ministers out to preach the Gospel? Is it because we do not have them? Nay, verily. There are some that would be willing to go; but they must be sent, and are we, as a brotherhood, too poor to send them? No! There is a business somewhere, and let us hunt it up and get rid of it, so we may not be condemned in that great and notable day of the Lord. Think for a moment, of the many precious souls that are in nature's darkness, standing outside of the borders of the church. Why is it? It is because they have no one to show them the way.

Then brethren, let us all put forth our means and time in the great first cause. We should feel interested for our fellow-men, as well as for ourselves. We can do much if we are only willing. We are so highly blessed with sermon after sermon, and with Gospel privileges above many of our fellow mortals. So let us ever be thankful to God. May God bless and save us all.

GOD'S THUNDER.

BY S. H. GILBERT

"But the thunder of his power who can understand?"—Job 26: 14.

THOUGH some people are afraid of thunder and lightning, we need thunder storms to agitate and purify the atmosphere. It is not uncommon to see persons, when a thunder storm comes and the lightning begins to flash, flee to some dark and secluded spot. They cannot compose themselves in hearing the thunder roar and seeing the lightning flash, with the power of God. They may know better than I can tell. But while this is a truth, naturally speaking, we also find some that are afraid of the thunder in the moral heaven. They tremble like Felix, at the thunder of the truth. Sometimes when the thunder rolls and the lightning flashes, and the atmosphere begins to feel a little warm there are people that cannot stand the heat; they will either flee to some cooler place or find a fearful complaint.

I have known communities where the atmosphere had become full of the gas of "getting religion," and when a little storm arose, and "getting" was turned into doing religion, it seemed as though the storm was raging fearfully. But when it had passed over, there was a good calm, pure air of truth. People could breathe the essence of the saving power of God. God intends it shall thunder, and has made preparation to this end. The spiritual atmosphere needs agitation. How often when there is a little commotion of this kind, the Bible that has rested quietly on the shelf, suddenly comes down, is dusted off and perused? We need something sharp, piercing—flashing with power to make the theory of false hopes and sandy foundations tremble, and quake to the bottom. Some time the atmosphere gets mixed with truth and error. As long as the truth is presented in a general way—sheet lightning style—many look on and say, "beautiful," "splendid," "elegant," "fine," but when it is presented pointedly and in power striking through the ranks of sin, laying it to the right and left, thundering, so that the very gates of hell tremble, then they grow pale and quake with fear. Some are easily alarmed and become nervous when it thunders a little in the church heavens.

Paul besought the Corinthians that he might be bold among them, that he might use the weapons of his warfare to the pulling down of strongholds, casting down imagination and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ. Yes, there is lightning and thunder in God's throne in the holy of holies, and the Lord sends them forth. We need more of them in the church to agitate and purify the atmosphere. Let no man be blamed for presenting the truth pointedly, fully and powerfully. Let the lightning of the truth flash and the thunder peal in their divine power, and if it lays hold of temperance and every other command, as jewels, and discards reveling and idol worship and sin in all its forms, don't become nervous, but should there be a little commotion, and some grow a little pale or become somewhat alarmed, do not be dismayed or discouraged, but hold up the truth as the Bible holds it up. It will make us free—yes, free indeed. Trust in God, if He gives you the power to proclaim the truth with its thunder, shake the church and the world. If God fills you with the electric current from His throne, let it strike. If any should get offended at the truth, still proclaim it in love. When Jesus was here they became offended at the truth and its ambassador.

Paul tells us, the time would come when men would not endure sound doctrine. So let it flash till hypocrites stand condemned, and lukewarm professors tremble to get a fresh baptism of electric fire from on high. Stand up for Jesus, do all in His name, for He says, "I come quickly, and my reward is with me to give to every man according as his work shall be."

A VOICE FROM A LITTLE GRAVE.

WEEP not for me, sweet mother, if aught can mar my perfect happiness, it is to see thy tears. I am not sleeping beneath the little green hillock which, in thy love thou hast planted with bright flowers and watered with thy tears. In this quiet and lovely spot, thou hast laid my cast-off garment, but that which animated it and enobled it to thy heart, is, on angels' wings, hovering over round thee. I am one of the glorious "cloud of witnesses that encompass thee;" when burdened with thy toils, I watch beside thee, and see thee ever brushing away the sorrowing tear. When kneeling before thy Maker, I am with thee; when alone and sad, thou sittest and weepst at my graveside, then am I on bright wings hovering over thee; when troubled slumbers fall upon thee, I am guarding with my now un-sleeping eyes, thy beloved form. Seest thou me not, sweet mother? lift up, not thy bodily eye, but thine eye of faith, then will thou look upon me. Listen with the ear of faith, and thou shalt hear my tiny harp and the "new song" I am singing to "Him who sitteth upon the throne." Oh you would not wish to recall me to your earthly home, could you form even a faint conception of my present bliss, or the glorious pleasures of my new home. Let my name be dear and familiar in your home, and often speak of me to my little playmates, with smiles and a cheerful heart. Let them not think of me as not lost, or dead, but living forever in a bright and beautiful land where nothing can disappoint us or make us weary or sad, where there are no tears, nor sickness nor death, where the blessed Saviour folds His little lambs in His arms and loves them. Selected by Hymner Bros.

HUMILITY.

BY DANIEL DOUGLASS WELLS

"Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt you in due time."—1 Peter 5: 6.

HUMILITY and pride stand opposite to each other. Humility points down, pride points up. The one leads to hell, the other to heaven. Humility clings to Christ and His followers. Pride belongs to the devil and his followers. Christ has humility, the devil has pride. Christ has obedience, Satan, disobedience,

Christ has self-denial, Satan, self-defense. Jesus has the truth, the devil, falsehood. Here stands the Prince of light, and the prince of darkness. Jesus holds the truth, the Word of God, the sword of the spirit. "Yes," says one, "Jesus fought against the enemy of God and man with the artillery of heaven, and Satan's face was all scarred with lightning. The Son of man has come to bruise the serpent's head."

Turn, sinners, turn while Jesus is driving the enemy back. Turn, for why will you die? Jesus says, "Come to me! Come, that you may have life! Come, that you may escape the wrath that is to come!" Take His yoke upon you and learn of Him, meekness and humility, and you shall find rest to your souls. Turn, sinners, grieve not the Spirit, quench it not too long, for fear you may, like Capernaum and Jerusalem, be given over to hardness of hearts to believe lies and be damned. When you look at self, Christ is small, but when you look at Christ, self is small. There is no one can see himself so small, so unworthy as when he sees Christ suffering, bleeding, dying out of love, to keep man out of hell.

FAITH.

BY JENNIE MYERS.

WITHOUT faith we cannot please God. God is ashamed of us if we have no confidence in Him, and prepares for us no habitation in heaven. By faith, the Christian overcomes the world, the flesh and the devil, and receives the crown of righteousness. The crown is not in the beginning, neither in the middle, but if we hold out faithful to the end we shall receive our reward. In virtue of faith, worthy men of old wrought great wonders. Faith lives and worships God in death. Faith regards the blood of Christ as the foundation of human hope and looks to it as the only safeguard from the destroyer. No victories ever won compared with those of faith. Its triumphs no earthly tongue can speak or pen describe. They are written in the book of life and will be told with immortal tongues by multitudes which no man can number, in strains of glory rising higher and higher and growing sweeter and sweeter to endless ages.

VOLCANO.

Translated from the Spanish.

THE dispatches report that the present eruption of the volcano Cotopaxi, in South America, is the most violent that has taken place for years, and that the immense clouds of smoke and ashes can be seen from Guayaquil, 160 miles distant. As Cotopaxi is subject to violent eruptions, this means a great deal. In 1738 the flames rose 3,000 feet above the mouth of the crater; in 1768 the smoke and ashes darkened the air for many miles, and during the eruption of 1803, Humboldt heard the explosions at Guayaquil, booming out like the continual discharges of a battery of artillery. In 1744 the explosions were heard at a distance of 500 miles. There were outbursts in 1850, 1854, 1856, and 1864, and at all times there is an escape of steam and smoke. Cotopaxi is the highest active volcano in America, and a violent eruption is a notable event in the world's history. In 1698 an eruption destroyed the city of Taungu, some thirty miles distant, but, as a rule, the eruptions have not been disastrous. Frequently the great mass of snow near the top of the mountain is melted by the internal fires, and the plains below flooded.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Home Again From Planting.

IN pursuance of the North Missouri Mission charge, I left home on the morning of Sept. 7th, and reached Bro. William Mason's in Ray Co., in the evening. On the morning of the 8th, set out for the place of my first appointment (Bro. John Morton's), in Carroll Co., where I arrived at 3 o'clock P. M., sorry to find Bro. Morton confined in sickness, but glad to say: left him convalescent. Here we had meeting at the Rose Bud school-house, on the evening of the 8th and 9th, with an increase of double the number in attendance from the first to the second appointment. After this planting I went North some ten miles to the Taylor school-house, which field is represented by brother Frederick Michael and the sister, and brother George Bechtold and the sister. Here we sowed the seed broadcast on the evenings of the 10th, 11th and 12th. Thence on the 13th I pursued my journey Eastward, where several members met for evening services. At this point I will say: this little band of brethren and sisters, once organized and known as the "Carroll Co. Grand river church," is truly in a languishing state of affairs; and desires, deserves and requires the attention and aid of the surrounding brethren. The membership, about twenty in number, very much scattered. — The organization consists of one brother, Richard Morris, in the first degree of the ministry and brethren John Morton and William Jacobs.

The gradual decline of the ministers' health has deprived them of regular meetings for months; and their elder, Addison Harper, living some twenty-five or thirty miles from their nucleus, and now in feeble health, is very discouraging; yet they seem so devoted and alive and so determined to succeed, that they intend to try and hold a Love-feast this Fall. I would yet say, I believe this to be a very fertile field, and hope if our planting here be watered well, that much increase may soon be reaped.

From here I went East some thirty miles, to Chariton Co., where a brother's voice had never before been heard, and the Gospel in its primitive simplicity and purity never preached. But it is remarkable how near an Apollon came guessing at the apostolic mode of baptism in this vicinity some five years ago. Coming from England direct to this region, the preacher began a protracted series of meeting, and gained the people, till he persuaded some twenty or more to embrace religion, a large porportion of whom preferred being baptized, of course, by immersion. But the eloquent man, and the "man mighty in the Scriptures" declared to his tenacious advocates of immersion, that he had never seen any one immersed,—that in his country it was seldom if ever practiced; but wishing to secure all of his converts, he would do the best he could. Whereupon after going down into the water, he had his applicants to kneel; and at the naming of the three names of the Holy Trinity, he dipped them once forward. I wonder if some Aquila and Priscilla did not, afterward, attempt to instruct him more perfectly in the ways of the Lord. But after I had preached on the evening of the 14th and on the 15th, (Lord's day) at 3 o'clock P. M. and baptized at 5 o'clock (same day), in the presence of a vast crowd of witnesses, some may have thought "worse yet," but we heard various favorable expressions from many honest hearts. At three o'clock and just previous to baptism, I had given one and one-half hours to a lecture exclusively on the mode of Christian baptism. Then at night on the ordinances of the Gospel. Their last meeting was held in the Baptist's spacious church in the town of Clifton Hill, Randolph county. And I will here state to the gratification of the BRETHREN AT WORK, and whoever sent it to E. F. Burrow of this place, that he also, during these meetings, made the good confession and was baptized, being made very happy in his Savior's love. May the Lord bless him in his isolated condition, and may his noble-hearted and kind wife also be blest with a more full assurance of a blessed immortality, and may God bless their three little sons, and sanctify them through the holiness of their parents, and they shall call them blessed.

Brethren finding this miraculous opening, I came to the conclusion here that eternity only, could ever tell how much good is being done by the dissemination of the truth through our periodicals and tracts. Brethren of the press, I say, take courage and light on. Brethren and sisters, you who have cast in a nite, that the papers might be sent to the poor, to you I say, when I go into the highways and in the hedges I find the spiritually lame and the halt, as a consequence, already "walking and leaping and praising God." The blind say, they already "see men as trees walking," another application of the "spittle that proceeded from the mouth of Christ Jesus, and obedience in washing in the pool of Siloam, and they see." Brethren and sisters cast bread upon the waters and let your evangelists see it return, even not many days hence. From there I returned to Carroll Co. and tried to preach on the evenings of the 16th and 17th, in the Big Creek (Baptist) church, where a friend Samuel Sewell, had arranged appointments, who is also nigh the kingdom. Here is also friend L. D. Clark, formerly of McComb, Ill., desiring very much that Brethren A. G. Black and John Myers of McComb pay him a visit, proposing to meet them at Wheeling, on the Hannibal and St. Jo R. R., at any time. Brethren can't you be there at their Love-feast on the 19th of October? From there I set out at sunrise on the 18th and arrived home at five o'clock (same day). Found all well and once more appreciated fully, what the Brethren mean, when they say, on such occasions: "and thanked the Lord."

Two Weeks in Piatt and Champaign Counties.

IN company with sister Catherine Snavelly, Bro. Martin Paterbaugh and Michael Snavelly, took the train for Blue Ridge church, Piatt Co., Ill., September 7th, landed at Mansfield at 12:30 P. M. Was met by brother C. Barnhart and others, who took us to the house of Bro. John Barnhart's, where we met Bro. Joseph Hendricks, of Cerro Gordo and Bro. David Troxel, of Millunne, with others, who had responded to an appointment for a Communion meeting, the first in this newly organized church. The Brethren had built a shed, large and commodious, for the purpose, near the house of Bro. John Barnhart. Quite a congregation was assembled by three o'clock, and addressed by Joseph Hendricks, from the words, "Fear not little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." In the evening the ordinances of the Lord's house were attended for the first time by the Brethren in this place. Quite a number of people attended. The order was excellent and the occasion impressive. Next morning the Brethren met at 8:30 according to appointment, which was consulted with regard to the further organization of them as a body, which culminated in the ordination of Bro. John Barnhart to the full ministry and the advancing of Bro. Christian Barnhart to the second degree of the ministry. The charge was given by Bro. Joseph Hendricks. By this time a very large congregation had assembled. At 10:30 the meeting was opened in regular order, by the Brethren. Brother David Troxel addressed the people from the charge of Paul to Timothy, "Preach the word," after which Bro. Hendricks in a very touching manner referred to the extreme suffering of the South. Quite a feeling was apparent throughout the congregation.— After this a collection was made for the sufferers and put into the hands of a brother, a R. R. agent. Then our beloved Bro. Troxel left for home. In the evening at 7 o'clock preaching at Mahomet in the Presbyterian church. Subject, "Saved by grace" to a crowded house. On Tuesday night at the shed again, good order and attention. Also Wednesday night, the last time in Piatt Co. to an orderly congregation. God bless them. We hope all that have not, will find Jesus very precious to their souls. Here our labors ended at this place. We had expected Bro. D. Vaniman to be with us, but had received a dispatch, that he was sick; hope he is well ere this. Thursday, went to Urbana church; meeting at night, also Friday night; had good congregations and good attention.— Saturday, at three P. M., our number was increased by the presence of brethren Joseph Hendricks, John Barnhart and C. Barnhart, besides the home ministry. The services opened in the regular order. Bro. Hendricks addressed the meeting from John 36:16, after which followed the Communion services. Many more people were present than could get into the house, for which we were sorry. Quite a large Communion for the place. Sunday at 10:30 had preaching at the meeting-house, another collection for the South; also at night to a crowded house, and the most intense interest seemed to be manifested. Here our labors ended at this place, when we felt loth to leave the place, but arrangements had been made to leave for Ogden, so leaving the meeting-house at night we went home with Adonijah Bowers, a minister in the Urbana church. We stayed with him and his kind family most of the day. Monday evening, held two meetings in Ogden. We then went to Swearingin's school-house; held one meeting, with some interest. The next night we had a Communion, at the house of Bro. Levy Harminson's, whose wife, a sister was sick. Here our labors closed.

About The Yellow Fever.

IN a letter from J. G. Snyder, Decatur, Ala., to S. J. Harrison, we glean the following: The people of this town became panic-stricken yesterday over yellow fever, and nearly the half fled from town, and this stopped everything. Three or four persons were taken down with bilious fever within the last couple days, and one died suddenly yesterday noon, and was somewhat yellow. Would-be's that know(?) everything (but in reality nothing) pronounced it yellow fever, and everybody that was always scary, packed and fled for their lives.— From my own reading I was satisfied, that it would be a new thing if it spread in a town the elevation that this is, and further, one of the worst cases was at the hotel that I stay at. I determined to stay, and tried to convince others, that there was nothing of it. To-day we had three yellow fever doctors to come and investigate. They examined every patient, and laughed at the idea of people calling it yellow fever. By their foolishness they have nearly ruined the town. People are afraid to come here and other towns won't let the people come to them. Some of the reports that went abroad, were, that the people were dropping dead all over town. School business is killed, dead until after frost.

I had begun the graded department and was progressing finely, but it is gone now; do not know when they will be back, so that I can commence again. The whole South is on suspense, and will run, from an infected refugee, like wild. There is some poor fellow from the infected towns on nearly every train, taken down sick; and is dropped off along the road, at some out-of-the-way place. Sometimes they receive attention, but generally they are left to themselves, at least till some doctor or nurse comes from Memphis. Thus far it has not been contracted by any one living in Alabama from the sick brought to the State.

I am well pleased with my new home, thus far. I am treated with all the respect and kindness, that I could wish. I can perceive but little or no difference in the manner of the people here from that in the North. They are just about as intelligent. In fact the children of the same age are farther advanced than the children in some Northern districts; I was surprised at the little fellows. The society of young ladies and gentlemen, that are respectables, is more refined than the Northern. There are some bad characters, as in all towns, where whiskey is sold.

The country and clime is delightful, crops are good. The soil looks odd to me—it looks like red sawdust.

I have just received my paper, and read the fever reports; it is horrible! No less than five hundred deaths during the last twenty-four hours! There are four women from Florida at the hotel, now waiting for the train to go to Memphis as nurses. They get big wages, but it is going to the jaws of death—money against life!

The weather is unfavorable—warm days and cool nights.

Way-side Gleanings.

Dear Brethren:—

INASMUCH as I promised many of you that I would inform you through the BRETHREN AT WORK in regard to our journey, I will now give you a few lines from this place: I got to Fulton, Ill. in time to cross the river on the last boat Thursday the fifth; (having started from Lanark in the morning, where I bid adieu to my dear family and a number of brethren and sisters). I met my friend David Fesler at Fulton, with whose family I often lodged, while on the Central Illinois mission. He is my companion in traveling West and I thank God for his dear company.

Saturday and Sunday we spent the time with Bro. Benjamin Miller and Bro. John Eshelman and families. Attended meeting on Sunday, which was a special feast to my soul. On Monday morning we bade them farewell. May God bless them. It seems to me I can hear them praying for us and our families, and it does my soul good. On the 11th we reached the neighborhood of the Brethren in Marshall Co., where I met with my father and mother once more and the father of my dear wife and some of the family. On the 12th we received a message from a very sick man, who wanted to be baptized. His family thought it would prove almost fatal to him, but he said, "the Lord is able, it is his work and he will bear me up." I beheld his children kiss him before he left the house, not expecting to see him any more alive. I tell you it was enough to bring tears from any rocky heart, when that father said: "Children don't weep so—you will see me again a happier man." A bed was made in the wagon and three of us brethren carried him and gently laid him in. When at the water two brethren carried him in and helped him upon his knees and then in that beautiful stream, from the hands of our dear old Bro. John Murray, he was baptized according to the Gospel direction. When that father returned home it would have done your soul good to have heard him say, "dear children I am here alive—I feel better even in body—and my soul is happy—I have always loved you, but now I think more of you than ever I did." One thing that made this scene so impressive was, that this man had even boasted of his unbelief in the Scriptures and had opposed the Brethren. O, I tell you it was a mighty sermon to me, when he laid his trembling hand in mine and said, "Brother Lemuel, God's power is greater than mine, and I thank him for it." O, dear Brethren, let us labor to experience more of the transforming power of God's Word.

On the evening of the 12th we had a very pleasant meeting with the brethren and sisters in their meeting-house, where we were much refreshed together. On the morning of the 13th we started on our journey. Reached Bro. Daniel Brubaker's Saturday morning, where we met Bro. William Bauman, who was conducting a series of meetings with the Brethren at that place. A number was added to the church and we felt that a much greater work could have been done, would William have staid longer. Bro. Daniel Brubaker talks of moving away, but the right man in the right place ought to be satisfied to stay where he is. On Monday morning the 19th, we started on our way farther West; and by Saturday evening we got into Nebraska City, where we remained over Sunday with my wife's sister. On the evening of the 24th, we reached the neighborhood of brother Henry Brubaker near Beatrice. We are now at the house of Bro. Henry. More anon. LEMUEL HILLERY.

GLEANINGS

From Moscow, Virginia.—The first Saturday in August there was a thanksgiving meeting at Beaver Creek; sermon by Bro. Isaac Long of Mill Creek district. He did not fail to hold forth the Gospel in its primitive purity, nor did he fail to tell the members their duty towards one another, and especially towards the poor.

Second Saturday of same month, there was a thanksgiving meeting held at Emanuel's church, in the same district; sermon by Bro. John Flory of Cook's Creek district. I have been greatly built up since our brother's admonition.

On the third Saturday of this month, there was a thanksgiving meeting at Moscow church, but before our thanksgiving meeting, we met in church council to attend to some business, and to make preparations for our Communion this Fall, which will be on the 9th of November. Also raised our quota for the Committee to California. This was our forenoon's work; had our thanksgiving meeting in the afternoon. Sermon by Enoch Brower, followed by Samuel Driver, both I think of Barren Ridge district. The ministerial aid was good, ministers being present from four districts. The fourth Friday of this month, they held a choice for a deacon and a minister; the lot fell on Emmanuel Long for minister and Anthony Miller for deacon. Two joined the church by baptism at the same time. On Sunday August 25th, the dedication of the new church in Cook's Creek district, near Bridgewater, was dedicated by the Brethren, and exclusively to their use; except on funeral occasions, other denominations have the privilege if so desired. The dedication was made by a sermon from Bro. Lind from Pennsylvania.—It surely was a good one, and suited the occasion. The house is a very large one; I think about 40x80 feet and probably larger. It is situated in the corner of a body of timber, right in the fork of two roads, which makes it very convenient. It is a fine site for a church; it is in plain view of Bridgewater, where there already reside a few of our members and our minister. I think our church will increase at that place, for it seemed that the people gladly heard the Truth. I believe that I can say that there were persons at the new church, on that day, that never had heard the whole Truth before, as it was proclaimed from the sacred desk. I never saw a much larger crowd at any other place on any other occasion, than there was at that church, before. I think that I could be safe in saying that two thousand persons were at that place. At three o'clock P. M. there was preaching again by Moses Miller, of P. There was not so large a crowd, owing to the unpleasant weather. Preaching about night. ROMAN F. MOGARY.

From South Bend, Indiana.—One more addition by confession and Baptism, one who became tired of sin and concluded where there is no cross there is no crown. Church news are very interesting to me. Oh! the emotions to which my heart gives vent, when the return of sinners to Christ salute my ear, it has a salutary effect upon those who are apprised of such soul-gladdening, Christ-announcing church-enjoying, God-satisfying news. When the angel will stand with one foot upon the sea and the other upon the shore for the purpose of declaring, time shall remain no longer. DANIEL WHIMPER.

From Little York, Ohio.—Our Love-feast is among the things in the past. We had a good meeting, notwithstanding the weather. It began to rain on Tuesday morning and rained until Friday afternoon, but we had no nice day on Saturday. Had excellent order until night; everything passed off in good order, and there were two added to the church by baptism, which makes six since the 30th of February. May we all work together for our good and for the saving of souls. J. HESSARD.

From Shoals, Indiana. We are glad to inform the many readers of the Brethren's Work, that the Gospel of Christ has proven to be "the power of God unto salvation," by adding one more to the little band of believers here, which caused our hearts to rejoice, and we have reason to believe that the angels in heaven also rejoiced to know that one more for whom Christ died, has embraced the opportunity, while in the prime of life, of sanctifying his lips, by confessing the Savior's name, and proved his faith by his works in submitting to the holy command of baptism, which Christ the Lord has honored before him. The few remarks that were made by brother Sell at the riverside were in good keeping with God's Word and we believe had good effect. We are pleased to say that Bro. William Noles is well posted in regard to the duties of a Christian, and is a man that looks for light in divine truth, and has for several months, been earnestly and faithfully consulting God's Word to see whether these things that we teach and practice as a church, were so. He may have to endure much by changing his religious views, but if he will make the Word of God the weapon of his warfare the truth, which is quick and powerful will prevail, and will put the enemies to flight, he will triumph over all opposition. Now dear brethren and sisters, we as a little band of "pilgrims and strangers in the earth," ask you to remember us in your prayers, that we may "lead a peaceable and quiet life in all godliness and honesty" and ever be found "immovable always abounding in the work of the Lord." DAVID A. NORCROSS.

From H. C. Lucas.—Brother Jesse Calvert came to our country the 5th inst. and remained with us about two weeks, preaching every night and twice on Sunday. He held the meetings at five or six different places, not staying in any one place long enough to rouse any considerable interest. There were three additions to the church however, and the salvation of one soul, is worth much labor. MARCOB, III.

From Maggozee Church, Franklin Co., Va.—It is through the kind mercies of the All-wise Providence, that I am spared to offer an item from this part of God's moral vineyard.

We are made to rejoice when sinners turn from their evil ways, and enlist under King Jesus as the Shepherd of their souls. Since I wrote before we have had seventeen accessions to the church by baptism, in all forty-one this Summer; one reclaimed and some more applicants not yet received. May they hold out faithful to the end and receive that glorious crown reserved in heaven for the ransomed people of God. Sinners why will you reject the offers of mercy? Come to Jesus, who is now seated at the right hand of God interceding for you. WILLIAM A. PETERS.

From Buffalo, Mo.—Our Love-feast the 21st of Sept., passed off pleasantly. It was a time of refreshment to our little church; we were all made to rejoice. Bro. J. Fair, J. Yost and Noah Quert were with us. They did not shun to declare the whole counsel of God. On the 22nd inst. one came out, and was buried with Christ in baptism, to walk in newness of life. S. H. SOYB.

From Crete, Nebraska.—Our Love-feast is among the things of the past. The congregation was rather small but we had the best of order. It was the best thing of the kind, that ever occurred in this vicinity. The remarks were made, while the Brethren were seated around the table, observing the solemn ordinance of foot-washing and Lord's Supper, that that resembles the picture of the last supper the Savior ate with his disciples. And O, how solemn it seemed to your unworthy brother, to see all seated there, about to commemorate the death and suffering of our crucified and risen Lord! O, brethren and sisters, let us take courage and thank the Lord of heaven and earth as the apostle Paul did when he saw the Brethren at the three taverns. Ministering brethren with us, were S. C. Stamp, from Ed's City, Henry Brubaker and Frank Shick, from Beatrice. Under the circumstances, the Brethren thought it advisable to partially organize a congregation, which they did, electing two deacons; the lot falling on Bro. Kelley and the writer. LAFAYETTE SULLIVAN.

GEORGE WALTER.—In the Shamion congregation, Carroll Co., Ill., Sept. 27, 1878, brother George M. Buckwalter, aged 28 years, 5 months and one day.

He died in the faith, leaving a number of warm-hearted relatives and friends to mourn their loss. Funeral services by J. H. Moore to an immense congregation.

(Primitive Christian, please copy).

DRUSHEL.—Near Berlin, Holmes Co., Ohio, May 29th, 1878, Annie Drushel, aged 31 years, one month and 22 days.

She was afflicted for four years. She formerly belonged to the Lutheran church. She had not united with the church, only by making the good confession that as soon as she was able in body she would do so, but ere this opportunity was granted, her spirit took its flight. She left two little daughters to mourn the loss of a dear mother. Funeral services from Amos 4: 12.

The Brethren at Work. A RELIGIOUS WEEKLY. PUBLISHED BY J. H. MOORE & M. M. ESHELMAN.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK is an uncompromising advocate of Primitive Christianity in all its ancient purity.

It recognizes the New Testament as the only infallible rule of faith and practice.

And maintains that the sovereign, unmerited, unsolicited grace of God is the only source of pardon, and that the vicarious sufferings and meritorious works of Christ are the only price of redemption.

That Faith, Repentance and Baptism are conditions of pardon, and hence for the remission of sins.

That Trine Immersion or dipping the candidate three times face-forward is Christian Baptism.

That Feet-Washing, as taught in John 13, is a divine command to be observed in the church.

That the Lord's Supper is a full meal, and, in connection with the Communion, should be taken in the evening, or after the close of the day.

That the Salutation of the Holy Kiss, or Kiss of Charity, is binding upon the followers of Christ.

That War and Retaliation are contrary to the spirit and self-denying principles of the religion of Jesus Christ.

That a Non-Conformity to the world in dress, customs, daily walk and conversation is essential to true holiness and Christian piety.

It maintains that in public worship or religious exercises, Christians should appear as directed in Col. 3: 14, 5.

It also advocates the scriptural duty of Anointing the Sick, as directed in the 4th of the 5th of James.

In short it is a vindicator of all that Christ and the Apostles have delivered to us in His Gospels and the Canonical Epistles. It is published for the Brethren, to point out ground that all must come to be infallibly safe.

Price, per Annum, $1.50.

CHURCH FAIRS, FESTIVALS, &c.

CHURCH festivals, levees and fairs,
 What'er these aims are only snares,
 They're deep-laid schemes to raise the wind,
 Just suited to the carnal mind.
 They serve as bribes to blind men's eyes,
 As though to indulge was sacrifice.
 A festival, implies a feast,
 Attended with much fun and jest,
 Where (those) who have the scrip to pay,
 May eat and drink and joke and play.
 At fairs they offer toys to sell,
 With tricks to make them rebel well.
 In view of what they offer those,
 'Twould pass for Bunyan's "vanity fair!"
 The same is true of these levees,
 Designed the carnal mind to please;
 Where rowdy, saint and priest combine,
 To give the crowd "a first-rate time."

They all are, but religious spies,
 Got up the church's debt to ease;
 Where men may get their quarter's worth
 Of fun and frolic, tricks and mirth,
 "Young folks," they say, "their sport will have,
 And for the same they'll freely give;
 We'd not curtail their liberty,
 But save them by monopoly;
 In that we'd regulate their fun,
 And have it where we all may come,
 And keep them from the excess you know,
 To which young folks are apt to go,
 Their money too, we thus can save,
 By offering what they're bent to have,
 And using it for church debts too—
 It proves a plan both apt and new,
 In former days no one would dare
 To have a church levee or fair;
 But times have changed, and things you know
 Makes change of men and manners too."
 Where they conclude to have a spree,
 The church assembles and agree,
 To choose for aids each belle and beau,
 Who draw the crowds where'er they go;
 And always give a general call,
 To every sort both great and small;
 They advertise for such a night,
 "Admittance gained at candle light,"
 They plead with them, "don't fail to come;
 You'll get your money's worth of fun,
 Just pay your quarter at the door,
 'Tis worth the money four times o'er;
 Ice-cream and oysters kept for sale,
 Rich dainties served by charming belles,
 Cool soda too, the best in town,
 With toys from twenty guineas down;
 With lotteries and grab-bags too,
 An office here with mail for you,
 A gold-ring cake, 'tis rich and nice,
 We ask but fifty cents a slice,
 And then if any desire to raffle,
 With such desires, we would not trifle.
 If we the objects may present,
 For which your money shall be spent,
 We think it proves an easy way,
 Of getting much with little pay;
 And if the Bible be a prize,
 We think no scruple should arise,
 An able clown will cure the c,,
 And make you laugh all through the fair,
 And music too will break the spell,
 With richest notes at intervals."

Thus, rowdy, priest, and saint profane
 The house made sacred to God's name,
 They make the church a banquet-hall,
 Where all the rabble may carouse,
 In pride, and best, and tricks and fun,
 Till ten at night, perhaps till one,
 Idolaters as Paul would say,
 "Who eat and drink and are to glory"
 Oh! that they would one moment pause,
 And see how they de grace God's cause,
 While worldly men may say,
 It seems that we're no worse than they.

Where are the sands of former days,
 Who honor God in all their ways;
 Who 'gainst such work their voices raise
 And spend their hours in prayer and praise,
 Who in their closets can but grieve,
 While others make a den of thieves,
 Of churches, which were once the place
 Where God displayed His saving grace,
 Whose hearts are ever pained to see
 The church and world get up a spree,
 And call the noble far and near
 To come and join in worldly cheer?

Where are the watchman faithful, true,
 Who sleep not all the dark night through,
 Who see the danger from afar,
 And promptly all the truth declare,
 Unworn by smiles or frowns of man,
 Who'er they are, what'er their clan,
 Who love the flock and not the fleece,
 Who'd rather work than take their ease,
 Who'd rather serve than be a guest,

Who never swerve to please the rest,
 Who love their Master and His way,
 And never fret about the pay,
 But faithful to their trust go on,
 That they may have the word, "well done?"

PHILOLOGICAL DISSERTATION OF THE WORD BAPTISM.

BY LEWIS O. HUMMER.

IN my ignorance I often wondered why it was, that learned men differ so much, and so long, about the meaning of the word, "baptism." I thought there must be a "screw loose" somewhere, and I accordingly entered into an impartial investigation of the arguments presented on both sides of the issue—at the same time keeping in view the necessity of obtaining all the additional light possible,—with a hope that I might some day be instrumental in aiding in the settlement of this perplexing question. If any man is capable of divesting himself of bias, I can assure my readers that I have done it. I will now give my readers a very concise history of my observations; with some appropriate criticisms. I soon discovered in my investigations that the subject was not half so difficult of solution, as it was to divest the mind of popular error. In the first age of Christianity, there was no controversy about the meaning of the word, "baptism," or its counterpart. So long as the apostles lived and practiced under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, immersion was the mode. But soon after the death of the apostle, when the words of the Spirit were reduced to writing, and there no longer existed an infallible interpreter, the old Mosaic institutions or teachings were soon to be connected with Christianity; and the two had to be blended into one. This soon led into the baptism of infants, in conforming to the old rule of circumcision. They soon lost sight of the lesson that Christ taught with respect to infants, and thus perpetuated the old belief that infants were unholy, and needed regeneration as well as adults. This eventually led them into the shameful practice of baptizing infants in exaltado. Immersion was impossible in that case, and water had to be applied to the child, instead of taking the child and putting it into the water. They considered this the same rite as though immersion had been the mode, and called it by the same name.

It might be proper to state before an inadvertent upon this shameful practice, that baptism was considered essential to salvation in all ages of Christianity, and the denial is of recent origin, and a mere exigency in the defense of certain dogmas. While the ancients were right with reference to the essentiality of baptism in order to salvation, they overlooked the fact that Christ required penitent believers as proper subjects for baptism. They also forget that Jesus said, "suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the KINGDOM OF HEAVEN." And "Except ye (that have sinned against God) be converted and become as little children, ye cannot enter into the kingdom of heaven."

My readers can all see that lack of discrimination led the ancients into this infant baptism, and that not only of newly born, but before they were born. We have already said, that unborn infants could not be immersed, and that the water had to be applied to the infant, instead of taking the infant and putting it into the water. But all those that were born before baptism, were always at first immersed. But their infant baptism was attended with great difficulty, and soon led them to sprinkling their babies instead of immersing them. This was also applying the water to the subject, instead of putting it into the water as Jesus commanded. This mode of applying the water, was also considered the same rite as though immersion were the mode—and called by the same name. The immersion of sick persons was also attended with considerable trouble, and as sprinkling was considered valid in the case of infants, it would certainly be valid for sick persons. And in this way the validity of sprinkling was extended from infants to sick adults, and from sick adults, to all who preferred; and in some cases or countries it was in the end enforced by law with the penalties of death; the change in applying the water to the subjects, instead of dipping the subjects into the water, commenced with infants in embryo in cases of danger of death, and ended as the almost universal practice under edicts of popes and kings in that age of Christianity known as the "dark ages." At no period, however, was immersion annihilated by the rigorous edicts of popes and kings. There always were some who preferred the institution of Christ at the risk of life to the institution of man. It seems that the first intruders upon the Christian rite did lack the perspicacity to discover the fact that a change in the manner of the performance of the rite, was a change in the rite itself. Or in other words, setting aside the mode of administration, was virtually setting aside the rite. Sprinkling and pouring and wetting, are all different rites and can never constitute the same rite; although millions of people call it by the same name. If millions of people called a horse cow, that would never make a cow out of the horse—neither can sprinkling be baptism, although millions of people called it baptism. But we will illustrate this part of the subject under the laws of appropriation. The church of Rome exhibits more candor and common sense in boldly avowing that they changed the institution of baptism by the authority of the church, than Protestants who endeavor to force all the different modes and institutions out of the meaning of the word, "baptism." We will see before we close this dissertation, that sprinkling and pouring are not baptism.

ECHOES FROM THE EAST.

A Sudden death in our Sunday services—Two Persons Baptized—An Evening Meeting—A timely Article.

SEPTEMBER 21st. To-day at 11:30 A. M. one number was made, one less by the death of a dear old brother—Henry Eberly. It is said he died within fifteen minutes, not having been sick. He was generally a regular attendant at our meetings, and usually in lively condition, though said to have died of heart disease. He was poor in this world, but we believe he was indeed rich in faith. Often we met him in the sanctuary at the close of the services with a warm greeting and received words in testimony of the comforts of our holy religion, while he shed tears of joy. But he is gone. May he rest in hope and come up in the first resurrection.

September 22nd. We worshiped with our brethren and sisters at the Welty appointment to-day. After singing a few verses of the 253rd hymn, private coun-oil was held, (as is our usual custom), in regard to receiving two applicants for church membership. It was found by the deacon who visited them, that they were entirely willing to accept the doctrines of the church according to the Gospel, and it was agreed to receive them. Our beloved elder opened the meeting with the 378th hymn. After exhortation and prayer, a deacon brother by request, read the 25th chapter of Matthew. A minister then spoke upon the Parable of the Ten Virgins, showing that it had reference to

1. The church of Christ at His coming.
 2. The wise virgins accepted.
 3. The foolish virgins disappointed.
- O may we keep the lamp of our profession burning and the oil of God's grace in our hearts, that we may be ready for every good work now, and ready for heaven when the Master comes. After words of testimony, the 18th of St. Matthew was read to the applicants and the usual questions asked. The 213th hymn was sung, and after a season of devotion, the meeting was dismissed. Baptism was administered in a meadow not far away, in the presence of a considerable number of spectators and members. It was attended with solemnity and good feeling. If there is joy in heaven over sinners that turn to God, we also should joy and rejoice. May they be faithful, and find in Jesus "a very present help."

Our evening meeting in town was well attended. The text was in Luke 13: 24, 20. The hymns sung were 49, 334, and 328.

Attention was again directed to the Yellow Fever sufferers at the South, and nine dollars were contributed, we understood.

Sept. 29th. Our meeting at Price's not well attended to-day on account of the inclemency of the weather. The 90th hymn opened the service with appropriate sentiments. After prayer the 5th chapter of John was read as usual. The ministering brother present chose the 14th verse as containing the theme of the hour. Our Lord was held forth as He who can make us whole. We must keep whole by His grace. Sinning again may bring us into greater condemnation.

Our meeting in town this evening was not well attended by outsiders, there being a Sunday-school jubilee in one of the so-called churches. Our brother's text we feel to recommend heartily to every believer: "Behold the Bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet Him." He spoke of

1. The Heavenly Bridegroom.
2. The Waiting Bride.
3. The Coming day.

Jesus—the Church—the Second Advent. These are themes of momentous import. They should engage the constant, practical attention of every Christian. He will come. He may come very soon—any hour. Are we looking for Him? Are we ready for His final, glorious appearing and kingdom?

A word more. I want to call the special attention of every brother and sister to No. 39 of this excellent Christian journal. Turn again to page 4, and read "Stand aside,—get away, or keep quiet." I have no praise to utter, because I know my brother M. M. E., would not be well pleased. But I want to say it is a word in season and all should act accordingly. Let us be true to our profession. If there are those who want to run away with their God-given liberties, they may push us "aside."

so they can go on to their reward. "Not all gold that glitters," and not all Christians who say they are. Let us seek to be established in all the doctrine, "lead a quiet and peaceable life," work with the Lord in the ways He banded down to us, and so shall we live in love to God and man. Peace be with all who love the Lord sincerely.

Yours in waiting for the Bridegroom,
D. B. M.

ECHOES FROM THE WEST.

Formality—Love of Money—Our Lord's Day.
NUMBER II.

IT is astonishing and even alarming to observe how Christianity has drifted into mere formality. Among the many millions of professors, comparatively few know anything about primitive Christianity. In almost every town of fifteen hundred or two thousand inhabitants, may be found some half dozen or more churches. They all have some form of worship peculiar to their own taste or notion. Enter their assemblies for worship, and it is needless to say that the most fashionable will find some professor a little ahead of them. Among the most prominent members, you may find a garb of the latest style. In not a few instances, even the minister and his wife may be looked upon as sample patterns of the latest fashion, in the highest style. Listen to such ministers preaching on the subject of humility, and you will find they have it so closely confined to their hearts that in outward appearance there is nothing left.

There are those who may trust too much in dress or outward formality, but the opposite extreme is far more common and dangerous. That form of godliness which is the outgrowth of God's Word, taking root in the heart, shaping man after the model of God's Word, and the example of Christ, is as essential to Christian vitality as air to physical existence. Every form not in harmony with His Word, is form only, without the approbation of God. Paul says, "God be thanked that ye were the servants of sin, but ye have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which was delivered to you. Being then made free from sin, ye become the servants of righteousness." Rom. 6: 17. The form of doctrine that the Roman brethren obeyed when they were made free from sin, is what we must obey in order to be free from sin.

"The love of money is the root of all evil," says Paul. The testimonies establishing the truthfulness of this language, are of daily occurrence. Almost every paper we read, records some crime or outrage committed, murder, the influence of the love of money.

It does not seem possible that men could be influenced by any power, to rob, cheat, starve and in almost every other way maltreat and abuse his fellow-man; yet the love of money does all this. This great evil, we fear, is not confined to non-professors only. Among those who have named the name of Christ, in the church of God, we may find some who are under the influence of this great evil. How many God only knows. Much of our church trouble is caused by this great evil. May I not turn to my brethren, and ask, are we not to some degree guilty of being under the same influence? "By the fruit we shall know the tree." Thousands of men and women would be willing to obey the truth as it is in Jesus. From every direction the cry is made, "come and preach." The commission from the Savior, "preach the Gospel to every creature," has not been recalled. There are men who are willing to go and comply with the commission, but have not the means. In the church may be found brethren with multiplied thousands, who would have thousands to spare, to throw into the treasury of the Lord. Why is it withheld? May there not be too much love for money.

The brethren's work of evangelizing is a good move, but cannot be a success without money. Other arrangements are made by the brethren for more extensive evangelism, but will need a little money. Shall they have it, or does the "love of money, the root of all evil," forbid liberal donations by those who have it. Reader, answer for yourself.

Sunday, September 15th, spent a little time in writing for the BROTHERS AT WORK. Assembled for divine worship at ten A. M. Brother Martin Buechly from Waterloo, Iowa, addressed the congregation from John 3: 16. He first spoke of the strong ties of relationship, and the wonderful degree of love, God manifested in the work of redemption. He tried to show the similarity between Moses and Christ, and alluded to the salvation of Moses from the power of king Pharaoh's command. And secondly, he tried to show how God, through this Moses, delivered the children of Israel from Egyptian bondage. That God through Moses, gave a law to Israel, and held them responsible for every violation of that law down to a ribbon of blue.

Five o'clock P. M., was the time appointed for our Bible talk with the young members, which was well attended both by members and others, and seemed to be quite interesting to all. This exercise, from present indications, will be quite interesting and useful, especially to our young members.

September 22nd, we met in Falls City at the hour of eleven. Brother Buechly addressed us from Rev. 22: 17. He spoke of Christ's second coming and the glorious meeting of the saints. The thought of that most glorious event always serves as a feast to our soul.

Bible talk at 5 P. M., and meeting in the evening, which closed our work for the day. C. F.

IMPROPRIETIES IN WORSHIP.

BY C. F. DEWITZER.

"God is a Spirit; and they that worship him, must worship him in spirit and in truth." John 4: 24.

NOTHING in which man exercises is so sacred as to be exempt from improprieties. The instructions which the divine Word gives us concerning the manner of conducting devotional exercises, are few and simple, and do not deprive the impulse of the spiritual mind, the liberty of spontaneous exercise. The common routine which we are by nature inclined to follow. The Savior in giving his disciples directions how to pray, said they should not be like the heathen who think they will be heard for their much speaking; and express reasons why they should not be like unto them, is, "for your Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask him." There is no doubt through the endeavor to make a prayer comprehensive, and of customary length, these instructions are sometimes considerably overreached, and a very important part of religious service somewhat abused.

But the improprieties in prayers probably consist more frequently in the subject matter presented in the prayer, than in the length of it. In this, we find a wide difference among Christian professors. While there are those who seem habitually inclined to bring before the Lord in a public prayer, a catalogue of sins and an amount of guilt which the Lord's prayer seems too short and simple to cover, there are those who cannot use the Lord's prayer at all, for fear of asking God to do (in asking him to forgive us our sins), that which he has already done, basing this view on such an interpretation of Heb. 10: 2, and a few other passages which are similarly construed. This view, of course, sets aside the Lord's prayer as not being a proper prayer to be used by a converted person. While it is true that Christ left this formula to his disciples before the day of Pentecost, and also before he had offered himself "once for all," it does not follow that it is any less appropriate for a child of God to make intercession for the weakness of the flesh, after he is "once purged," than before. Neither does the fact that the work of atonement was finished, make it any less appropriate for Christians to say, concerning the weakness and misdoings that still continue in the flesh, "forgive us our sins," that it is for the unconverted to say the same.

God's finished work of atonement is one thing, and his finished work of grace in the heart is quite another; and certain it is, that neither of these are being finished just when we are converted; these two embrace the whole economy of redemption. The one was finished and complete long before we had done either good or evil, and the other so far from being finished just when we were converted, was then rightly begun. But the phrase, once "purged," presents an other thought.

The day when the sinner has given himself entirely up to Christ, not simply to cry, Lord, Lord, but to believe and to do; the blood of Christ which cleanseth from all sin, is applied, and he is in the full enjoyment of a sanctification that is as complete as sanctification can be in this life. He is "every whit whole." "Justified freely by his grace, through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus; whom God has set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past." Rom. 3: 25. God does not forgive sins before they are committed, or else the elect of who were chosen from the beginning according to his foreknowledge, might have had all their sins forgiven before they had committed any. It is not strange that we are taught to "confess our sins," after we are once "purged," if we consider that it was I, (the natural man) and yet not I, (the spiritual man) that did it. If Paul, after being dead and buried with Christ, can yet protest to the Corinthians that he dies daily, is it strange that he should confess his sins daily after being "once purged?" Certainly not, if it was he, (Paul), and yet not he, (the new man) that did it, neither does it follow from these premises that the atonement was complete.

There is no better evidence of a charis, than a quick cognizance, and aversion to every sin in word, deed, or thought, that may enter into it. But what obstacle, except it be unbelief, should demand an amount of reasoning, when the Word is as plain on this subject as language can make it? For, though there be no sin in us, yet John says, "If we confess our sins, (which are in us), he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." 1 John 1: 9. This is the language of one who was "once purged," and it certainly removes every objection to the prayer, "Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us." But this does not teach that it is proper for a sanctified and devoted child of God to come before his heavenly Father in the language of an unwashed sinner. For instance, "O Lord God, with shame and confusion of face, we come before thee, Thou art holy, but we are unholy, Thou art kind, but we are ungrateful." This is not proper language for a true disciple who has the love of God abiding with him; and if perchance one may have so far fallen from his first love, or become so entangled in the cares of this world, as to render such a prayer proper in his case, it is certainly needful that he should then, and thence forward, "bring forth fruit meet for repentance." The unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of heaven. God grant that we be not deceived.

Physically, a man may have been only in the extreme. He may have wallowed in the mire, and gone about in filthy rags; but if this poison has had his filth thoroughly washed away, his rags exchanged for a clean, whole garb, his habits and his occupation changed to those of cleanliness, he will have no more conscience of the filth from which he was "once purged," and yet he would be always clean, though he carefully avoids dirt and filth, he must wash daily.

This is the true condition of a saint, though he is "every whit whole," yet he must watch and pray, or else he cannot retain his sanctity and grow in grace. Yes, "watch and pray." And as long as he continues in these two, accompanied with true faith and a sincere desire for a plain sight of the path of duty, and for an ever-willing mind to walk in it, he will not have occasion to come before his Maker in the language of a convicted sinner. May the Lord help us. Of ourselves we can do nothing.

A BRAVE SPIRIT.

YOUNG man, be brave. Many people imagine that courage is confined to the field of battle. There could be no greater mistake. Even contentions with men—unavoidable contentions, are not by any means limited to public battle fields. And there are other struggles with adverse circumstances—struggles, it may be with habits, or appetite, or passions—all of which require as much courage and more of perseverance, than the brief, exciting encounter of battle. Enough to contend with, enough to overcome, lies in the way of a young man. It may be one kind of a difficulty, or it may be another; but plenty of difficulties of some kind or other every young man just starting in life may be sure he will find. And the essential thing about him is, whether he will be a coward and succumb, or what the Indians so significantly term "a brave." He who never fights, no matter how adverse the circumstances, always enjoys within himself the consciousness of a perpetual, spiritual triumph, of which nothing can deprive him.

Decisions and promptitude, even though sometimes a man may err for want of due deliberation, will, in the long run, more often conduce to success than a slow judgment that comes too late.

LANARK, ILL. OCTOBER 17, 1878.

THE Love-feast at Polo, week before last, we heard, was well attended, and the meeting a good one. Two were baptized.

THE "Stein and Ray Debate" commences in this issue, and will be found on first page, which has been set apart for that purpose.

A LETTER from Ashland informs us, that the College building is about ready for roofing. They seem to be progressing finely with their enterprise.

THE good work still goes on in Denmark. One more baptized lately. Brethren, pray for the success of the cause over there, and not only pray, but show your faith by your works in helping the cause along.

IN order to accommodate all new subscribers with copies containing the debate from the beginning, we find it necessary to run a number of extra copies this issue. Those who come first will be first served.

WE are glad to note that brother David Wolfe, of Adams Co., Ill. is improving in health, and it is hoped he will soon be able to attend to his ministerial duties so much needed in his and adjoining congregations.

WE are always glad to receive church news from every part of the brotherhood, and among the first things read by our readers, is that part of the paper. Let us hear how you prosper in the Lord, and how the saints among you are getting along.

THE devil is in all his glory when he succeeds in getting the Lord's faithful servants to quit their work and wrestle with some of his imps, that are not overly much thought of. He knows that if they cannot be overcome, they can be kept from their work at least, and in this way injure the cause.

THE Milledgeville Feast came off last Tuesday and Wednesday. It was our privilege to attend the first day only. The meeting was not as large as usual, and not many ministers from a distance, yet taking it all in all, it was a pleasant feast, and to us an enjoyable season. A heavy storm coming up in the evening disturbed the meeting some.

BRETHREN Jacob Harley and Jacob Conner with their companions from Harleysville, Pa., are visiting friends in Lanark and Shannon, and attending some of the Love-feasts in this part of the country. The members here are always glad to have old acquaintances call and see them. It is pleasant to thus associate.

BROTHER D. B. Gibson closed an interesting series of meetings in the Rock River congregation last week. The congregations were large and the interest good. Three were received into the church by baptism, and one restored. He commenced another series at Shannon last Friday evening, immediately after the Feast.

CHILDREN AT WORK. — Neither labor nor expense will be spared to give the children a paper, that will gently lead them to love, honor and reverence God's Word, and cause them to love Him, who loves them. Children will read. They are taught that; and now it remains for parents to say what they shall read. Good reading matter, will make good minds, and good minds are a blessing in any family. Try the Children at Work one year. Price of BRETHREN AT WORK and Children at Work to one address, one year, $2.00.

LAST Thursday and Friday was the Shannon Feast, held in their large meeting-house at that place. The congregation was very large and plenty of ministerial aid. Everybody seemed happy; in fact, the meeting was a good one, and we all felt loth to leave the place. It is to be regretted that for the want of room at the tables, all could not commune. It was the largest Feast ever held at that place.

AND now it is reported that the regalia of Cyrus the Great, of whom mention is made in Daniel 10: 1, have been dug up in Galicia. The place is near where the Greek historian locates his death. The time was not far back when such an announcement would have been met with nothing but laughter. But discoveries as wonderful are made almost yearly.

SIX hundred Mormons sailed from Liverpool for this country on the 14th. They come from Germany, Switzerland, and Great Britain. Now brethren, does this not show that the Mormons, who are walking in darkness, are doing vastly more towards converting people to the deeds of darkness than we are, to get them to see the light? Arise, let us go to work in full earnest. We want more preachers, more preaching, and more tracts.

It is reported that Dr. Cumming, of London, in a recent lecture announced to his congregation that he firmly believed that many of his hearers would live to witness Christ's second coming. The rapid fulfilling of prophecy indicates the near approach of the great millennium, and it would be a source of much happiness if we could be permitted to realize that the grand event shall take place during the present generation.

THE world is full of people who are willing to work, provided they can do something great. They are not willing to spend their time on little things—there is too much talent and great learning at stake. Such people are of very little benefit to either the Lord or anybody else. To the redeemed he wants to say, "Thou hast been faithful over a few things, and I will make thee ruler over many things." First, learn to do little things well, and improve as you advance in life's station.

It is certainly wrong to talk of a member's faults behind his back, with a view of injuring him. If you have anything to say about his faults, go to him like a Christian, and tell him all about it, and if he is the person he ought to be, it will do him good. It does no good to talk of a man's faults behind his back, nor is it right. Such things ought not to be allowed in any congregation that wishes to retain peace and harmony, nor should any, professing the name of Jesus, permit himself, or herself to drift into such a sinful practice. If persisted in, it is enough to sink any soul into everlasting ruin.

People who aim to fight the devil on his own ground are not as wise as the swan, of which is given an incident below. If you want to fight the devil and sin successfully, keep on the Lord's side: "A curious battle between a fox and a swan occurred some years ago in England, at a place named Pensey. The swan, sitting on her eggs on one side of the river, observed a fox swimming towards her from the opposite shore. Rightly judging she could best grapple with the fox in her native element, she plunged into the water, and after beating him off for some time with her wings, at length succeeded in drowning him."

It seems that the Brethren in Southern Illinois are alive in the missionary work. Their appointing four missionaries at their last district meeting, indicates their determination to spread the Truth and build up churches. This is what we want—less talk and more work. If every district in the brotherhood will take hold of the work with a true earnestness a vast amount of good can, and will be accomplished. Their proposal to work with the Northern district in the Central mission field is the right step in the right direction. Hope the brethren will keep our readers posted on their efforts in the different parts of the State.

BEFORE the Home Circle was discontinued in the BRETHREN AT WORK, we received many good letters for that department from the children. When the Children at Work was begun, all those letters were transferred to its editor, who has given place to most of them in that paper. Perhaps many of the little folks thought their letters were thrown into the waste basket, because they never appeared in this paper; but if they will subscribe for the Children at Work, they will find that their efforts have been appreciated. We do not want to discourage the youth, but feel to encourage them to write and early learn to love pure and undefiled religion as set forth by Christ.

ON the 22nd of March, 1855, the following law was passed in the State of Indiana: "Sec. 1.—That every person of the age of eighteen years and upwards, who shall profanely curse, swear, or imprecate, by or in the name of God, Jesus Christ or the Holy Ghost, shall be deemed guilty of profanity, and on conviction thereof, shall be fined in the sum of not less than one, nor more than three dollars for each offense." Of course it is not heeded, and amounts to comparatively nothing so far as the morals of the country is concerned. But men wot swear in the State of Ind., not only violate the law of God, but of the State, also.

A DANISH MONTHLY.

BROTHER Hope writes us that a monthly paper published in the Danish language is much needed in Denmark at present, and would be the means of accomplishing a great amount of good towards spreading the truth and defending the doctrine of the Brethren.

BRO. Hope has worked hard day and night, and is now almost worn out, so that it will not be advisable to require much traveling of him in the future. Others can do that work while he devotes much of his time to the spreading of the truth by means of the press; and a small monthly would enable him to do that with effect.

What we want now, is one or two wealthy brethren or sisters to take hold of the projected enterprise and sustain it with their means. It will be some years, perhaps, before the paper will be self-sustaining. It will have to be sustained by donations for quite awhile. We have plenty of wealthy members who could furnish the means for starting such a paper and not feel it. What say ye brethren? Is there not a brother or sister among us who wants to do a good work, who wants to put some of his means to work for the Lord's cause? Here is an excellent opportunity, and a project that every lover of truth would like to see effected. Let us hear from some of you at once.

Do not think this a strange request, or one that is unreasonable, for other denominations, who are less concerned about the whole truth than us, do far greater. It is a common thing for persons among them to give from five hundred to ten thousand dollars yearly for similar projects. Let us have as much zeal as they, and push the good work forward. It will take a person of some means to do this, and when once done, that brother or sister can then see why the Lord has blessed them with more means than they need for their own individual necessities.

The Advents of America are just flooding that country with papers and tracts, are doing their utmost to overpower the Brethren's doctrine, and thus refute our efforts at spreading the truth. It will not cost much to start and sustain the paper. Brother Hope can do about all the work on it and thus curtail expenses.

QUALIFICATIONS BEFORE ELECTIONS.

"The article in the last No. of the BRETHREN AT WORK, concerning the solemn event that took place at Lanark, meets my approbation fully. The calling of the church together, not at least time, but at a council meeting and then laying the qualifications before the members, that they may know what kind of material is best adapted to the Master's work, is certainly the right way. Using this method needs the laying down of no qualifications after the choice is made. If this method is carried out, there will be more satisfaction in selecting church officers and in church government."

A. S. LEHMAN.

REMARKS.

IT is hoped that this subject will receive special attention. It wants to be looked at from a Bible stand-point, and settled by apostolic usage. I am of the impression that it has not been studied with the care it should.

The selection of church officers is one of the most important duties left to the church, for on that largely depends the prosperity and purity of the body. To neglect duty in this respect is to open the door to discord and corruption. If the official body can be kept pure, and composed of none but good and faithful men, the way is open for securing and retaining that simplicity and holiness that should characterize the church of God on earth.

Paul gave Timothy a special charge regarding the installation of officers, telling him that the word should be committed to none but "faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also," 2 Tim. 2: 2. The terms, "faithful" and "able," as used and applied by the apostle, contain a depth of meaning seldom comprehended by the careless thinker. In order that none but faithful men might be installed into office, the Scriptures lay down certain rules, regulating the qualifications that such persons should possess before being fully entrusted with the sacred position. In fact, the Lord tells just what kind of men he wants. If the officer is to be a deacon or elder, the exact qualifications are given in plain and simple terms. The man who carefully reads these instructions as given by the Holy Spirit, and then picks out the man possessing these qualifications and votes for him, is, in his voting, influenced by the Spirit, and his choice is the choice of the Spirit.

The only safe way then to pursue, is to follow the apostolic example, and lay down the qualifications prior to the voting. When the seven were chosen at Jerusalem, to take charge of the tables, special care was taken to tell the members just what kind of men were wanted. They did not wait till the election was over and then lay down the qualifications. Nothing of that kind was practiced in the primitive church. If a congregation proposes to enter into an election to make choice of some brother to serve the church, great care should be taken to tell the members just what kind of a man the Lord wants, not the kind we want, but what the Lord wants. This can be found out by carefully reading what the apostles, in their epistolary writings have said. If these qualifications were always laid down and fully explained before elections, we would make less mistakes. I say we, because the Holy Ghost makes no mistakes. If we would always follow the instructions of the Spirit, as given in the Scriptures, neither would we make any mistakes in this particular, but all such mistakes result from our not following the Word. The Word is plain, it is explicit, and he who follows that Word—looks around and picks out the man that fits the Word—is guided by the Spirit.

Brethren, one great trouble in many of our elections is, we do not refer the members to the Word enough. We do not read the Scriptures enough on these points; nor do we preach on them sufficiently. There is less preaching done on that subject among us than any one point I know of, and yet the purity and welfare of the church depend on our understanding and practicing what the apostles have enjoined in relation to this question. Let us search the Scriptures with more care, and obey them in all their parts.

THE KISS OF CHARITY.

THE apostle Paul, in his letters to the brethren at Rome, Corinth and Thessalonica, urged them to salute each other with a holy kiss. Rom. 16: 16; 1 Cor. 16: 20; 2 Cor. 13: 12; 1 Thess. 5: 26. The apostle Peter, in his letter to the sojourners, (Gr. paraphrasis) scatter'd throughout Pontus, Galatia, Cappadocia, Asia and Bithynia, urges them to salute one another with a kiss of charity. Paul to the Romans and Corinthians, says, "Aspasathe alleous en philomati agio," and to the brethren at Thessalonica, says, "Aspasathe tous adelphous pantes en philomati agio." To the former he says, "Salute each other with a holy kiss." Salute "each other" and salute "all the brethren" is the same. If "each other" does not refer to "brethren," then there might be room for cavilers.

Peter says: "Aspasathe alleous philomati agapes," that is, "Salute you each other with a kiss of love." Paul calls the salutation a holy kiss, and Peter calls it a kiss of love. A kiss of love, in the Bible sense, is a holy kiss, and a holy kiss is certainly a kiss of love. But recently a new idea appeared on this subject, and like all ideas in opposition to complete obedience to Christ, it is so far from the faith and practice of the primitive Christians that not one particle of weight is attached to it. However the idea is one that thousands may eagerly grasp, and thus prevent them from conforming to the doctrine of Christ; hence it should be held up to light which maketh manifest. If the idea is right, it will look right; if it is wrong, the wrong will appear. The new idea is this: Since the commands "are at the close of the letters written by the apostles to those they so dearly loved," they are not for our observance.

We turn to Romans 16: 17, one verse nearer the close of the apostle's letter than the command, "Salute one another with a holy kiss," and read: "Now I beseech you, brethren, mark them which cause divisions and offenses, contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them." Now according to the late idea on the holy kiss, the disciples of Christ are not required to mark and avoid them which cause divisions and offenses contrary to sound doctrine, because the injunction to "mark" and "avoid" is so near the close of the letter.

We will now bring up 1 Cor. 16: 14 which is also near the close of an apostle's letter: "Let all your things be done with charity." Here again, according to the late idea on the holy kiss, it would avail nothing for Christians to do all things with charity.

Let us now see with what Peter closes his second letter: "But grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." To be in harmony with the late rule of interpretation, it is not necessary to "grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." We have always believed that the command to grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior was binding on the disciples of Christ, from the fact that a disciple is a learner, and a learner must grow in knowledge, but now in this age of learning, we are informed that to grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior avails nothing, since the command is at the close of an apostle's letter! Had this command and that of the holy kiss been placed at the beginning or in the middle of an apostle's letter, they would be binding on us, but alas! they are all at the close, hence of no consequence.

When men, who lay claims to learning and ability, will resort to such sophistical reasoning, it is conclusive evidence that they have not grown much in the knowledge of the Lord Jesus. If such were to obey the command, "grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior," they would soon "grow" into obeying the command, "salute all the brethren with a holy kiss;" but just as long as they refuse to obey commands because they are placed at the close of an apostolic writing, just that long they refuse to grow in the knowledge of the Lord, and just as long as they refuse to grow in the knowledge of the Lord Jesus, just that long they fail to practice the command, "Salute one another with a holy kiss," which is also near the close of the apostolic writings.

But it is said that the commands were "written by the apostles to those they so dearly loved." Precisely! And those they so dearly loved were commanded to "Salute one another with a holy kiss;" and those who were thus commanded, believed and obeyed.

This command was not an "opinion" of the apostles, but was given by the authority of the Lord Christ; and it is a settled fact that the primitive Christians obeyed this command, and taught others to obey it. It is also a settled fact that the Book of God, as handed down to us, teaches the same thing. It is further a settled fact that some are obeying this command at the present time. Now then one question to the unprejudiced reader: If the apostles taught and practiced it, and the Book teaches it, are those who are commanded to walk steadfastly in "the apostles' doctrine and fellowship," unsafe when they obey? But then those who do not obey this command are not troubled about those who do; they are troubled because they themselves do not obey it. Here is where they find trouble, and they will not only find trouble about this command in this world, but there will be trouble about it when Christ shall come to "take vengeance on them that obey not the Gospel." In this world they are taxed to their utmost to make it appear unessential. How much more glorious and praiseworthy to teach it just as the Book teaches it! Such a course carries with it the power and blessing of God, while a contrary course will bring His displeasure. The Lord help all to yield entire obedience to Thy authority.

JOTTINGS BY THE WAY.

ON Monday evening attended meeting in Lyndora, Christian Co., Ill. Having spent several years at this place before engaging in my present labor, I was glad to meet dear brethren and friends and talk with them about the one great Treasure. There are some precious souls here who are looking into the "house of God," and as they are looking that way, I hope they will soon get there.

Tuesday, 9 A. M., attended a very pleasant council meeting of the brethren and sisters who reside about ten miles from the main body of the Sugar Creek church. At this meeting they agreed to hold a Love-feast the 18th inst, which will be the first of the kind ever held in that part of the country. In the afternoon, met with a few brethren at the house of brother John Harnish, where our aged sister Harnish was anointed. From here brother B. B. Whitmer and I went to Morrisonville to attend meeting that was being conducted by brother Bashor.

The fourth was set apart for a feast of good things at Sugar Creek. Met brethren Joseph Hendricks, J. R. Gish, David Miller, Jesse Danner, and other ministers. Also formed the acquaintance of some sisters from Cass Co., who reside where there are but few Brethren. They were full of zeal for the good cause, and could greatly appreciate the privilege of hearing preaching and sitting together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus. Such have the promise, "Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness; for they shall be filled."

The members of this church are very much scattered, a number, as already stated, living in Christian county. Will our beloved brethren in the ministry aid that little band "out on the prairie," as much as they can? Brother B. B. Whitmer administers to them, regularly, but he, like most of us, wants company in the work.

Saturday, 10 A. M., the meeting in the Pleasant Hill church commenced. This is the church in which the A. M. was held in 1874. The attendance and interest were commendable, and the Feast truly enjoyable. About three hundred members engaged in the good work, amid great order and solemnity.

Monday morning, 5th, the delegates assembled and chose Moderator and Clerks, preparatory to District meeting. At 8, the meeting was opened for business. Brother Wagner announced the organization as follows: John Metzger, Moderator, Joseph Hendricks, Reading Clerk, Daniel Vaniman, Writing Clerk. Speakers were limited to two speeches on each subject, and were notified to confine the first speech to ten minutes and the second to five. I thought this a good method to make thinking minds use brevity and clearness, which every earnest worker ought to covet.

First subject was the oversight or care of the church in Henderson county, Ky. Referred to delegates for disposition. Resolution from Northern District of Ill., regarding Central Mission, read and received. Request from Astoria church, that all matters be decided by delegates. Much discussion, when meeting said, No. Next related to the baptism of penitents outside of the church in which they reside, without the counsel of officials of said church who are present. Should ask council of the officials if present.

Brethren of Sugar Creek church asked the reconsideration of query 6 of '77. This relates to the final disposition of matters upon which the meeting cannot agree. The delegates may dispose of any query by a two-thirds vote, if the meeting should fail. A long and tedious discussion followed, and was finally brought to a close by tabling the Sugar Creek query.

The question of manner of washing feet in public assembly was next debated. All are determined to stick to the Bible on the subject of feet-washing, but there is some difference of opinion as to the best manner of practicing the ordinance. Referred to A. M. for consideration.

Are members who absent themselves for several years from the Communion, qualified to sit in council and aid in the correction of others? Tabled. Change of time of holding D. M. asked for. Some preferred April to October, but the majority said, no change. The Macoupin Creek church desired the D. M. to amend her practice of choosing officers and delegates so as to require a majority of the whole vote to elect. Concluded to continue the present practice.

The question of the marriage of cousins was introduced, but deferred until to-morrow.

TUESDAY.—MORNING SESSION.

Reconsideration of Art. 4 of 1789 relating to marriage of cousins, taken up and discussed at length, and finally laid on the table.

Report of missionaries being in order, they presented the following: Received by baptism during the year, 116 persons. Expenses, 59.40. John Metzger, J. R. Gish, Joseph Hendricks, and Daniel Vaniman were chosen evangelists for the ensuing year. They will labor in new fields, where there are few members, and in the Central Illinois mission field, in conjunction with those of Northern Illinois. It was suggested that subscription papers be circulated in each church, requesting members to give as the Lord has prospered them, and send all contributions to John Neher, Box 169, Virden, Ill. The Treasurer was ordered to pay $26.00 to brother Metzger on last year's expenses and notify them at once to remit for next year's expenses.

The next D. M. will be held with the brethren at Hudson on Tuesday next preceding the full moon in October 1879.

Treasurer reported District out of debt, and a balance of $2.65 on hand. Whole amount of missionary fund received to date, $135.12. There is on hand for next year's work $53.42. This shows that the brethren of Southern Ill. are wide awake in the good cause of preaching the Gospel to those around them.

Delegates to A. M., John Metzger, James R. Gish. Alternates, Daniel Vaniman, Joseph Hendricks. The meeting closed about 1 P. M., and each departed for his field of labor. I am happy to say, that my association with the brethren and sisters was truly pleasant. They are earnest workers, and aim to live as they profess, fearing God and loving the church. Arrived home the 9th. Found all well; work abundant, and willing hands busy. M. M. E.

THE CALIFORNIA COMMITTEE.

WHEN mention was made, two weeks ago, that the visit of the committee to California was deferred, we felt pressed to say considerable more, but thought to wait a few weeks and let Bro. Quinter give an explanation. His explanation has now been published in the P. C., and below we give it entire. We think Bro. Quinter acted wisely in deferring the matter till Bro. Miller's health would permit him to take his place on the committee. Hope the Brethren in California will submit to this arrangement for the time being, for when matters are once fully developed, it will be to the advantage of the cause.

BROTHER QUINTER'S EXPLANATION.

It was announced in our last issue, that we had started for California; and we had done so, but returned home. And as we did not pursue our contemplated journey, some explanation is necessary. There had been nothing settled by the mutual consultation of the members of the committee in regard to the time of starting. After our appointment by the Annual Meeting, we had some little conversation together, and the idea was suggested by some one of the committee and favorably entertained by all, that it would be desirable to go as early in the Fall as possible, but no time was fixed upon. And when brother Miller and myself met in Ohio in August, we both having several engagements to fulfill, and he having some sickness in his family, we concluded instead of going early in the Fall, we could not go until late, though no time was named by us.

But brother E. K. Beeghly, having had some correspondence with some of the California brethren, became impressed with the propriety of going early in the Fall, as it appears that the Brethren in California expected us at that time. When he informed us of his wish and of the expectation of the California Brethren, we concluded it would be well to go as soon as possible, and so wrote to both brother Beeghly and brother Miller, and began to prepare for an early departure. But much to our regret, we learned from brother Miller, that his own health, and that of his family, were such that he could not go at the time that was now proposed. Our first impression upon learning this, was to defer our visit. But as brother Beeghly had made his arrangements to go, and receiving a letter from brother Wolf in which he informed us that there would be much disappointment should we not be with them by the 20th or 25th of Sept., and as brother Miller recommended us to go, though he could not accompany us, we considered the propriety of brother Beeghly and ourself going. Though we felt very reluctant to go without a full committee, considering the nature and responsibility of our work, but knowing the wish of the Brethren in California, and that brother Beeghly had made his arrangements to go, we left home on the evening of the 13th of Sept., to meet brother Beeghly at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, on the 16th. But the heavy rain in Western Pennsylvania and Eastern Ohio, on the 12th, had damaged the railroads to such an extent that traveling was considerably retarded, and when we arrived at Pittsburgh at midnight on the 13th, we could not pursue our journey, as several bridges on the Pan Handle Road, the road over which we were to pass, were destroyed by high water. And as we did not want to remain at Pittsburgh over Sunday, we returned home on Saturday morning. Our mind became considerably perplexed in regard to what we should do under the circumstances. We prayerfully considered the matter, but the way did not open before us as clearly as we desired it. We, however, under considerable perplexity of mind, started again on the evening of the 16th, concluding that we would visit brother Miller, and have a consultation with him on our way to meet brother Beeghly.

We accordingly visited brother Miller, but found him unable to accompany us. We then talked over the subject of our visit, and prayed over it, and came to the conclusion that our visit to California had better be deferred until some of the difficulties which seemed to be in the way, should be removed. Hence the visit of the Committee is deferred. As brother Beeghly has probably gone, and as some of the brethren in California will be disappointed, we regret very much that we could not go. But considering all the circumstances connected with our mission, and ardently desiring to make it a success, we felt that our work at this time, under the circumstances under which we would attempt it, should we make the attempt, would be attended with some embarrassment that it is desirable should not exist. We submit the case to the controlling providence of God, hoping that he will so direct it as will make it successful in due time.

AUNT: "Shall I give you a new doll, Maggie?" Maggie: "No, thanks, auntie, I should never love another doll like this; for see, it has only got one eye, one leg, and one arm, and nobody would care for it if I didn't. Proper dolls can take care of themselves, you know." A valuable lesson may be learned from this incident. There are plenty to take care of the rich and finely clad, but some warm-hearted, child-like Christian is needed to look after the wants of the blind, lame and destitute. These are the ones whom Christ made special efforts to enlighten and relieve. One proof of his mission was, that the Gospel was preached to the poor; the lame was healed, and the blind made to see.

Our Bible Class.

"The Worth of Truth no Tongue Can Tell."

This department is designed for asking and answering Bible questions, and for the solution of Scriptural difficulties. All questions should be stated with candor, and answered with as much clearness as possible, in order to promote Bible Truth. Articles for this department, must be short and to the point.

Will some one please give an explanation of Romans 4: 4, 5?
JOHN H. STAGER

Please explain Rev. 20: 13, 14, and give us an insight into them.
J. M. RIDENOUR.

Will some one please give information concerning 1 John 2: 8, 9, 10?
W. H. MILLER.

Please tell me who that man was, Paul spoke of in 2 Cor. 12: 2, that was caught up to the third heaven.
SAMUEL CRIST.

Will some brother give us an article on the following: "He that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he?"
H. H. MEYERS.

Please explain 2d Thess. 2: 9. It reads thus: "Even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power, and signs and lying wonders."
M. C. CZIGASS.

Please give an explanation of Matt. 21: 23 also Mark 11: 2. Do both mean the same? If so, what is meant by the ass tied and the colt with her; loose them and bring them into me? Did he ride both, or only the colt?
E. H. CRIST.

Please give an explanation of the following words: "Whosoever is born of God, doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him, and he cannot sin, because he is born of God." 1 John 5: 18.
MORRIS UMBERTON.

Will the Brethren at Work, or some one of its many readers, explain a few expressions that are often used in prayer? They are rather dark to me. I ask for information first, is it proper, when giving thanks at the table, to ask the Lord to "bless" that food which He has already blessed? Secondly, is it proper to pray "for the sake of Jesus," when Jesus has done all for our sake?
D. F. EBY.

Please give us your view on the covering spoken of by Paul in 1 Cor. 11; also tell us who, or what that head is, the woman dishonored by praying or prophesying with her head uncovered, both the married and unmarried? By doing so you may do a good work for some of our members out here in the far West and oblige.
DAVID BROOKS.

1. Please give your views on Luke 10: 4. "Carry neither purse, nor scrip, nor shoes, and salute no man by the way."

2. Also Matt. 23: 9. "And call no man your father upon the earth, for one is your Father which is in heaven."

3. Also 1 Cor. 7: 39. "The wife is bound by the law as long as her husband liveth; but if her husband be dead, she is at liberty to be married to whom she will; only in the Lord."

WAS IT LITERAL WATER?

The eight souls that were saved by water, was that water literal water, or was it some other kind of water? 1 Peter 3: 20, 21, also Acts 22: 16, where it is said, "Arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins, was this literal water, that was to wash away his sins?"
M. F.

In answer to M. F.'s query in the BROTHERS AT WORK, Nos. 37 and 38, I reply, that both passages refer to literal water. In regard to the "eight souls" that were saved by water, (1 Pet. 3: 20), we learn, that while all mankind then living, except these eight souls, were destroyed from off the face of the earth by the immensurable flood of [water] water, these eight were saved in the ark, and as the raton, which destroyed the wicked, "bore the ark up on triumph, it was the means by which the righteous were saved."

The other passage, "Arise and be baptized and wash away thy sins," (Acts 22: 16), has reference to baptism, and the water which was to be used, was literal water, and was the means by which Saul was to have his sins taken away. We do not think that water has, or ever had the power to save or cleanse from sin, but God works by means, and in these instances, water was the means which God saw fit to make use of, in order that man might receive the promised blessing. God has ever seen fit to require something of man. Our first parents were required to dress and keep the garden in which they dwelt. The children of Israel were required to journey and toil through the wilderness before they could inherit the promised land. Naaman was told to dip himself seven times in the river Jordan, in order that he might be cured of leprosy. God could just as easily have saved Israel in Egypt, or cleansed Naaman without having him dip himself, had he seen fit to do so? But then their faith, patience, &c., would not have been tested, and we think they would have lost a great part of the pleasure of the blessing by receiving it without doing any part of the work themselves. Hence we see that God never agreed to do it all, but that He makes literal requirements of man, in which He always meets man and showers upon him the promised blessings. These literal performances, too, are always the shadow of something real, and more sublime.

So in the cases referred to, water was the means used, and the washing was the type of the cleansing from sin, which only God himself can do. So we decide that the water was literal, but the blessing depended on the proper and faithful use of the means which God employed.

Then if we would enjoy that cleansing from sin, which is necessary to our entrance into heaven, "Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water. Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering; for he is faithful that promised." Heb. 10: 22, 23.

THE CHOOSING OF MINISTERS.

BY LANDON WEST.

THE choice of a minister, its importance, its frequency, and the chances for mistakes, should, we think, afford a special occasion for prayer. We have a good example of this in our Master's life. See Luke 6: 12. "And it came to pass in those days, that he went up into a mountain to pray, and continued all night in prayer to God." This was, no doubt, felt to be an occasion for continued prayer. There was important work to do, and it was work not for time, but for eternity. It was a new era in the work of salvation, and as such it was felt. It was to begin a work then, that is not completed yet. But great as it was, it was no more than the appointment of a human ministry. It was to commit the work of human salvation into human hands. And, as in all cases, much depends upon those who do the work, so this work was felt to depend very much upon those into whose hands it fell. To be a success, it must fall into good hands; while to fall into bad hands, was to make it a failure. This was felt to be a special occasion in which the mind of God was needed to direct, and our Master improved it well—prayed all night before.

Now, brethren, the church often has the same work to do, and do we not have far greater need to pray? We think so. But see now, what His work was: "And when it was day, he called unto him his disciples; and of them he chose twelve, whom also he called apostles." Luke 6: 13. We cannot think that all that night's prayer was for the work that was done, but it must have been for the work yet to do. He had prayed all night, and when it was day the choice was made. Was it not an important work? None could have been greater, unless it was the choosing of himself. See Rev. 5: 6, 7. And was not the choice he made, a great one? None could have been better. Not a mistake in the twelve. Although one was a traitor, there could not have been a better one to do what the traitor did, than the one who was chosen. If we allow at all, that Jesus was to be betrayed, Judas was the man to do it. None could have done it better, and we may well say, he was the right man in the right place. A traitor was needed then, but now the good thing is, there is no more need of traitors, and for that reason we should choose none, but if ever there was a time when true men should be put to the work and those to it, who would do the work, it is now.

Now brethren, we all say, we need more preachers, and those too who are true, who will, like Barnabas and Paul, the Lord's chosen, hazard their lives, if need be, for the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. That we need more who will, like Peter, another of the Lord's choosing, forsake all, to follow Jesus. Matt. 19: 27. And that we need those, too, who will "go and teach all nations," "into all the world," and "to every creature," and that we need such as are willing "to lay down their lives for their brethren." You ask how are we to get them? We ask you how did the Lord get them? He prayed for His, and He got them. I believe it is said that they all save one died a violent death. Thus kind the Lord wanted, and he got them by praying all night. These twelve, with Paul, would give up their life, before they would give up their faith; and these are the kind the church needs to-day. This is the kind that Jesus had, and that He wants now. As we need more, should we not try to secure some of this kind? We think so. And to do it, should we not pray too? We should pray most assuredly, and fast, too. We should pray all night and all day, too, rather than to have so many "that are at ease in Zion." Amos 6: 1.

Do not, my beloved brethren, neglect this duty and this holy example, when we have such important work to do; and do not neglect it any time. And may the Lord in heaven hear that prayer so often said: "Thy kingdom come," and grant His church, wisdom to choose men who can and who will work that the Lord's kingdom may come. This kingdom and its interests are, for the time, committed into human hands, and that is why we should ever pray for aid, and for the guidance of the Spirit, to direct us in the work. The coming of this kingdom to the extent here prayed for, has been, and is yet much hindered, because of human weakness. And had it not been for this weakness, over which Satan's rule is so strong, that prayer had been realized long ago. This condition will ever be an obstacle in the way of the fulness of its company, until we all have power from on high to remove it. For that power we should pray and watch, and fast, and pray again. Jesus said, "without me, ye can do nothing." John 15: 5; but with the help of Jesus we can, thank God, do all things. There is no obstacle when we have His help. Paul would say, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." Phil. 4: 13.

When we pray for the Lord's choice, let us not then take our own choice in preference to His, if they are not the same, for if we do, our choice will be a failure. "For the Lord seeth not as man seeth." 1 Sam. 16: 7.

WHY ARE WE ASHAMED OF CHRIST?

MARGARET SHELLEY.

WHY do we fear Jesus? He said, if we are ashamed of Him, He will be ashamed when He comes again. Mark 8: 38; Luke 9: 26; Matt. 10: 32. "Whosoever shall confess him before men, him will I also confess before my Father which is in heaven." Dear readers, we are not likely to confess Him if we are ashamed of him, therefore we ought to be careful and have Him formed in our hearts and call on Him by day and by night, in public and private, and not be ashamed of Him. How pleasant it is to meet together to sing and pray.

Dear brethren and sisters, let us be more zealous, for the time will soon come when Christ will call for us. Then how will we feel if we have not washed our robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. We cannot be too careful how we live. Let us all try and live nearer our blessed Savior, that we may be accepted of Him.

SOME MORE THOUGHTS.

BY MARY C. MILLER.

STUDY to be careful. It is easily learned and will save money, time and temper.

A weed is a weed, and it makes no difference whether it be in a wheat field or by the roadside. So with sin, wherever it is found it is only sin, nothing better can be made of it, and the poorer the heart is, that it is in, the more easily it will be seen.

I have lately read a piece in No. 39, BROTHERS AT WORK, about Jesus. I wish this piece would be read and re-read by every brother and sister. And not only read and read again, but compared with the Scriptures and all that he in it worthy, (which is much) be immediately adopted. It tells about Jesus: how He was misunderstood, and how He loved even His enemies, those who accused Him wrongfully, saying all manner of evil against Him maliciously.

Why is there disunion in the church? Because some wish to partly mate with the world. Should Christ have fallen down and worshipped Satan, then the Father and Son could not have been one any more. We should be one, as they are one.

He who faints when dark clouds overtake him, when storms arise and tempests sweep around—I say he who faints at such a time, his faith is weak, his strength is small.

A church that is united and does right, is strong no matter how small it is. Disunion opens many ways for Satan to get in.

We talk of beautifying our homes and making home attractive and pleasant, but how is this to be done? No doubt all agree that it should be done, but as to the manner, I fear we do not all agree so well. To say we should get croquet for our children to keep them at home, is one of Satan's proverbs. He wishes us to give our children the first lessons which lead to the billiard table. As it is with croquet, so it is with all diversions. We take a wrong view of the matter. We get on forbidden ground so easily, if not very watchful. When we pattern after the world, then we are going wrong, we are losing ground, losing strength, getting weak. When we are getting off the right way, we become blind and do the very things we should not. Our homes must be pleasant and attractive, but let these be deep-seated in the mind. Let the teaching be such that good society, good books, good thoughts, good conversation, good manners, good deeds, will be attractive to them. If we ornament our homes with these, and such things, our children will learn to travel the right road from their infancy. Making home attractive, is no small matter. It is as essential to the spiritual life of our children, as the air we breathe is needful to our natural life. We must make our homes pleasant, but we must also bring our children up in the way they should go when they are old. If we teach them to love the silly pastimes of the day, can we expect them to depart from those things when they grow up to be men and women? If we would have pleasant and beautiful homes, we must teach our children to be youthful lusts and pleasures. Good and obedient children are ornaments anywhere; they are "as apples of gold in pictures of silver." May God give wisdom, to the parents in our beloved brotherhood, that they may so direct their little ones in their youthful days, that they may grow up to be bright and shining lights, not only around the fireside, but wherever they may be.

WHEN JESUS COMES.

BY S. BRUMBAUGH.

HERE we are wandering up and down life's weary way from day to day. We are often made to wonder what we are placed here for. Why we must have so many troubles and trials on our way. It is all to fit and prepare us to be a part here with Jesus to inherit one of these beautiful mansions prepared for us. Jesus was here upon earth and gave us a pattern, and then left us, now He is going to come again after awhile and take those who have been His followers through life, home to His Father. And He will be pleased to see us ready when He comes. How often do we see old fathers and mothers who have been wandering down the dark side of life for many a year, laboring for the Master, preparing to be ready when Jesus comes. Be faithful a little while longer, your Saviour will soon come and take you home to rest. Let us all try to have our lamps trimmed and filled and burning when Jesus comes.

Oh, when we get home, our journey ended, our trouble will be over, there will be no more heart pangs and sadness; that will all be ended and all will be peace, joy and gladness. Jesus will know that our way was dreary; He will know that our feet grew weary; He will know that we often met with many griefs and sorrows; He will know all this. But oh, how His precious arms will rest and comfort us. Is it not worth our toil and strife here for a little season, to gain a life eternal and on high, where we meet to part no more forever. Now let us be ready to meet our Savior when He comes.

STRONG HOPES OF HEAVEN.

BY DANIEL LONGFELLOW.

STRONG hopes of heaven are no proof, or undeniable evidence of regeneration. Hope is common to all men who are not in actual despair. But there are different kinds of hope. There is a good hope and there is a false hope.

A good hope is a gracious, living hope. 1 Pet. 1: 3, a well-founded hope, Col. 1: 27, Heb. 6: 12, 1 Pet. 3: a purifying hope, a cheering and joyful hope. Such a hope maketh not ashamed, because it is the anchor of the soul.

There are some who think they love God and are His servants, and will surely go to heaven some day, while they are destitute of the knowledge and power of regeneration, being dead in trespasses and sin. They are ignorant of the spirit which changes the carnal mind into a spiritual mind and makes the dead alive by feelings produced by God's sword and spirit are safe, good and necessary, but when contrary to God's word, are very dangerous. Those who permit their feelings to be their instructor instead of God's word generally make the loudest boasts of their claims on heaven, or their title to it. They have received their religion at the anxious bench, and say the most contemptible things of some of the means God has provided for the remission of sin, and the gift of the Holy Ghost, saying, we have the power of holiness without the form, the kernel without the shell, faith without works, and, we may add, the crown without the cross. You may see the form of godliness without the power, but you can never see the power without the form. You may see a wolf in sheep's clothing, but you will never see sheep in wolf's clothing. You may see a praying man that is not a Christian, but you will never see a Christian that is not a praying man.

The entire Hebrew Bible was printed in 1888. The Chinese claim to have invented the telephone in the year 308. A STEAMSHIP of four thousand tons burthen has been built at Barrow, Scotland, to carry cattle from Texas to Glasgow direct. A RECENT earthquake at Montefalco, in the Province of Umbria, in Italy, carried destruction to one hundred and forty-eight dwellings. A NAPLES (Italy) dispatch of the 24th says Mount Vesuvius was becoming violent. The base of the cone was covered with lava, and lava was streaming down the sides of the mountain. THE Portuguese colonists at Springfield and Jacksonville, Ill., who in 1846 fled from the Madern Islands, to escape religious persecution, celebrated their thirty-second anniversary, in a grove, near Springfield, August 23rd. They number about 1,000. THE house in which John Knox, the Scotch reformer, lived and died, is yet standing in that part of Edinburgh known as the old town. Extending over the front is this inscription in large Roman letters: "Lufe God abufe all, and yi nychtbour as yi self." A LADY writes to the London Times that her daughter, a girl of seventeen, has been poisoned by wearing "bronze-green" kid gloves. After wearing them a day or two, her hands blistered and swelled to such an extent, that for three weeks she was obliged to carry them in a sling, suffering acute pain all the time. THE American Bible Society, which is constantly extending its grand work, is now publishing books at Constantinople, Beirut, Bremen, Berlin, Paris, Stockholm, Foochow, Shanghai, Lodina, Lucknow, Yokohama, Bangkok and Vietnam. Some versions can be published cheaper at these points than in New York. THE Bible work among the Turks is very interesting. The Scriptures are sold all over the empire. The Bible house at Constantinople is quite as prominent a building as the Bible houses of New York or London are for those localities, and the scriptures are publicly exposed for sale in more than twenty languages. Some, by nailing down their windows to keep out burglars, shut out their very best friend—pure atmospheric air. By so fixing the windows that the upper sash can be dropped a few inches only, the air can be admitted, while the burglar cannot enter, but by violent means. It would be better to risk danger from burglars, than to procure sure death by shutting out the air. SKIRMISH 19th, Sherman City, a small village in Eschella Co., Michigan, was annihilated by a terrific tornado. Every stone, dwelling house and shed in the village were swept clean except one frame dwelling, which was partially destroyed. The air was thick with lumber, boards, brick and stones. The inhabitants took refuge in the cellars. THE life of Pope Leo XIII, is embittered by the springing up in Rome of Protestant temples and schools to "create a generation antagonistic to the church," and by "an unbridled press fighting against the faith." His holiness has addressed a letter on the subject to the Cardinal Vicar, urging every possible effort in order that the heart of the Catholic faith which heretical sects would seek to extinguish, may be preserved. THE New York Graphic puts it thus: "How is it? Prof. J. S. Newberry charges a dollar admission for a lecture in which he says he don't know where men came from. Colonel Ingersoll, on the other hand, charges seventy-five cents admission to a lecture in which he tells us he don't know where we are going to." And this is the highest attainment of the unassisted reason. For the two great questions, which the soul asks most anxiously it confesses it has no answer.

The cattle in a large part of Bengal are dying at the rate of hundreds a day, and the streets are filled with dead bodies. The decreases in the number and the deterioration in the quality of the agricultural cattle all over British India is one of the greatest features to be noted in connection with the general condition of the peasantry. In Madras and Bombay the destruction of cattle has been appalling, while in Burmah there has also been a plague. The general condition of the agricultural population throughout India is such as to occasion the gravest uneasiness. Continuous impoverishment bids fair to be followed by continuous famine. There is scarcity amounting almost to famine even at the present time in Madras, Bombay, the North-western province, and Bengal. Yet the only remedy proposed is increased taxation.

The original Mormon Bible is in possession of a Mr. Wittaker, of Richmond, Missouri. Within the last few days Orson Pratt and Hiram Smith, the two dignitaries of Salt Lake, have been visiting Mr. Wittaker for the purpose of purchasing this precious relic of Mormon history. They find the volume well preserved and written in a beautiful, clear hand, but the owner refuses to part with it at any price though, according to the local paper, he was offered a large sum of money for it by Elder Pratt.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Report of Treasurer of Home Mission of N. E. Ohio.

Table with columns for church names and amounts received/paid. Includes entries for Loudenville, Springfield, Black River, Ashland, Maple Grove, Chippewa, Sandy, Mahoning, Canton, Danville, Tuscarawas, Waoster, E. Nimishillen, W. Nimishillen, and District meeting.

Amount in hands of Treas. Sept. 1, '78. $1,000 Respectfully submitted.

GEORGE IRVIN, Treas. JACOB MISHNER, Clerk.

By the above report, it will be seen that some of the churches have paid nothing, and some very sparingly, while others have done remarkably well. At the District meeting last Spring it was considered advisable that there should be preaching at least once a month in Belmont Co., during the coming year, and that each church that was willing should supply the meeting once. I have written to nearly all the delegates and received a very meagre response. The church in Belmont has been sadly neglected. There has been but one minister there since last February (Bro. G. V. Kollar) to my knowledge. There is a small church in Belmont Co., with Bro. David Snyder as their minister, who was elected to the ministry last February, and is doing all he can for the church, but is very much in need of help from older brethren. The delinquent churches are hereby earnestly requested to contribute, and send their contributions to Bro. George Irvin, Golden Corners, Wayne Co., Ohio. And those churches who feel willing to assist Bro. Snyder are requested to make the necessary appointments by corresponding with Bro. David Snyder, Warnock, Belmont Co., Ohio.

JACOB MISHNER, Clerk. Mopolans, Ohio, Sept. 11th, 1878.

An Explanation.

ON page 12 of report of A. M. under my signature is the following remark: "Brethren are solicited to take stock in these enterprises, and are induced to do so, before they are informed of the consequences, and of the extent of their liability in case they subscribe. They are told the Brethren, that if they subscribe two hundred dollars as 'stock,' they are liable for a thousand dollars—twice the amount." In the above I had allusion to stock and not to donation whatever. I know of no law that makes donors liable for more than their subscription.

For further information, we here insert a part of Sec. II, page 268, Vol. I, Swan and Critchfield:

"Any University College or Academy that may become a body corporate under the provision of this act, the property of which is not derived by donation, gift, devise or subscription, but is owned by individuals in shape of stock, subscribed or taken, the owners of said stock shall be individually liable for the debts of said corporation to the amount of their said stock respectively and in a sum equal thereto over and above the amount of their said stock."

We hope the above explanation will remove all misunderstanding that may have grown out of the remarks above.

I. J. ROSENBERGER.

Notes of Travel.

ACCORDING to the arrangements of the District meeting of Southern Indiana, we, the undersigned were chosen to visit the members that are scattered through the Southern part of the State, and to preach wherever opportunity would present itself, left home on the morning of the 16th of August. Living upwards of one hundred miles apart, we agreed to meet at Indianapolis. Arriving there at 10:55 A. M., and took train at 11:20 for Greensburg. Arrived at 1:30 P. M., where we were met by Bro. William B. Pierce, who conveyed us to Bro. John Himelicks, some fourteen miles distance, where we enjoyed his hospitality and stayed all night. On the evening of the 17th, Bro. Himelick took us to friend John and sister McCammon. On their farm is a meeting-house, in which we held our meetings. Would say this was once an organized church. The ministers all moved away and a greater part of the members. We found five members, who seemed to be in the faith once delivered unto the saints. There being no preaching for the last eighteen years, with the exception of Bro. William Pierce, who occasionally visited his friends and preached a few times for those members. In the last five years they have not heard a brother preach in that vicinity. Commenced meeting August 17th and continued until the evening of the 20th. Had very good attention, but most of the time small attendance. Not much interest taken in the meeting. Some of the people said they had been preached to death heretofore, had no desire for religious worship. On the morning of the 21st we took the train at North Vernon at 10:30. Arrived at Seymour at 11 A. M. Changed cars to Cathersville, Jackson Co. Arrived there in the afternoon. Went to Bro. Joseph Wilson's, where we met the Bro. and sister and their family in moderate health and anxious to see us. They lived where there are no members near. Not heard a brother preach for nearly three years, yet they appeared to be zealous in the cause of the Master. Commenced meeting Tuesday 22nd, and closed on the 25th, with good feelings and good attention, but no additions, as the doctrine of the Brethren was not known in that vicinity, but we think there was some good impressions made, which we hope will mature and develop itself in the Christian's life. Bro. and sister Wilson were very much built up during our stay with them. Took the train on the 26th, for Shoals, Martin's Co. Arrived at 1:30 P. M. Met brethren J. B. Sell and Henry Trauter, who conducted us to Bro. Sell's house. Bro. Sell was sent to this field of labor by the Church Extension Union last April, where he is now working in the cause of the Master. Hope his labor may not be in vain, as we think there is an opening for much good to be done. Commenced meeting on the evening of the 27th, and closed on the evening of the 1st of September, holding three meetings in three different places for the accommodation of the members and others. Therefore we did not have as good success as we desired and no additions to the church, seemingly on account of some unsettled matters among the members, for which purpose they had appointed a church meeting to adjust their matters and to organize a church, but failed in doing so at that meeting. We then made another appointment for another council. On Monday morning we went a distance of forty miles, by private conveyance to Pike Co., where we found one brother, by the name of Philip Alburn, where we held three meetings. On the account of sickness the congregations were rather small, but seemingly pretty good feelings, with good encouragement to return again. We then returned to Martin's county and attended the last named council meeting on the 5th of Sept., which resulted in the final settlement of all their former difficulties and peace and harmony being restored to the members. We then according to their request, organized this little body of members, numbering about twenty-three, by Bro. J. B. Sell, presenting his letter of recommendation as a minister in the second degree of office. Also Bro. Leonard Stephens, by presenting his letter of membership as a deacon in the church. The members unitedly accepted them with their offices, which we hope will result in the prosperity of this little church in Martin's county. After the organization of this little body, they desired to have a Communion, which was held on the night of the 5th of Sept. There seemed to be a very good feeling among the members present. On the morning of the 6th, before leaving Bro. Stephens (being in poor health) requested to be appointed, which was attended to before we left. We then took the train at Shoals at 1:15 P. M. for West Lebanon, Warren Co., where we arrived on the morning of the 7th, at 6:43 A. M. Commenced meeting on the evening of the 7th, and continued the meeting until the evening of the 10th. On said day there were two buried by baptism into the death of Christ, to rise and walk in newness of life, truly, as we believe, coming in the eleventh hour of their life, whose ages are as follows: the brother being in his 89th year and the sister in her 75th year.— Would say the members were much built up in their Christian faith, while we were with them. On the evening of the 10th we closed our meeting with many good feelings among the members, with many requests to return again. On the morning of the 11th at 6:40 we took the train at West Lebanon for our homes, traveling together as far as Lafayette junction, where we separated. My traveling companion took his leave for home some 13 miles from Lafayette. Traveling altogether about 613 miles. I took the train at Lafayette for Richmond by way of Indianapolis. Arrived home at 8 o'clock P. M. Traveling altogether about 675 miles. Found all well. We tender our thanks to the members and friends for their kindness manifested to us whilst among them. We feel thankful to the Giver of all good, for his protecting care over us and our families, while on our mission.

JACOB RIFE. JOHN W. METZGER.

From Isaac and Josie E. Royer.

Dear Brethren:— WE in our isolated condition, were very much cheered by the visits of several brethren and sisters. In August brethren Absalom and Isaac Meyers were here and preached for us. Oh, how we feel rejoiced to receive such visits. On the 16th of Sept. Bro. Musselman, sisters Barbara Heckler and Lana Provont were here and staid a few days with us. We sometimes feel discouraged in our lonely state, but an occasional visit from a brother or sister is very cheering to us. I think we know something of the feelings of our Danish Brethren, when our dear missionary brethren went among them and also when they came from them.

Dear brethren and sisters, in traveling through the West, hunt up the scattered and isolated members and visit them. You do not know how much good you can do in this way. Oh, how we feel cheered with even the visit of a brother or sister. I sometimes think that the life of isolated brethren and sisters could well be compared to a traveler on a great desert, all around them seems dull and dreary, and an occasional meeting, to be the oasis on the desert. How cheering the oasis must be to the weary traveler, when all around is naught but a dreary plain of sand to suddenly see a beautiful and fertile garden! So it is with us, when we get discouraged and almost feel as though we were ready to give up, the Lord in his infinite wisdom and goodness sees fit to put it into the heart of some good kind brother or sister to make us a visit, then we take fresh courage and make new resolutions to live more faithful in the future. Dear Brethren pray for us that we may hold out faithful! Our trials and temptations are great and I do hope and pray the Lord will soon send us a preacher so we, too, can meet with the people of God.

From F. P. Lœhr.

IT is the gift of some men when they travel to give a description of what they see; the face of the country, the scenery, the rivers, the mountains, etc. Though I admire and am led to adore the Creator of all that is beautiful and sublime, yet I am more inclined to study the habits and actions of man for the purpose of enabling myself to become useful to them and in return receive instruction, and comfort for myself.

In my present tour visiting churches from North to South in Indiana as far South as Anderson, Near Indianapolis, I observed many pleasant indications of improvement, in every church, which I visited and particularly in attending a district meeting of Southern Indiana. I could not but feel grateful to God to see such harmony and union in action, and readiness to yield whenever superior light was presented. There seems to be a general striving every-where for progression, yet it must not be denied there are exceptions that are very hurtful to the cause. I take the liberty to name one particularly: It is accepted by all the servants of God, that every thing we undertake to do, should be undertaken by prayer and supplication to God for his Spirit's guidance, yet in some congregations, when business is to be done in church capacity the officials will meet together in private and there discourse and decide every matter for which the church is called together, then enter the house and open the meeting by supplicating the throne of grace for wisdom to guide them in their deliberation and work, which is already done in their own strength (or rather weakness) for who dare presume to do the work of the Lord in one's own strength! There is nothing left for the body to do but to give consent, for who of the laity can feel bold enough to object to that which already is decided.

There have been instances related to me, where the members in the house sang every hymn in the book that they could sing to occupy the time. Where is the inducement for members to come to church meeting? Who can give a name to such proceedings? I decline giving it. Other instances have come under my observation, where councils were held properly, but when the church was unanimous, a few only objected and would not yield. I will give an instance for the better understanding: A church agreed to have a Sunday-school in the meeting-house; two members dissented, but could give no other reason than that the A. M. had decided that it should not be done if not unanimously agreed. Shall a body of a hundred or more have to yield to one or even a dozen self-willed individuals? My answer would be no; for I should think if I were one of those opposers the sooner the church would break my self-will the better it would be. Such things not only occur at our home church meetings but sometimes at district and Annual Meetings. Should there be no improvement it would be of little use for a physician to find and define the disease if he would or could not prescribe remedies to cure the same. So also in the mystical bodies are ailments and diseases which ought to be removed. I therefore shall venture to prescribe or propose for the lower ailments, and let others more expert follow up and finish out: In the first place then, it is requisite or necessary that there is a healthy flow of love from heart throughout the mystical body or church. To attain this end every member of that body must be active, and to make them so they must be made to feel good; this is gained by thinking more highly of others than of ourselves or in other words, preferring one another; not in having others work while we are idle but bearing each other's burdens joyfully. When we see our brother err, instead of talking to others about it, go to the brother or sister in a meek spirit, kindly talk the matter over. Ten to one he will thank you for your kindness. As the minister is always a target, standing conspicuous watch him closely not so much to find faults in him, to lower him in your estimation, but to be enabled to assist him in correcting habits that may be unedifying or hurtful; you need not be afraid to occasionally give him to understand that his labors are appreciated, for he needs encouragement not only in words but also in deed. This will endear you to him, that you can even give sharp reproof if needed.

The above treatment will work one way; for a good rule will always work both ways. If a minister is, in all his discourses, upbraiding his congregations, he will gain but little credit, for he will be paid back in his own coin. He is showing a want of knowledge of human nature. Even a horse will not obey the better for always being whipped and abused, how much less a brother—a human being—an erring mortal. Better give him credit for all the good that is about him and urge him on to gain more. To curb or restrict members at council meetings and not make them feel at liberty to express their mind on any subject is discouraging. But to make them feel that it is not only a liberty but their duty to give what counsel they may have will make them love to come and enjoy sociability. There is not a member of our body useless from the little toe to the most prominent. So the members of the church, in like manner, none should be spared or overlooked.

But alas! that have made, when a few crumbs the leadership regardless of responsibilities!! The above is experimental religion, and is recommended for trial.

A Correction.

To C. Haraley, J. W. Stein and J. T. Mason, Neotoma, Mo.

Dear Brethren:— I RECEIVED your short letter this morning in which you state, that certain persons claim to have heard me preach in your county, that Christ was a sinner, and that he was baptized to cleanse Him from sin and pollution or something to this effect, and that you wish me to state whether I ever did in your county or elsewhere, preach such a doctrine. I answer, I never did.

Whether I hold such sentiments? I answer, no. I should be afraid and ashamed to harbor or entertain such stuff.

Has such a doctrine to your knowledge ever been taught by the Brethren? I answer, no.

I have no knowledge of any such thing, and would give my voice to silence any of our preaching brethren who would teach any such doctrine or hold such sentiments.

GLEANINGS

From Raleigh C. H., W. Va.—Three or four years ago we, the German Baptist church concluded to build a meeting-house, provided we could get help, and consequently appointed a corresponding secretary and a receiver. Not being able to build ourselves, we have given up the matter, and I as secretary would say to one and all that sent us money, send me the amount and order for it, so that we may return your money.

From Salem, Marion Co., Oregon.—The health in this country is quite good. Crops tolerable good. The ark of the Lord is moving slowly. We were down in Multnomah Co., Oregon, the second Sunday of this month. Had six meetings. One accession by baptism and one more applicant for membership. Interest quite good. Found our young members well and progressing in divine life. God willing, we expect to make them another visit the fourth Sunday in Oct. Truly the harvest is great in this valley, but the laborers are few. Souls are starving for the bread of life.

DAVID BROWER.

From Matilda E. Haws.—When I united with the church of the Brethren I could scarcely read. I had previously been a Missionary Baptist. After uniting with the Brethren, brother Flory sent me the Gospel Visitor.— This was a great help to me. If those who are able just know the good they could accomplish by sending books and papers, they certainly would do it.

At one time we had a fine prospect for establishing churches in Greenbrier and Kanawah counties of this State (Virginia). But alas! all has been lost for lack of a shepherd.

God has been fit to try me on a sick bed since I commenced this letter, but has raised me up again. I want to know what I am to do. I have not once in my life, communed with the people of God. I cannot leave this world contented without having communed with those who truly love the Lord, and having been appointed. I feel at times as if my soul would have to sink within me. Oh! if I could have one saint to pray by my side when I am in so much pain. I know that God loves me and afflicts me for my own good. I often go astray, but that sweet gentle voice comes to me, and says, "Jesus died for you, that you might have ever-lasting life."

It is just as the Father pleases to call any of us, but by the law of nature it seems I cannot stay long. Pray for me that my crossing the river between Jesus and me may be calm and swift.

Paul Gene, Ohio.

From Sidney, Shelby Co., Ohio.—Our Love-feast the 11th of Sept. passed off pleasantly, although it rained most all the time, it was a refreshing to our little church. Quite a number of ministering brethren were present. Brother David Workman did most of the speaking. Brother Workman and Brother Young stayed with us over Sunday. There were two baptized on Sunday. We should all work for the interest of our blessed Master, while it is called to day, for the night will come when no man can work.

MARY A. WRIGHTS.

From Longmont, Col.—Our Love-feast came off the 14th inst. We had a good meeting. Our dear brother, M. M. Bashor, from the southern part of the State, was with us.— His earnest and zealous labors were well received, and we are assured he shall not lose his reward. Brother and sister Larick, from the Southern part of the state, were with us. We sometimes hear of members that think ten miles too far to go to a Communion meeting, while those two above mentioned came over two hundred miles, at an expense of eighty dollars, solely to attend meeting. God will surely bless them in their zeal and great love for the cause. Over thirty members communed and seven in the country were not able to attend. Brother John Bashor and companion, from Union Star, Mo., were also with us. They were on a visit to two of their sons living here. Our series of meetings continued ten days. Much interest seemed to be manifested. It was said better order was never observed at any meeting, than was at our Love-feast. During our meeting, there were two additions by letter and one by baptism. We think there are more near the kingdom. Two more will be added by letter to our congregation at our next meeting. So it will be seen we are making some progress in church matters. The refreshing season of our meetings has added to the building up of the members in their most holy faith.

J. S. FLORY.

From Defiance, Mo.—Our church, Honey Creek, was organized the 15th of last May by brother John Forney and brother D. D. Sell, with ten members. Since then we have been visited by brethren W. B. Sell, S. A. Honberger and Daniel Glick. We now have nineteen members and no preacher. Our Love-feast was on the 14th and 15th inst. We had a large turn-out and the best of attention. The members were strengthened and three precious souls were made willing to be baptized, and many almost persuaded to become Christians. But as is often the case, our meeting had to close too soon. We hope that ministers passing near us will give us a call and labor with us as we think the prospects for doing good, bright; and we urge our brethren that have labored with us to come again. We are situated in the north-east corner of Nowakow county, Mo., about ten miles East of Hopkins.

A RELIGIOUS WEEKLY, PUBLISHED AND EDITED BY

J. H. MOORE & M. M. ESHELMAN.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK is an uncompromising advocate of Primitive Christianity in all its ancient purity.

It recognizes the New Testament as the only infallible rule of faith and practice.

And maintains that the sovereign, unmerited, unsolicited grace of God is the only source of pardon, and

That the virtuous sufferings and meritorious works of Christ are the only price of redemption.

That Faith, Repentance and Baptism are conditions of pardon, and hence for the remission of sins.

That True Immersion or dipping the candidate three times face forward is Christian Baptism.

That Feet-Washing, as taught in John 13, is a divine command to be observed in the church.

That the Lord's Supper is a full meal, and in connection with the Communion, should be taken in the evening, or after the close of the day.

That the Salutation of the Holy Kiss, or Kiss of Charity, is binding upon the followers of Christ.

That War and Retaliation are contrary to the spirit and self-denying principles of the religion of Jesus Christ.

That a Non-Compliance to the world in dress, customs, daily walk and conversation is essential to true holiness and Christian piety.

It maintains that in public worship, or religious exercises, Christians should appear as if they were in the presence of God.

It also advocates the ceremoniality of Anointing the sick with oil in the name of the Lord.

In short it is a vindicator of all that is just and the Apostles have enjoined upon us and around the conflicting theories and doctrines of modern Christendom, to point out ground that all must concede to be infallibly safe.

JESUS SOON WILL COME AGAIN.

Friends of Jesus, are you watching
For your Master's soon return?
Are you now prepared to meet Him?
See, the race is almost run.
Have you carefully considered
Jesus soon will come again,
When from trouble He'll deliver
Every faithful, loving friend?

Sun and moon and stars have spoken
That the end is near at hand;
Scotting is another token
To His faithful little band
That from death and grave to ransom,
Jesus soon will come again,
When His saints shall have the kingdom,
And with Him in glory reign.

Fire and floods and roaring ocean,
Tidal waves and trembling earth,
Nations mighty in commotion,
Evil spirits going forth,
All combine to tell the story—
Jesus soon will come again
And translate us to His glory,
Where we shall with Him remain.

Now lift up your heads rejoicing,
Friends of Jesus, it is time;
Year at hand is your redemption,
You need never more repine.
From His home in yonder glory
Jesus soon will come again,
To relieve your tears and sorrows,
And to banish every pain.

STEIN AND RAY DEBATE.

Prop. 1st—The Brethren (or Tunker) Churches Possess Bible Characteristics entitling them to be regarded as Churches of Jesus Christ.

J. W. STEIN affirms.

D. B. RAY denies.

D. B. RAY'S FIRST NEGATIVE.

WE remark—1st. That Mr. Stein's definition of church is not definite. He will doubtless accept the following:

A visible church of Christ, is a congregation of baptized believers, in which the pure word of God is preached, and the ordinances duly administered according to the will of Jesus Christ.

2. We remark; that in denying the proposition, we do not deny that there are some of the Children of God in the Tunker churches. God has children in and out of the various denominations called churches; even in Rome. Rev. 18: 4. We must, in these investigations, distinguish between individual children of God and the organizations called churches.

3. We admit that the Tunker churches hold some points of truth. All churches, including Rome, hold some truth.

4. Though Mr. Stein has affirmed that the Tunker churches possess the Bible characteristics, &c., he has introduced no proof to support him! True, he has affirmed this and so, but his bare statements cannot pass for proof. What would be thought of an attorney who affirms before the court that a certain business corporation possesses the characteristics which entitles it to inherit a large estate, and asks judgment in his favor because he affirms, without proof, certain things concerning the corporation! The testimony of the lawyer is not to be taken as sufficient. Mr. Stein did not introduce one line of testimony pointing out even one characteristic of the Tunker churches, unless his own bare statements be taken for proof

He must introduce witnesses, showing the characteristics of the Tunker churches, and then measure these characteristics by the Word of God.

As Mr. Stein has introduced no witnesses for his church characteristics, we must place him on the witness stand for examination: His "1st Characteristic Its foundation is Christ." 1 Cor. 3, 11. If he means to say, that the Tunker churches have Christ for their foundation, we deny. We expect to show that their foundation is "sinking sand," in our negative line. We endorse all the Scriptures referred to under this head. They have no reference to the Tunker churches.

Mr. Stein puts his "2nd Characteristic. It is a spiritual house. 1 Peter 2, 5." This we emphatically deny, and here introduce our negative.

Argument First. The Tunker churches are not churches of Christ, because they are based upon a carnal membership.

They willfully receive the unregenerate to baptism, which places the unregenerate into church membership. Mr. J. H. Moore, the leading Tunker editor, in his pamphlet called "Safe Ground," p. 8, says:

"The plan of salvation, as presented to us in the New Testament, is properly in two parts: First: Salvation from sin, i. e., pardoned. This is secured by:

1. Faith: 'He that believeth not shall be damned.' Without faith it is impossible to please God.'

2. Repentance, or reformation of life, or change of conduct. * * *

3. Confession. * * *

4. Baptism."

And on p. 9, Mr. Moore, of these commands, says:

"The first part of the plan of salvation is strictly intended for the sinner, telling him what to do, in order to be pardoned, or to get into the church; in short what to do to be a Christian. * * * The first makes him a Christian, and the second keeps him such. The first plucks him from Satan, and places him in the church militant; the second keeps him in the church militant, and prepares him for the church triumphant."

The stars show that some is omitted, but we have quoted enough to show the Tunker positions.

A careful review of the above quotations show that (1) the Tunkers have inverted the Bible order by putting faith prior to repentance. (2) They make repentance only a change of life, or conduct. (3) They baptize the unpardoned sinner to pluck him from the devil! Thus the Tunkers reject the doctrine of regeneration by the Holy Spirit, and receive the sinner to baptism and church membership, upon a faith possessed before and independent of repentance. Jesus said, "Repent and believe the Gospel." Mark 1: 15, but Tunkerism says, "Faith and repentance." Jesus said Matt. 21: 31: "Ye, when ye had seen it, repented not afterward, that ye might believe him," but Tunkerism says, "There is no need of repentance in order to faith." Paul testified "Both to the Jews, and also to the Greeks, repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ," Acts 20, 22, but Tunkerism changes and contradicts Paul's testimony. To invert the order of repentance and faith, is to reject both. The Tunker churches are entirely destitute of Bible repentance and faith. They baptize upon a faith which precedes repentance. This is an impudent faith. Their so-called repentance is only "a change of conduct." It does not change the mind and heart. Churches that willfully receive to baptism the unregenerate children of Satan, are not churches of Jesus Christ. The Tunker churches willfully receive to baptism the unregenerate children of Satan.

Therefore, the Tunker churches are not churches of Jesus Christ.

The very passage 1 Peter 2: 5, introduced by Mr. Stein condemns the Tunker churches. Peter says, "Ye also, as lively stones, are built up a spiritual house," &c. This shows that none except "lively stones" are to be built into the house—the church. But Tunker churches are built up of those who were put in by baptism as dead sinners. This is as utterly absurd as to put goats into the fold in order to make sheep of them!

Mr Stein puts his "3rd characteristic. Its builder is God!" This brings us to our Negative argument second. The Tunker churches are not churches of Christ, because they were built by uninspired men.

Mr J. H. Moore, editor of the leading Tunker paper, THE BRETHREN AT WORK, compiled and published, in his paper of Jan. 1, 1877, an account of the doctrines and history of the Tunker churches. Of their origin, Mr. Moore says:

"The origin and history of this reformatory movement, dates from the year 1708, having taken its rise in Germany about that time, in a portion of country where Baptists are said to have been wholly unknown. Some eight persons in number, who had been bred Presbyterians, excepting one who was a Lutheran, became much dissatisfied with the then prevailing religious principles of the day, consorted together in order to prayerfully read the Bible and comfort one another, and if possible, find the old path and walk therein, for as yet they knew not that there were any Baptist churches in existence."

From the above it appears that the Tunker churches had their origin in the commencement of the eighteenth century. Tunkerism was born after this wise. Of the above named persons, Mr. Moore says:

"After the careful study of the sacred Word, they were fully convinced that faith, and strict obedience in all things laid down in the perfect law of liberty were essential to salvation, and agreed to 'obey from the heart that form of doctrine once delivered to the saints.' Consequently, in the year 1708, they all repaired to the river Eder, by Schwarzenau, and were buried with Christ in baptism. They were all baptized by true immersion, organized themselves into a church, and chose Alexander Mack for their minister."

This account shows that the first Tunkers "organized themselves into a church!" They were not organized by Christ or the apostles, but they organized themselves into a church!! Jesus Christ built his church, but these Tunkers built one for themselves. Therefore they are not the church of Jesus Christ.

Grant all my friend claims for the Tunkers on the score of their charity and good works, and it would not prove that their churches are churches of Christ. The Young Men's Christians Association, the Howard Association, and other charitable institutions, bear many good fruits, as seen in their charities to the needy; but they are not churches of Jesus Christ.

Again, Mr. Stein puts his "4th characteristic. It is the pillar and ground of the truth." He gives as the reason for this, that the "Brethren" baptize for the remission of sins; and then he advocates the blasphemous heresy of baptismal salvation. This brings us to our Negative argument third: The Tunker churches are not churches of Jesus Christ, because they hold the blasphemous heresy of baptismal salvation.

That the Tunkers are liable to this charge, is seen in Mr. Moore's "Safe Ground," p. 10, when he says: "It is a simple fact that a man can be baptized into Christ, but can he get into Christ and not be baptized?" On the same page Mr. J. H. Moore says: "There are a people who claim that men can be saved without baptism."

&c. Also, Mr. Stein, in his opening affirmative, makes baptism the Savior. He makes baptism essential to salvation, to pardon, to the new birth, to spiritual cleansing, to heart obedience, to freedom from sin, to the washing away of sins, to a good conscience, to coming to the blood of Christ, to getting into the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit, and to salvation by grace! All these depend upon baptism, according to Mr. Stein. If these things be so, then every man, woman and child that is not baptized, must endure the damnation of hell! If this Tunker doctrine is true, then it is impossible for God to save a sinner, unless some other sinner will consent to permit him!—unless some one will baptize him into the blood of Christ!! In his wild attempt to sustain this monster heresy, Mr. Stein has followed the Romish and other "moon struck" theologians in making a large class of Scriptures mean baptism, though baptism is not named. This disease may be called "dropsy of brain"—water on the brain. Those who are thus afflicted make "born of water" John 3: 5, mean baptism; they make "washing of regeneration" Titus 3: 5, mean baptism, they make "washing of water by the word" Eph. 5: 25, 26, mean baptism; they make "obey" Rom. 6: 17, mean baptism. As Mr. S., did not attempt to prove that these passages refer to baptism, we let them pass for the present. Baptism is said to be "for the remission of sins" Mark 1: 4, and to "wash away the sins" Acts 22: 16. But how are sins washed away by baptism? If they are literally washed away by the water, then the sins are material, tangible, and on the surface of the body, like dust on the hands! Every one who is not religiously deranged knows that we can only "wash away sins" emblematically in baptism. And if we have the emblematic washing in baptism, the real washing must come first. Jesus called the bread "my body," and the wine "my blood." We agree that the bread and wine in communion are only the body and blood of Christ in emblem; so, we wash away sins in emblem, in baptism.

Luke 7: 30 is not strictly rendered in the common version. It should read, "not having been baptized of him." Those that rejected John rejected Christ, is what is taught here.

That the Tunker doctrine of baptismal salvation is false, is proved.

1. From the fact that when Jesus forgave sins, baptism was not a condition. Luke 7: 32. Jesus said to the weeping woman: "Thy faith hath saved thee; go in peace." The thief on the cross was not saved by baptism.

2. That Tunkerism is wrong on this point, is seen from the fact that Jesus ascribes eternal life to every believer. John 5: 24; 3: 15, 16: "Whoever believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life." The Tunker churches contradict this. Any churches that contradict Jesus Christ are not churches of Jesus Christ. The Tunker churches contradict Jesus Christ. Therefore, the Tunker churches are not churches of Christ.

The road of life is not a turnpike road. It is a path which every one must find for himself, by the help of such directions as God has given us; and there are so many other paths crossing the true one in all quarters and the wrong paths are so well beaten, and the true path is so faintly marked, so many, too, are always going the wrong way, that between the number of paths to puzzle him and the number of wrong examples to lead him astray, a man, if he does not take continual heed, is in great danger of turning in a wrong path, almost without perceiving it.

Good thoughts (though God accept them) yet towards men are little better than good dreams, except they be put in act.

YOU NEVER CAN TELL.

YOU think it is easy your steps to retrace. Before the last pitfall is gained, That a man can step short of crushing disgrace And still find his honor unstained.

But sin is so mighty, and conscience so weak, And under so tempting a spell, That though you may long other pleasures to seek Your weakness you never can tell!

The ocean of evil, you never can sound, The depth you never can discern, But under your feet there is treacherous ground, If away from the good land you turn!

You see not the danger, you fear not the foe, You whisper the soul, "It is well!" And think that you know just how far you may go, And you never, no never can tell!

You never can tell at what moment you'll slip, Into snares that are cruelly laid, By those who are willing another should trip, Were they ever so fondly betrayed.

A moment's indulgence may lead you to crimes That merit a prisoner's cell; Then quench the hot fever of passion betimes For its power you never can tell!

You never can tell at what moment you'll hear The signal of death at your gate, Whose touch will arrest your wild, thoughtless career, And bring your repentance too late.

Stand firm then to-day, the allurements of sin, With pride and persistence repel, And strive for a prize that is worthy to win, And whose glory no mortal can tell!

PHILOLOGICAL DISSERTATION OF THE WORD BAPTISM.

BY LEWIS G. HUMBER.

NUMBER II.

WE have shown how, and why, sprinkling and wetting were introduced into the church, under the guise of a Christian institution. We will now show by infallible rules of appropriation, that calling sprinkling, pouring, wetting and any other application of water to the individual, baptism, can never make it baptism, or be reached into the meaning of the word. I will analyze this part of the subject by the infallible rules of appropriation.

1. Words can have no meaning without appropriation.

2. When words are once appropriated, they are disqualified to serve in the room of any other appropriated words.

3. When words are appropriated, they are always used literally, and can not be used figuratively. A close observance of these self-evident rules of appropriation, will forever settle the controversy respecting the meaning of the word "baptism." That words can have no meaning without appropriation, my readers can satisfy themselves, by taking a word never used, and see if they can use it without conveying an idea. This is the appropriate, or primary meaning of the word. If you find that you use the word to convey a different idea, that is its second, appropriated meaning, or secondary meaning, and so on, and in that way use can confer any number of meanings. But when the word is once appropriated, it cannot be appropriated to things that have appropriated names—for example: you cannot appropriate the word, man, to woman, or hog to cow, or horse to sheep. To make the matter still clearer, I will take an apple that has two, or a dozen names; you take either of those names and appropriate to any other apple, and then no person could tell which apple was meant, when reference was made to the apple bearing that name. Nothing could be learned from words, to proceed upon such principles. Apply this rule to the ordinance of baptism, and see if you can get all the different modes under the meaning of the word "baptism."

If three distinct apples cannot be designated under one name, how can three distinct modes be designated by the word, "baptism?" In fact, it is impossible to get three modes under one name, no such distinction can exist in the meaning of any word. No word can convey three ideas at the same time. Those who practice the various modes, must always find out how the person wants to be baptized, for it is not contained in the meaning of the word, and cannot be contained—it is an impossibility.

We will illustrate further—we will take the words plowing, harrowing and rolling, three distinct and different acts, like that of immersing, sprinkling and pouring.

Now let my readers try if they can find a word in the English language that can designate plowing, harrowing and rolling, all at the same time, and if they cannot, they can rest assured that the word, "baptism," cannot designate immersion, sprinkling and pouring. Sprinkling and pouring are distinct institutions or ceremonies and can never be caught under the name of baptism. The institutions are sailing under false colors. The practitioners think if they can sail under the Christian name, that will make them Christian institutions, but when it will be too late they will discover their error. If I were to sell a man Rambo apple trees and mark them Maiden Blush, I would be deceiving the man and liable to prosecution. My calling Rambo, Maiden Blush would not make it so—could not make it so—the Rambo would still be Rambo, and Maiden Blush would be Maiden Blush. Let Christians cease to sail under false colors and give their institutions their proper and lawful names, and sprinkling will soon die out, and the grand old Ship will be filled with passengers for the heavenly city. Many a poor soul you deceive with your false colors, and lead them into the institution of popes and kings for the institution of Christ.

Going to F. Cong. The Morning Service. Read Lessons to Learn. Our Evening Service. Visitors from afar.

NUMBER VIII.

THIS is the first Sunday meeting in October. The evenings and mornings make us sensible of approaching frosts. All day long we feel a chilly touch. This is Madame Nature, in her autumnal humor. We feel, too, reminded of the coldness of human hearts. We read in the Holy Scriptures of "cold" and "lukewarm" believers in the church. We read, too, of a time when "the love of many shall wax (become or grow) cold." May the Lord deliver us from such a condition! But so it will surely be with many in all ages of the church. Brother, sister, let us ask,

IS IT I?

Daily we need to make this inquiry, and act accordingly. It is the "fervent" prayer that availeth much. It is the "fervent" love that is recommended to the believers. O that each one could now live as we wish we had lived when we came to die! How fervently we would love all the members, rich and poor, high and low, one and all! So it ought to be. We may lay a claim to the love of God, shed abroad in the heart, but this will be of no use unless we use that love to cover the past and correct the future. Shun no one. Be a brother and a sister in deed and in truth. Let it not be said by the observing world, "Behold, how these Christians slight one another, and talk harmful about one another." Oh, no, but let them have the reason to say, "Behold, how these Christians

LOVE ONE ANOTHER!

Love is the golden ring presented to every true believer by the lovely Jeweler of Heaven. It would indeed be a painful regret that any one should never have received it, and most deplorable that there should be any that had it and have lost it. If so, go at once, I beseech you, and apply with yearning heart to the Master. If you have love, get more of it. Let the heart be full, and then there will be no room for anything else. Though the weather be chilly, so our outward man feel it, O let not our "inner man" feel any coldness, but rather be all aglow with the love of Christ in us. Though others fail to do what they ought, still let us do our part—"love one another with a pure heart, fervently." If you would correct others, do it in love—love for their souls and love for the truth.

The 102nd hymn introduced the worship of God this morning in the Welty meeting-house. The third stanza contains a precious invitation and breathes a spirit of true devotion. After a brother offered a prayer of much feeling, another followed with the Lord's Prayer which is our usual order. A verse was sung. The third chapter of the Gospel of St. John was offered, and a deacon brother arose, by request, and read it to all the congregation. A ministering brother then closed the 14th and 15th verses, and we gathered up the points:

- 1. A type of Christ.
2. A belief in Christ.
3. A gift from Christ.

Another ministering brother followed with the 378th hymn, and exhortation to prayer.

"Lord's day" with the singing, closed the meeting and the congregation was dismissed.

We spent the afternoon in the home of a dear Christian brother, with others, and was led to find in a still steadfast in the faith and looking onward to better days. I saw here an sympathetic fellowship you one another, and confiding with the "good" for the "good" which is the true prospect we have of man on in heaven! Forward, brethren, onward! Never backward! We may be translated sooner than we think, therefore, let us be ready for it every day.

OUR FAITH.

in the town meeting house, was introduced by the brother, Ebenezer.

"The hour is come, that ye should stand up against the world."

linger upon my memory. How beautiful the figured life, sweet the delight with which our liberated spirits return to the time and place, when we sought and found the gates of Gospel grace! Every one who has been "born again" can utter the testimony that they are "happy gates," whose entrance offered unspeakable happiness. And shall we indeed be less happy now than when we were made happy in the beginning of our profession? O no, I ask, was it not obedience to Christ that gave us happiness at the beginning? You agree with me. Then if we be obedient now, shall not our happiness continue? Do you need a remedy for your unhappiness? O dear children of God! Try obedience. "Obedience is better than sacrifice."

After prayer, a ministering brother suggested Acts 16: 30 as containing an appropriate motto for the occasion. He stated that the question,

"WHAT MUST I DO TO BE SAVED?" was one of the greatest importance. During the discussion, we drew the following inference:

- I. Out of Christ we are lost.
II. In Christ we are saved.
III. Christ's work for us, and ours for ourselves and Him.

After the 378th hymn was sung, we knelt to prayers.

"Once more before we part" was sung in conclusion and we were dismissed to attend the cares of another week of toil.

PERSONAL.

Last night at the meeting, we had the pleasure of meeting brother Daniel Zellers and his wife, our sister. They have been visiting some friends in the neighborhood for several weeks past, but intend starting to-day on their way home to Mt. Morris Ill. May the smiles of the Lord be upon them.

Peace be upon all the faithful. D. B. M.

ECHOES FROM THE CENTER.

A Solemn Call—Pleasant Drive—Closing Exercises of the Sunday School—Interesting Address—The Sermon—A Mission of Love—Quarterly Council—in the Master's Vineyard—Lord's Day.

(From our Special Correspondent.) NUMBER III.

JUST now the bell is pealing forth a mournful dirge, calling the people to assemble in the church to show their sympathy and lend assistance to a fond father and loving mother whose hearts are made to bleed by the loss of a dear little child. Pursuant to the call, we hastened to the scene of death, and there in a neat, white lined case, we found the innocent sleeper. Falling in to line, we slowly followed after in the procession to the church, there to mingle our sorrows with theirs. The preacher arose and addressed us on the subject of death and the necessity of preparing for that solemn event. He considered the fond parents with the pleasing thought that the little sleeper was now an inmate of the great family above, as Jesus declared, "for of such is the kingdom of God." By the frequent occurrence of these solemn scenes, death loses its power upon the mind of many, forgetting that it is a reminder of their own mortality. And though they witness these poignant events again and again, they gladly go on until the great Reaper cuts them down and they go unprepared.

Next morning we beheld a very Lord's day, and a beautiful morning it was, with hearts full of gratitude to a benignant Father for the benediction, before us and the happiness to enjoy; we took our usual six mile drive to the old church, that hallowed spot, the house of worship from our youth, to again engage in the pleasant exercises of the Sunday school, and to witness the closing exercises of the Summer session. Had a good attendance and good interest. Were entertained by an address to the school by brother Henry Damer, choosing for his subject "The complex nature of man," and spake substantially as follows:

- The leading thoughts deduced are,
1. The physical nature of man.
2. The intellectual or mental nature.
3. The spiritual or moral nature.

(1). The physical nature. This body of ours is under certain laws and should be governed by them. And for every violation of law, the body must be punished. He maintained that each of those natures should be developed, and while it is the duty of the parents to properly clothe the child, it is also their duty to provide healthful food for them, that their bodies might become vigorous and healthful.

(2). The intellectual or mental nature. In the physical nature of the child is properly developed as age advances, the intellect will become stronger and be prepared for mental improvement. The mind is the electric force of the body, and as the mind wills, so the body does, hence the necessity of proper mental culture, that the child may be prepared for higher and nobler attainments.

(3). The spiritual or moral nature. The third step is equally important. It is the duty of parents and teachers to look after the spiritual food of the child. Look at the expenditure for books and papers, the literature of the country! How much unwholesome food! There are books and papers, the nature of which we become ashamed of; the author of which we hold in disrepute. But he referred his auditors to a Book that we need not be ashamed of, neither of its Author, and that is the Bible, and God the Author. He tenderly appealed to the parents to instill the thoughts and sentiments of Bible truths into the minds of their children, that they might become religious and qualified for a home beyond. He also set forth the danger of neglecting our duties, and by this, there was danger of ruin, both of parent and child. In his closing remarks, he replied, that education, was not, nor implied simply to store the mind with facts, but to be wise, he must labor to become better and purer, thereby becoming holier. After offering a song of praise, we dismissed for a few moments, and then re-assembled for the sermon, with the usual formula of the opening exercises, the speaker selected from the chapter read, "Which of you canvaunteth me of sin?" John 8:46, for a part of his discourse. His theme was, the sinless character of Jesus Christ, and our relations to Him.

Jesus Christ asked this question of His enemies while they were censuring Him and vainly endeavoring to bring Him in disrepute. But He fearlessly reproves them, and confident of His purity, he asks them, "Which of you canvaunteth me of sin?" He observed, first, the sinless character of Jesus Christ. Second, the importance to which the text may be applied. The sinless character of Christ is determined from the nature of His conception and birth. Free from any taint of moral defilement, those of His intimate associates around His truthfulness and purity. And His enemies could find no defects, when He was brought to trial, and as He expired on the cross, they smote themselves and exclaimed, "Truly this man was the Son of God." If His life was sinless and pure, His Gospel must be true, and hence He was qualified for His divine mission.

The speaker then appealed to Christians to become more Christ-like, to become more assimilated to the character of Him, the object of their worship, that in the end they might be like Him. The closing remarks were directed to the unconverted, and they were made to feel, that in their present condition, they had no claim on Him, no relations to sustain them in eternity, and hence would he cast off where hope is a stranger and where mercy cannot come.

Next day in company with brother A. W. Bowers, went to pay a visit to our brother and sister. What a source of comfort to them to have us call and see how they do! Many live somewhat isolated from the main body, and to those who cannot meet with us often in the sanctuary, especially is a visit much appreciated. Found them in love and union with the church and still willing to abide by the instruction of the Gospel and labor for a greater degree of holiness, endeavoring to become better as they grow older. On Saturday we met at the church in quarterly council, as our brethren have decided long ago to meet once per quarter to attend to church business, and as we soon expect to hold our Feast, this meeting was one of especial interest. Considerable matter was brought before the meeting, but we think all was adjusted in the favor of God and for the welfare of souls. Among the good things of the meeting in which angels participated in our joy, was receiving members into our church, and by letter and one by dispensation. Thus God blesses, and His Father works. To me is a pleasure to see a laborer in the Master's vineyard, though I am deeply compassed and tossed at times over the cruel wars of life, yet we have need of sufficient ballast to steady her, that she may continue to sail. How pleasant it is when we get into a storm and are nearly overwhelmed, and we find that Jesus, the Captain of our salvation, is with us, and we are able to say, "My anchor is set in the rock, and I will not be moved." The Ridge church was very happy, and service was rendered to the congregation of 67th hymn.

The speaker then appealed to Christians to become more Christ-like, to become more assimilated to the character of Him, the object of their worship, that in the end they might be like Him. The closing remarks were directed to the unconverted, and they were made to feel, that in their present condition, they had no claim on Him, no relations to sustain them in eternity, and hence

OUR Saviour, who so graciously seemed to us as a person free of hypocrisy as the most atrocious of sins, in his expression, "Which of you Scribes, Pharisees, hypocrites, commemorating the various enormities of which they were guilty, pronounced, by the intensity of his disgust in regard to the degrading sin of hypocrisy. And we believe that every true follower of Jesus has the same spirit, is actuated by the same feelings. In a measure, they are fallible, he was not; but the same spirit is the predominant principle, for we are plainly told, "If ye have not the spirit of Christ, ye are none of his." They have the same dislike and in the same manner detest a low, mean hypocrisy. Those that will join a church and profess to be followers of Christ, purposely to carry out some worldly scheme, certainly are the most abominable of God's creation. There is some pollution or excuse for almost every other evil, but this is the most presumptuous sin that Satan has been able to invent, one that will compare with the holiest; a best gift, God has in his kindness and mercy bestowed upon his people. One that can deceitfully use a cloak of religion to accomplish necessary ends, is certainly in a worse condition than the heathen and infidel. There can be some allowance made for ignorance as well as a wild theory; but he that knows his Master's will, and tramples upon his mercy and kindness, how great is his sin! We know that God knows every secret thought, and his watchful eye is ever upon us; we cannot deceive him who numbers the very hairs of our heads, and sends daily and hourly blessings upon us without number, who guides every beat of the heart, every breath we breathe, is permitted by his merciful goodness, and yet we will presumptuously stand forth in our own strength and defy the living God by making use of the greatest blessing he has ever bestowed upon us, the yoke of his commandments, to bring us to him, that which is intended to make us eternally happy. "Woe in you Scribes, Pharisees, hypocrites, for ye build your widows' houses and for a pretence make long prayers, therefore ye shall receive the greater damnation." We would infer from these words, that this class of hypocrites are to be punished with more severity than any other sinners.

But for this looks terrible, but they are the words of our divine Master, and do not do his kind and loving nature. These have been invited to the very uttermost, how far such terrible language. I must have been tortured by the thought that these Scribes and Pharisees should try to make the world believe they were righteous, and yet their hearts were such cruelty and hardness, to deny our a poor widow's words, and her words oppress her, or to deny her words, and her words oppress her.

It is claimed by some, that the immortal part of us cannot suffer; but we maintain that it is the only part of us that can suffer when the soul leaves this tenement of clay, the suffering of the body is done, all of the sensitive qualities of the body are gone, both mentally and physically. We lie, a lifeless, senseless mass after the spirit takes its flight, and whatever our reward is to be in eternity, will be meted out to us. If our lives have been spent in a constant practice of those virtues which are the fruit of the Spirit, which are "love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness and temperance," if we have walked in and been guided by the Spirit, then great will be our reward; but on the other hand, if our life has been spent in trying to make our appearance of holiness, and we are only as the whitened sepulchres that our Saviour speaks of, that make a beautiful outward appearance, but are within full of all manner of filthiness. Again, I repeat the words of our Saviour, "Ye shall receive the greater damnation. We understand "greater" to mean something more than great, that is exceeding great to some degree, and when it has reference to eternal punishment, it is awful to contemplate. "Therefore knowing the terror of the Lord," let us repent before it is forever too late.

Our blessed and kind Redeemer after telling the Jews of their base hypocrisies and pointing out the wickedness of their conduct, addresses them in the most sympathetic manner, "Jerusalem, Jerusalem, how often would I have gathered you together as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not." Yes, all that will turn unto him; he will gather them together and shield them from the snares of the wicked one, and his numerous enemies, and lovingly protect them under his wings of love from the cold blasts of adversity. We may rest assured if we go to him earnestly and sincerely, trusting in his mercy, he will take us safely through this world and land us securely on the other side of the Jordan of death.

RULES FOR PARENTS.

1. First give yourself, then your child, to God. It is but giving him his own. Not to do it, is robbing God.
2. Always prefer virtue to wealth—the honor that comes from God to the honor that comes from men. Do this for yourself. Do it for your child.
3. Let your whole course be to raise your child to a high standard. Do not sink into childishness yourself.
4. Give no needless commands, but when you command, require prompt obedience.
5. Never indulge a child in cruelty, even to an insect.
6. Cultivate a sympathy with your child in all lawful joys and sorrows.
7. Be sure that you never correct a child until you know that he deserves correction. Hear his story first and fully.
8. Never allow your child to whine or fret, or to bear grudges.
9. Early inculcate frankness, candor, generosity, magnanimity, patriotism and self-denial.
10. The knowledge and fear of the Lord are the beginning of wisdom.
11. Never mortify the feelings of your child by upbraiding it with dullness, neither inspire it with self-conceit.

WHAT BECOMES OF THEM?

WHAT becomes of the sons of men who according to the ways of the world, are considered successful? A few establishments are in the hands of the sons of the founders, but they are the exceptions.

"Do you see that man shoveling coal? Well, his children, and children like his, will justle your pampered sons and rule the land," said an old man the other day. The famed men of the day seldom have a lineal successor. The eminent jurists carry their honors with them to their grave. The funds of merchant princes are soon squandered. The reason is clear. The fathers laid the basis of the business one way and the sons built another. Men who earned their fortunes by hard work, by diligence; that were their own book-keepers, salesmen, cashiers, and often porters, are followed by sons who do as little as possible; who delegate to others all the work they can, and who know more of the road than of the ledger.

LANARK, ILL., OCTOBER 24, 1878.

By an oversight Bro. Hope's account of the Love-feast was missed last week. It will be found in this issue.

Over 3,500 deaths have been caused by the yellow fever at New Orleans since the commencement of the plague.

Our patrons are over-stocking us with three cent stamps. For the next thirty days we prefer that you send us 1's and 2's. We can also make good use of 5's and 10's.

Persons wishing to act as agents for the Brethren at Work will please drop us a card and we will send them an outfit for that purpose. We desire a good agent in every locality.

A copy of the Mennonite Almanac has just been received from J. P. Funk & Brother, Elkhart, Ind. It presents an attractive appearance, and is well filled with useful matter and some good illustrations.

The interest in the Danish mission field is increasing, and prospects brightening up quite encouragingly. Brother Hope writes that his congregations are large, and attention good. They now have three ministers, and one deacon.

Last Tuesday and Wednesday we attended the Feast at Yellow Creek, some 14 miles north of Lanark. It rained all of the first day, and part of the second. Owing to the condition of the weather, the crowd was small, but the meeting a good one; it was an enjoyable season. A number of ministers were in attendance. Wm. Eisenbise, a promising young brother, was elected to the ministry. May he prove an efficient workman in the Master's vineyard.

Brother S. Z. Sharp, writing from his old home at Maryville, Tenn., says: "I left Ashland, Ohio, on September 30th, and reached home October 4th. Saw some of the effects of the yellow fever on my way, and I assure the liberal hearted that their donations will not come amiss. Traveled in all, over three thousand miles and in nine States. Was universally well received by the Brethren, for which many thanks. Made some narrow escapes which prove how uncertain is life. Our Love-feast on the 5th, a good and refreshing meeting. Two precious souls received. Bro. Botweiler advanced to the second degree in the ministry. All well, thanks to kind Providence."

Brother D. C. Moonaw is spending some time in New York City. He suggests that some of the Brethren attend the Millennium Conference to be held in that city, Oct. 20th, when a number of ministers expect to meet and discuss the second coming of Christ. Stephen H. Tyng, junr, Mr. Moody, and others are expected to take part in it. Thirty years ago the interest in the immediateness of the expected coming of Christ grew to the proportion of a wide-spread excitement, attended with some follies and disasters, but now the question is receiving the attention of many sober thinkers, and the discussion will likely throw some light on the subject.

Our Board has had twenty-five replies to the United States, but eight small churches, and five ministers. Now they report one hundred and fifty churches, and one hundred and thirty ministers, with one hundred and twenty-four Sunday-schools and twelve hundred and thirty-eight teachers.

The above is an editorial item clipped from the Baptist Bible Times, and contains errors which the editors of that paper certainly ought to know is incorrect. We live in the State of Missouri alone (where the Flag is published), about fifty ministers, saying nothing about other States containing many times more. We have in the United States, about 1,600 ministers, 500 congregations—many of them very large—and not far from one hundred thousand members. We ask the Flag to please correct.

The rainy weather interfered some with Bro. Gibson's meetings at Shannon last week, yet the congregations were good and the interest excellent. Four were added to the church by baptism. Other engagements prevented us from attending more than one of his meetings. His manner of preaching is instructive and pointed, containing many carefully studied arguments and criticisms.

Our subscribers can always tell when their subscriptions expire by noticing the date to the right of their name. If it is 21, '79, it means that the time of subscription expires January 1, 1879. If it is 21, '78, it means the subscription expires Nov. 1, 1878. Each one of you examine your dates and you will then know just when your time expires. To be sure of not missing any papers be certain to renew about three weeks before your time is up, as our rule is to take all names out when the time of subscription expires.

It is gratifying to note that the Primitive Christian has concluded to dispense with secular advertisements after this year. This will be a source of pleasure to its readers. We believe the Brethren at Work was the first weekly among us, starting out on that principle, and we find that it gives such general satisfaction that we have about concluded not to devote much space to advertising even our own books and pamphlets, but advertise them mostly by means of a supplement. By so doing we can give more space to reading matter.

While attending a Love-feast, some time ago, we observed, that during feet-washing a sister superintended each basin among the sisters, and thus avoided the confusion frequently attending this part of the services where the house is crowded. The idea was a good one, and is entitled to the attention of all large congregations. This duty belongs to the wives of the officials, and they should feel themselves at liberty to look after and take charge of such matters among the sisters. While thus acting they need not feel out of place, but rather regard it as a duty to do so.

Brother Hope, in speaking of their late Love-feast says: "After the examination was over, liberty was given to all for prayer, and the liberty was taken by a number of brethren and sisters. The sisters prayed for their husbands, children, friends and foes. It produced quite an effect. Tears were shed and sobbing was heard on every side. I generally study carefully the prayers that God's people offer, as I do not believe in so many words, and perhaps after all not tell God our real wants, but the prayers on this occasion were not so. They were so heartfelt and full of faith that I felt great blessings would flow from it." The part the Danish sisters take in examination services is commendable, and should engage the attention of our American sisters also.

We know a certain preacher among the Brethren, who spends all his time preaching and talking to the people. He works with the people a good deal like fishermen do, with the fish. He talks to them on religion, endeavoring to work up an interest, and then tries to get them to subscribe for the Brethren at Work, if only for a few months, knowing, that if he can get them to read about the Brethren, he can keep up the interest, but if they will not subscribe, then he frequently pays for the paper a few months, and has it sent to such of these persons as he thinks will be benefited by it. By this method he reaches some who could not be reached in any other way. Remember, preachers are fishermen, and if they would succeed, they must contrive many ways to get the fish to come within reach of the Gospel net. When working for the Lord do not let the good things go.

Brother Bashor has returned from a visit among the Brethren in Northern Illinois. He expresses himself as highly pleased with his trip, reports good meetings, much kindness shown him by the members, and souls added to the number of the saved. Bro. B. says, "If all who profess the name of Christ, would display their zeal for the Master's cause, by living out their profession as these brethren do, the name of our people would be Brethren indeed." We always knew that our Brethren down there loved the Lord, and that is why we love them. Bro. B.

has now entered into active service again and will labor right along all Winter, if his health permits. His appointments in Ohio begin at Maple Grove church, Wayne Co., Nov. 21st. 7 P. M. He is now preaching at Shannon. May success attend his work.

From Brother Daniel Vaniman we have received copies of the Minutes of their late District Meeting. We make the following extract: "Will the district meeting of Southern District of Ill. agree to take the little hand of brethren and sisters in Henderson Co., Ky., under their care and render them such assistance as may be necessary to build them up in the good work of the Lord? ASS. Yes, and brother John Metzger is hereby appointed to take the oversight of them, and call upon other elders to assist him when necessary."

When Saul heard the daughters of Jerusalem sing that Saul has slain his thousands and David his tens of thousands, it was more than he could stand. It was giving David more honor than himself and that he could not endure. His heart was too corrupt. It is safe to conclude that all the Sauls are not dead yet; there are certain men who cannot bear to have others get more honor than themselves. Such men may rest assured that the Lord has a David somewhere who, though chosen from the lower walks of life, will one day take their place.

There is not much danger of some men turning the world upside down. Like a meteor, they may appear very brilliant at first, but soon sink to oblivion. You need not become alarmed at such things; they repeat themselves every few years, make a ripple and then disappear for a season. Good, solid and substantial men have and will continue to stand. They pay about as much attention to these little ripples as the moon does to a lightning bug. Their movements may not be very fast; they may not make very much noise, but like the steady, hard-working men in the tunnel under the mountain—they will get through after awhile.

Supposing my brother would strike a large rock twenty-four times with a heavy hammer and not break it, and while he was resting, I would strike it one heavy blow and it would fall to pieces; would you not think I had done wonders? Yet if it had not been for my brother's work I might pound away for hours and not affect the rock. Ministers will please analyze this carefully before boasting of their work. Paul may plant, Apollos water, but God must give the increase. Remember, we are laborers together; some plant and others reap, but God will reward every man according to his work. Then do not boast, but do what you can and let the Judge of all the earth order the trumpet sounded.

LANARK SURROUNDINGS.

The church at Lanark consists of about 115 members, scattered over a small territory four miles long and three miles wide. They have a plain, but commodious meeting-house standing on a beautiful elevation in the south part of the city. We have preaching every Sunday night, and every alternate Sunday at ten. Our Sunday-school is at 3 o'clock. All the officers and teachers in the school are members. The meetings and school are largely attended by the town people as well as those from the country.

Three miles north of Lanark is the Cherry Grove meeting-house, where there is a large body of members. Seven miles west of the Cherry Grove houses the Arnold's Grove church. This is the oldest congregation in this part of the country. They have another house of worship in the city of Mt. Carroll, eight miles west of Lanark. About six miles south-west of Mt. Carroll is the Healey Grove house.

Seven miles north-east of Lanark is Shannon, in which place the Brethren have a good house. Ten miles south is the Dutchtown meeting-house. By this it will be seen that we are entirely surrounded by large bodies of members. There are thirteen preaching-houses within a half day's drive of our office, and not less than twenty-one ministers within ten miles. Outside of the towns the Brethren have the entire influence in this part of the country, and are rapidly gaining good foothold in the towns. There are about 50 members living in Lanark, including two ministers and four deacons.

The above is given for the satisfaction of those who wish to know more of our surroundings. Our people may rest assured that we are surrounded with very desirable influences, and good counsellors.

OUR REASON FOR NOT TRAVELING MORE.

SOME of our readers think we ought to devote more time to traveling and preaching in other parts of the brotherhood, and many are the solicitations we receive to come and hold meeting. This we would gladly do, were it in our power, and we thought it for the best; but it should be remembered, that the editing of a weekly paper is no small matter, and that it is our duty to keep a careful watch over its contents. Our business, as editors, is an important one, and needs our constant attention. At the least estimate we have not less than thirty-five thousand readers, who must be supplied with the best reading matter we can procure. It will not do, nor is it safe, for us to neglect such an important work. Just think, gentle reader, of addressing an audience of 35,000 people every week; what a vast congregation! What an opportunity for accomplishing good and moulding sentiments!

We want to make the Brethren at Work interesting and reliable, and in order to do so, must neglect traveling very extensively. We do not want an article to go into the paper before we have read it; this point wants to be watched with great care. And then, brethren and sisters, you all know that the closer a man sticks to his business the better work he can do. Our business is to give you a good paper—a paper that will be worth reading, and one that you will not be ashamed to hand to your neighbors.

We could enjoy ourselves with you finely. It would be a source of great pleasure to us, but duty demands that we attend to our editorial duties with great care, and with an eye single to the good of the cause. We will certainly strain every nerve to do good and spread the truth, but as a traveling preacher do not expect too much of us. We will do all at it we possibly can, but our vast congregation of readers demands special attention; and to them and the cause we feel ourselves under much and many obligations. May God help and bless all of us in our efforts at doing good, and spreading the truth for the salvation of others.

It is gratifying to know that we have scores of faithful ministers who are willing to take the field and labor earnestly in the interest of the great cause—converting sinners and building up the church. Their work is a noble one, and God bless them in it. And while they thus labor, we will do our utmost to supply the converts and churches with suitable reading, that their minds may be kept constantly exercised in that which will tend largely to the development of their spiritual natures, and by so doing we assist each other in the one common calling.

In this issue is published two speeches of the debate. Hereafter there will be but one each week.

Brother Bashor's address will be, from the 26th inst. to the 10th of Nov., at Winchester, O., in care of Wm. Scott. He begins labors at Boston, Wayne Co., Ind. this week to continue only a few evenings.

Brother D. B. Gibson has closed his labors in Northern Ill., for the present, and now returns to his home in Mo., where he will remain a few months preparatory to returning here to fill other calls in this part of the State. The climate here is congenial to his constitution; his health is better than it has been for years.

Some people say they know things they cannot tell. We don't know about that, but of one thing we are certain: There are plenty of persons who tell things they do not know, and these are the ones who generally make the most trouble.

What is the use of tattling over what people say about you? Scandal hurts the person who deals in it the worst. If you are innocent, rejoice that the reports are false, but take heed that they do not come true. The best way to get rid of tattlers, is to treat them with silent contempt. If left alone, they will die of themselves.

This thing of holding high, pure principles, and then living on low ones, is the worst of Christian inconsistency. Men's theories of morality and right are generally good enough, but their practices are often deplorable. There are few men whose practice is not worse than their profession. It is a nice thing to be just right.

CORRESPONDENCE.

From Bethel Church, Carleton, Neb.

Dear Brethren:

OUR Communion and that of the White Rock church, Kansas, are in the past—The brethren of Bethel church held their Communion five miles North of Carleton, on the farm of brother Holsinger. He has just bought a new house and as we have no meeting-house, we have to do the next best. We had a board tent built against Bro. Holsinger's house, which was quite comfortable.

Our meeting was on the 14th and 15th of Sept. On the 14th inst., brother William P. Rice, a speaker, with his wife, came from Beatrice, bringing with them elders Henry Brobakor of Beatrice, Nebraska, and S. C. Stump of Falls City, Nebraska. Oh, how it strengthened us, when our elders come, visit us, attend our councils, advise, and instruct us! Our council was on the 12th. Bro. H. P. Brinkworth, who recently arrived from England, was present at our council. I forgot to mention that brother Shiek, another minister from Beatrice, was with us, and the above mentioned ministers were all the strange ones until Sunday morning, when brother N. C. Workman from Iowa, his brother, a minister, and brother Shaler, arrived. On Monday they resumed their journey West with the intention of locating a colony. May the Lord be with them with His protecting mercy and assisting grace.

On Saturday night we observed the holy ordinances of the Lord's house. I think I never saw better order among the members, as well as our dear neighbors. During the time that we were partaking of those sacred emblems—the holy Eucharist, I never saw a better feeling manifested, many tears were shed, and there were many audible sobs, which plainly showed how they realized these sacred privileges and commands. There was quite a number who had but lately enlisted under the blood-stained banner of King Emmanuel and never before engaged in this blessed Feast. I pray that they may be spiritually strengthened in this holy warfare. Our praying will do no good unless we conquer at last. I heard a dear sister say, who had lately entered the fold, I have been fighting the tempter all the week, to get the consent of my mind to wear this covering, but I conquered. Some may deem this a small thing, but I can sympathize with that sister, for I know by experience that some of these small things are hardest to overcome. It is sometimes owing to our early education. I rejoiced to hear her say that she conquered. This should be our main object, to "conquer, though it be." I pray that this dear sister may always come off "conqueror" over all her trials and temptations, and at last receive a crown of glory and a spotless robe in heaven.

Before our meeting closed, Bro. Le. T. Holsinger was elected to the ministry and Bro. L. E. Fry, of Abbeville to the second degree. Elders Brobakor and H. P. Brinkworth had a few meetings here at Summit school-house, which elders S. C. Stump went to Helton, twenty miles off Thayer Co., to hold a few meetings. These I believe were the first meetings ever held in that place by the Brethren. On the 18th, elder Brobakor started North to York county, to a communion. On the 19th he returned and I started to Kansas to the White Rock church. Bro. Holsinger accompanied me. Stopped at Helton and took elder Stump and brother Holsinger with us. They being the only two members being near Helton. Arrived Friday evening at brother Goode's, where, to brother Switzer, the place of the feast. We were hospitably entertained by brother Switzer. Next morning went to place of meeting. Met brother J. L. Switzer and family. We also met and formed the acquaintance of many more dear brethren and sisters, whose names would make my article too long to mention, but their kindness to us will long be remembered. We enjoyed the Communion with them. There was good order all the time. It always makes me feel sad to part with brethren and sisters at such times. I now close with the prayer, that when these meetings and partings are over, that we may all meet around God's throne, where

When our crosses shall be cast,
At the dear Redeemer's feet,
When we meet to part no more,
Who have loved, &c.

Cyrus Holsinger.

Amongst the Baptists, the Bible Christians and the Methodists.

Dear Brethren:

MY dear friends, I know that before I joined the church to which I now belong, that I had attached myself to the Missionary Baptists in the year 1868. On my return to England, I, of course visited them, who were the people of my choice, and to whom I owed much, for their kindness, their sympathy and good will. I have visited many families of this persuasion, while back there, and the long talk, the earnest conversation, the defenses set up, the arguments refuted and the impressions made, will not soon be forgotten by me nor will my interests for their welfare, their spiritual advancement and divine things abate until I see Brethren from these shores, willing to hear the glad tidings of salvation, by full obedience to God's will, even to this boasted and enlightened Island of Great Britain. Surely if such a people would embrace the doctrine, uncalculated good would be accomplished. And why? for the reason that the English people will not withhold the good that they receive—they are missionaries in every sense of the word, and will send to other nations of the globe their men and their money, willingly and freely to broadcast the faith once delivered to the saints.

You will doubtless be surprised to hear that there are those in the same Baptist church to which I once belonged, that have admitted that their mission was not apostolic, nor according to the commission, which teaches three-nation. Not only this, they assented to the fact, that Christ did wash the disciples' feet, and that the same is to us as a command, not to be neglected, but obeyed in spirit and in truth, by a mutual foot-washing amongst members of Christ's body. They have also acknowledged, that the substitution of the kiss of charity, as commanded in the New Testament is binding upon followers of Christ, to-day as in older times.

Now brethren and sisters, you can see where they stand, and now for their words to me, "what can we do? There are no churches here that will practice the command in full; none that will observe the 'all things.' What are we to do?" We must remain where we are and be contentful. This is no exaggerated statement, but the truth. Will we then declare to them, what to-day they are seeking for, or will we withhold the coveted treasure, fearing it will cost us a few of our worldly treasures? In their behalf I plead to-day, and if dear Brethren you will not hear them, it stands between you and your God. I want to clear my hands, by showing you, where the people of England stand to-day in lack of the whole Gospel.

Next I remember a class of people, who call themselves Bible Christians. They are a new set, who take the New Testament for their rule of faith and practice. And if they only feel good about their name asserts, there would not be any difference between them and us—But sad as it may appear, these earnest Christians, not Christ-like, for when we find Christ going into the river, to be baptized of John, we find these Bible Christians taking to a river, to be baptized in a much easier way, at a creek, or a pond in heaven. They are not so long in joining the church, and at some meetings, can be seen on the church edifice and receive the Lord's supper, they let them know their way out, but neither sprinkled or poured upon, they wish. This cannot be found in the Scripture, any where, as a command, and is a great mistake.

Next I remember a set, let us follow Christ.

They profess to be another set, but as I have given you a good deal of trouble, I will not say each other. They will not let the Lord's supper, but only will come in and eat that the Lord's supper. Of all these, I am not a Bible Christian. They have a name to live and prosper. The Bible says of such, "I have not been able to make perfect before God." Rev. 2:2.

Now I go to the set of people, who call themselves Methodists, because of their method of worshiping. Talking with them, and reading the scriptures, they say of Bah, I need them more, in connection, on the cause of Christ. But they have a method, they suppose, that there should be a people that hold the truth of Brethren and then keep that faith to themselves. They express surprise and wonder, and ask me if the church was worth anything, and if my had any misgivings in foreign lands, etc.

I am, with the English Methodists, astonished at the backwardness of the church of the Brethren. When will she awake to her duty? When will she be taken on foreign lands? There are Brethren ready to-day, who say, "here am I, and my," and bid the call come, "come over and help us." Who will take up their pens to defend the missionary cause of foreign nations? H. P. BRINKWORTH.

From Denmark.

OUR Love-feast is among the things of the past. It was kept in the room where our dear brethren and sisters stayed, while in Denmark, and of course this added much to the solemnity of the meeting. The house was crowded all day, and even some stood outside looking and listening at the windows, as the weather was very pleasant. One was received into the church by baptism before our meeting commenced, and is the second member in a remote part of Thyland, where we have had only one brother. The cause of this is brother Christensen at Lemark, who on a trip home to his parents, faithfully held up the light of King Jesus. The meeting was equal interesting. After the examination sermon was held, liberty was given to all to speak or pray, and they used one hour to put forth their wishes and petitions of earnest prayers. It caused the tears and sobs to break forth of all both spectators and members. Surely when the whole church goes to work and appeals to the throne of grace for God to convert husbands, wives, children, friends and foes, it seems that heaven comes much nearer and death flees, and hardness comes to an end. In that respect the little Danish church is remarkably well, but they can't help feeling. They have now a comfortable hall, and seats and lights and can rest their weary limbs after a long walk in their heavy wooden shoes. They are indebted much to American brethren and sisters, who so tenderly, lovingly, ready to help them and elevate them from their pitiful condition. Oh, how I wish you could all have seen, and heard, and understood your Danish children, how much would you have felt like Jesus feels when He, after a long costly search, finds his lost sheep, and lays it on his shoulders, carrying it back to his fold! May God bless you all a hundred times, and every one who, even if poor, sick, lame, one-armed or have to take your last days in sorrow, yet have sent it on to the relief of your poor suffering Brethren and sisters whom you love, and yet never saw.

C. HORG.

From Hollidaysburg, Pa.

Dear Brethren:

GOD bless the day, when you first entered on your mission of love,—the glorious mission to spend the glad tidings of salvation throughout this wide extended plan.

The little band of God's children in this Danmerville congregation, continues to grow in number, but as we grow in number, may we also increase in faith, knowledge and wisdom,—that wisdom that cometh from on high. Last Sunday, Sept. 14th, two precious souls came forward and expressed a willingness to follow Jesus. They were baptized into the church by baptism in the river, a few rods distant from there. We have not the least doubt but the angels looked down with delight on the beautiful sight before us. And that now since their names have been added to the list on the church record here below, they are also inscribed in the Lamb's Book of Life by the angels in heaven. They were husband and wife. Were formerly members of another denomination. Four weeks previous a brother was added to the fold according to the commands of Jesus. They will be none other with the bands of laborers in Altoona, which, as previously reported, is a branch of this Danmerville congregation. This makes four additions since our love-feast, which was held June 15th, at which time a very talented brother came into the fold, and to quote a pillar in the church. The quarterly conference convened Aug. 23rd, which we enjoyed very much and good feeling. It was decided to hold a protracted meeting to commence in two weeks, during which time the love-feast will be held, if providence permits.

There was also a Sunday-school organized May 12th, which seems to be in a prosperous condition. Brethren and sisters, take hold of the noble work and labor with a deep interest. The Sunday-school is the great and noble nursery of the church. God bless and advance the noble work everywhere throughout our blessed territory. EMILY R. STUBER.

Notice to the Members of the Maple Grove Colony.

WE, the committee appointed to choose a location for the Colony, have after considerable traveling, chosen the location in the North-western part of Norton Co., Kansas, being the most suitable location we could find. Soil is good; surface of the country, gently rolling; good water by digging; building rock abundant; flouring mills, close by; merchandise of all kinds, about as cheap as in Iowa.

This location lies between the Prairie Dog and Sappy rivers—all divide land. We advise the members of the Colony to go and locate their claims this Fall, for the land is taking up very fast, and by another season there will be but little, if any Gov. land to be had. Hope the members will see to this matter at once, so our claims may be located near together. The committee has located their claims in the following towns and sections: S. E. 1/4 of Sec. 7; S. W. 1/4 of Sec. 8; N. W. 1/4 of 17; N. E. 1/4 of 18, town second, range twenty four. These are all timber claims. The committee also desires to homestead the following lands next Spring: N. E. 1/4 of 7; S. W. 1/4 of 8; S. W. of 17 and N. W. of 18. These lands lay adjoining those timber claims. We hope members will note this. The other one-half of those sections are vacant, then West, North and South are all vacant, and as good as those tracts we have taken, to Norton Center and apply to J. R. Hamilton. Tell him you belong to the Maple Grove Colony. He has a note of it, he will locate you. It will cost you $17.00.

From D. B. Gibson.

Dear Brethren:

I LEFT home on the 3rd day of Sept. to fill some calls in Ill. I arrived in Quincy on the morning of the 4th. Thence to Prairie City. Stopped with brother John Pool, a young minister, of good promise in the McDougall congregation. Here I met Eld. Jesse Calvert, and filled one of his appointments, he being sick when we arrived. Remained with him for one more appointment. On the 7th was taken to Fairview to Bro. Samuel Tennis, from there to Coal Creek meeting-house. Met in the evening with a large audience, and continued until their love-feast, which was on the 14th and 15th. Was joined by Eld. J. R. Gish and his wife. The Feast was largely attended. Here I met and made the acquaintance of Bro. Dunbar, Bro. Ham and Bro. Miller, ministers of the Astoria congregation. The Feast was an enjoyable one. We were all, I think, made to sit together in heavenly places in Christ, although the house was crowded with interested spectators, who perhaps were as orderly as they well could be under the circumstances. Met next day, and the church agreed to forward Bro. Matthias Lingenfelter to the second degree of the ministry. Some applicants for baptism. Was conveyed about fifteen miles South to a school house, known as Macedonia. Preaching at night, led by Bro. Gish, who accompanied me here. I continued here one week, during which time the Lord blessed our labor; quite a number of people and several more applicants to be attended to afterward. Among those baptized were Methodist, Baptist, Campbellite, N. A. Light and Catholic representatives. This was one of the most remarkable meetings in this respect I ever held.

The ministers in this church were Jacob Segley and David Zook assisted by brethren Samuel Tennis, Matthias Lingenfelter and Bro. Parker, late of Virginia. May God bless this who's kindly and for me, who's among them. I had a pleasant journey in this congregation, as I had labored with my brethren. I pray that they all will be faithful, and their life's tempestuous sea is crossed, we may all meet in the house of the glory was and throning in the halls of the redeemed. I left them on the 23rd, hoping to get a little rest from my incessant labors. After various delays I arrived in Pa. Ogle Co., at two A. M. Stopped with brother D. H. Miller, whose hospitable mansion seems always open to the care and labor worn preacher. After a few hours rest I was conveyed to the home of brother Benjamin Rowland, whose house was one of mourning. Death of such a lovely flower from the family tree. God comfort their poor bleeding hearts. "The Lord is going and the Lord taketh away."

Bro. Miller took me in the afternoon to Dutchdown, where Bro. Bishop was holding a series of meetings. This was the first time I met him since we separated, which was nearly a year ago. Made the acquaintance of his wife, my sister Bishop. I only stand one meeting with him, which I enjoyed very much indeed. On the 25th Bro. Miller and I went to Lemark and were met by a hearty welcome by the editors. Could not see but a few more. I took part at a glance the general improvement that had taken place in a year. Very noticeable to me was the vast increase in the subscription list, and I felt a conscious presence that I had ad-

ed materially to it. I hale them adieu and we were soon on the road to Polo. On the 29th I visited some of the West Branch members,— Bro. Joshua Slifer and Bro. William Davis and others. On the 27th I reached the Rock River church, near Franklin Grove church, where I began meeting the same night.

The ministers are elders Ruffsbarger and Daniel Deardorff, with brethren J. C. Lahman, Trostle and Lahman. I did not learn how many deacons there are. The membership is about one hundred and sixty. Love-feast on the 4th. Elders D. E. Price of Silver Creek, M. Emmert of West Branch, Bro. Horning of Rock Creek, Bro. Meyers of McDonough and other ministers whose names I do not remember, were here. This to hungry, thirsty souls was indeed a soul-refreshing season. There were some present, no doubt, who received the emblems for the last time on this side of the great re-union above. Closed these meetings on the night of the 6th, with the largest congregation I had met on this tour. The order was excellent and interest good.—some baptized and others almost persuaded. On the 7th, was conveyed by J. C. Lahman to brother Trostle's, en route for Silver Creek Love-feast in Ogle Co., Oct. 8th and 9th. We realized that it was good to be there, and wait on the Lord.

The ministers are elders D. E. Price and M. Newcomer. The ministerial board was not strong in number. Very noticeable to me was old brother David Rittenhouse of Carroll Co., in his 80th year, who is unusually vigorous for one of his age. More anon. Lanark Ill., Oct. 12th, 1878.

From Root River Church, Minn.

WE held our Communion the 5th and 6th of Oct. We had pleasant weather, and a large congregation during the meeting.

Brethren W. J. H. Bauman, C. F. Wirt, John Wirt and Struvel were with us as speakers, and other brethren and sisters. Bro. Bauman did most of the preaching, he had taken a severe cold and was so hoarse he could scarcely speak, nevertheless he was willing to do all he could for the cause of Christ; he labored hard while here, and told many things, which we know to be the truth. Although none were added to the church, we think there were good impressions made. It does not seem possible that people can reject the truth as they do, when salvation is free. O, to think of the happy time, if we do what is right, that we may be gathered home in heaven, where there is no sickness, death, nor trouble, and all is happiness.

Did it not encourage us, dear brethren and sisters, when we heard the Truth proclaimed as we did? I for one, can say I felt to live nearer my God than I have ever before. I hope this is the motto of every brother and sister. There is a great responsibility resting upon each and every one of us; it is not only the leaders of the church, but it is for us all to do our duty. We have an influence either good or bad.

Brother Bauman intends to devote most of his time to preaching. May the Lord give him health and strength, that he may proclaim the Gospel with power, and be a useful instrument in the hands of the Lord.

SARAH BUEHLEY.

From Kosciusko Co., Ind.

OUR Love-feast on the 4th inst. passed off pleasantly. The meeting was not as large as such meetings generally are in this vicinity, on account of sickness and rainy weather. The day happened to be fair, and a goodly number assembled at the church early in the morning. Meeting was taken up at ten o'clock. Ministering brethren present from abroad were Jeremiah Gump, R. H. Miller, Jesse Calvert, D. Younce, Abraham Leedy and others. Our own elder, Jonas Umbaugh, could not be present on account of sickness. There is considerable sickness at present in this vicinity. Brother Miller and brother Calvert remained with us over Sunday, and preached to a large congregation, that assembled with us from day to day, for the assembly grew larger every meeting. It closed on Sunday, with two additions by baptism.—The whole church seemed to be much revived. May God help us to do our whole duty, which is to fear God and keep his commandments.

E. MILLER.

From Brother C. Hansen.

WE thank our heavenly Father for all our dear Brethren in America, as well as we give our hearty thanks to all our dear brethren and sisters over there, who with loving kindness have sent their means for helping our poor in this poor country. We also have received help by your means, and thank God, so often as we eat, that He has brought us means for food from so far away. We with tears of joy, ask our good Father in heaven, that he will reward you manifold again, both in this, and the world to come, that you may hear the blessed voice from the Lord's own mouth. "Come ye blessed of my Father inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world; for I was hungry, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger and ye took me in; naked and ye clothed me; I was in prison and ye came unto me." For even if ye don't know what good you have done for the Lord in this world, He will remember it all. The Lord says, "Verily, inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, you have done it unto me." Now in such a way our good Lord saw that His follower would have occasion to serve Him, even after He went to His Father. For He says, "Ye have the poor always with you, but me ye have not always." God help us still to do good work, and not get tired, till He will gather us all home in His heavenly kingdom for Christ's sake. Amen.

GLEANNINGS.

From Franklin Grove, Ill.—Our Love-feast of the 4th and 5th is in the past. Bro. Gibson was with us one week previous and preached for us. Other Brethren came at the time of the feast, making it an enjoyable occasion to many of the saints in Christ, to again have their memories called to the past and their hopes of the future, where all the faithful will be gathered together as the children of God.—The ingathering at the time of meeting and since was quite refreshing to us. Three baptized at the feast and one reclaimed; two since and still two more applicants, and others we hope, made to think upon their ways. May the Lord continue to bless His children and keep the lambs safe in the fold. J. C. LAHMAN.

From Ervin Howard Co., Ind.—Our Communion is now past. There were not as many ministering brethren present as we frequently had, but they were all very able and active workers, and we had a Love-feast indeed. I think the church is much revived and the cause of Christ strengthened. We have a beautiful Fall, and the health has been quite good. Certainly we have great reason to be thankful to the bountiful Giver of all good. H. HAMILTON.

From Bloomville, Ohio.—Our Love-feast came off yesterday. We commenced a meeting the 5th, and expect to continue till the evening of the 13th. We expected brother Jesse Calvert with us at the commencement of our meeting, but on account of sickness in his family, he didn't get here till the morning of the 9th. The ministers present at our Love-feast, were brethren John Brillhart, J. P. Ebersole, Jesse Calvert and others from neighboring churches. Yesterday five came out on the Lord's side and others were made to feel the need of a Savior. S. A. WALKER.

From Brush Creek Church, Ohio.—Our Love-feast is among the past. We had four meetings; had more than a full table of members, and a great many more than a full house of spectators, with the very best of order.—Some estimated the number at fifteen hundred, but I think that a little strong. One added to the flock, and four a short time ago. So the ark of the Lord is still moving. We seem to be somewhat encouraged, as there have been over fifty added to the church within the last year. J. H. GARMAN.

From Samuel Murray.—Our Love-feast in the Solomony church, Huntington Co., Ind., is in the past. On the 3rd of Oct., soon in the afternoon, teams with loaded vehicles came rolling in from every direction, till a large crowd had assembled. Preaching at three o'clock, by J. Leedy, D. Hider and B. Holzden. At half past four, was excommunication. About three hundred members commended. We had a good Feast, and should long be remembered by the brethren and sisters. We sometimes think that there is too much lukewarmness in the church. We have noticed, that some members scarcely ever go to meeting until the Communion, then they are on hand and even then they are not in to hear preaching; but the next day you see them at the table!

From John Brown.—In answer to inquiry, I remark that Samuel Brown married Caroline Friscl in Miami Co., Ohio, and went to Elkhart Co., Ind., from there to Iowa, is the last we heard of him.

Delmar Junction, Iowa.

From East Nimishillen Church, Ohio.—Our Love-feast is now among the things of the past. Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, it passed off pleasantly and was largely attended. Ministering Brethren from the adjoining churches were with us and labored earnestly in the Master's cause. There were no accessions to the church. We number over one hundred and forty members. As a church, we are not progressing as rapidly as some of our neighboring churches.

JOSEPH J. HOOVER.

From Farmington, Ill.—Our Love-feast is past. Brother D. B. Gibson came to us on the 7th of Sept., and remained until the evening of the 13th inst. On the 14th and 15th we held our Communion. Brethren J. R. Gish, D. B. Gibson, Carrier and others, conducted the Communion services. Good order, attention and impressions were made during the meetings. On the evening of the 15th, Bro. Gibson and Bro. Gish went to Macedonia school-house, and held meeting every night and several in the day-time. They continued for eight days, the result of which, we rejoice to say, was, sixteen made the good confession, turning their backs to sin and promised to be faithful to the end. God bless them. JACOB NEGLY.

A RELIGIOUS WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE & M. M. ESHELMAN.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK is an uncompromising advocate of Primitive Christianity in all its ancient purity.

It recognizes the New Testament as the only infallible rule of faith and practice.

And maintains that the sovereign, unmerited, unsolicited grace of God is the only source of pardon, and that the vicarious sufferings and meritorious works of Christ are the only price of redemption.

That Faith, Repentance and Baptism are conditions of pardon, and hence for the remission of sins.

That Trine Immersion or dipping the candidate three times back forward is Christian Baptism.

That Feet-Washing as taught in John 13, is a divine command to be observed in the church.

That the Lord's Supper is a full meal, and, in connection with the Agony room, should be taken in the evening, or after the close of the day.

That the Salvation of the Holy Kiss, or Kiss of Charity, is binding upon the followers of Christ.

That War and Retaliation are contrary to the spirit and salutary principles of the religion of Jesus Christ.

That a New Ceremony to the world in dress, customs, tale work, and every thing which is contrary to true holiness and Christian purity.

It maintains that heretofore worthless or trifling exercises, such as fasts, vigils, and other such things, are not only useless, but are a hindrance to the work of the Holy Spirit.

It holds that the Sabbath is a day of rest, and that the Lord's day should be observed in the church.

It holds that the Lord's day should be observed in the church, and that the Lord's day should be observed in the church.

THE CHRISTIAN WARFARE.

My Captain sounds the alarm of war,
Awake the powers of hell are near!
To arms! to arms, I hear him cry!
'Tis yours to conquer or to die!

Aroused by the animating sound,
I cast my eager eyes around,
Make haste to gird my armor on,
And bid each trembling fear begone.

Hope is my helmet, faith is my shield,
Thy Word my God, the sword I wield,
With sacred truth my loins are girt,
And holy zeal inspires my heart.

Thus armed, I venture on to fight:
Resolved to put my foes to flight,
While Jesus kindly designs to spread,
His conquering banner o'er my head.

In Him I hope, in Him I trust,
His bleeding cross is all my boast,
Through troops of foes, He will lead me on
To victory and the victor's crown

STEIN AND RAY DEBATE.

Prop. 1st—The Brethren (or Tunker) Churches Possess Bible Characteristics entitling them to be regarded as Churches of Jesus Christ.

J. W. STEIN affirms.
D. B. RAY denies.

D. B. RAY'S SECOND NEGATIVE.

THE reader will observe that Mr. Stein has admitted our allegation, upon which our 2nd negative argument is based, namely, that the Tunker churches are "self-organized under the supervision of uninspired men." The original church of Christ was organized by Jesus Christ himself. But the original Tunker church was organized by "uninspired men." Therefore, the original Tunker church was not a church of Christ. Consequently, the Tunker churches which sprang from this self-organized human society, are not churches of Christ. The statements of Mr. Naud do not deliver the Tunker churches from the charge, upon which our first negative argument rests, namely that the Tunker churches are based upon a carnal membership. All the claims to "heart-felt" religion amount to nothing so long as it is admitted, by the Tunkers themselves, that they baptize unregenerate children of the devil to make them the children of God. They willfully baptize upon a dead faith, vainly supposing that this dead faith is brought to life by baptism! Speaking of baptism, Mr. Stein says: "Faith then must be vitalized by subjection to Christ's yoke"!! We repeat that the Tunker churches are not churches of Christ, because they are based upon a carnal membership.

Again, Mr. Stein claims that he has drawn arguments for baptism as a condition of salvation, from "twelve plain passages of Scripture, which he has utterly failed to meet." But we showed that four out of his twelve do not even mention baptism at all. On my friend's second affirmative for baptismal salvation, we make the following remarks:

1. He thinks that we had as well say "repentance salvation," and "faith salvation," as to say baptismal salvation! There are these differences: (a) Repentance and faith are moral duties, while baptism is a positive command. (b) Repentance and faith involve internal spiritual relations, that exist between God and the individual alone while baptism is external and to be performed by another person. (c) Repentance and faith are absolute conditions to salvation, without which every accountable sinner must perish—be forever damned; While baptism is not an absolute condition of salvation, without which every accountable sinner must be forever damned. Can Mr. Stein see no difference? In fact, instead of baptism being a condition of salvation, salvation—pardon—is a condition of Gospel baptism.

2. Naaman, the leper, 2 Kings 5: 8-14, and the blind man that washed in Siloam, are not examples in point, because their washing was made a condition of their cure; while baptism is not a condition of the spiritual cure.

3. We did not quote Mr. Moore to prove that baptismal salvation is "blasphemous heresy," but to prove that the Tunker churches hold baptismal salvation.

4. Mr. S. thinks that the pardon of the thief and of the sinful woman Luke 7: 50, are not relevant examples. This brings up our leading argument against the Tunker doctrine of baptismal salvation, as presented in our first reply. We state again our 3rd argument.

The Tunker churches are not churches of Christ, because they hold the popish, blasphemous doctrine of baptismal salvation.

Our proofs that this doctrine is false, are as follows: 1. Baptismal salvation is anti-christian, because in no case of the pardon of sins by our Savior, during his personal ministry, was baptism made a condition. Jesus says, "Thy faith hath saved thee; go in peace." Luke 7: 50. Mr. S. says, see not these examples! He rejects the examples of Jesus Christ. John's baptism was "for the remission of sins," but never a condition of pardon. Baptism only washes away sins emblematically, as we eat the flesh and drink the blood of Christ in the Supper. The Tunker churches which reject the plan of salvation dispensed by Jesus Christ, surely are not churches of Christ.

Proof 2. Baptismal salvation is false, because it contradicts Jesus Christ. Jesus says, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that heareth my word and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life." John 5: 24. But the Tunkers give the falsehood to the world's Redeemer, by saying, that, "The believer cannot have everlasting life till he is baptized." Churches that positively contradict the Lord Jesus Christ, cannot possibly be his churches. To escape from this terrible difficulty, Mr. Stein comes to the conclusion that no one can be a real believer until after baptism! He says that "believers" "is a New Testament name for baptized church members." He here teaches that there can be no true "believers" till after they are baptized! If this be so, then the Samaritans that "believed" and were afterwards baptized, were baptized twice. According to Mr. S., baptism is a part of, and included in faith, and after becoming "believers" (which includes baptism), they must be baptized, which is a second baptism! Such is the ridiculous absurdity into which my friend is forced.

But concerning the chief rulers that believed on Jesus, but did not confess him, Mr. Stein asks: "What lacked they?" They lacked heart-faith. "If thou believest with all thy heart thou mayest." Acts 8: 37. "For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness." Rom. 10: 10. They lacked the "faith which worketh by love." Gal. 5: 6, "not having their hearts purified by faith." Acts 15: 9. "That they lacked this heart-faith is revealed in the fact that they 'loved the praise of men more than the praise of God.'"

Proof 3. Baptismal salvation is false, because it contradicts the voice of all the prophets. Peter, at the house of Cornelius, said: "To him give all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins." Acts 10: 43. And while Peter spake, the hearers received the baptism of the Holy Spirit, spake with tongues, and magnified God. Then Peter asked, "Can any man forbid water that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we." Verse 47. But in the face of "all the prophets" and miraculous display of the Holy Spirit, Tunkerism raises its voice of contradiction and says, "these were all unpardoned children of the devil, with a dead faith, until it was 'vitalized' by baptism. The Tunker churches, which stand up in opposition to all the prophets and the testimony of the Holy Spirit, are not churches of Christ.

Here we wish to examine the leading Tunker argument, drawn from Acts 2: 38. They contend that baptism sustains the same relation to pardon that repentance does, because Peter said, "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." Acts 2: 38. In what sense is baptism for the remission or washing away of sins? We answer that sins are washed away in baptism in the same sense that we eat the flesh and drink the blood of Jesus in the supper. In the institution of the supper, Christ said of the bread, "This is my body," and of the wine, "This is my blood." Now the deluded Romanist understands these expressions literally, and thinks that the actual flesh, blood and bones of Jesus are present in the bread and wine. All, except Catholics, agree that we only eat the flesh and drink the blood of Christ in emblem, or figuratively, in the supper; and in like manner, we only wash away sins in emblem, or figuratively, in immersion.

That baptism does not sustain the same relation to pardon that repentance does, is evident from the whole tenor of the New Testament. In order to understand the real design of the baptisms on the day of Pentecost, it is necessary to note carefully all the attending circumstances.

1. None but those who "gladly received" the Gospel were immersed on the day of Pentecost. Acts 2: 41. No person can be said to have gladly received the word, while he is still under the sentence of condemnation, and suffering the sting of a guilty conscience. Therefore, guilt must have been removed before they gladly received the word; but when guilt is removed, sin is pardoned; consequently the sins of the Pentecostians were pardoned before baptism.

2. None will deny that the Pentecostians were believers in Christ before baptism; but "whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ, is born of God." 1 John 5: 1. Therefore the Pentecostians were born of God before baptism; and as all the children of God are pardoned, consequently the Pentecostians were pardoned prior to baptism.

3. The Pentecostians were saved before they were added to the church, for it is said, "The Lord daily added the saved to the congregation;" (Acts 2: 47) and as baptism was the act by which they were added to the congregation, therefore they were saved before they were baptized. See new translation.

4. The hearts of the Pentecostians were purified by faith which was before baptism; for Peter said that God "put no difference between them and us, purifying their hearts by faith." Acts 15: 9. But when the heart is purified, sin is pardoned. The hearts of the Pentecostians were purified before baptism; therefore their sins were pardoned before baptism.

5. The Pentecostians did not say, what shall we do to be saved. Where to be saved is specified in the question; baptism is not in the answer in the New Testament. The jailor said, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" Acts 16: 30. And the apostles answered, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." But if baptism is essential to salvation, then the apostles deceived the jailor by falsehood.

Now when Peter had proven to the Jews that they were the murderers of the Prince of Life, they cried out in deep agony of soul, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" Then Peter said unto them, "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." If they had asked, What shall we do to be saved? then Peter could not, with propriety, have included more in the answer than was absolutely necessary to salvation? But as the question, "What shall we do?" includes duty more than the point of salvation, so the answer includes duty, more than the point of salvation.

Here are two distinct commands—repentance and baptism. The first, repentance, reaches "unto life," into a "faith which worketh by love;" and as those who have passed from death unto life are pardoned, therefore the Pentecostians were pardoned before baptism, because they had repented unto life before baptism.

From the foregoing undeniable facts, we conclude that Peter does not make baptism sustain the same relation to the remission of sins that repentance does. The two commands differ widely in construction. They are not united to procure the same result. Repentance—metanoesate—is a complete command in itself, and has a different nominative, number, person and voice from baptistheto, the word used to indicate baptism. This being so, whatever the remission of sins means, it is applied to baptism, and is not connected with both verbs to secure the same result.

But why did Peter say to the inquirers on the day of Pentecost, be baptized for the remission of sins, if their sins were pardoned before baptism? We reply, for the same reason that the Savior told the man whom he had cleansed of the leprosy to offer for his "cleansing those things which Moses commanded." Mark 1: 44. The leprosy was entirely healed from the leprosy, and yet it was necessary for him to offer for his cleansing, those things which Moses commanded. This was in keeping with the law of Moses, as contained in the 14th chapter of Leviticus, which required that one who had been infected with leprosy, but was now healed or cleansed, should pass through a ceremonial cleansing. The leper was first actually healed or cleansed, and after this, he was formally or ceremonially cleansed; and, in like manner, the leprosy of sin is first actually healed or cleansed through faith in Christ, and after this the formal cleansing, or washing away of sins, takes place in baptism. Ananias said to Saul, "Arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins." Acts 22: 16. No one who is not grossly superstitious can believe that the water literally washes away sins by coming in contact with the naked spirit; therefore, when baptism is said to be for the remission or washing away of sins, we are compelled to understand this as an emblematic washing away of sins. By examining the ninth chapter of the Acts, we learn that Paul was a "chosen vessel" of God, that Ananias recognized him as "brother Saul," and that Saul was "filled with the Holy Ghost," all before baptism.

From these facts, it is evident that Paul's washing away sins in baptism was only emblematical of what had already taken place really. Then the washing away of sins in immersion must be the formal or emblematic washing, as we eat the flesh and drink the blood of Christ in the Lord's Supper. The doctrines of baptismal salvation and transubstantiation are both supported by the same evidence—the perversion of the word of God.

We call the doctrine of baptismal salvation popish and blasphemous, because it usurps the throne of Christ, by taking from him all power to pardon sins, unless some Tunker preacher will permit. We boldly affirm that the Tunker churches are not churches of Jesus Christ, because they hold the soul-destroying heresy of baptismal salvation.

THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS.

COME all ye poor sinners that from Adam came,
 All ye poor and ye halt and ye blind and ye lame
 Close in with the Gospel upon its own terms,
 Or you'll burn forever like poor, mortal worms.
 When the Lord shall descend with sound from above,
 To call home all His saints, to bless them with love,
 And you not renewed in soul by His grace,
 Away now you must turn with sorrowful face.
 For if you deny Christ, He will deny you,
 You'll be on the left hand with the wretched crew,
 In horror and torment forever you'll lie,
 In vain now for mercy, in vain you will cry.
 You read of the rich man and beggar also,
 The beggar he now died, to Jesus did go,
 The rich man he, too, died to his sad surprise,
 He waked up in hell and lit up his eyes.
 Now seeing Abraham in mansions above,
 And Lazarus there with him in raptures of love,
 He cried, "Father Abraham, send to my relief,
 For I am tormented with pain and with grief."
 He said, son, remember, while you lived so bold,
 Dressed in your fine linen, your purple and gold,
 Lazarus laid at your gate, and full of great grief,
 You had not compassion to give him relief.
 Beside thee, is a gulf, between us you see,
 That those who pass from hence can't come to thee;
 But there you must still lie, lament your sad state,
 For now you are sending your cries up too late.
 O Father Abraham, I pray you provide,
 And send one from the dead, my brethren beside,
 When hearing from me here and my wretched state,
 Perhaps they will repent before it is too late.
 They have a rich Gospel that's spread far and wide,
 Their's Moses, the Prophets and Apostles beside,
 If they will not hear them, believe and repent,
 They will not believe though one from the dead went.
 Poor Zion's own mourners, O don't you despair,
 But fly to your Jesus, he'll answer your prayer,
 He'll hear your complaining, will ease all your grief,
 He will pardon your sins, and give you relief.

PHILOLOGICAL DISSERTATION OF THE WORD BAPTISM.

BY LEWIS G. HUMBER, NUMBER III.

ANY person who has given this question a careful examination, knows that the word "baptism" is not an English word, but an anglicism of the Greek baptisma. Baptism translated into English, is immersion. The rite took its name from the mole, and the Greek word that designates the mole, is baptizo. The Greek word for sprinkling, is catino, and the anglicism of catino, is rantize, and the name of the rite or institution of sprinkling would be rantisa from catino and not baptism from baptizo. Let sprinklers sail under the name of catism from catino and immersers under baptism from baptizo; and then when a candidate makes application for initiation, he can tell the preacher he wants to be rantized when sprinkled, and baptized when immersed. Rantism is the anglicized name for the institution of sprinkling, and ought to be appropriated and not sail under false colors any longer. When a candidate makes application for baptism where more than one mode of administration is practiced, the preacher must ask, how do you want to be baptized? He cannot tell what to do from the meaning of the word "baptism." The word "baptism," means so much that he cannot tell what to do, till the candidate explains it by some other word. If you want to be baptized by immersion they will baptize you that way, or if you want to be by sprinkling, they will baptize you that way, or if by pouring, they will baptize you in that way—they baptize any way you want them to—they are not so narrow-minded as to deprive any one of his choice.

Well, what did Christ mean when he said, "Go teach all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father &c.?" Did he mean that they should go and do anything the people wanted done, and call it baptism, or did the apostle know what he meant from the meaning of the word, and go and do that? Had they to ask the people how they wanted the matter done, or did they go and do what the Master told them? I think they ask no questions, for there was but one meaning in the word, and that meaning was in English immersion: so they immersed the people. A mere child knew what baptism meant in those days; but in this our day, where so many different things are called baptism, that the preacher or teacher himself does not know what it means, and hence calls anything and everything baptism that fraudulently assumes that name. All Christians admit that baptizo means primarily to dip or immerse, and that immersion is a valid mode of baptizing. If the primary meaning of baptizo is immersion, that meaning is specific, and not generic as some ignorantly claim. Can the word have both specific and generic meanings at the same time? But their own commentary does not suit their practice: for sprinkling is just as specific as immersion, and so is pouring.

Now if these ideas or modes, are contained in the meaning of the word "baptism,"—why do they not perform all that is contained in the meaning of the word? If all these modes are contained in the meaning of the word, Christ certainly enjoined all three to constitute the rite. He certainly enjoined all that was contained in the primary meaning of baptizo. Their own practice is a most triumphant refutation of the theory. If the word primarily meant to dip or immerse, and that meaning was appropriated to the rite as it was, or else immersion could not be valid baptism. How in the name of common sense can anything but immersion be baptism? If the word had a secondary meaning (which it has not), one meaning only could be appropriated to the ordinance. Words can convey one idea only in the same situation, and that is the reason the preachers must ask what is to be done when they want to be baptized, do not know what to do themselves.

The idea that there is such a thing as a generic word is as fabulous as anything can be—words are all specific—words convey ideas, and generic ideas, is a solecism. No words can convey a multiplication of ideas at the same time. When you are talking or writing about a horse, you cannot convey the idea of cow, sheep and hogs &c. Ideas are just like figures, they mean one thing at a time only. Words are governed by axioms the same as mathematics. Words work out problems just the same as figures do, and all that is necessary to work out the problem, is to understand the rule. It is generally believed that baptizo has a secondary meaning. This error grows out of a misunderstanding of the characteristic distinction between figured and unfigured diction, as well as a proper knowledge of the laws of appropriation. I think I can illustrate this part of my dissertation with greater precision, and therefore make it easier to understand by all, by the rule of appropriation.

I will again state my canon on this point. When words are appropriated they are always used literal and cannot be used figurative. Inasmuch as I have all the lexicographers and learning of the present age to correct on this point, some efforts toward critical acumen, will be made. This secondary meaning seems to be the last ray of hope for sprinkling, and if we can take the foundation from under the edifice—down goes the fabric! In the first place, it is difficult to conceive the process of appropriation by figures or metaphors. It would be the same as building a house out of its shadow, before the house existed; and just how to get a shadow of a house before there is a house, will require some explanation. For my part I could not perform the work. There always must be a literal meaning before there is any figure, there is no such thing as figurative meaning. All meanings are real and literal, and may be used figuratively. The primary, the secondary, the third and every other meaning of words may be used figuratively. A figure, is simply a resemblance of the real or literal meaning, and not the reality. Words must always be used literal before they can be used figuratively. Does not every one know, that knows anything about the laws of metaphors, that metaphors may indulge themselves wherever they find resemblance, and governed by no other law, but that of resemblance. But when appropriated are intended to specify, and not merely resemble. Just think of a metaphorical reality.

(To be continued).

ECHOES FROM ALONG THE LINE.

Sunday-school—Large Meeting—Immortality.

AN old writer says, "the object of Sunday-schools, is of large and liberal character. It is to diffuse the elements of knowledge, and to teach the great truths of Revelation,—it is to improve to the highest of all purposes, the leisure of the Lord's day; to render it sacred, by thoughts turned toward God; and by aspiring to a knowledge of his Word and Will." It is the chief element of peace and harmony. Show me a community where the Sunday is regarded, or where Sunday-schools never die, then you will show me a community where peace and prosperity reigns,—a place where the rich and poor meet on a common level. Let us then as God's children "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."

LARGE MEETING.

On the 15th inst., we wended our way to the English Prairie church, to partake of the spiritual food, which emanates from above. The services began with the necessary introductions. Brother Schrock read part of the third chapter of the first epistle of John, selecting for his subject the first verse. "Behold what manner of love the Father has bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God: therefore the world knoweth us not, because it knew him not."

The brother told us that love is a principle that reigns in the breast of every human being, except those who are so depraved in sin as to be beyond the comprehension of a just and righteous Being. As man advances in the knowledge of his higher nature, he advances in the knowledge of God. We must still love One in whom all perfection centers when we admire the wonderful universe. We think of God when we are in sorrow, and need help and comfort. God's love is then thought of.

IMMORTALITY.

Can we hesitate to believe the immortality of the soul, when we see the miscreants live and prosper in affluence of fortune, carrying it with a high hand against their neighbor, disturbing all in their power? Let us, therefore, put our trust in an alwise and merciful God, who is able to conduct us through the paths of this life to serener climes.

CHRIST THE OBJECT OF FAITH.

BY D. L. WILLIAMS.

"Strive to enter in at the strait gate, for many I say unto you will seek to enter in and shall not be able." Luke 13: 24.

IT is here definitely stated that many will strive to enter and will be sadly disappointed. And whose fault will it be? Their own exclusively. The Lord will not be to blame in the least, and why? Because he has put forth a Perfect Plan of Salvation, and that will reach out and take in all mankind. If we become wise in our own conceit, we will be sure to fail; for we know nothing as we ought to know; but if we become fools in the matter of Christianity, knowing that we know nothing in the matter—knowing not which way to go, we positively need some one to guide us. We want one that knows all about the route, and Christ is the very one. He has traveled all along the road—is thoroughly acquainted with all of it, and is the only one who can safely guide and direct us. We are commanded to walk in his footsteps or to run that race with patience. We are not to let Christ become the Author of our faith, and then let some one else finish it. If we do, we will not be able to enter, for there is no one thoroughly acquainted with the way, but Christ. All others that direct differently, are but enemies to us, and don't you trust them. You are to look to Christ; he is to be your sure and only guide. That way that you are to travel upon, is strait and narrow, hence the injunction is, to make strait paths for your feet.

It is enjoined that we lay aside every weight, and the sin that doth so easily beset us, and run with patience the race that is set before us; looking unto Jesus Christ, the Author and Finisher of our faith." The apostle here draws from a common usage or custom in his day, to convey an idea. They were accustomed to running foot-races in those days. They ran to obtain a corruptible crown, but we an incorruptible one. Their custom was, to draw a straight mark for each one to run upon; and at the end of this line, was an object for each to look at and run directly to. Preparatory to this, they wore weights upon their feet; but on the day of trial, or race, the weights were all laid aside, so as to run with great swiftness. For if they were once turned from the mark or line, the crown or prize was lost. The crown was not exactly reckoned to or given entirely to the swiftest runner, but to the most correct and swift runner. They had a law then to govern these races.

So the apostle could with just propriety say, that a man is not crowned with mysteries except he strive lawfully. Those that participated in those races, were not blessed with success, unless they strictly deserved it. Now if these illustrations are correct, we certainly

WATCH the date opposite your name on paper or wrapper, and be sure to renew soon; by so doing you will save us much labor.

At this writing, (Oct. 26th), it is snowing very rapidly, being the first for this season in this part of the country.

BROTHER Moore left home on the 22nd to spend several days with the brethren at Ashland, Ohio, and expects to return by his old home near Urbana, Ill.

Those who receive the paper without having ordered it, wish to know the reason, they need only look under the head of Business Notices on another page to find out.

BROTHER John Nicholson has moved to Trumbull Co, Ohio, into a house prepared for him by the Brethren. He goes there to engage in an earnest effort preaching the Gospel. His address hereafter will be Bristol, Trumbull Co, Ohio.

From brother Daniel Hays we learn, that Bro. D. P. Saylor and wife, and Bro. Hoover and wife are laboring with the Brethren in the Valley of Va. Hope that their labors may be crowned with success, and many of the saints edified.

We have received a supply of Dement's work on Ingersoll, Beecher and Dogma. If you want to learn how well he meets the infidel, the skeptic, and the long list of little soldiers who train under them, just send to this office and get a copy. Price one dollar.

CONSIDERABLE Correspondence and Church News must lay over until next issue, for want of space. Many thanks to our correspondents for their willingness to keep us supplied with the cheering news of Zion's prosperity. If you would have the news from other churches, you must give that of your own, thus provoking one another to love and good works.

WHILE so busy talking of others' faults, pray don't let us forget our own. The man who takes care of his own bad habits will have his hands full. The better way, is to set a good example before others. This will do more good than all our talk.

SINCE the ascension of Christ, at least twenty-four false Christs have arisen. One of them, Cariba lived early in the second century. He put himself at the head of the Jewish nation as their messiah, and many followed him. The Romans made war upon him, and the Jews in his defense, lost between five and six hundred thousand souls. In the twelfth century eight or ten impostors appeared, and were followed by many Jews. The last that gained many converts was Mondeni, a Jew of Germany, who lived in 1682. He fled for his life, and his end is not known to this day.

THE Inter Ocean of the 24th inst., says: "News comes this morning of one of the most terrible storms in the East that has passed over any section of this country for years. In Philadelphia over forty churches were damaged, many of them losing their steeples, while along the Delaware River warehouses were unroofed or blown down and great damage inflicted. The storm visited New York, Albany, Wilkesbarre, and intermediate cities, causing great damage wherever it touched, and in many places loss of life. The storm broke out yesterday morning, and was so intense that telegraphic communication with the East was interrupted up to a late hour last evening. This fact renders the full particulars difficult to obtain, but sufficient is given to show that the storm was almost unprecedented."

THERE are said to be upward of twenty-five flashy story papers published for boys and children in New York City, with an aggregate circulation of over 375,000. The amount of trashy literature being placed in the houses of children, is becoming alarming. Parents, who want their children to grow up fully fitted for greater usefulness, should keep a watchful eye on the reading matter that comes into their houses.

SOME of the cedars on Mt. Lebanon are said to have attained the great height of 130 feet, and well proportioned in hulk. The wood of these trees is of rare beauty and durability, for which reason it was selected by the Egyptians for the manufacture of mummy coffins, many of which, after having lain in the earth over four thousand years, are still in a good state of preservation.

A MAN steps up and says: "I used to think a great deal of Theodore G—, but I have lost confidence in him." You have? You are to be pitied indeed! G. better shut up, stop and quit; for, as a matter of course, his success in business depends largely on what you think. And if you have lost confidence in him, the best thing you can do, is to find it as soon as you can. A man must feel terribly bad without confidence. Just think how lonely a man must be going about the streets and highways having lost confidence! And then so many are unwilling to find it, even if laid down at their door. Sometimes men are rebuked for their sins by the preacher, and this makes them lose confidence in him. Verily such confidence losers have their reward.

ONE of our agents says: "I hope you will adopt the cash system; it will be better for all concerned. The credit business has ruined our country. I think it would be far better if the cash system would be adopted in every department of business." So say we; for there is real happiness in knowing that as the sun sets each day, we "owe no man anything, but to love him." This injunction of the apostle should be well considered by all who love the Lord. We commend it to all our readers, for careful consideration. We know that too often circumstances drive us to seek credit, but perhaps in nine cases out of every ten, it would be better to drive the circumstances than to let them drive us. Careful, considerate, steady labor wins more than the headlong speculation. In all business, go no faster than you can fortify.

As a rule, agents for religious papers need to exercise much patience and self-sacrifice. They meet those who desire the paper, yet are too poor to pay anything for it. Then the agent's heart is opened and he either gives him his commission or reaches down into his pocket and pays for the paper out of his own hard-earned means. Not unfrequently he meets those who want the paper he is canvassing for, but have not the money with them. They promise to pay in a few weeks; he advances the money; and too often the weeks are stretched into months, and in our own experience the weeks have turned out to be years. This is all wrong, and savors of a species of neglect, inexcusable. And then there are the dishonest. They will order a paper sent them, read it all the year through, (the agent having advanced the money) and when he who did him a kindness, calls for his pay, he is told, "I never ordered the paper." Such men exist; what for, we are unable to tell. Agents thus get a taste of editorial life. Many people imagine that agents and editors are surrounded with sweets, hence look upon them with a sprinkling of envy; but if they could lift the curtain a little and just taste a little of the bitter, their hankering for such positions would lessen very suddenly. It is only in the consciousness of doing good, that we find the sunshine so much needed by those who publish papers and labor to increase their circulation. There is happiness in doing good—in doing right, though sorrows and afflictions rise in doing it. Let none, therefore, yield to the trials and difficulties which confront them in soliciting subscriptions. It is a good work, and God knows how to reward.

ABOUT ELDER JAMES STEPHENSON.

Brother Moore —
I WRITE you concerning a series of meetings held in our neighborhood by Elder James Stephenson, of Chicago. He figured largely on the kingdom as well as upon the mortality of man, their principal hobbies, announcing for two or three evenings, that on Sunday eve he would treat the subject of trine immersion; but two evenings prior to the time, changed the topic and said that he would preach on the design of baptism. Sunday evening came and plenty of Brethren there. He announced his text, "Prove all things, hold fast to that which is good." Treated his subject remarkably well for perhaps fifteen minutes; swung around and commenced upon the mode, and then trine immersionists, sprinklers and pourers had to hear his arguments in favor of single immersion, and the total abhorrence of any other mode. He stated that he had preached the same in Lanark, and that you were present, and after services you invited him to your office the next morning. And in conversation with him, asked him something concerning a Greek noun or verb, and if it did not mean so and so, to which he replied, that it did not, then propounded a question to you and you replied that you was no grammarian, and that your foreman was, and that was to decide a very simple question as to the relation that nouns and verbs sustain to each other. He used your name personally.

He further said that he has produced arguments that you and brother Quinter cannot answer, neither can any man in the United States. He also challenged any man to prove that the Bible teaches trine immersion. He said that if grammar taught trine immersion in the commission it was not worth the paper it was printed on. He brought up an illustration thus:

"I am commanded to go to Washington by the President, and by the Supreme Court, and by Congress, would any one suppose that I would have to go three times?" He answered, no. "To sit down with Isaac, Jacob, &c., and to come in the glory of the Father and with the holy angels, all being analogous to the commission." He further said we did not practice our theology, as we only immersed the head and shoulders three times and the remaining part of the body but once. He thanked God that the Bible was sufficient to prove all things, and that he was never driven to history to prove his position. He said that trine immersion and infant baptism are evils that crept into the church about the same time, and were recorded by church historians before the evils were very widely diffused, and before any council was called to investigate and denounce it. But he was very careful not to tell us when and where the council met that denounced trine immersion. He further said that we immersed twice into his life and once into his death.

Now if he is such a character as he represents himself to be, the Solomon of the United States, I am deceived. I do not wish to have our doctrine abused away here in the frontier. I hope some of our able debaters will take hold of the distinguished divine (?) and show him what we have to say on all points of difference between him and us. I think he is talking something he does not know when he speaks of brother Quinter as he did.

Yours in bonds of love,

J. H. BURNWORTH.

REMARKS.

We publish the above, followed by these remarks, in order to put a stop to such misrepresentation. When you hear of a preacher traveling over the country, telling the public how he cornered brother Moore, or any other brother, you may know there is a screw loose some place.

I have met Mr. Stephenson, of Chicago, a few times, and heard him preach three sermons. On one occasion he dwelt largely on the action of Christian baptism. It was during the time I was holding a written discussion with Mr. Rowe, of this place. Mr. Stephenson was very personal in his remarks: referred repeatedly to the written debate between myself and Mr. Rowe, and to me directly in public. Of course, I did not mind it, for I am used to such things. At the close of the services, and after most of the congregation had left the house, he met me in the aisle, where we passed a few friendly words. I then invited him to call at the office, at his leisure, and I would explain to him one point of difference between us and the Thurmmites, in relation to trine immersion, as I perceived he was laboring under a slight mistake regarding our faith.

But he commenced arguing the case with me right there in the house. Everything being quiet, we had a very orderly little debate for something near half an hour, and if our readers had been present and seen how the old man sweat over some of the arguments and questions I put to him, his going around over the country and talking about me, would have but little effect. The next day he called at the office, where some two hours were spent in conversation on the same subject. I did not tell him I was "no grammarian." A man who has mastered nearly 500 pages of English Grammar in three months, and passed an examination without missing a single question, is not in the habit of telling people that he is no grammarian, even if he has slightly forgotten some of the rules.

I do not object to Mr. Stephenson taking up my writings and preaching against them all he wishes, but do object to him getting up before a congregation in Kansas, or any other place, and telling the people that he had a conversation with Moore, in Lanark, and puzzled him on some simple question. I want it understood that I do not get puzzled in grammar, Greek and history when talking on that question.

His saying that infant baptism and trine immersion crept into the church at the same time, is without foundation. It looks a little strange that a man will repudiate history in one breath, and in the next one try to use it. Had he said that infant baptism and single immersion crept into the church near the same time, he would have been nearer the truth.

The illustration about going to Washington by the President, and by the Supreme Court, and by Congress, might be an argument in defense of single immersion, provided the three bodies were one, but when it is remembered that they are three distinct departments, each one performing its own part, it turns the evidence the other way; especially if he wants to visit the President, and the Supreme Court, and Congress. He must go to Washington; first visit the President, then it takes another action to reach the Supreme Court, and a third action to visit Congress. That illustration proves trine immersion, for we go to where there is water, have an action in the name of the Father, another in the name of the Son, and a third in the name of the Holy Spirit.

In regard to sitting down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, it should be remembered that "sit down" is an intransitive verb, while "baptizing," as used in the commission, is transitive.

The same is true of the verb "come," in his other illustration. Whenever he or anybody else who takes a man into the water up to his waist, can tell into what name the immersed part of that person has been baptized before any name is mentioned, then he can talk about us baptizing the upper part of the body only.

About all our people in Kansas need to do, to refute his misrepresentations, is to get the privilege of reading this article before the same congregation that he preaches to, about me. Were you in Lanark and could consult those who heard the talk, you would hear something quite different from what he tells. This much I have to say; of all the learned men I ever argued with on trine immersion, he is the easiest one to handle.

ANNUAL MEETING PLAN.

I have been very desirous, ever since I read No. 36 of the BRETHREN AT WORK, containing your remarks on the subject of A. M., to hear an explanation on the same. First, you say everybody can go who wants to. There is no mystery about that, but can all who do go, hear and get the full benefit of the meeting? For my part, I have as little desire to keep members from our A. M., as any one. I have been a member of the church forty-seven years, and have attended a great many A. M.'s, and was one of the members in 1894 who tried hard to adopt a plan that would give the best general satisfaction that could be adopted, but, according to my weak judgment, has never been fully carried out. Now a full explanation of your six items may clear up one of the most important subjects that has perplexed the minds of many of our old and most substantial brethren for many years.

HILL HAMILTON.

REMARKS.

IT is gratifying to see the interest being manifested regarding a better plan of holding the Annual Meeting, so as to accommodate more people, and afford better opportunities for hearing what is said.

Before publishing our plan there are a few things I would like to know regarding all the Annual Meetings held during the last five years, and hope the brethren who served as Secretaries at these meetings will answer at once:

1. What was the average number of persons fed each day?
2. What was the largest number fed any one day?
3. How many hands were required to do the cooking and waiting on the tables?
4. What was the actual cost of the provisions used at each meeting?

I would like these questions answered before publishing my plan. The plan I believe will work like a charm, when once adopted and clear-

FOR CHRIST'S SAKE.

BY JOHN S. SHAEPPER.

Will the BRITISH AT WORK, or some one of its many readers, explain a few expressions that are often used in prayer? They are rather dark to me. I ask for information. First, is it proper, when giving thanks at the table, to ask the Lord to "bless" that food which He has already blessed? Secondly, is it proper to pray "for the sake of Jesus," when Jesus has done all for our sake? D. F. ENY.

IT is not only proper, but always safe to follow the example of our Savior Jesus Christ. He, in giving thanks before eating, pronounced a blessing upon the food. Therefore why should not we ask Him to bless our daily food? Turn to Matt. 14: 22 and read, "And as they did eat, Jesus took bread, and blessed, and brake it, and gave to them, and said, Take eat; this is my body." Paul asks in Cor. 10: 16, "The cup of blessing which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ?" In 1 Sam. 9: 13 we read, "As soon as ye be come into the city, ye shall straightway find him, before ye go up to the high place to eat; for the people will not eat until he come, because he doth bless the sacrifice; and afterwards they eat that he bidden."

You may probably say that none of these have reference to our common meals; we will then look for evidence upon other occasions. Turn to Mark 6: 41: 42: "And when he had taken the five loaves and two fishes, he looked up to heaven, and blessed, and brake the loaves, and gave them to his disciples to set before them; and the two fishes divided he among them all, and they did all eat, and were filled." Also Mark 8: 7, "And they had a few small fishes; and he blessed, and commanded to set them also before them." Also Luke 24: 30, "And it came to pass, as he sat at meat with them, he took bread, and blessed it and brake, and gave to them." Therefore if it was essential then, it is no less so at the present.

Secondly, "Is it proper to pray 'for the sake of Jesus,' when Jesus has done all for our sake?" It is alone through the merits of Jesus, that we can implore a throne of grace; had Jesus failed, where would be our hope? Of ourselves we can do nothing. After doing all that is required of us "we are unprofitable servants." But Jesus purchased our redemption by being obedient in everything, "tempted in all points as we are, yet without sin." John, the revelator wept when there was no man found worthy to open the book, but was told not to weep; as the Zion of the tribe of Judah the root of David hath prevailed to open the book and loose the seals thereof. Then let us come boldly to the throne of grace and implore God for the sake of Jesus who died and bled for us, that we might live and that our sins may be forgiven. The apostle Paul says, in his letter to the Ephesians, 3: 32, "Be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you."

MISERIES OF WAR.

AN eminent surgeon, present in the hospital after the battle of Waterloo, says: "The wounded French continued to be brought in for several successive days; and the British soldiers, who had in the morning been mired by the paleons of those they carried, I saw in the evening so huddled by the repetition of the scene, and by fatigue, as to become indifferent to the sufferings they occasioned!"

"It was now the thirtieth day after the battle. It is impossible to conceive the sufferings of men rudely carried at such a period of their wounds. When I first entered the hospital, these Frenchmen had been roused and excited to an extraordinary degree; and in the glance of their eyes there was a character of fierceness which I never expected to witness in a human countenance. On the second day the temporary excitement had subsided; and turn which way I would, I encountered every form of enfeeblement from those whose condition left no need of words to stir compassion: 'Surgeon Major, O! how I suffer! Dress my wounds! do dress my wounds!' 'Doctor, I commend myself to you. Cut my leg off! O! I suffer too much!' And when these entreaties were unavailing, you might hear, in a weak, inward tone of despair, 'I shall die! I am a dead man.'"

AN EXHORTATION TO FAITHFULNESS.

BY MARY S. SHIPLEY.

TWO of my brothers, one of my sisters and myself are members of the church. It has been over four years since I united, but brothers and sister united only last Winter. They are younger than I am. May they, with myself, be obedient to all the commandments of our blessed Master.

And you, my dear young friends, if you have not yet come to Christ, do not delay. "To-day if you hear his voice, harden not your hearts." Heb. 7, 8, 15. Then come to the Lord at once, make no delay.

We learn that the gate that opens and the road that leads to eternal life are strait-narrow. Then strive to enter in at the "strait gate," for many will seek to enter in and shall not be able Luke 13: 24. Then come at once and follow your meek and lowly Savior while His mercies are yet upon you and the door of grace not closed. To-day is the accepted time. Do not put it off. God will not always strive with you. Do what the Savior has commanded you while it is yet day—before the night cometh when no man can work. The night will come when no man can work, and then if we have not performed our allotted task the king will say, "Depart from me all ye workers of iniquity. There shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth, when ye shall see Abraham and Isaac and Jacob and all the prophets in the kingdom of God."

That will indeed be a sorrowful time. Then dear brethren, let us keep near the blood-stained banner of King Emmanuel. And may those who have not yet enlisted, do so at once, before it is too late; for, on that great and notable day of the Lord, He shall say to them on the left hand, "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels." Matt. 25: 41.

I hope, my dear young friends, you will not neglect to come at once—before the day of grace is closed; for life is but a vapor—lasts but for a moment compared with the ceaseless ages of eternity.

WATCH AND PRAY.

BY O. JONES.

THE all-seeing eye of God is ever watching us, and He is willing to lead and guide His children if they are willing to obey Him. We should not murmur at every little thing that does not go as we think it should. God knows everything we do.

When people cannot find fault with each other they are apt to find fault with God's ways. Oh, why should we murmur! Our Creator does all things well. We should not murmur, but watch and pray;—keep the beacon ever bright—waking while the world is sleeping. Wrap, in the thickest night there is nigh an ocean of peril upon the shore, friends and comrades are in danger.

We should pray for one another—pray for the world, that it may be saved. We should watch our conversation, for how apt we are to speak that which we should not, and we often grieve when we should mourn and weep. Let us be very careful how we speak in this unfriendly world. Our blessed Master has left us a record, that we should be holy even as He is holy. Let us renew our faith in the Lord, fight our fight, and finally we shall receive our reward.

IS THE WORLD GROWING BETTER?

BY HONO. LAY.

THE world has been unpopular in all ages of the world, but if we must accept popular opinion to be true, then the world is getting better every year and gradually but surely the millennium is drawing upon us. Every precept in the Bible teaches that God's judgment come sudden at a time, when least expected of us. It was so in the case of the ancient deluge. The Sodomites, Pharaoh's cruelty, the destruction of Jerusalem, and numerous other instances might be related, but the world becoming better at this time is a question which should engage the minds of all good people, and the BARRONETRY AT WORK hereuntofore been used as a medium by the best thinkers and Bible students in the church, it is to be hoped that some of them will express their opinions upon this question regardless of what is popular or unpopular.

It is admitted that the people in this generation are more refined than ever before even in the methods of warfare. More intellectually and less physically developed than in past ages. The marvellous inventions of the day, such as the phonograph, telephone, electric light, and a method by which deaf mutes can be taught to hear and speak, together with other wonders in discovery, might lead many to think that we are already in the millennium. Considering for the moment, that eventually all mankind will be saved in the life to come—the question in my mind is, whether it will be the few or the many who will meet with God's favor at the next advent of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ? The question is put to representative and orthodox brethren.

DRESSING CHILDREN IN THE FASHIONS.

BY ELLEN B. GNAGEY.

"Train up a child in the way he should go; and when he is old he will not depart from it." Prov. 22: 6.

TRAIN up a child in the way he should go. Mothers, are you doing this? Are you trying to train your daughters in the way they should go? A mother remarked some time ago, "I know my daughters are dressed in the latest style, but let them dress; when they become older they won't want these things any more." Mother, I am afraid you are mistaken. If you are not, the Scriptures can't be true. Can you bring up your daughters with all the foolish fashions of the world, and hope when they become old, it will depart from them? But this is not the case. The daughters generally hold out the way mother trained them. If you show your daughter the humble way, when she is young, she will not depart from it when she is old, but if you show your daughter the fashionable way, she will not depart from it. But when she comes to her death-bed she will say, "I am lost, and mother is the fault of it." Like I read in a paper the other day: A young woman after she was converted, felt it her duty to lay off her jewelry and gay clothing. She did so, and for awhile attired herself modestly and was a devoted Christian. But her mother persuaded her to put on the jewelry and gay clothing again. Not long after her mother told her there was no harm in this, and the daughter was as gay as before. A few years later she took sick, and just before she died, she said to her mother in the presence of others: "Mother, I am dying, and without hope. Once I was a Christian, but at your suggestion I put on that jewelry and gay clothing, that hangs there on the wall, and by that I fell from grace. Now I must die and go to hell. Mother, it is your fault," and pointing to the clothes on the wall she said, "keep my clothes, and when you look at them you will remember that your daughter, who wore them at your suggestion, is in the lost world."

Can you dress in all the foolish fashions of the world and be a Christian? Fathers and mothers, let this be a warning for you. Train your children in the way they should go, that when they come to die, they are prepared to go to that heavenly land.

CORRESPONDENCE.

From Lathrop, California

THANKS be to God for His loving kindness. The church of California has just had a season of refreshment. Their Communion was held at San Joaquin Bridge. It began the 24th of September, and ended the 30th ultimo. The feeling was good, and every one enjoyed himself. Ten souls were added to the church, by confession and baptism. Brother Broddy, from Iowa, was present, and labored with us. During the meeting, Bro. Jacob Shank and Bro. John Peterman were elected deacons—privilege was granted, brother Daniel Studebaker, to preach the Word and baptize. Brother Walter Myers received his charge, and entered upon the duties of a missionary. Funds were donated to defray his expenses. Brother Charles Meyers was chosen to the ministry. May God add His blessing.

JONATHAN MYERS, Oakland, California, Oct. 6th, 1878.

From Jesse Calvert.

I LEFT home on the 8th of October to go to Bloomville, Ohio, to attend meeting. By the way I met a Baptist minister; he said he was much disturbed on the subject of the mode of baptism, and said he wished he did not know as much as he did about true immersion, as it was now hard to tear away from the Baptist, and tell them the thousand he had baptized was all wrong. "I do not know what to do, but I am not satisfied," said he, and bid me farewell.

At Dunkirk I had a few words of greeting by brother S. T. Bosserman, and then continued my journey. Arrived at Bloomville in due time. At night had meeting; fair attendance. Thursday was the day of Communion; had meeting in the morning; five were added to the church by baptism. The Love-feast was a good and enjoyable one, though the crowd was large and somewhat noisy. We continued the meeting until over Sunday; many said they would join, but put it off for a more convenient season.

I am now at Johnstown. The Baptist church was well filled last night, what the result will be, God only knows. Let your prayers ascend in our behalf.

How I Distributed Them.

ON the morning of the 3rd of Oct. I left my home for Holt Co., Mo. On the evening of the 3rd I received a package of the BRETHREN AT WORK and the Children at Work and a lot of other circulars. I made a pretty thorough distribution of them. After I got about six miles from home, I commenced handing them to men and women, at the same time asked them if they would read a good religious paper, if I would hand them one, and they all said yes. I stopped at a school-house, and soon had a crowd of children around me; I gave out quite a lot of your circulars there. I at that time only had one copy of the children's paper, which I exhibited, and told them what it costs per year and the value of the paper and how to send for it, etc. I also left a lot at the post-office, at the Greenville Ford Grand R. R. So I scattered the lot along the road for thirty-three miles, then I ran out. When I got to Andrew Co., Mo., I found that all the members had gone to Holt Co., and as the distance then would be thirty-five miles, and a difficult road to find, I then declined going any farther. I then stopped with the brethren over Lord's day and had two meetings; good order and attention. The members seemed to be much refreshed.

WILLIAM B. SKILL, Martinsville, Mo., Oct. 8th, 1878.

From Kansas.

MYSELF and a goodly number of the Brethren started the 2nd of Oct. to attend a Communion meeting with the brethren and sisters of Bourbon Co., a distance of forty miles. After traveling all day we reached the residence of brother John Baling, where we found that the Brethren had erected the large tent for the purpose of holding the meeting in. There was meeting during the evening. The ministering brethren were Jesse Studebaker, Martin Neher, Martin Edgecomb, Daniel Harader, George Meyers and Hollinger. I can say we had a refreshing season. The brethren and sisters seemed to be workers in the cause of the Redeemer. One soul was made willing to come out on the right side and walk in the ways of the righteous. The Brethren here meet some opposition with the Methodist, who claim to be the true church of Christ. Brethren and sisters we should hope and pray for the time to come, when God's holy Word may be preached in every land and city in its purity. The church here thought proper to call more helpers in the church, by electing three deacons. We hope they may set a good example before the church and world, that they may be the means of doing much good.

There is quite a number of young inquirers in this church, which, I think, is the life of it. church. at M. O. Honours.

Galesburg, Kent, Oct. 16th, 1878.

Good news from the South-west.

OUR church meeting came off on the 11th. Many heavy hearts made glad and that too, to rejoice; the dark clouds that were threatening danger at any time were dispersed. The genial rays of love bestowed far beyond the thought of us all. Thus we see when we are truly sincere, and look to the Lord, he has promised to bless and help us, and to-day sinners were made to weep and the saints to rejoice. As we came to the house for worship we were hailed with the news, three dear souls were admitted in the church, and soon two more, so five in all were received in the fold by baptism. One addition last Sunday. Thus you see we have six additions within one week. It makes glad hearts in the fold of the Lord, to see such precious souls leave the ranks of the evil and come out on the Lord's side.

Glad Tidings.

I FEEL thankful to the Giver of every good and perfect gift, that thus far in passing through the fertile regions of the far West. He has blessed us as a few scattered ones amongst wolves.

The Communion held at Bro. James L. Switzers was attended by a goodly number of our dear brethren and sisters. Brethren S. C. Stump, Ives, Docter, Garman Faddy and others were there. It truly was good to us all, to again meet in church fellowship and communion. From there we journeyed homeward; and on following Saturday we again met in the Burr Oak church; here brother Switzer officiated at the evening exercises. On Sunday morning his subject was, "the atonement." We were made glad to hear our Brethren expound and open up portions the Holy Scriptures. On the following Saturday we met the Brethren of the Lane Stone church, to again commemorate our best Redeemer's death and sufferings. Here we were met by our beloved brother, Lemuel Hillery, who officiated in the evening. The church here was greatly strengthened and built up.

Ministers in this arm are C. C. Root, Docter and Montgomery. Helpers from abroad were J. L. Switzer, L. Garman, D. O. Burnbaugh, J. Fuller, A. Ives and H. B. Eadey. I counted to state, in the Burr Oak congregation there was a choice held for two deacons. The responsibilities of that office fell on brethren Benjamin Wagener and son Noah, who live in the vicinity of Red Cloud, Neb. May the Lord give them strength, and bless their labors of love to us all, is my prayer. From there we went to brother Daniel Shooks, in Osborn Co., and were kindly and hospitably received by brother Daniel and wife, who know how to conduct the laborious duties of a Love-feast (occasional) this being the first meeting of this kind in this part of Osborn Co. The large tent was erected, and we were made to rejoice to see a Menonite minister and his wife come forth to join the ranks of our dear Brethren and of our blessed Redeemer, to obey in all things the mandate of His will. May God strengthen them against the fiery darts, that may be hurled, and may they ever have the armor on; that be enabled to conquer all their conquerors through Jesus. Many others we feel assured, are near the kingdom. Oh may they not stay away too long. Remember, dear ones, that the spirit will not always strive with you. I entreat you to consider, to come now. Yes (to-day) Won't you do so?

The members here in the Solomon Valley are in union and love. May God endue each and all with a good degree of Christian charity and courtesy, that they may be shining lights in the far West. The Word was preached by brother Hillery in the demonstration of the spirit and in power, and had a salutary effect. May God bless him in his labors, and sustain his companion at home, is our united prayer. J. P. BRANKWORN.

Eating Other's Bread.

"EAT no man's bread for naught," is a divine injunction, yet many of our members do so. When we, who live in the country go to town on business, or to the large cities, and we prefer to go to stay with our members rather than go to a hotel over night or for two or three days, it is no more than right, that we should leave those with whom we have lodged, one two or three dollars, for they have every thing to buy and generally at high rates. Of course these dear members will not charge a brother or sister; but let us leave something for them any how. Yes leave it by force. Of course when our ministers are out spending their time for the church, it is different; but we who go on business or otherwise, should be willing to satisfy or rather leave something in return for what we have received.

I once knew a family of members living in Dayton, Ohio, who kept every one who came to stay; and often rich members would get off of the cars and go there and receive of their hospitalities, and go off without leaving a cent, when these members were needy, and who afterwards broke up. Another brother in Indiana, who was poor and lived in town told me in time of the A. M., since then he had well nigh been eaten out of house and home, and that by some who were rich, but did not leave the brother anything in exchange for his kindness. Another member in Chicago, has had a burden in the same manner, and is not independent. And many others we could name, but let these examples suffice. When I was in the latter city I stayed with a member and left my dollar, and felt good over it. When you go, brother, do thou likewise. P. R. WRIGHTSMAN.

Wayside Notes.

WE for the time have no better word to give you than to tell you of the Love-feasts in this part of Ohio.

THE BRUSH CREEK CHURCH.

The Love-feast at this place was held on the 5th of October. Preaching at two P. M. Saturday, by brother Garman, after which a brother, who had been a member of the Church, was baptized. The Love-feast was a happy one for more than one reason. There was very good order throughout the meeting. There seemed a desire to hear the Word. Many partook now for the first time since coming into the church; and last, but not least, there appeared a desire to cultivate more of the feeling of love and this always makes a Love-feast. We can not have one without it.

Brother A. J. Hixon and wife with the wife and son of brother Edwood Davis, of the Fall Creek church, Highland Co., were among the visitors from adjoining churches.

On Sunday morning at nine A. M. there was an experience meeting in which the lady alone, both brethren and sisters took part, and it was a feast of good things and very tender. In the space of two hours, four short prayers were offered, with exhortations from at least a dozen members both old and young, with a full share of hymns and praises. Preaching at 11 A. M. by brother Hixon, from Paul. 2. 5. The topic was the "Mind of Christ" and was ably presented. The leading points were:—

"The thought is always parent to the act." "Truth is all of anything, that is worth believing." It is all that is practical. "We have the spirit by measure; but Jesus had it without measure." "Jesus had good thoughts, and that is proof that he had a good will." He did not hold hats, and that is proof that he had no bad thoughts. At this point, the crowd being great, we with brethren Custer and William Calvert went into the yard, and there spoke to the people of God's Revelation. "Can intelligent Revelation and man's have come from an intelligent mind, it is given in an intelligent way, and is addressed to minds that are also intelligent; if rightly applied, it doth this and to show our intelligence we must accept all of God's Revelation as they are handed by His Word. We must allow God to give His own meaning."

With many both in and out of the house, the attention was good, but we fear that good words are often caught away so quickly as to leave but little or no impression.

A BASKET DINNER.

was set and eaten by the multitude, and at two P. M. we addressed them from 1 Peter 2: 7.—"Unto you therefore, which believe, be precious." The effort was to show that without Jesus we are without a Savior; that he is precious in the church and in the family; precious in youth and in old age; in life; in death; in the resurrection; in the judgment and precious throughout eternity. After this there was an intermission of some hours in which many went away to their homes; but a large number remained and of them a body of young brethren and sisters, for a while sang most sweetly the songs of Zion. At night we were again addressed by brother Hixon from Col. 4: 5. "Walk in wisdom toward them that are without, redeeming the time." This address was most practical and we think one of the brother's best efforts. When this was over, the meeting was closed, but with a conviction in many that it should have gone on. For the night we, with brother Hixon and his company went with brother John T. Reed, where rest to mind and body was obtained. L. WEST.

From Naperville, Ill.

Dear Brethren:—

OUR Feast is in the past. We had a very pleasant meeting. The church seemed to be in love and union, hence the occasion was appreciated by all. We trust that the inner man has been fed with that spiritual food, that emanated from above; and we believe that there were many new resolves made, that we would be more Christ-like. We are taught in Holy Writ, that if we resist the Devil he will flee from us. Brethren and sisters let us equip ourselves with the Gospel armor and fight the battles of the Lord, that Satan may be subdued.

Church news are rare. We have no good news to tell, that sinners are returning to God; but we feel the need of a great revival. We long to see the time when our children and our neighbors and their children return home as the prodigal son did. Two of our ministers have resolved to emigrate to Kansas this coming Spring. This weakens the ministerial aid. The church thought it proper to elect another, also, a deacon. Brother Simon Yundt was chosen to the ministry and Bro. Michael Sollenberger for deacon, and brother William Hoyle was restored to office of deacon.

NOAH EARLY.

From the Woodbury Church, Pa.

OUR Love-feast is now among the things of the past. On the 14th inst. at four P. M. was the time appointed for our Communion. When the hour arrived, the house was filled and the subject of self-examination was taken up by brethren Graybill Meyers from Duncansville, Christian Holsinger from Dimmings Creek and Thomas Mittock, from Clover Creek church, which were the ministers from a distance. The weather being very pleasant both days, and the congregations large, we can say we had very good meetings. The order among the spectators was remarkably good; and may God's blessings rest upon them. They seemed to be interested in the meeting, and we hope they may have it to say, it was good to be there. We think the brethren and sisters that participated in the feast have all renewed their covenant with God to live closer to their holy profession than ever before. The brethren that labored for us tried to impress this thought upon our minds and now may God help us to carry it out. We truly can say, we had a foretaste of heaven. The meetings were continued next day. The Brethren that came to us, tried to hold forth the Word of our Savior, and did not shun to declare the whole counsel of God, by preaching Jesus. It caused rejoicing among the saints, and we believe the angels in heaven were rejoicing to see sinners coming home to God.—After the forenoon services, the invitation was extended and one soul was made willing to unite with the church and was received by baptism. Brother Meyers also preached in the evening again to an attentive congregation from the words, "My spirit shall not always strive with man." The application was made to the sinner. At the close of the meeting there was an invitation given to all such that felt to unite with the church, and three souls came forward and wished to be received by baptism, which was attended to on Sunday. So, this ended our meetings, and we truly can say we had a refreshing season in the presence of the Lord; and when we came to the time to separate from each other, that beautiful hymn came to mind, which says:

When shall we meet again,
Meet ne'er to sever?

for we know not whether we shall ever meet again as we have met.

D. S. REFUGLE.

What I Saw, and Heard and Thought.

TODAY, Oct. 6th, we attended the funeral of a little infant at our village church, where one of our Brethren preached, and while there, many thoughts ran through my mind in regard to the different people who gathered together from different quarters. About the first thing that attracted my mind after entering the church, was, the wooden music and the choral singing, which is a great saving to the vocal organs of the most of the congregation; but I was impressed with the idea, that this was not quite the right kind of music the great Jehovah wanted in his house; and that it would be of a rather dwarfed condition, by the time it reached the ears of the All-hearing.

Our brother took the latter clause of Heb. 2: 6, which reads, "What is man, that thou art mindful of him? or the son of man, that thou visitest him?" Our brother went on to expound what man was, in his first state before the fall, what man now is, under sin and salvation, and to what he may attain and finally will be his termination; but before he got far on with his discourse, my mind was arrested by a woman sitting a few benches in front of me among the hindmost mourners, whom I hadn't seen for several years, and who was laboring under the detestable influence of opium. I was partly horror-stricken, while beholding her movements; and I felt to exclaim, oh what is man! I had to think, O, what a change ten or fifteen years bring about! Those eyes that then were awake and sparkling are now benumbed and glaring;—that head that was once intelligent, is filled with irresistible drowsiness and sleep;—that mind that once was bright, is now morbid and unconscious;—that body that paced the floor in swiftness, in time gone by, must now be dragged along much like a man almost deadly drunk on his way to the drunkards' den. The little child of three Summers sitting by her side, who tries to fondle its mother and win a smile, is betrayed in its expectations; the mother could not give a smile or fondle in return, but involuntarily gave way to a deep drowsiness, the head sinking down, down, down, and still farther down until, with a sort of waking from a horrid dream, it is raised again by a wild staring of the eyes, only to repeat its former action. O, horrid thing, that robs the mind of all consciousness, that even the loud voice of preaching will not attract any more attention than if none were speaking! I had to think, a person addicted to this habit, was thrice a slave, being snatched from all hope of reforming in either soul or body, and may be doomed for time and eternity, and we think it fit to say just right here to all that may read this, "Touch not, taste not, handle not," such a thing by which all will perish, with the using of it.

Last my attention was drawn to a man, who professes to be a follower of Jesus; but when it comes to kneeling down in humble prayer, it is rather too much for him,—he keeps his seat on the bench, and only bends his head or props his elbow on the bench. I had to think that he has no doubt never read, that, "Every knee shall bow before the Lord," and to give God the honor due to him; and I thought the time may come, that he would gladly bend the knees in reverence to God, if that would insure him a mansion among the blessed; but it might happen that if we are not willing to bow before the Lord in time, our privileges to the home above may be cut off from us in a quite unexpected time.

LEVI ANDERS.

Liaoda, Pa.

From Milford, Ind.

ON the evening of the 13th of Oct. I had the privilege to meet with the Brethren in Solomon's Creek district, Ind., at their Communion. Brother R. H. Miller was present, and by request preached on the covering before examination. His logical method made that point so clear, that we think all were edified and built up. He proved by the Scripture, and good reasoning, that the Christian must have a badge or ensign, so he can be known wherever he goes. A man praying or prophesying with his head covered, dishonors his head.—Brother Miller's argument was, that a man should take his hat off, as soon as he steps into a meeting-house, to honor Christ, as a soldier would take his hat off when he meets an officer, in honor to that man who is his superior. A soldier of the enemy must be careful while on duty that he has his uniform on; otherwise he would be court-martialed. What a beautiful thought! The Christian soldier should have on an ensign or uniform, so he might not stand speechless in the great day of reckoning, as did the friend in Matt. 22: 11, 12, 13. A woman should not pray with her head uncovered, by so doing she would dishonor her head, "The man." She should have a covering on her head, a special covering, and that should be white; for white is the righteousness of saints. Rev. 19: 8.—Brother Miller's reason for white was, that in time of wars, when the cannon rolls and the black smoke of destruction keeps rolling on, then the white flag is hoisted as a signal of peace. The white covering was for the sisters, surely is a sign of peace; and more, they should have power on their heads, because of the angels. At the above Love-feast, I saw the single mode of feet-washing practiced, and I must say if ever there was any prejudice against it, that night it was removed.

J. H. MILLER.

From Enoch Eby.

I LEFT my home on the 20th inst. in company with Bro. F. McCune, who was returning from a visit to his brother-in-law at Waddam's Grove. Next day met with the members of Shannon in council, the principal object of which, was to elect a brother to the ministry and advance brother McCune to the second degree, which was done. Brother Spragle was chosen to the ministry. I then came to this place (Lanark), and in obedience to the wish of all the official members present at the Yellow Creek feast, the two editors and myself proceeded to set the time and place for a special District Meeting, which they, in their united wisdom, thought it necessary to appoint for reasons set forth elsewhere in the paper. In doing business of this kind, we always meet with the unpleasant thought, that we cannot please all, hence must do that which we think will be for the most advantage and benefit of the district, with the desire and hope that all our dear brethren and sisters, who could not conveniently be consulted in reference to the necessity and utility of said meeting, will fully appreciate our motives and feel an interest in the meeting, especially the ministering brethren, as the missionary work will receive a special attention, in connection with other matters of interest to the district.

To-morrow I propose, the Lord willing, to start to the mission field of Central Illinois, expecting to go to New Bedford in Bureau County first, and spend some time there, then go to other points among the members in Marshall and Putnam counties, of which they will be informed in due time. This I shall do if the Lord permits. Let me here remark to my co-laborers in the ministry, that I would be much comforted in the thought that some one would join me in the arduous task, in a few days from hence, as my vocal organs may soon fail to do all the speaking and singing, which in some places is required.

Oct. 22nd, 1878.

GLEANINGS.

From Pleasant Union, Iowa.—Our Sunday-school was organized on the 14th of April, and closed the 13th of Oct. The school was held in a place where the Brethren never had a Sunday-school before. The school was organized under rather embarrassing circumstances, being surrounded by the various denominations and another school being held near ours, but notwithstanding this, the Brethren maintained the best interest. The school was organized by electing the following officers: Abraham Wolf, Superintendent; Stephen Yoder, Assistant; Samuel E. Yoder, Secretary; Isaac Farmer, Treasurer; Fannie Henderson, Querst. During the school there were seven thousand six hundred and ninety verses committed by the scholars, during the term. Good feelings were manifested during the school. Quite a solemnity prevailed at the close. As to the result of our labors, we can not tell what they may be, though we can begin to see the fruit of it.—Since we closed, one of our scholars made application for admittance into the church. We hope the prayers, offered in behalf of the school, may be soon realized by an ingathering of many souls into the church of the living God. The school was addressed by brother H. Etter and others. STEPHAN YODER, Washington Co., Iowa.

From Hudson, Ill.—Our Fall Communion is among the things of the past. The largest that we have had at any time. Our ministerial aid was also large; there came from abroad to our assistance brethren John Snowbarger of Ind., David Frantz, James R. Gish, Philip Moore, William Gephart, Christian Barahart and Kelan Heckman, all of Ill. A large crowd of spectators,—many more than could get in the house, consequently a good deal of noise and confusion outside; but the best of order inside. On Sunday morning the Sunday-school was addressed by brethren Gish and Frantz.—O, it does my soul good, to hear the brethren talk to the children. God bless our children in this fast age. O, that they may be induced to love virtue and hate vice, and stand aloof from the vain and corrupting fashions and customs of a wicked world. At 11 o'clock the brethren preached from John 14: 1, 2, to a crowded house. Again in the evening, and the last time, when we took the parting hand, which is always attended with some reluctance. Brethren, go forth in the strength of the Lord, preach the Word, avoid declaiming talk; talk, and talk sensible talk, reason as Paul did, till they trembled. Brethren I mean what I say, when I say, talk to the people; never mind making orations, the people have listened long enough, try talking awhile. John, the divine went forth in the strength of a celestial after the angel talked with him. God says, talk to them "when thou liest down and when thou risest up."—Deut. 6: 7. Talk ye of His wondrous works, and talk in such a way that the people will take knowledge of you, that you have been with Jesus. T. D. LYON.

From Brighton, Ind.—Our feast was on the 10th inst. It passed off pleasantly. Nothing of very special interest to report, save that while the washing of feet was being performed, there was a great conflict of sentiment forcibly expressed by one of our brethren, regarding the foundation of the Lord's Supper. Although his sentiments were in direct opposition to the theory of the general brotherhood, it was presented in so mild and unoffending manner, that probably three-fourths of the members present did not discover the conflict. The brother's mind seemed deeply impressed with the eternal meaning of the figure of the feast made at the return of the prodigal son. He maintained, that the kid represented the Passover Feast, while the fatted calf represented the Lord's Supper, and that the Lord erected a new house (the Lord's Supper) for His church, before He demolished the old one (the Passover). The conclusion of his remarks was quite impressive, holding forth that the perverting of the Scriptures to establish our practice was entirely uncalled for, that the Scriptures were plain, and should be believed as they were designed, and that all the trouble was on our part in applying them to suit ourselves. In short he believes that the word Passover in Matthew, Mark, Luke and John, means Passover, as well as feet-washing means to wash feet. Is this not logical, Brethren? Let us all consider what the apostle Peter says about wresting the Scriptures.

ISAIAH HORNOR.

From Big Creek Church, Parkersburg, Ill.—Our Love-feast, which came off on the evening of the 10th of Oct., is numbered with the things of the past, but it will be long remembered by every brother and sister that was present. The ministering brethren that met with us here were J. B. Sell and G. W. Cripe of Ind., and A. Neher of Salem and T. M. Culvert of Ellison Prairie. Brother Cripe and Sell remained with us over Sunday, and preached the Word of God in its purity to the people.—Four precious souls were added to the church by baptism. May the Lord ever keep us all faithful in that form of doctrine, that was delivered to the saints, is my prayer.

A. C. KILLEBER.

From J. H. Miller.—Met with the Brethren in DeKalbe Co., on the 5th of Oct., at the Love-feast. Had the privilege to meet Bro. J. P. Ebersole there and to hear him preach with the same zeal and power that he did twenty years ago. Surely we had a feast together, long to be remembered. On the 8th met with the Maumee district at the Love-feast. Enjoyed myself very much. Truly the Brethren in Ohio treat the Brethren that visit them, with kind respect. One thing I noticed while there, was, the young people behaved so well at the Communion.

STEIN AND RAY DEBATE.

Prop. 1st—The Brethren (or Tunker) Churches Possess Bible Characteristics entitling them to be regarded as Churches of Jesus Christ.

J. W. STEIN affirms.

D. B. RAY denies.

J. W. STEIN'S 3rd AFFIRMATIVE.

MY friend says, "The original Tunker church was organized by uninspired men." This I deny. The churches organized by Christ through the apostles were all Tunker churches in the same sense the Brethren are. All true churches subsequently organized through the instrumentality of uninspired men are as truly founded by Christ as the Gospel itself which uninspired men preach.

4th Characteristic. It is the pillar and ground of the truth. First reason under it continued. That the Brethren teach "baptismal salvation," that "water literally washes away sins," deny salvation by faith, baptize the "unregenerate," wilfully "upon a dead faith," or that I taught "there can be no true believers till after they are baptized," are untrue. Hence the arguments and deductions drawn from such premises by my friend need no reply. Is faith which works, comes to God by repentance and puts on Christ in baptism, dead?—untrue? We baptize those who are regenerated through the Word. Baptism is not regeneration, but "the washing of regeneration." Titus 3: 5. Had we taught that "water literally washed away sins," my friend's comparison about Christ's literal body and blood in the eucharist would have some application, but he misses his mark. Water did not literally wash away Naaman's leprosy. 2 Kings 5: 8-14; nor the man's blindness, John 9: 7; yet my friend admits their washings were "conditionals of their cure." Were they "water cures?" Does not the same power which healed them physically remit sins? The commands "go" and "wash" were related to Naaman's healing precisely like faith and baptism are to salvation in Mark 16: 16. He says "Repentance and faith are absolute conditions to salvations," yet he denies that the ground on which he charges us with "baptismal salvation" would require him to call this "repentance" or "faith salvation," because he says, "Repentance and faith are moral duties, while baptism is a positive command." Is baptism unmoral? Are repentance and faith negative commands? He quoted brother Moore that "a man can be baptized into Christ," he says, "to prove that the Tunker churches hold baptismal salvation," which he calls "popish"—"blasphemous." Paul says, we "were baptized into Jesus Christ." Rom. 6: 3. Is that "baptismal salvation?"—"popish?"—"blasphemous?" I ask him to tell what "horn of water," John 3: 5, "washing of regeneration," Titus 3: 5, "washing of water," Eph. 5: 26, "obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine," Rom. 6: 17—without which men "cannot enter into the kingdom of heaven"—were "saved"—cleansed—"made free from sin" &c., mean if they do not refer to baptism? Will he do it? He says Paul was "filled with the Holy Spirit" before baptism. I demand the proof. Why then was Ananias sent to him that he might "be filled with the Holy Spirit"? Acts 9: 17. My friend thinks baptism in order to "remission" takes from Christ all power to pardon sins, unless some Tunker preacher will permit. Does preaching in order to salvation take from him all power to save, unless the preacher will permit? Does Dr. R., not assume the same responsibility he here condemns when he admits that "it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe"? 1 Cor. 1: 21. He teaches that if baptism is necessary to remission, "the apostle deceived the jailer with a falsehood." Acts 16: 31. Since faith is necessary to the blotting out of sins, did Peter deceive the people with a falsehood when he said, "Repent and be converted that your sins may be blotted out?" Acts 3: 19, because he did not say, "believe?" "But to him all the prophets bear testimony: and every one believing into him [eis auton] shall receive forgiveness of sins through his name." Acts 10: 43. Emphatic Diaglott Translation. Believers shall receive forgiveness of sins. How? "Through his name." Luke 24: 47; Acts 4: 12; 1 Cor. 6: 11. What does his name do? It authorizes repentance, faith and baptism for remission and salvation. Mark 16: 16; Acts 2: 38. How do men get that name? They are "baptized into" it. Matt. 28: 19; Acts 8: 16, 19, 15, i. e., inducted into it by a solemn sacramentum as a foreigner receives the name of citizenship, and a bride the name and heirship of her betrothed. Has the believer received forgiveness through "believing" merely? If so, the "chief rulers," John 12: 42, 43, were pardoned. They "believed [eis auton] into him." My friend admits they were not saved. Does such admission "contradict" John 3: 36, 5: 24? Can he who takes baptism out of Christ's terms of salvation, Mark 16: 16, either truly "hear" his words or believe him? See Rev. 22: 19. Dr. Ray (not the Word) says, "salvation is pardon condition of Gospel baptism." Christ says, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." But Cornelius received the Holy Spirit before baptism. That was not what my friend calls "regeneration," &c., but a "special, miraculous impartation of the gift of prophecy and tongues." Acts 10: 46; 11: 15; 2: 17, 18, for signs 1 Cor. 14: 22; Heb. 2: 4, doubtless to convince Peter and the Jewish brethren generally that salvation was also for the Gentiles." Acts 10: 34; 11: 18. Are such qualifications ever required as pre-requisites to baptism or pardon in the Scriptures? Why don't my friend require them? Why ask of us what he does not even expect of his own? Cornelius before his conversion was a devout, God-fearing, alms-giving man of prayer. Acts 10: 2-4, whom many would pronounce "saved," whose prayers and alms came up "for a memorial before God," who sent an angel to tell him he was pardoned.—saved? No, but to send for Peter v. 5 "who" (to use the angel's own language as "overheard" by Peter 11: 4) "shall tell thee words whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved." Acts 11: 14. "He shall tell thee," said the angel, "what thou oughtest to do." 10: 6. He had yet to be saved, not by being a "hearer only," but also "a doer of the work." Jas. 1: 25. He said to Peter, "We are all here present before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God." 10: 33, and when a command was issued what was it? "He commanded them to be baptized," &c. 10: 48. Peter had not forgotten his Lord's solemn command and promise. Matt. 28: 19; Mark 16: 16. He would teach that "baptism doth also now save us." 1 Pet. 3: 21; and tell men to "repent and be baptized for remission." Acts 2: 38. My friend tries to separate "repent" and "be baptized" here by showing that they have different nominatives when the ellipsis "ye" is supplied. But this don't help his cause. "And" connects the two expressions "repent ye" and "be baptized every one of you," together, which are both still required of the same people in answer to the same question, and are related to remission precisely alike. He tries to escape this fatal dilemma by saying "the pentecostians did not say, 'what shall we do to be saved?'" The alternative of this is, they wanted to know what they must do because they were saved, and Peter tells them to "repent and be baptized." Here my friend has Peter telling saved men to "repent." But he says "the question, 'what shall we do?' includes duty more than the point of salvation." Then he has Peter still commanding either pardoned men to "repent," or unpardoned men to "be baptized." But to prove they were God's children he quotes 1 John 5: 1, "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God." The belief that Jesus is the Christ, even in devils, is wrought indirectly by God, but does not make them his children. "gennaō" is ambiguous. Sometimes it means "to bring forth," Matt. 2: 1, Acts 7: 20; sometimes only "to beget." Matt. 1: 2, &c.; also passage adduced. The Pentecostians believed that Jesus was the Christ before they repented. Were candidates to ask baptism from the Brethren on this kind of faith before repentance, my friend would call them "goats," "children of the devil," &c., yet this is evidence to him that pentecostians were saved. Behold! the inconsistency and self-refutation of error! Do not wicked men and devils believe that Jesus is the Christ? Mark 1: 24; James 2: 9. He reminds us that the baptized had "gladly received the word." Did any person ever truly repent who had not also "gladly received the word"? Does not the gladness of prospect precede pardon? Does not Christ represent one rejoicing at the prospect of owning the treasure likened to the kingdom of heaven before it is really his? Matt. 13: 44. But he says, "the saved" were added to the church. Please see Acts 2: 47. The Greek says "sozamenous," being saved. "The Lord daily added those being saved to the congregation." Emphatic Diaglott. This shows that the terms of salvation and membership in Christ's churches are the same. But the leper, after he was cleansed, offered gifts for his cleansing. Mark 1: 44. This "for" in Greek is peri, which means about, concerning, &c. In the baptismal examples, Mark 1: 4, Luke 3: 3, Acts 2: 38, for in Greek is eis, not peri. But even the leper's offerings were for (eis, in order to) "a testimony," &c. Mark 1: 44. My friend missed his example. In Matt. 10: 18, Luke 9: 3, Acts 9: 21, 13: 2, 47, you will find "for" (eis) meaning in order to, and utterly repugnant to the idea of something already done. If we give eis in the baptismal examples its most natural and common New Testament rendering, the case would stand thus, "Be baptized (eis) into the remission of sins." Would there be less propriety in going "into (eis) the water" Acts 8: 38, "into (eis) everlasting punishment," or "into (eis) life eternal," Matt. 25: 46, because one is already in them than to be baptized into a state of remission because one is already in it. If my friend will adduce our example, apart from baptism, in the New Testament where the language "for the remission of sins," is not interpreted by his own church to mean "in order to the remission of sins," I will give it up. Is that fair? The ancient Valdenses or Waldenses, Petrobrussians, &c., taught that "it is not the faith of another, but an individual's own faith which saves with baptism inasmuch as the Lord says, 'He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved.'" Faber's Enquiry into the History and Theology of the Ancient Valdenses and Albigenses' 189. They said, "Neither baptism without concomitant faith, nor faith without concomitant baptism, is of any avail; for neither can save without the other." Ibid. 181. Dr. Ray calls these people "the church of Christ." Baptist Succession, 349. Therefore I prove by himself that "baptism is needed to remission of sins" is characteristic of "the church of Christ."

My second reason why the Brethren possess this characteristic is, that they baptize into each of the names, "Father," "Son," and "Holy Spirit." Christ fixed the form when He said, "Baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit." Matt. 28: 19. Some words in this formula necessary to its complete grammatical construction have omitted by what grammarians call "ellipsis," i. e., "into the name" before "of the Son" and "of the Holy Spirit." These as truly belong to the formula grammatically considered, as the words expressed. Green's Analysis of Eng. Lang. §423, and Grammar 147, 192, 198. Proof (a). The Greek, "Pateros" "Uhuu," "Hagion Pnematos" are all in the genitive and governed by "onoma" expressed or understood. See rule. Bullion's Gr. Grammar, §142. Proof (b). In English transposition, the genitive form here is equivalent to the possessive case. Fewsmith's Grammar, 137, 4. Green's Analysis, § 205, "the name of the Father"—the Father's name; "of the Son"—the Son's; "of the Holy Spirit,"—the Holy Spirit's. Here "name" alone can govern "Son's," and "Holy Spirit's." Proof (c). The preposition "of" which occurs thrice has "name" each time for its antecedent term. To deny this is to deny that "of" is a preposition and expunge it with its dependent words from the text and be guilty of taking from the holy oracles. Proof (d). "Name" is the object and subsequent term of the preposition "into" (eis) expressed in the first clause and understood with name which it governs in the latter clauses. To deny this is to deny that the antecedent terms of "of" in the latter clauses have any governing word. (e). As "name" is governed by "into" in each clause and forms its subsequent term, so "into" in each clause refers to "baptizing" as its antecedent term. A denial of this, denies "into" its part of speech, as a connective by depriving it of one of its essential relations, and hence rejects it with its dependent words from Christ's command. (f). In compound constructions the meaning of dependent clauses may be determined by appealing to the leading clause or mode; proposition, whatever action, therefore "baptizing" requires to satisfy the clause. "Into the name of the Father," is additionally required, to satisfy the similar additional clauses. (g). Coordinate conjunctions connect similar elements and constructions. Bullion's Grammar, § 179, 776. Green's Analysis, R. xl. "And" connects the three clauses, 1st. "into the name of the Father," 2nd. "of the Son," 3rd. "of the Holy Spirit," together, hence they are similar. Latham says "However copulatively, may be the expression there are always two prepositions where there is one conjunction." Hand-book of Eng. Lang. 357. Had Christ said "Baptizing them into the name of the Father, teaching &c.," all admit he would have commanded not less than one action. The command would have contained one preposition, therefore the two similar additional clauses show that He commanded nothing less than baptism into each name. Meyer, a profound and critical German commentator says, "If Jesus had said 'The names,' He would have expressed Himself in a manner easily misunderstood, though there were meant three personally different names, inasmuch as 'to onomata' (the names) might have been taken for the several names of each individual subject. The singular signifies the definite name expressed in the text of each of the three, so that 'eis ton onoma' before 'ton uhuu' and before 'ton Hagion Pnematos,' is to be added mentally as a matter of course." Notes on Matt. 28: 19. Dr. Comant (Baptist) of the American Bible Union, referring to the ancient practice of immersing at the utterance of each name, admits it would have been justifiable had the text read, "In the name of the Father, and in the name of the Son, and in the name of the Holy Spirit." Notes on Matt. 28: 19. Such I have shown to be its correct grammatical rendering. Mr. A. Campbell says, "He (Christ) commanded all converts to be baptized, into the name of the Father, and into the name of the Son, and into the name of the Holy Spirit." Quinter & McConnell Deb. 61.

A HOME IN HEAVEN.

A HOME for me! what a joyful thought,
As we toil and weep in our weary lot,
In the city of gold, by the crystal sea,
Forever with Jesus, a home for me.

A home for me, when the flowers all fade,
And wealth and fame, in the dust are laid,
When strength decays, and pleasures flee,
Forever with Jesus: a home for me.

A home for me; as I suffering lie
On a couch of pain, and with languid eye,
But the golden gates by faith I see,
And O blessed thought! there's a home for me.

A home for me; though our friends are fled,
To moulder and sleep with the silent dead,
They will live and sing through eternity,
And we'll meet again in that home for me,

A home for me, when time is o'er,
Where grief and parting are known no more,
O weary soul, there's a home for thee,
A home for all, yes, a home for me

PHILOLOGICAL DISSERTATION OF
THE WORD BAPTISM.

BY LEWIS O. HUMMER.

NUMBER IV.

WHEN words are appropriated they are always used literally and cannot be appropriated figuratively. To show that all meanings of words may have figurative applications, I will illustrate by examples, and I will take the words bapto and baptizo. Baptizo, is the derivative of bapto. Bapto has two significations and baptizo but one; these significations have all figurative applications. The primary meaning of bapto, is to immerse, the secondary to dye. "And he cried and said, Father Abraham have mercy on me; and send Lazarus, that he may (bapto) dip the tip of his finger in water, and cool my tongue." Luke 16: 24. In this example the word bapto is used literal. "And the priest shall dip his finger in the blood, and sprinkle of the blood." &c. Lev. 4: 6. This also is a literal use of the word.

We will next produce examples where the word is used figuratively. "And he was clothed with a vesture (bapto) dipped in blood." Rev. 19: 13. Christ will not have a literal vesture literally dipped in blood. This is what I call a figure of speech, or a figurative use of the word bapto. This is not a new and secondary meaning, but the same and primary meaning used figuratively instead of literal. "That thy feet may be (bapto) dipped in the blood of thine enemies," &c. Psa. 68: 23. This is also a figurative expression or use of the word, but not a secondary meaning.

We now have a literal meaning and a figurative application, and will now establish a secondary meaning which is to dye. Hippocrates employs the word to denote dyeing by dropping the dyeing liquid on the thing dyed. "When it drops upon the garments, they are dyed." The dyeing liquid literally dropped on literal garments, and therefore is a literal use of the word. This example established a secondary meaning of bapto. We have another example in the battle of the frogs and mice.

"So fell Cromlophagus, and from that fall never arose, but reddening with his blood the wave." The lake was literally colored or dyed with the blood of the mouse, not the whole lake, the expression is hyperbolic in its import. The lake was not dipped into the blood of the mouse by hyperbole as Dr. Gale supposes, but the lake was hyperbolically dyed. No one would think the lake was all dyed, but the part that was reddened. We have other examples at command, but these are sufficient to establish a secondary meaning.

We will next produce an example where the secondary meaning is used figuratively. "Ornis baptes," a colored bird. Milton, when speaking of the wings of angel Raphael, uses a similar expression, "colors dipped in heaven." There is here no allusion to either literal dyeing or dipping. Having now illustrated the principle of appropriation and the figurative use of words, it is not necessary that I prove that baptizo is strictly univocal, I challenge any one to produce a single example where baptizo has a secondary meaning. The example must be literal in its import. That baptizo has an abundance of figurative applications, every one knows, and I will refer to a few only.

I want my readers to bear in mind that I am not endeavoring to establish the univocalness of baptizo, but simply illustrating the laws of figurative use. The primary meaning of baptizo, is admitted by all to be immersion. So I will produce no examples on that point, but will take a few examples where the word is used figuratively. "But Jesus said unto them, ye know not what ye ask; can ye drink of the cup that I drink of, and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with?" Mark 10: 38. Jesus was not literally immersed in suffering, but as the suffering was not confined to spots, but extended over the whole body in the superlative degree, there is certainly a beautiful allusion to immersion in water or immersion of any kind. Baptism is not sprinkling a few drops of water, but a complete covering. Adam Clark speaking of his baptism says, it was a sea of suffering, a beautiful allusion to the primary meaning of baptizo. The word baptizo is not used here in a secondary sense or else the baptism must have been literal. The persons that think words assume new meanings when used figuratively, are poor philologists indeed. What is the secondary meaning of baptizo that the suffering of Christ resemble, if it is not immersion? and if it is immersion, is it not the primary meaning?

We will next consider the baptism of the Holy Ghost. Our opponents think that that baptism was a fulfillment of a prophecy that reads, "I will pour out of my spirit," that baptism means also to pour. Nothing more is necessary to refute his error, than to ask them, if the Spirit was literally poured out? Out of what was the Spirit poured? The pouring was figurative, and not literal. But the pouring was not called their baptism. The baptism took place after the pouring. It was after the Spirit was poured out that the baptism took place. What constituted their baptism was their being entirely under the influence of the Spirit in allusion to the entire covering in baptism by immersion. If the pouring is the baptism spoken of, why was not cheo used in place of baptizo. If pouring is the baptism, then the wrong word was used to designate the mode. If immersion is the primary meaning of baptizo as all admit, then baptizo was appropriated to the rite in that sense or else immersion could not be a valid mode. Now if "baptizo" is an appropriated word and designates immersion, baptizo can never serve in the room of cheo. Then words that are different in meaning, can never be reciprocal in this appropriated sense. Cheo is the appropriated word for pour, just as colino is for sprinkle or "baptizo" for immersion. How can cheo, or colino, ever be used to designate immersion. No man possessed with common sense will say that they can; neither can "baptizo" ever mean to pour. Was ever any other example alleged, but this baptism of the Holy Ghost, where baptizo meant to pour? Was not cheo in existence long before? So that at that period of time it could not designate pour. If a secondary meaning was actually conferred upon baptizo, it could not be that of pour, when already there was a word appropriated to designate that mode. When words are once appropriated they are forever disqualified to serve in the room of any other appropriated word. Remember this rule, and you will never assign a meaning to a word that is impossible for it to have in such a situation. The baptism of the Holy Ghost can never be by pouring unless cheo is the correct translation. To assert that baptizo can designate what cheo has been appropriated to designate, is philological Bedlamism. If baptizo had the secondary meaning of pour, it could not effect the mode in the Christian rite, and could not come into competition with the primary meaning in the ordinance of baptism. In that case baptizo would have two meanings like the primitive word bapto. One meaning to immerse, the other to pour. Words cannot be appropriated in two senses, neither can one sense run into the other. Baptizo cannot designate both modes, (immerse and pour) for pour can never mean to immerse or immerse to pour in one and the same situation. It is only because Christians want to cover the institutions of men with the name of the Christian institution, that they torture language with the utmost violence.

The idea that pouring, sprinkling, immersing and wetting, can all be Christian baptism or baptism of any kind, is so self-evidently absurd, that was there not a fatal position to be held or defended by this recourse, these observations and criticisms would never need reiteration. The self-evident laws of appropriation forever settle this baptism of the Holy Ghost as being pouring. This pouring of the Spirit is usually brought forward to establish the idea, that the word is generic, or rather a word that designates no mode and includes all modes.

Now if I have not demolished this position, it is because people are too blind to see what is self-evident. Immersion is acknowledged by all to be the primary meaning of "baptizo," and that is certainly specific, and the only mode that ever can constitute baptism. If we had the words "baptizo" and "baptisma" translated into English, the absurdity of more than one mode in the ordinance would be so apparent that a mere child could discover it. But this thing of anglicizing is what keeps the matter more involved in difficulty, or makes it harder to understand by the unlearned. If immersion was the translation, and any preacher was to ask how, do you want to be immersed, by sprinkling, pouring, or dipping? he would at once be considered insane and a proper subject for the asylum, in place of a minister of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. And to ask how a person wants to be baptized, is exactly the same as to ask, how do you want to be immersed? A correct translation is what is needed, and King James' translation given over to those, for whom it was expressly made. All those who have any respect for the institution of Christ, should no longer keep in use a translation that was expressly made to obscure the institution of Christ, and sanction the institution of kings and popes.

It has been said by some, that the word, "baptizo," is a generic word, and that the idea of mode is not contained in the meaning of the word. To this I have already replied, that immersion was the universally admitted primary meaning, and that that meaning was specific, and designated mode and nothing but mode, and that meaning must have been appropriated to the rite, unless the word has a secondary meaning, and that secondary meaning is what some call a generic meaning, and designates no mode at all. The ablest advocates of that theory, are President Beecher and Archbishop Whately. Alexander Carson has so completely demolished this position, that the controversy ought to be forever settled on that point. Mr. Beecher and Whately took the position that the meaning of the word in the ordinance of baptism was purification. To this Mr. Carson replies, why was not Katharismos used in place of baptisma? And I ask, how can Katharismos be the secondary meaning of baptizo? If baptizo had twenty meanings, Katharismos could never be one of them. Baptizo could not be appropriated to the rite in the sense of purification, for the reason already alleged, i. e., that no word could be appropriated in the sense of any other appropriated word. Baptizo being appropriated in the sense of immersion, can never be appropriated in the sense of purification. This is an axiom as clear as the light of the sun, and every man possessed with common sense, and an honest heart, will sustain it. Nothing but the confidence of ignorance under the influence of bias, will ever assail it. When Christ said, "go teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father," &c., He did not, could not mean, that they should go and purify them, unless the doctrine of baptismal regeneration be true, which every body knows to be false. Is the soul regenerated by baptism? Is it not "by faith, that it might be by grace?"

The salvation of Christ is not a universal salvation by virtue of his atonement. It is a salvation through faith, that it might be by grace. "He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved; he that believeth not shall be damned." The ordinance of baptism sustains the same relationship to the government of Christ, as the oath of allegiance to the government of the United States. Some may take the oath, and yet have a treacherous heart; but if the heart unites in the oath, he is in reality a good citizen. So men may be baptized and not be Christians. Repentance is a pre-requisite, or an essential condition of the heart, and then baptism seals you by the Spirit of grace, which is an essential act for a union with Christ, or to reunite us to his government or kingdom. But if we allow one faith to substitute, and begin to rebel against his divine government, you crucify the Lord afresh and put him to an open shame. The very laws that were enacted in the council chambers of heaven for your deliverance from sin and death are renewed, and you are under the same condemnation in a much greater degree.

Faith is the essential element in our salvation. It is only as Christ has appointed baptism as a condition of pardon, that it has anything to do with our salvation.

A person might come from some other country, and live in strict accordance with all the laws of this government, yet not be a recognized citizen. He would still be an alien, until he was united by the oath of allegiance. Just so with baptism. People may go to church, live a strictly moral life, but unless they are baptized, they are not members of his kingdom on earth. Baptism is the initiating ceremony, and has no more to do with the cleansing of the heart of a hypocrite or any one else, than it has with washing away the filth of the flesh. Baptism saves the soul, just as any condition of pardon saves a citizen from the penalties of the laws of the United States.

(From Our Special Correspondent.)

NUMBER IX.

THE Antietam Valley Branch of the Mont Alto R. R., to this place is now completed to a point within three miles of town, namely, The Nursery. On the 10th inst., the second passenger train passed over the road, consisting of eleven cars. We took seats at Quincy, and ere long every seat was occupied and many persons standing. This reminded us of

THE JOURNEY OF LIFE.

There are many travelers and all going the same way—onward. Some occupy pleasant accommodations and enjoy the journey. Some are standing idle, and grow tired waiting for opportunities. All are variously consuming or improving the time, and this will suggest to my dear reader many profitable reflections. One idea I will set forth; the greatest advantage on the journey of life is the comfort of "pure and undefiled religion." No one can expect to make the journey safely without it, and indeed it is the true life insurance on this unique journey. Seek it, all ye who would make a safe passage. Take it with you, ye who would reach Heaven's blessed portal.

We reached our county-seat in due time, and were soon among the scenes of business. While in a certain store, we were somewhat startled to hear the proprietor say to one of the clerks,

"Go out and bring a policeman." A few minutes later the proprietor was at the door, and with mildness, but firmness, said to a man who had just gone out.

"I want you to leave, and don't come in here again."

We wondered, but was far from being inquisitive enough to ask the cause. Presently it was reported that the man "swore" an oath. We had observed the man as he walked away apparently feeling ashamed. Would that profanity everywhere would receive proper rebuke. How it jars one's soul to hear God's name taken in vain!

A sight worth mentioning was the fountain of water in Center Square. Here is seen sparkling waters forced thirty feet into the air, issuing from molten swans and beasts, and falling in beautiful sprays into the circular reservoir below. An iron chain-fence surrounds the Fountain, and inside of this, is erected a bronze figure representing a national soldier in full uniform, and resting his hands upon a musket. This figure is life-size, and very life-like. The waters of the Fountain are furnished from the Water-works.

But I remembered that the Psalmist says that with God is

THE FOUNTAIN OF LIFE.

O that we could admire the source and fountain of eternal life! Then should we seek its refreshing waters, and be gladdened by its sprays of love and mercy, and peace, and grace, and joy, and hope, and faith, and ten thousand more delights. Its waters are pure. It is free to all. It flows forever and ever. They that seek its marvelous waters now, shall enjoy its glorious, life-giving, soul-delighting efficacy in the "world to come." Seek it ye who thirst and die. Come to the Fountain of Living Waters. Drink and live evermore.

Being one who regards good books as very good companions, I dropped into a book-store. After my purchases were made, as usual it was my pleasure to glance over the titles of the immense rows of books. What can you think I saw that impressed me more than others? One that tells the happy condition of every true disciple of Jesus—one that is fraught with intense interest. Here it is:

"WAITING FOR A CROWN."

It came upon me like a flood of supernatural light! It made me think instantaneously of the "crown of glory" that Paul speaks of. But now our portion is the "cross" that Jesus spoke of. Let us remember it well. And "yet a little while," we shall endure the sorrows, and conflicts, and trials of life, and then the "crown" will crown the "cross." Blessed consummation indeed! Shall we not feel new vigor for the battles of our Lord? Can we feel satisfied with the poor service we render to Him who has called us into His Vineyard? O let us bestir our efforts! It is not enough to believe and start on the race for eternal ends. True, we are waiting for a crown, but we must do the Master's work until He comes to crown us. Let us work and wait. Let us "Be not conformed to the world" in anything that is inconsistent with our holy religion, so that every day we may appear to Christ and to men that we are indeed "waiting for a crown."

October 13th. Our meeting to-day was at a place not far south of the Mason and Dixon Line on the famous South Mountain. This was a romantic ride for a Sunday morning. A three hours buggy ride through mountainous territory brought us to the place appointed for the worship of God—Mount Pleasant. People here have kind hearts and precious souls, and are just as worthy of the grace of God, as people who live in the rich, proud, fertile valleys beyond the mountains. Hymn 140 opened the service. After prayer the minister took his text from the last three verses of Matt. 11. It was shown that Christ is our salvation, and the following points were elucidated:

1. That all have need to "come"
2. What they should come for.
3. How all must come.

Another made appropriate remarks, and offered the 34th hymn. After prayer and singing again, the meeting was dismissed, and we trust that the good impressions made will prove salvation to not a few. These meetings are not held in vain. There is "good ground" here, and the grace of God is fertilizing it for a harvest of souls. If one soul is saved, that soul will be worth more than all the world. This is God's value put on the souls of men, and every opportunity should be embraced to gather them into the fold.

Yours in sacred bonds,

Sorrow and Joy—The Make-up of Life—Crumbs of Comfort to the Bereft—Sympathy Needed—Our Love-feast—A Choice—Happy Seasons—Lord's Day.

(From our Special Correspondent.)

NUMBER IV.

WE do not enter far upon the stream of time, until we are made to acknowledge that joy is interchanged with sorrow. The poor have their trials and perplexities, and the rich are not free. Many start out in life with buoyant hopes and enjoy a large amount of happiness; but the bitter cup of sorrow is awaiting them, and to avoid it they know not how. They suffer from loss of property, become poor, are thrown out upon the cold charities of the world, and a life of misery and suffering, is their's. Others suffer from the loss of health, and life becomes a burden. Here a family is stricken down with disease, and suffering is the result. There death has done its work, and sorrow has pierced the souls of the survivors. Thus, amidst all our joy, we have mingled with it our seasons of sorrow. This truth is ever before us, and to-day it was more vividly brought before the mind as we neared the sanctuary, to worship with the brethren. We were informed that the funeral sermon of brother and sister Boyer's child, was to be delivered the present day. We met a full house, and a solemn occasion it was. Words of comfort were offered to the bereft, and of warning to the sinner. The discourse was based upon the language of Job. "The Lord gave, and the Lord taketh away; blessed be the name of the Lord," from the following principal deductions

1. The gifts of God.
2. The resignation of the righteous.

Death has, to some, measurably lost its power by its frequent occurrence. Therefore they are not prepared to render the sympathy that is so much needed on occasions of this kind. But when death crosses our own threshold, it is then we feel its power, and our sympathies are awakened. "For me to live is Christ, but to die is gain," says inspiration. But the fond parents looking upon their departed child, almost refuse to be comforted and become reconciled to this dispensation of God's providence. It is hard to see any "gain" in the death of their innocent sleeper. Their hopes are destroyed, and their plans laid waste. But the gain is obtained and enjoyed by the departed, and little Mary is now enjoying the bliss that angels share around the throne of God. In the hour of sad bereavement, when the heart is made tender, it is then, our aid, our sympathy is needed. O who could not feel his brother's care upon such occasions. Who would not, like Jesus, go with weeping friends to the grave and weep with those who weep. Oh yes, my brother or sister, mourning as you must, Jesus is with you at the grave and is pouring the oil of consolation in your heart. Trust in him, hope in him, believe on him, obey him, and when you shall lay your body down and pass the Jordan, a crown of glory shall be yours. In the eve we went to church, and at five o'clock the services, commemorating the sufferings and death of our blessed Master commenced. The ministerial aid was, brother J. P. Ebersole, J. Grabill, I. J. Rosenberger, D. M. Workman and Isaac Deardorff were present, and the doctrine ably defended, brother Workman officiating in the exercises. It was a season of rejoicing, and we felt it was good to be there.

Next day we re-assembled at nine A. M., to add a new member to our home ministerial force. Our members were largely represented, and under the instructions of divine inspiration, they proceeded to elect the one of their choice. After an elapse of one hour, our elder came into the large assembly and solemnly instructed the minister elected in regard to the duties that devolved upon him, after which the announcement was made that our youthful brother W. C. Teeter was the chosen vessel. Then followed the installation. Many tears were shed and hearts that yearned with sympathy, congratulated this humble twain in their new sphere into which the Lord called them. May God bless them in their labor of love, and when they lay their armor down and enter the elysian fields above, may they bring many sheaves with them.

Brother Workman remained with us a few days and talked to us about the old, old story of the cross, and each time we met, we felt it was good to be there. He held forth the truths of the Bible in such living pictures, that all could see them, and we think many good impressions were made.

Next day was Lord's day and our labor was considerably divided. Brother Workman remained at the old church to hold services there. Brother E. Bosserman and brother I. Deardorff of Indiana, went to meet an appointment near Findlay, Ohio. Myself and brother W. C. Teeter, met our appointment at the Disciple church. Our services were opened by the regular order of singing and prayer. Then the 68th Psalm was read, and the first clause of the first used as a motto for the remarks of the hour, "Oh God, my God, early will I seek thee." The subject was, seeking God, discoursed from the following deductions.

1. The character of God.
2. The privilege of a good man.
3. The resolution of a good man.

The purity and holiness of God was considered, and to call him "my God" truthfully in every sense, implies sonship. Then to become a son, implies yielding implicit obedience to God and his commands, becoming a joint heir with the Lord Jesus Christ, hence we are his son and God our Father. None have a legal privilege to call God "my God," other than that of creation and preservation, save those who have tasted his redeeming grace, then the necessity of being redeemed from the curse of sin. The resolutions, "early will I seek thee," is what all should make and spend their whole life in the service of God. Seeking God does not imply that He is lost, but that man is lost. The idea of being lost, was held up and an appeal to all to become reconciled to God. Brother W. C. Teeter selected a closing song of praise, the 694th hymn.

In the evening we all resorted to the old church and congratulating each other over the joyous labors in the Master's cause, we surrounded the congregational altar to unite in the solemn worship of Almighty God. Brother Workman delivered his closing sermon to a large audience. Subject the mortality of man. Based on 1 Peter 1:24. "All flesh is as grass." Truly it was good to be there. Thus the labors closed, and we hope soon to see results in our labors, that of sinners coming home to God. What a pleasure to labor for one who is abundantly able to reward us, and to give us a crown to wear, and songs of praise to sing in the joys of immortality, in the eternal world.

COVERING THE HEAD.

BY G. R. CONANT.

Please give us your views on the covering spoken of by Paul in 1 Cor. 11; also tell us who, or what that head is, the woman dishonors by praying or prophesying with her head uncovered, both the married and unmarried? By doing so you may do a good work for some of our members out here in the far West and oblige
DAVID BROWER.

It is generally agreed by all denominations, that a covering was worn by women in time of worship in the apostolic age. The men uncovered their heads. The same custom has been handed down through all ages in practice. The trouble is, they, the popular churches, have conformed to the world, in the various styles and fashions in their covering. The world has many kinds of coverings, when they enter a place of divine worship. The denominations are following the same plan, making a confusion of styles. We are informed by Scripture, that God is a God of order, not of confusion. We are not to be conformed to the world. For these reasons the church should have one system, which all should adopt, if it does not lead in a channel that will cause us to disobey Scripture. If the people would adopt the Bible doctrine, there would be no variations in church rule and government; for it reads the same every-where. The style of covering in the days of Paul was perhaps a little different from that now in use, yet they wore a covering. 1 Cor. 11 chapter, refers to a uniformity of covering. It seems by Paul's language, that some walked disorderly, and that he was setting the church right in these matters. "Tell us who or what that head is?"

We read that God created man and placed him in the garden to dress and keep it. He also brought the animals to Adam and he named them. Man or Adam, was made ruler and governor over all God had made. Next to Adam, God created woman, but she took the lead independent of Adam, and followed the teaching of Satan instead of God. After transgressing, she still acted as leader, and Adam was led into transgression. She found that God did as He said. And had she continued a helpmeet instead of a teacher or leader, by example, there would have been a difference. Paul speaks of women as helps in the church, not as deacons, elders or bishops. The position of women is to be helpmeets, not rulers and governors. She can prophesy, &c., giving all the aid to man as her head, as it says in 1 Cor. 11: 3. God is the head of Christ, Christ is the head of man, man is the head of woman. The Scriptures teach us that Christ came to do the will of His Father, not His own. The Father then was His teacher. God chose His Son to come into the world to preach the Gospel to the poor, give life to the dead, doing nothing that He had not received of His Father.

Our Lord and Master chose from among men, twelve apostles; they were teachers and leaders, Christ being their head. The apostles, who were men, took the position allotted them by Christ as teachers and leaders, holding the position in one sense, that Christ held. Christ sent them; they sent others, who were authorized by the word of God, to hold certain positions, such as deacons, elders, or bishops as well as to preach the Gospel to every nation. Women never received this commission at any age, from the days of Adam till the present. In this sense, if a man keeps his head covered, he dishonors his head, that is, Christ as his teacher and leader. The woman uncovering her head, dishonors her head, that is, man as a ruler and teacher. It makes no difference whether she is married or unmarried; when she uncovers her head, she takes the position of deacon, bishop, or ruler, no longer recognizing man, who was sent by Christ, as being her head or leader. We all should remember that woman was created for a helpmeet. As such she can greatly benefit man in spiritual as well as in temporal things.

SOME QUERIES ANSWERED.

BY J. K. HOFFER.

Will some one please give an explanation of Romans 4: 4, 5?
JOHN H. STAIGER

Please explain Rev. 20: 13, 14, and give us an insight into them.
J. M. RIDENOUR.

Will some one please give information concerning 1 John 3: 8, 9, 10?
W. H. MILLER.

WORKS AND FAITH.

A FEW thoughts concerning Rom. 4: 4, 5. The apostle evidently here refers to works done with a view to reward, or merit. They who have learned that these words of the Lord are true, "Without me ye can do nothing," do not work thus; but they rather say, after doing all they can, "We are unprofitable servants." That "faith, if it has not works, is dead," is not only said by the apostle James, but Paul intimates the same in saying, "Though I have all faith, * * and have not charity, I am nothing;" for there can be no charity without works. "By works was faith made perfect," says James. The Christian's works are works of faith; and without faith they cannot be done. The worldling cannot love his enemies, and do them good, and pray for them.

DEATH AND HELL.

The hell mentioned in Rev. 20: 13, 14, cannot be the "lake of fire," or it could not have been cast into that lake. The Lord says the kingdom of God, which is heaven, is within man; of course only when he is born of God. Evidently in the same way is hell in the wicked; and this seems to be the hell here referred to. The death here mentioned is no doubt that to which God referred in saying, "I have set before you life and death." Deut. 30: 19. This death and hell have to give up the dead to judgment. Seeing that these are not natural or material things, is it not proper to infer that the sea mentioned in connection with them should also be spiritually applied or discerned? The drowning of Pharaoh and his host in the sea, when they tried to follow the Israelites to the other side, with the selfish object of bringing them back into bondage, evidently applies to the regenerating life of man; so that those whom Pharaoh and his host represent, seem to be the dead which the sea gave up.

BORN OF GOD—CANNOT SIN.

In regard to 1 John 3: 8, 9, 10, this may be said: If "it is God which worketh in you both to will and to do," (Phil. 2: 13), those born of God are so born both in will and action; and "what is born of God doth not commit sin." The will so born can therefore not will sin; and the person who has such a will cannot willingly commit sin. But Paul says, "For the good that I would, I do not; but the evil which I would not, that I do;" adding, "It is no more I that do it, but sin that dwelleth in me." To remove this sin, is therefore the work of your life; and this God must do through our will; for He must enable us to do as well as to will.

BE READY.

BY WM. MILLER.

"Be ye therefore ready, for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh."—Matt. 24: 44.

THIS is a very worthy and earnest appeal to men to be on their guard. There certainly is need of such warning, for how many there are who are not on guard. I have just been thinking how many professors of religion there are who do not keep the Savior's commands. They say that some of His commands, those they most dislike to obey, are non-essential, that He only wanted His disciples to do them, that they were not intended for us to obey, and that those who do obey them are a silly, ignorant and superstitious people.

Some of the would-be Christians even go so far as to set the very minute and hour that the Master shall come. Art thou, O man, a greater prophet than Christ who said, "But of that day knoweth no man, no not even the angels of heaven, neither the Son, but the Father." Does man know the time when Christ shall come, when Christ says that He does not? It would be much better for those figuring as to when Christ shall come and judgment to take place, to prepare for it—be ready when it does come, to hear the welcome plaudit, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." O! what a joyful time it will be. Then we shall meet all the dear ones gone before. There we can strike glad hands with the redeemed and walk with them forevermore upon the golden streets of the New Jerusalem, where there will be no more parting, no more sighing, or shedding of tears.

"Therefore be ye also ready, for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh."

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

BY A. E. ESSENWACHAOR.

Will some brother give us an article on the following: "He that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he?"
H. H. MEYERS.

Please explain 2nd Thess. 2: 9. It reads thus: "Even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders."
M. C. CZIGANS.

JOHN was greatest in authority, in that he was sent to prepare the way before the Lord, and that he introduced the first principles of the Gospel. 2. He was greatest in point of privilege, in that he came in the twilight, at the break of day, and was permitted to see the Son of God in the flesh, whom prophets and kings desired to see, but died without the sight; yet John did not live to see Christ's triumphant reign over sin, death, hell and the grave. Having spoiled principalities and powers, made show of them openly, triumphing over them in it. Col. 2: 15, he did not live to see the kingdom of heaven come with power as it was on the day of Pentecost. He preached, "The kingdom of heaven is at hand"—proclaimed its near approach, yet he was not in it, as it was not established until Christ led off in complete victory over all His foes, ascended through the trackless air, was hailed amid shouts of acclamations: "Lift up your heads, O ye gates, and be ye lifted up ye everlasting doors, and the King of Glory shall come in," Psalm 24: 7, —was inaugurated King of kings, and Lord of lords—ascended the throne, and shall reign till all His foes are made His footstool, and sent the Holy Spirit to His praying people on earth to establish His reign of grace in their hearts—throw open the gates of Gospel grace to all nations under heaven, declaring the great expiatory sacrifice and free salvation through the blood of the atonement. Therefore the least in this kingdom is greater in point of privilege than John the Baptist was in his day.

After the working of Satan; is by his aid, and like him deceitful, crafty, and wicked. Lying wonders; pretending to work miracles when they do not, and the pretense is a lie designed to delude the ignorant. Satan has had much to do in the rise and progress of popery, and now has much to do in sustaining it, by wars and bloodshed, persecution and cruelty, deceit and falsehood, and by those pretended miracles and lying wonders by which multitudes, who receive not the truth in the love of it, are deceived to their destruction.

TREES THAT GROW SHIRTS.

HUMBOLDT says that he saw, on the slope of the Cerra Drida, shirt-trees fifty feet high. The Indians cut off cylindrical pieces two feet in diameter, from which they peel the red and fibrous bark, without making any longitudinal incision. This bark affords them a sort of garment which resembles a sack of very coarse texture, and without a seam. The upper opening serves to admit the head, and two lateral holes are cut for the arms. The natives wear these shirts of Marina in the rainy season; they have the form of the ponchos and mantos of cotton which are so common in New Grenada, at Quito, and in Peru. As in this climate the riches and beneficence of nature are regarded as the primary causes of the indolence of the inhabitants, the missionaries do not fail to say, in showing the shirts of Marina, "In the forests of Orinoko, garments are found ready made upon the trees."—Selected.

CORRESPONDENCE.

From Annie Ncher.

WE can feel quite at home among the members of our heavenly Father's family.—The most pleasant of all is to go to meeting, where the saints meet to worship that God who rules above. Here several hundred members mingle their voices in praise to our great Redeemer. How pleasant it is to be there; it reminds us of that heavenly world above, where there is nothing but love. I was at the Communion meeting in the Donald's Creek church, Ohio. It was the largest I ever attended. Over three hundred members communed. How pleasant it is to see large numbers of our heavenly Father's children together, washing each other's feet, giving each other the salutation of the holy kiss, then altogether partake of the emblems of the broken body and shed blood of our Savior. Who, ever done so much for us, as did our Savior? O, what love he did show for us! O, how often do we feel to weep when we think of what He has done for us poor creatures! then to think how ungrateful we often are, how often He is crucified afresh and put to open shame! Oh Jesus, that name so sweet, how can it be He is treated so ill. He is deserving all the love we can have for any one. Let us love Him with a pure heart, love Him with a love that will cause us to do all He has commanded us. My dear young brethren and sisters in the far West, I hope you will all try, with me, to live faithful until death; that if we never meet on earth again, we may be permitted to walk the golden streets of the New Jerusalem, with Jesus and the angels, there to dwell forever.

I HAVE thought for some time to write a few lines for our worthy paper, which is indeed a welcome messenger to me; and I heard quite a number of its readers speak of it as such. Some say, "I would by no means be without it; I only wish it could be sent into many more families, for I know it is calculated to do much good, not only in the brotherhood, but among others, who know but little of the doctrine as taught by our Brethren,—the Word of God." Some say, "I am not able to take it, or I would not be without it." I am glad to see that our editors have made a move to get it before such, at a low figure. Brethren will we help them to carry out their wishes? Yes I for one say, enclosed please find one dollar, to pay for one copy for the poor. Our Savior says, "For ye have the poor with you always and wherever ye will, ye may do them good. Oh how much good we can do them by being the means of sending them our paper so full of the Spirit of Christ, with its instructions, exhortations, admonitions, and also the prosperity of the church! My dear brethren and sisters, when we give for the benefit of the poor, we are very sure that we are lending to the Lord, of whom he says, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my Brethren, ye did it unto me." Much money is spent for that which satisfieth not, but for this the reward is certain. I hope that many will respond and say Amen, and act accordingly.

I THINK it a duty to write a few lines to the many readers of the BRETHREN AT WORK, calling special attention to the ministers who attended our late Annual Meeting; and preached to the people before and during the session; and did not shun to declare the whole counsel of God. Wish to say right here, many members of different churches, say the Brethren, who preached in Manchester, Laketon and other places in the vicinity, left many good and lasting impressions on the minds of the people, as a result, we occasionally baptize some of the number. They farther express themselves thus, "Why don't you have the Brethren to preach more frequently in Manchester? as they do think much good might be accomplished in that direction." Now Brethren, one and all, you have the minds of many citizens of the country and the town. What gives rise to the above, is this; our ministers of the North Manchester district never have held meetings in town. Therefore we pray you to call with us, and teach all nations, etc.

Baptized two on the 13th inst. Our love-feast came off at the appointed time, the 15th, two miles West of Manchester, in the room used for baggage, during the session of our conference. Had all things common and in order; and as a general occurrence, largely attended.—Ministerial aid was very strong and active, with Bro. R. H. Miller at the head. All went off pleasant, good feeling, and the best of order throughout the meeting. On the evening of the 16th, brother Robert Millet preached in Manchester, and on the 17th at 10 A. M. and 7 P. M. at our meeting-house. On the morning of the 18th he left for Goshen, expecting to meet Bro. J. H. Moore, from Luark, on business. So ended the labors of the brethren, who labored so earnestly while with us. Setting forth the Truth and nothing but the Truth as it is in Christ Jesus,—inviting sinners to accept the Gospel and join in with the children of God. I do verily believe the brethren left many lasting impression on the minds of those, who, like the prodigal, have wandered away. But oh! may they speedily return and join in with the children of God. Now Brethren, it is left for some of you to do a great work in this part.—The Macedonian cry goes out from here, "Brethren come and help us." Souls are starving here for manna from on high. Brethren I need not tell you that the unworthy writer is not a minister, for you can readily see by the poorly composed article, that I am only a weak lay member, but will do all I can for the good of souls.

To all the members who met with us at our late A. M., if we never more meet on earth, I hope to meet you all on the sunny banks of deliverance, where parting is no more. Remember your unworthy brother and Zion in your prayers.

THE Beech Grove Sunday-school re-organized Sunday Oct. 20th, with one hundred and forty-three scholars enrolled. The officers consist of Superintendent, Assistant Superintendent, Secretary, Treasurer, Chorister, two Librarians and ten teachers. All these officers and teachers are brethren and sisters, and earnest workers in the Sunday-school cause.

The large additions to the churches in N. E. Ohio within the last four or five years, and the inclination of Brethren to flock together at Love-feasts and other occasions, suggests the idea of enlarging our meeting-houses or providing some substitute for them on special occasions. At several of the Love-feasts held this Fall, many could not get to the table.—What is to be done with the multitude? (mixed or otherwise) seems to be the all-prevailing question just now from our Annual councils down to an ordinary Love-feast or Sunday-school convention. The ecclesiastic system with a restriction upon non-delegates to prevent their attendance, would perhaps settle the question for Annual Meetings; providing it were not unscriptural and impracticable; but how about Love-feasts? Exclude the lady from them also? Perhaps the example in the upper chamber at Jerusalem would be a sufficient argument for those who would want it so, but undoubtedly that number is small, compared with those who would not consent to it at all. So the only remedy that is practicable now is, to tear down and build large,—not our barns—but our meeting-houses. And might there not be a profitable distribution of ministerial forces? The Macedonian cry still comes from the borders, and falls on the deaf ears of large congregations, who can master together twenty-one ministers on Love-feast occasions. Is it not a pity that there is so much material rusting, when it would be so much better to wear it out in useful work? Who is to be held responsible for the dollars that are rusting? or hoarded up in broad acres that are only half filled and consequently half wasted? of the ministerial talent tied up in rumpkins, or consumed by petty jealousies? Who is locking the wheels of progress? Who is hindering the missionary work? The Sunday-school work? The educational projects? Is it I? Is it I?—Let each one ask himself, "Am I willing to shoulder the responsibility?"

Successful Meetings.

WE are often asked why are some meetings more successful than others,—meetings that are held by the same ministers, whose preaching is what might be called, uniform?—That there is a cause, is self-evident. Now for a few of the many reasons. One reason why some are not successful is, lack of unity. In many congregations there are divisions and jealousies among the officials; strifes who shall be the greatest,—not who shall be the least, and as a consequence each will have his particular friend, who can see in their especial favor no "fault at all," but can see in those others all short-comings, and more too. And forgetting that charity which "thinketh no evil," they drop words of criticism in the hearing of their families and of others. Often in the presence of the world, expressions adverse to the brother's ability as a speaker,—or impeaching his conduct as a Christian, are made, and hence the brother finds his influence to do good, much impeded, and he don't know the reason—does not know that his character is being sapped by those that he thought were his best friends.—And this being true in one case, is therefore true in the other, and hence there are whisperings, envy and strife in the church, yet not a rupture. They meet with the token of love in the public assembly and appear to be in peace and union, yet away down deep in their hearts there is something like to the gall of bitterness; and then as a result, that warm-hearted love, that Christ enjoyed and his disciples, is driven out of the heart and a Laodicean coldness ensues,—the poor preacher feels it,—yea knows there is something wrong, and wonders where. Echo answers, "where?" Cannot find it, yet realizes that like the worm that destroyed Jonah's gourd, the harmony of the church is being destroyed, and while in that condition without purging out the old heaven of malice and wickedness. There is a call for a series of meetings;—the preacher comes with his heart surcharged with the love of God, and the zeal of the Lord's cause almost consuming him.—The meeting begins and perhaps not more than a dozen will sing, but set and listen to what the preacher has to say. "Well what do you think of him?" "Well, I am disappointed in him; I thought he would not preach quite so loud; I thought he was a greater expounder than he is; he works too hard, or he don't visit among the members as much as he ought."—And I may add to that, sometimes there might, by a mere possibility, be a little jealousy, "If I can't, he shan't." The meeting fails to accomplish what was expected, and the "why" never is known. A meeting to succeed must have a hearty co-operation of all the brethren and sisters, earnest love, zealous work, and God blesses the effort in the converting of souls.

Dear Brethren:—

OUR Communion commenced on the evening of the 11th of October, and continued until Saturday night. The Lord favored us with delightful weather during the meeting. There was a large number of brethren and sisters present at the table of the Lord, thereby showing forth their faith in the sufferings and death of our best Redeemer. Also, a vast number of spectators, who honored us with their presence, and favored us with their attention, as much as could be expected; many of them were unable to obtain seats, or even a place in which to stand inside of the house. We were glad to see so many present; and our hearts would have rejoiced greatly, could we have seen them all gathered into the fold of Christ. We can truly say that we enjoyed a feast of love, and a refreshing from the presence of the Lord; and we feel encouraged to press our way onward toward the mark for the prize of our high calling of God, which is in Christ Jesus. On Saturday, one precious soul was made to feel the need of a Savior's love, and was initiated by baptism into the church militant here below. We believe that there were others, who like King Agrippa of old, were almost persuaded to become Christians; but who like one of whom we read, have decided to wait for a more convenient season. O, may they remember that "procrastination is the thief of time," that "to-day is the day of salvation." "To-day the Savior calls"; then harden not your hearts any longer, but open the door and invite the Savior in; for His locks are already wet with the cold dews of the morning. He stands knocking at your door; He has often knocked before. O, forsake the paths of sin and ask your loving Savior in! He says, "If any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me." Rev. 3: 20.

Dear Brethren:—

OUR Love-feast of the 12th inst., is among the things of the past, and will long be remembered, for we think it was a Love-feast indeed. The weather being favorable, there was a large attendance and good order. The Brethren thought it necessary to have some help in the ministry, and held a choice. The lot fell on our dear brethren, Joseph Light and John Young, the latter quite a young brother. Brethren pray for him, for he will have many temptations to meet with and what a cross he has to bear. Brethren and sisters, help them to bear the cross, we can do a great deal toward helping our ministering brethren, if we are as watchful and prayerful as we should be. Then let us be encouraged for we will not have long to work. We have had a very good Sunday-school this Summer. We think it has done much good.

OUR glorious meeting closed to-day after a continuation of two weeks, and brother Wilt and companion returned to their home. Brother J. W. Smouse of Indiana, opened the meeting on Saturday evening, Oct. 5th. Bro. Wilt came to his assistance on Sunday following. Services each evening. On Tuesday and Wednesday, 8th and 9th inst. we had morning services. Love-feast on Thursday afternoon and evening. Brother Smouse left on Friday 11th, to return to a field of labor in the Manor congregation, Indiana Co., Pa. Brother Wilt labored faithfully along, with but little assistance, when he was obliged to close his labors to-day. Seven precious souls were added to the fold, two on Friday, four yesterday and one to-day. There were others left doubting. Hope the spirit of God will so abundantly work upon their hearts, that they may come soon. I feel as if it were strange not to sit beneath the sound of our beloved brother's voice again this evening. It was a loathsome task to see him go away. God bless his labors of love, and may his labors yet be crowned by a glorious ingathering of those precious souls, who are yet halting between two opinions.

Dear Brethren:—

WE, the Brethren of the Franklin church, Decatur Co., Iowa, had our Love-feast on the 10th of October. As there has not been any church news given from this part of the Lord's vineyard, I will try and write a few for the encouragement of the true followers of our Lord. There have been, during the year, that is now drawing to a close, some ten or twelve precious souls made to come out from the world and to put on Christ. Among that number were two, who were not over thirteen years of age, while there were some who were in the decline of life. O, how it makes the soul glad, to see the young and the aged come to Christ, to be taught by Him. Glad to see the young, for it is said, "Serve the Lord in the days of thy youth, that the days may be long in the land, which the Lord thy God hath given thee." Glad to see the old, for they may not have long to serve Him, who hath done so much for them. We hope and pray that those who have started in the cause of the Lord, may hold out to the end. May the Lord be with you all.

C. A. KEIGLEY.

From Morrill, Kansas.

BROTHER E. Cober and myself just returned from the Soldier Creek church, in Jackson Co., Kansas. While there, we had a series of meetings; and two were added by baptism.

The object of this article, is to give a brief history of the church in Jackson Co., and solicit some kind ministering brother to locate with them, as they have no minister and need one very much. The church is in my care, and I have about fifty miles to go and my visits are often made at long intervals, owing to other engagements, absorbing much of my time. The church is evidently prosperous and alive to the good work. Brother John Fadely and wife were the first persons baptized in the church alluded to, by Bro. Michael Forney, who was then traveling through this State.—This occurred sometime in 1874, I think. The doctrine of the Brethren was then a new thing in that locality, and from that time until this, the cause has been gradually strengthened and the church now numbers about fifty members; and two deacons. The prospect is, that this church will eventually grow strong in number.

So many of the Brethren are seeking homes in Kansas, and I would most earnestly solicit some ministering brother or brethren, (the more the better) to give Jackson Co., and the church there, some earnest thought. The climate is good and soil also good, only about fifty miles West of the Missouri river, on direct R. R. communication with Leavenworth. The distance about fifty miles. Holton is the county-seat and quite a good town. The Brethren on Soldier Creek have about eight or ten miles to the R. R. at Circleville, and about seventeen miles to the Central Branch Union Pacific R. R., at a point called Wetmore. Land is also cheap, and plenty of raw prairie. The country is as well timbered as any in Kansas, as far as my observation goes. The prairie abounds in plenty of good living streams and the water is of the best kind. For full particulars, call on or address some of the members, among whom I would name, Samuel Stephenson, John Fidelity and Thomas Macklin. Their address is, James' Crossing, Jackson Co., Kansas.

JONATHAN LIGHTY.

From Jesse Calvert.

I CLOSED my meeting in Johnstown last night, with three additions by baptism, and a few more applicants, and a general stir. We occupied the Baptist church. It holds about seven hundred persons. The house was full to overflowing the most of the time, and several evenings three or four hundred had to go away, as they could not even get near the door. The house was hired by the Brethren. The Baptists will occupy it Sunday. Some more would have come but their parents would not allow them. I never met in all my travels, stronger opposition than I did here; all seemed determined to fight the Brethren, right or wrong. One Campbellite got out of fix, because I quoted Campbell in the debate, and said I was dishonest, because Campbell excepted Tertullian. Some said I was crazy, others that I was a fool and so on, but very many said, "The truth was preached and we cannot evade it."—I hope God will give them no rest until they come and acknowledge the truth. Thanks to the brethren and sisters and friends for their kindness. May the good Lord bless them all. I stopped with brother M. W. Keim. I never enjoyed as pleasant a home in any of my travels. Mrs. Keim belongs to the Methodist fraternity, but she acted the part of a sister; and her children were just as kind as they could be. God bless them, that they may all see and do His Will, that we may all meet in heaven.

Johnstown, Pa., Oct. 28th, 1878.

From Martin Co., Ind.

I HAVE just finished reading S. H. Bashor's new book, and can with all my heart, recommend it to the public. "It seems to be the true metal, having the right ring." It gives no uncertain sound, but speaks out in such a plain manner, that even the youth of our land can comprehend its meaning. I pray God to bless this noble little work to the good and cause of Christianity. Special attention is called to its three last pages. While reading them, these Scriptures came to my mind:—"Judgment also will I lay to the line, and righteousness to the plummet." He has, by using wisely and fearlessly the blessed Words of eternal Truth together with his convincing arguments, indeed and in truth bowed to the line and let all the rubbish together with human laws and conflicting and erring crowds, fall on the outside of the church into the world where they belong. God speed the time when men will cease adding and subtracting from his holy and perfect law of liberty, which is able to save the soul. "Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on Him, if you continue in my Word, then are ye my disciples indeed; ye shall know the Truth, and the Truth shall make you free." I do not understand that they were made free, in order to have a human law yoked upon them; and the followers of the Lord, that are bound down by a human law or have to submit to anything else in church government aside from the law of Christ, are not free, but are strangers to that freedom, which God intended they should enjoy. I am glad to believe that God knew just what He was doing, when He sent to us His message of love and mercy, and that the Bible contains the whole will of God to man, and is perfect and sufficient to guide him on to purity and peace. Why don't these wise men who are so much concerned about making laws to govern the people of God, come out and show the children of men wherein the law of God is deficient?—The reason is, none of them are able to do this neither are they willing to undertake it. I feel to thank and praise God's great name, that I believe with all my soul, mind and strength, that He has given to poor, weak, erring and suffering humanity, a perfect law to govern them and so complete in all its parts as not to be susceptible of any improvements by mortal and uninspired men. As assertions are worth nothing without the proof, I will now ask you to hear one of the apostles of the Lamb, our great teacher,—the Lord Jesus Christ: "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." If the above Scriptures mean anything at all, it forever puts a sad end to all human church laws, with all reasonable and God fearing men. In fact what more can a man of God need or a humble follower of the Lord ask, than to be thoroughly furnished unto all good works? And what an act of rebellion it is against the God of heaven, for any man or set of men to try to improve the law of the Lord, which He has sealed with His own dear precious blood; and has said, "I am the way, the truth and the life!"

GLEANINGS.

From S. S. Cresswell.—We have a series of meetings going on just now, (October 19th) in the Manor church, by brother Smouse. The meeting is a very good one so far. There have been two accessions by baptism, but there are good prospects for more, and still plenty of room. May the Lord bless brother Smouse, and give him many souls for his hire, is the prayer of your correspondent.

Ouburg, Pa.

From Abilene, Kansas.—It seems, that Brethren are passing through Abilene, without knowing there is a church organization here.—I would inform all, there is a church organization here, known as the Abilene church, and we would, at all times, be pleased to see the Brethren stop off; all will be gladly received. Any information gladly given, by the undersigned, if addressed by letter; and those wishing to stop off, will be met at the train, if notified before hand. The church is in a prosperous condition, and in love and union, still trying to follow the landmarks. Address as above.

SIMON A. SETTER.

From John Metzger.—Will say to you, Bro. Joseph Henricks and myself started for Crawford Co., Ill., to tend the Brethren's Communion, on the 15th. Truly we had a good feast. Two were added to the church by baptism. Had meeting on the 16th. Met again in the afternoon to preach brother Hyer's funeral. That church seems to feel the loss of brother Hyer very much. Yesterday was our regular meeting. One Lutheran woman sixty-nine years old, volunteered for the Lord, came forward and was baptized. Would love to see many more come. Hope the time is not far off, that we will see more coming, to make angels rejoice.

Cerro Gordo, Ill.

From Jacob Heistand.—The Lord is mighty, and that to save. Another soul has been made willing to forsake sin and turn in with the overtures of mercy. To-day a fine young man united with the church by baptism. May the good Lord give him grace to hold out faithful to the end, and be a shining light to the church, is my prayer.

Little York, Ohio.

From G. Spraug.—Our Communion was held on the 15th of October, at Bare's. It was not very largely attended, yet the interest seemed to be good. We hope the words that were spoken by the brethren may have the desired effect, and sink deep into honest and well prepared hearts, and yield abundantly to the brethren and sisters. It was indeed a feast of love, and one long to be remembered.

Concerning A. M. 1879.—In Timville Creek church, met in council from the different districts to make arrangements for the Annual Meeting of 1879, and this meeting unanimously adopted the plan of 1866 and 1877; and desire to carry said plan out. Hope all will respect the above decisions, that the burden be less and business more satisfactory to all, in the fear of the Lord. Still further notice will be given in due time.

From Jonah S. Lakue.—Your much beloved paper, the BRETHERN AT WORK, has greeted us regularly (with two exceptions) ever since I subscribed for it, and it is one of the most welcome visitors, that has ever entered my house since being so isolated from all the preaching of the Brethren; and I can not go to hear men preach, who mix up the commandments of our Savior, and the doctrines of men. But when I read your paper, it appears as though the Spirit of God came with it.

Sherman, Texas.

From Alfred, Douglas Co., Kan.—Brethren who wish to travel through the Southern part of Kansas, as far as Independence, by way of Kansas City and Ottawa, will do well to stop off and give us a call, as we live in as nice a portion of the State as I have seen. I have traveled considerably through the State, and as to society, it is very good; good schools; good land and good water, and plenty of raw land, at low figures. People can do far better here than farther West. Coal is very cheap. My coal has cost me five dollars since the first of last January, and I use no other fuel. It is a good fruit and cattle country. Any one with small or large means can do well here. Plenty of Brethren here, that one need not fear to come and be alone. If you wish to go West by Lawrence, Kansas, you can stop off and find Brethren in town every day.

FREDERICK SHERRY.

From C. M. S.—My neighbor and I had a conversation on a few passages of Scripture; and as we did not agree, I asked him if he would read the BRETHERN AT WORK. He said he would. I send his name and one dollar, to pay for it for one year, according to your proposition under BUSINESS NOTICES. I have been reading the paper only a few months. I think it is a valuable religious paper. I read the letters from the brethren and sisters, living in different parts of the country, with great interest. How it encourages us, to learn of precious souls returning from their wicked ways, "to walk in newness of life."

Noth Hampton, Ohio.

From Iowa.—As an item of Church News, I will say that there are a few Brethren living in Lucas Co., among whom are deacons but no minister. Those Brethren have held their membership with the Brethren of Decatur Co., but as the distance is considerable between the two bodies, thus rendering church business somewhat inconvenient, it was thought prudent to hold a council meeting with the Brethren in Lucas Co., and have them to transact their own local affairs. A visit was then made, and the members all, as far as seen, expressed themselves in the same faith; and willing to live to the same obligations that they took on themselves, when they united with the church. And as no complaints were entered, the business of the meeting passed off pleasantly. The first thing that was done, was to restore an excommunicated one to fellowship. The suggestion of standing, as a church, and transacting business independently, was then put before the house. A unanimous voice was heard in favor. A brother was then chosen to take the oversight; and the church to be called Lucas County church; to hold quarterly council meetings; to visit the church, and adjust difficulties, (should there be any) before appointing Communion, a treasurer and a clerk were appointed; and they also agreed to hold, at least, monthly meetings, to be held on the fourth Sunday in each month. These members very much need the aid of ministers. Who will come over into this Macedonia and help? Some live near Derby, one in Chariton, and some five miles West of Chariton. They can be found by calling on or addressing Adam Younker, at Derby, Paul or J. H. Dale, Chariton. J. H. SWIHART.

From Arkansas.—I feel thankful for the BRETHERN AT WORK, which is being sent to me. I find by reading it, that there are still some who are willing to do the commands of the Lord. I think of joining the church. Often have I been tempted to give up the race, but by God's grace, I shall go on until I find the pearl of great price. Oh how I would appreciate a meeting with the followers of Christ! I see by the paper, that there are Brethren in Southern Kansas, and I hope to visit some of them next Spring, and desire to settle near them if I can. My poor health will not permit me to move this Fall. Pray for me.

D. S. CLARK.

Fayetteville, Oct. 25th.

From F. P. Lohr.—I attended a number of Communion meetings lately in Northern Ind. and Southern Michigan, which were truly feasts of love. It seemed as if a special blessing was imparted. Several of those members that had stood for years outside in the cold, have come forward and seemed to have inhaled new life. Northern Indiana truly went through a sifting, but they have gained much by it, as it always is the case, if we look up to Him, who knows best what is good for his children.

Our sister's sickness was brief, but her sufferings beggar description. She leaves a husband and five children, one a babe not a day old, to mourn their loss. In her death our dear brother has lost an inestimable companion, and the children a most devoted mother. But her loss will also be severely felt in the church, of which she was a member, and in her neighborhood, where she was highly respected.—Our dear sister's whole-souled hospitality will also be kindly remembered by many who have partaken of her bounty.

STEIN AND RAY DEBATE.

Prop. 1st—The Brethren (or Tunker) Churches Possess Bible Characteristics entitling them to be regarded as Churches of Jesus Christ.

J. W. STEIN affirms.

D. B. RAY denies.

D. B. RAY'S THIRD ARGUMENT.

It must be remembered that our second negative, showing that the Tunker churches are not churches of Jesus Christ, is "because they were [originally] built by uninspired men." This is conceded by Mr. J. H. Moore, their editor, who speaking of the Tunker churches, says:

"The origin and history of this reformatory movement dates from the year 1708, having taken its rise in Germany about that time," &c.

He further, of Mr. Mack and his companions, says: "They all were baptized by true immersion, organized themselves into a church, and chose Alexander Mack for their minister." See our first reply. The "origin" of the Tunker churches was "in Germany" (not Jerusalem) in 1708, nearly 1700 years too late to possess the Bible origin. Mr. Mack was their first preacher. Mr. Stein had as well say that Moses was a Tunker preacher, as to say that Christ and the apostles were Tunkers! We restate our

Negative argument third: "The Tunker churches are not churches of Jesus Christ, because they hold the blasphemous heresy of baptismal salvation." Mr. Stein has surrendered this point. He fought manfully, but was compelled to yield before the Jerusalem blade. In his last he says: "We baptize those who are regenerated through the word. Baptism is not regeneration, but the washing of regeneration" (Italics ours). As all the "regenerate" are "born anew," and are children of God, their sins are pardoned. Mr. Stein admits that none are to be baptized except "those who are regenerated." All who have been "regenerated" are "born anew," and are children of God. As all the children of God are pardoned, therefore the pardon of sins precedes baptism; because regeneration precedes baptism. He dare not take the position, that "those who are regenerated" are still unpardoned children of the devil. My friend has surrendered the Tunker doctrine that baptism and regeneration are the same. The great Tunker author (condensed by Mr. Stein), Peter Nead in his Theological Writings, page 248, says: "Thus we have baptism and regeneration, two names for one act!" Read it again: The Tunkers have baptism and regeneration, two names for one act! So when a Tunker preacher baptizes, he performs the "act" of "regeneration"! This is as blasphemous as priestly absolution. Again, this Tunker Mr. Nead says: "The pre-requisites to regeneration are faith and repentance; and the act of regeneration, baptism." Theological Works, p. 252. The same author, on page 283, says:

"The ark prefigured our salvation by baptism. All that were without the ark perished, and all within the ark were saved. So all that are ingrafted into Christ by baptism are saved, while all the unbelieving and unbaptized part of the world shall be damned. Baptism saved the soul from sin—the ark saved the bodies of Noah and his family from death."

Such is the miserable heresy of the Tunker churches. They hold that all the "unbaptized part of the world shall be damned!"

Peter did say, "The like figure whereunto even baptism, doth also now save us (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ." 1 Pet. 3: 21. It must be observed that Peter makes baptism "the answer of a good conscience;" not to make a good conscience. As the conscience is good before baptism, sin is pardoned before baptism. As the salvation in the ark was a "figure" of salvation by the resurrection of Christ; so the salvation in baptism is "the like figure" of the same salvation in Christ, the ark of our salvation. Through faith we have the real salvation and in baptism we have "the like figure" of salvation. This explains the commission by Mark: "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." 16: 16. Every one that believes in Christ has "eternal life"—the real salvation; and when he is baptized he has "the like figure"—the likeness—or picture—of salvation. Paul says: "Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death?" Rom. 6: 3. But he explains in the fifth verse thus: "For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection. So it appears that the baptism is not literally into the death of Christ, but into "the likeness of his death." The burial is the likeness or picture of death. When we have died to sin ("He that is dead is freed from sin." Rom. 6: 7) then we should be "buried with him in baptism," and arise to walk in newness of life. As we must be dead to, or "freed from sin," before baptism, therefore baptism cannot be a condition of pardon. Again, after one really believes into Jesus Christ (puta ton pisteuonta eis auton, Acts 10: 43), he should be baptized into Jesus Christ to put on Christ in public profession. Paul said: "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." Gal. 3: 26, 27.

All the people of God are "the children of God by faith in Jesus Christ;" and as many "as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." Those who have believed into Christ spiritually and are "the children of God by faith," are to put on Christ, in public profession, by being "baptized into Christ." The natural birth must occur before the child is clothed, so the spiritual birth must occur before the child of God is clothed—puts on Christ in baptism. Perhaps it may be well to notice a few questions of my friend. 1. We spoke of "repentance and faith as moral duties, while baptism is a positive command." Mr. S. asks, "Is baptism immoral? Are repentance and faith negative commands?" For his information, we quote that, "Moral duties arise out of the nature of the case itself, prior to external command; positive duties do not arise out of the nature of the case, but from external command." Butler's Analogy. 2. Mr. S. asks us to tell what "born of water" (John 3: 5), and his other proof texts which do not mention baptism, "mean if they do not refer to baptism?" We answer, that those that mention "water," washing and cleansing refer to internal spiritual cleansing. David said: "Wash me, and I shall be whiter than snow." Did he wish to be baptized? 3. My friend asks for the proof that Paul was filled with the Holy Spirit before baptism. We refer him to Acts 9: 17, where the reception of sight and being filled with the "Holy Ghost" came prior to baptism. Besides this, Paul was a "chosen vessel" of God, before his baptism. Acts 9: 15. Was he one of "God's elect" before his sins were pardoned? 4. He asks if baptismal salvation takes the power from Christ to pardon sins, "does preaching in order to salvation take from God all power to save?" &c.

We answer that there is a vast difference between preaching Christ as the only "name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved," and claiming that we possess the power to regenerate sinners ourselves. The man who dares to stand between the sinner and the Savior, claiming the keys of heaven and hell, with power to regenerate sinners and let them go to heaven, or refuse to baptize them and thus send them to hell, is as truly an anti-Christ as the tyrant of Rome. 5. Mr. S. thinks that "through His name," Acts 10: 43, means baptism! Peter said to the lame man at the beautiful gate of the temple, "in the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, rise up and walk." Does "through faith in his name" here mean baptism? 6. Peter, preaching to Cornelius and his friends, Acts 10: 43, said: "To him [Christ] give all the prophets witness that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins. While Peter yet spake these words, the Holy Ghost fell on all them which heard the word," and they were made to "speak with tongues, and magnify God," and after this they were baptized in "water." Yet in the face of all the prophets and the testimony of the Holy Spirit, Mr. Stein contends that these persons were "yet to be saved"! Though the miraculous gift of the Holy Spirit was only to be given to the servants and handmaids of God, yet Mr. S. contends that these persons were still the children of the devil, unpardoned till baptism! 7. We introduce 1 Jno. 5: 1, "Whosoever believeth that Jesus is the Christ is born of God."

But Mr. S. asks, "Do not wicked men and devils believe that Jesus is the Christ?" They do not believe with the heart. Acts 8: 37. Rom. 10: 10. They did not have the faith which worketh by love, and purifies the heart. Gal. 5: 6. Acts 15: 9. There is no contradiction here. Once more, we have the infallible proof that the Tunker doctrine of baptismal salvation is untrue, because John says: "Beloved let us love one another, for love is of God, and every one that loveth, is born of God, and knoweth God." 1 John 4: 7. Mark the fact: "Every one that loveth, is born of God and knoweth God." None should be baptized till they love God. But "every one that loveth, is born of God and knoweth God." Therefore baptism is not a condition of the new birth. If we have not noticed every dodge and quibble of my friend, we have fully met all his arguments for baptismal salvation. But he really surrendered when he admitted that none are to be baptized, except "those who are regenerated."

Mr. Stein states that: "My second reason why the Brethren possess this characteristic is, that they baptize in each of the names, Father, Son and Holy Spirit." This is what the Tunkers erroneously call, "trine immersion." My friend starts out by finding fault with the great commission as given by Jesus Christ. Of it he says: "Some words in this formula necessary to its complete grammatical construction, have been omitted by what grammarians call 'ellipses,'" etc. This daring act brings us to our Negative Argument Fourth: The Tunker churches are not churches of Christ, because they have added to the words of our Lord's great commission. Jesus said, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit." This does not suit the Tunkers, so they are not afraid to add, where Jesus omitted, till the Tunker commission reads as filled out by Mr. Moore and my friend thus: "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and baptizing them into the name of the Son, and baptizing them into the name of the Holy Ghost." Safe Ground by J. H. Moore, p. 18. The Tunkers deliberately add ten words to the commission, in order that the "grammatical construction" may suit the Tunker doctrine.

The commission cannot be parsed to suit the Tunker doctrine without adding to God's word. We could not afford to do this for a kingdom. The Holy Spirit says: "For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, if any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book." Rev. 22: 18.—The Tunkers have added to the words of Jesus Christ; therefore they are not churches of Christ.

The grand doctrine of the commission requires, that disciples must be baptized in the ONE NAME of the triune God. Name here does not refer to title, such as Father, Son or Holy Spirit, but to the three-one God, who is known as the Elohim of the Hebrew. It is admitted by the leading Tunkers themselves, that baptism is a monument of the burial and resurrection of Jesus Christ. Therefore, to be consistent, they must hold that Jesus was buried and arose from the dead three times. But as there was but one burial and resurrection of Christ, there must be but one burial in baptism, and one rising up to walk in newness of life.

WAR.

The father of Louis Napoleon thus writes in one of his letters: "I have been as enthusiastic and joyful as any one after a victory, but I confess even the sight of a field of battle has not only struck me with horror, but even turned me sick; but now that I am advanced in life I cannot understand any more than I could at fifteen years, how beings who call themselves reasonable, and who have so much foresight, can employ this short existence, not in loving and aiding each other, and in passing through it as gently as possible, but, on the contrary, in endeavoring to destroy each other, as if time did not do this with sufficient rapidity. What I thought at fifteen years, I still think: war, which society draws upon itself, is but an organized barbarism, and an inheritance of the savage state, however disguised or ornamented."

"I DID STEAL THAT SHEEP."

A MEMBER of a certain church charged another with stealing a sheep. The culprit denied the charge. Both were men of influence. The church was divided. The council was called and Mr. Brown was there. There were no witnesses except us to character. It was the word of one man against another. One was a slanderer, or the other a thief. Elder Brown suggested a most extraordinary measure to elicit the facts in the case. He called the two men to the rostrum before the pulpit, and directed the man who made the charge to engage in prayer—and requested the council and audience to look him in the face while praying. He made an earnest prayer. He appealed to the Lord as one who knew the charge was true. Then the other was called on to follow. He made a regular prayer for the church, the pastor, etc., and then said: "As touching this matter of the sheep, O Lord—ah-hum, as touching—touching—this—ah"—when he sprang to his feet, and exclaimed, "Brethren, I cannot pray. I did steal that sheep!" So the matter was settled.—Ec.

BROTHER John Metzger, of Cerro Gordo, I., is laboring with the church in Henderson Co., Ky., he having been appointed by Southern Ill., to take charge of the church at that place. Though the brother is old and nearly worn out, yet he does more real missionary work than many who are much younger. He waits for no plans, devising ways for raising money, but goes right to work.

THE RESURRECTION.

BY JAS. V. HECKLER.

"I AM the resurrection and the life;"
 Saith He who was, and is, and is to come.
 He is the first grand resurrection. He
 The first and last, and He the Tree of Life.
 By Him, if any man will live, he may Attain of that life-giving, quick'ning power Which burst the doors of death, and paved the way

To heaven—by eating of the bread of life.
 His Word is meat and drink to hungry souls.
 There is embryo life in every soul,
 A spirit emanant from God, a germ,
 A spark of Deity, enshrined within
 A tegument of clay; and as the soul
 Feeds on the bread of heaven, it gathers strength
 To live a life of godliness on earth—
 To soar aloft betimes on angel's wing
 Ascending into light ineffable,
 To view the wonders of redemption. There
 The longing soul oft feels imparadised
 In Eden's blissful bowers above, where stands
 The Tree of Life beside the crystal stream
 That flows fast by the throne of God. Meanwhile,

The earnest soul obedient to His Word,
 Has gained the resurrection and the life,
 Through living faith, made practical by works,
 Because that soul has Jesus Christ who is
 The resurrection and the life in Him.
 The saint now lives and walks with God, with God

Holds daily intercourse, but waits his time
 Of dissolution, when to leave this house,
 Of clay, to lay his garments by. He knows
 That when this earthly house shall be dissolved,
 He has a house, a temple built of God,
 Made incorruptible and pure in heaven;
 A home wherein his soul shall dwell forever.
 Nor may it be as some profess, that God
 Would gather every particle of dust

Belonging to the house dissolved, to build
 A temple new, wherein He would enshrine
 The soul. Nor yet as most of others say,
 That from the earth shall rise those bodies dead
 Brought forth to life at the archangel's voice,
 To meet the great assize. Mark the context;
 Think ye, those bodies dead that have dissolved
 To earth again, and some for ages past,
 Shall reappear out of the earth of earth?
 The chaff surrounding wheat will never grow;
 The grain, the grain, the seed will grow, and that
 Is natural, but this is spiritual,
 And very much involved in mystery.
 Nay, ye believe the saints are all consigned
 To Paradise, to take their chambers there;
 And whether wakeful or asleep in Christ,
 The time they sojourn there, they will dwell in light

Unspendable, and rest in blissful peace,
 Until the trumpet of God shall sound through all
 The universe, and the archangel's voice
 Be heard; when God shall bring with Him all those

Who were in Paradise—with bodies bright,
 And raiment shining, like the Son of Man—
 To gather His elect yet on the earth,
 Who then will suddenly be changed to meet
 Their Savior in the air. But those who died
 In sin, went down into the dark abodes,
 Assimilated unto Satan's image,
 Where they must dwell in darkness and despair,
 Until their time shall come, with bodies dark
 Yet incorruptible, to reappear
 On earth; whether wakeful or asleep
 In death, the time they sojourn there, they dwell

In darkness and delusions of the great
 Arch-enemy, to meet their fate with him.

PHILOLOGICAL DISSERTATION OF
 THE WORD BAPTISM.

BY LEWIS D. HEMMER.

NUMBER V.

WE have already shown that purification cannot be the secondary meaning of baptizo, from the fact that it could not be appropriated to the ordinance of baptism in that sense; and that is inconsistent with the command of Christ, as well as the nature of the rite, as purification is not effected by baptism, but by faith and repentance, which leads you into the observance of all the commandments, commencing with baptism and ending with the anointing. Some say baptism is only an emblem of purification, then purification is an emblem of purification! Strange philology!!! If the meaning of the word is purification, and that meaning appropriated to the rite, then it could not mean purification in reality, and also in emblem. Would not immersion be as good an emblem of purification as sprinkling and pouring?

 While I admit that baptism is an emblem of purification, I deny that purification is the secondary or any other meaning of "baptizo." The main emblem in the rite, is an emblem of death, burial and resurrection, and our union with him in that emblem. But before we say anything about that, I want to say something more about this purification. Every person that knows anything about the laws and philosophy of language, knows that the phraseology of the baptismal formula is elliptical and that when the elipsis is supplied, the formula reads, "Go teach all nations,
 baptize them into the name of the Father, and baptize them into the name of the Son, and baptize them into the name of the Holy Ghost."

We will now substitute purity for baptism, and see how it will read. "Go teach all nations, purifying them into the name of the Father and purifying them into the name of the Son, and purifying them into the name of the Holy Ghost." Three purifications would be rather superfluous in the rite, when the heart had just been purified by faith and repentance. In every light that the subject can be viewed, purify would be disqualified.

We will now look at Rom. 6: 3, 4, 5.
 "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ, were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life;" "for if we have been planted in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection." Here we have the emblem of death, burial and resurrection, and our union with Christ. Nothing but immersion exhibits the emblem. Sprinkling destroys the emblem.

I have now said enough to convince any man that wants to know the truth, that purification is not baptism, and that nothing but immersion is baptism.
 I want to say, that although the heart is purified by faith and repentance, yet that purification does not save us.
 Christ's kingdom has no end, and all children are born into this kingdom, and remain into his kingdom until they are led into the kingdom of Satan, by his fabulous pleasures. That kingdom being in rebellion against the kingdom of Christ, and by entering that kingdom, we become rebels, and when like the prodigal son, we repent of our conduct, and weep our eyes away, unless we return to the Father's house, our faith and repentance will amount to nothing; we will die in the foreign land. Baptism reunites us to Christ. It was the prerogative of the Son of God to save the thief upon the cross without baptism, but he has left no promise of salvation on those terms to those who have a privilege to obey his commands. There are many points that I might consider, but I have now said much more than I intended when I started out, and have shown by the infallible laws of appropriation, that it is impossible for anything else than immersion to be baptism. The fabulous ships who are sailing under the Christian name, may offer you many additional advantages over the old Ship of Zion, and may carry you on flowery beds of ease, with your union, with the vast characters on earth, in your secret organizations; but whether the Master will be able to recognize his own Ship and condemn the rest as impostors, every one may judge for himself, it is not for me to say, but there is some room for doubt at least. It is wisdom to make sure work, and not take any chances. I will now bring my dissertation to a close, by calling on all Christians that respect the institutions of Christ to spread a correct English translation, instead of King James' translation.

Any person acquainted with the rules of King James, can easily discover the motive of the King. I will here append some of the rules with some remarks.

1. The ordinary Bible, read in the church, commonly called the bishop's Bible, to be followed and as little altered as the original will permit." The word "baptism" was one of the words that Catholicism opposed in Wickliffe's translations. Wickliffe translated from vulgate Latin, and translated the word baptizo by the word wash. The reigning clergy suppressed this translation, put Wickliffe to death, and destroyed all the books they could find of his translation. Now take King James' instructions and you can see at a glance, why it was that the word baptizo, was not translated into English. The object was to keep the people in ignorance, and get them to accept the traditions of the church for the ordinances of Christ.
 Baptizo, could be translated into English, although the meaning is exactly the same as baptizo. But baptizo was the word appropriated to the ordinance and the meaning must be concealed as much as possible. Rain and chen can be translated into English, but poor baptizo must be anglicized. Strange indeed!
 that the word that concerns the disciples of Jesus so much should be translated in the best possible manner to mystify instead of enlighten the weakest intellect.

I hope that all good-meaning people will no longer use this deceptive translation. Take rule first, three and four, and they are only decoys for the other rules. Wishing all my readers a full knowledge of this ordinance of their Lord and Master, I close this dissertation.

ECHOES FROM THE EAST.

A Love-feast—Good Preaching—Examining Ourselves—The Trio of Ordinances—Singing Hymns—Interesting Sermons—The Sick Visited—Our Evening Sermon—Our Lord's Day Services.

From Our Special Correspondent.

NUMBER X.

ON the morning of the 17th of Oct.
 it was our sacred privilege to have a release from our embroils, incident to business life. At an early hour we directed our thoughts and efforts to wards a place where the disciples of Jesus should commune with Him and with each other. A blustering South west wind made the dusty turnpike very im-pleasant, and reminded us very sensibly of the experiences of a true Christian profession.

A few hour's buggy-ride brought us to the enterprising county town of Hagerstown, Md., about eleven miles from our town. Here we found a hospitable home where we found kind hearts and kindred spirits in the Lord. We soon proceeded unto the house of God in company. It was a considerable drive, and when we came to the meeting—
 Broad Fording—the services were somewhat advanced. We were made to rejoice in spirit when we heard the well-known voice of brother Moses Miller preaching

THE NAME OF JESUS.

drawn from the words of the prophet Isaiah: "Behold! I have given him for a Witness to the people, a Leader and a Commander to the people." We should not do justice to re-produce the many good thoughts expressed. The prophet's language is very suggestive, and is a most charming theme for every one of us who have received Him as the True Witness from the court of the Upper Sanctuary, and who love to follow Him as our safe Leader and infallible commander. The congregation was held in deep interest, and we were made to feel the grace of God which bringeth salvation.

Brother Daniel Longenecker of Adams Co., Pa., gave testimony to the word preached, speaking of the trials that some must endure to follow Jesus as their Leader and obey Him as their Commander. He related an incident of a woman who was a seeker after the truth and finally made up her mind to obey Jesus. This became known to her husband, and he at once opposed her fiercely. When she left home to unite herself with the church, he threatened her that "the oven would be hot and she must go into it if she would go to be baptized." But she went to follow Jesus as her Leader. On her return he went out to meet her, and as she approached, her face shone with the smile of heaven, her heart was kindled with a Savior's love, and with extended arms she embraced her cruel husband speaking of her consolation in Christ.
 The "austere man" was moved, and he was reconciled. There is no use in opposing God. Nor will He suffer His children to be overcome when their treasures are hid up with Him. The night may be dark and threatening, but joy comes in the morning.

After an intermission the examination service was announced by singing. Bro.
 L. Pfantz read the chapter—I Cor. 11—and brother E. W. Stoner of Union Bridge, Md., opened the subject by saying, that if we had come together to examine one another we should find more than we were able to do. That is the idea. It must be an individual work.
 It is self-examination. One must not judge another as to fitness or motive.
 But if one is known to the church as being a party to unsettled difficulties or guilty of grave misdemeanor, or other public fault not repented of, then the church deals with her according to the Gospel order. The brother gave us many good words of caution and comfort, speaking also of the internal operation of the Spirit and of the Word.

Brother David Long, of the Manor church, followed with timely words to envious people and backbiters. He reminded us of how the Lord hates those who sow "discord among brethren." True discipleship tends to preserve the faith and bind together the children of God.
 "Let a man examine himself," and repent of all wrong, resolve to live right and "go and sin no more." If we would be followers of Jesus, we must embrace the entire doctrine of the church and live accordingly. After the usual exercise of prayer, there was another intermission.

THE THREE ORDINANCES

of the evening services—Feet-washing, Lord's Supper and the Communion—were attended with great solemnity. O what a privilege to sit down with the believers and have sweet fellowship at the Lord's table. How it lifts the soul above the transitory things of life, and makes us wish for that "other shore" where love is perfect and fellowship complete!

We spent the night at the home of our beloved brother, Christian Keefer, the elder, and at nine A. M., next morning had the pleasure of joining in the singing of hymns at the meeting-house again. This was an appropriate exercise. Some persons are very prone to talk of worldly things when serious and religious conversation should be engaged in. A half hour was spent very profitably, and then the services were opened in the regular manner.

Brother Daniel Longenecker spoke upon the words, "God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the things that are mighty." (We expect to give a synopsis of the sermon if our notes will serve us satisfactorily.) He showed how

I. God is wiser than men.

II. God brings strength out of weakness.

III. God wants men to have faith.

He was followed by brother Stoner with many good words, and dwelling with tenderness upon the parting thought. We were encouraged to be faithful and go on in every good work until the Master calls. The 452d hymn was sung and the meeting closed. After a repast and farewells, we came on our way homeward, calling at the home of sister Shank, the widow of the late elder John Shank near Greencastle. She is prostrated with consumption and under the constant care of our sister Koontz, a physician. May the Lord remember her affliction and make bright her hope of glory in that better world above. May sweet angels welcome her as she crosses the threshold.

Brother Longenecker came with us and preached in town. Text Rom. 8:1.

I. The Condemnation of sin.

II. Our Freedom in Christ.

III. Our Spiritual Walk.

Yesterday our meeting was at the Plain Hill appointment. After the usual opening, the fifth chapter of second Corinthians was read. A ministering brother spoke of the life and conversion of the author of the epistle, and then of

I. Our Earthly house.

II. Our Heavenly Mansion.

III. Our preparation for the change.

A brother bore testimony, and then our beloved elder made some appropriate remarks on our individual responsibility and the requisites for the inheritance of the "house not made with hands." He closed the meeting with the 452d hymn and prayer.

We spent the afternoon in the company of brethren talking mostly about the Word of God.

The text at the meeting in town to-night was 2 Cor. 5:19, 20.

Yours in hope of life eternal.

THE TRUE ORDER OF THE CHURCH OF GOD.

A Little Discussion on a "big" Subject.

A SERMON DELIVERED BY S. D. BASHOR.

THE theme of this discussion is the "church's best state." The proposition is, Are genuine revivals the best state of the church? or, are revivals admissible in the church at all, and do they promote the cause of Christ, or do they tend rather to the deterioration of religious health? We are aware that many intelligent and good-meaning people are divided upon this subject. Some who have attended interesting and well-conducted revivals, whose hearts are filled with the love of God, and are warm with the holy fire; who have gathered in, and are desiring to gather in, the blessed fruits of the gracious work, will unhesitatingly, and even with warmth exclaim: Revivals are the most glorious and best state of the church this side of heaven itself; and if all would engage in them, the millennium would soon be ushered in." Others, no doubt equally pious, and elevated to the cause of the Lord, will negative this proposition, and say, "we love to see the cause of Christ prosper, but for the judiciousness of revival work, we would have no objections to a well conducted and proper effort, but think that revivals, in general, are not the church's most glorious state; we think we can conceive of a state possible which would be much preferable."

A third class probably as honest, are opposed altogether to revival work, and to them even the name revival is obnoxious. We hold, that men of this class are ignorant in a measure of vital godliness and need to be awakened to a full knowledge of church work, and her important mission among men.

We shall then, first call attention to the mission of the church and the labors of the evangelists of Jesus Christ, how they worked and what they accomplished in laboring for the church. We hold that the grand design of the church is, the salvation of a lost world by the conversion and regeneration of souls. That this is her most glorious and sublime design, and should be constantly ardently pursued by her, is evident from the nature of the case, presented in the following reasons:

1. The world has apostatized from God, and unless reclaimed, will perish.
2. All men have sinned and are by nature, fallen, polluted and guilty; and must be converted and regenerated or eternally lost.
3. The church of Jesus Christ is the ground and pillar of the truth, and the salt of the earth. The church is the "light of the world," but let her light be obscured by evil formalities, shadows for substance, ceremonies and forms for vital purity, life and power, and her object is not accomplished, her glory becomes obscured, darkness covers the earth and souls are not saved.

4. The church is the body of Christ on earth, (Gal. 3:27), and unless a man is in Christ, he is not a new creature. The Lord said to Nicodemus, "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the Kingdom of God." John 3:3. Again, "without holiness, no man shall see the Lord." 1 Peter 1:16. Therefore the church is the instrument in the hands of God, to labor for, and effect the conversion and regeneration of the souls of men. If she does not thus labor, what good does she accomplish for the spiritual interests of men? None at all. She might as well be without existence. The apostle in 2 Cor. 5:20, says, "Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us; we pray you in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God. The work of the church is to preach the Gospel to every creature, or send her ministers to do so, with the assurance that "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, he that believeth not, shall be damned." Mark 16:16. This was the mission of the apostles and evangelists as they went about doing the work of the church. They went abroad everywhere and preached that men should repent. Hence we hear

Peter on Pentecost declare, from a heart full of heavenly fire and the Holy Ghost, to the thousands who inquired, "men and brethren, what shall we do?" "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins; and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost." Acts 2:37, 38. And what resulted? The conversion of three thousand in one day. This certainly proves the design of the church to be the conversion and regeneration of souls. We also hear Paul standing up before the philosophers and wise men of Athens, exclaim: "The time of this ignorance God winked at, but now commandeth all men everywhere to repent." Acts 17:30.

We might present other arguments drawn from the design and tendency of the sacraments of the church. Baptism teaches in the most forcible manner that men are sinners, vile, guilty and polluted, and therefore need to be washed, cleansed, and regenerated, before they can be full and accepted members of the body of Christ on earth, or fit to dwell above. The design of the washing of the saint's feet, is what? Is it not to teach humility of heart, and to be an outward sign of our love and obedience to our adorable Head? So with the Lord's Supper; it continually presents to the mind in its observance, the holy and unalloyed reunion of saints and angels above.

The tendency of the loaf and cup of Communion is to constantly, prominently and vividly present the great cardinal feature of the plan of salvation, the atonement of the blood of Christ along with the binding necessity of being sanctified by that blood. It always presents a Savior crucified, and tells us in a manner much more powerful and touching than language can possibly express it. "He was wounded for our transgression and bruised for our iniquities, the chastisement of our peace was upon him." So, too, the Holy Kiss or kiss of charity reminds us of that inward, higher and holier union displayed in the doctrine of Christ. All this proves that the design of the church is to convert, regenerate and sanctify the souls of lost humanity. For this cause Christ died, arose from the dead and established his church on earth, ascended to heaven, and intercedes at the right hand of God for us. But he cannot save men without they are converted and regenerated, hence this is the grand design of his mediatorial kingdom. We have dwelt somewhat largely upon this point, for upon it is founded our whole superstructure. We shall deduce some very important inferences from it.

FAITH AND HOLINESS.

BY S. J. WEAVER.

ARE you still willing to labor for an increase of faith and holiness in yourself and others, is a question generally asked by the visiting brethren, when making their annual visits to the members, and the answer is in the affirmative, "I am." This is a renewal of the vow or covenant we make with God and the church when we were led down into the stream and buried with Christ in baptism, to come forth and walk in newness of life and labor in the vineyard of the Lord,—when we promised to renounce Satan with all his pernicious ways and sinful pleasures of this world, and live faithful until death.

Whatsoever my hands findeth to do, I will do it with all my might. Labor implies that there is something to be done—something to be required at our hands, that there is a work before us, that when we have entered the church, and made the good confession, that we cannot sit down upon a stool of doing nothing, and say, "I have renounced my former ways—I have come to Jesus and have found rest." The Savior says, "Take my yoke upon you and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and you shall find rest to your souls." The final rest follows after our labors are ended and our work is done. The apostle Paul instructs the brethren at Philippi to work out their salvation with fear and trembling. The apostle John says, "I must work the works of him that sent me while it is day, for the night cometh wherein no man can work," thus showing that we have a work to do while in the day-time of life, for the night of death will soon overtake us, and then we cannot work, but must go to give an account of how we have spent our time here.

An increase of faith and holiness, implies that we need more faith,—stronger faith and still become more holy,—live closer to God's Word and become more and more weaned from the perishing things of this world, until we can present our bodies a living sacrifice unto the Lord, and our light shine as a city upon a hill, and our bodies be the temple of the Most High. But alas! how often do we see people make a profession of religion, vow to God that they will live faithful until death, and when visited, renew their vow year after year, and say they are of the same mind as when they were received into the church, and are still willing to labor with the church, and have a great desire for the cause of Christ, urge the brethren on to have more preaching, more Communion, and seem to be very zealous. They go to the table of the Lord, there eat and drink of the emblems of the broken body and shed blood of our Lord and Savior, in remembrance of his sufferings, trials and death. But as soon as the cross appears in their path, they are like the seed that fell amongst thorns and thistles, which sprang up and choked them, and they became unfruitful, and have suffered the thorns and thistles to choke them. When their seats are vacant at time of worship in the house of God, they begin to make excuses, as did those who were bidden at the feast. Luke 14:17, 18. One says, "It was too warm to-day;" another says, "it looks like rain, and I did not feel like going to meeting;" another says, "I was not feeling quite well and did not go." All forgetting that their Savior suffered till the sweat became as great drops of blood, was spit upon, was mocked was crowned with thorns, crucified,—suffered and died—all that they might live and enter into eternal rest.

Again ask them if they have worship in their families, they will tell you they can't pray. What! can't pray? can't talk to God? can't ask God's blessings in such a way that he can understand you? "Can't pray!" Still boasting that you are better than your neighbor, because you belong to a church that keeps all the commandments, and you don't pray! We are taught to "pray everywhere," and you say you can't do it! yet you are keeping all the commandments!

Dear brethren and sisters, let us wake from this dreary slumber, and shake off dull sloth, and trim our lamps that they may shine forth to light the way of sinners, to lead them from darkness unto eternal light.

MOORE & ESHELMAN,
Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL., NOVEMBER 14, 1878.

BROTHER N. S. Dale, wishes to know the address of John Hoover. Write to N. S. Dale, Cornell, Livingston Co., Ill.

AN earthquake occurred in Salvador, Central America, October 6, causing fearful loss of life and property. In Jucupa nearly every house was destroyed.

ON the fifth, brother Moore left Lanark for his old home near Urbana, Ill., where he will spend several days among the loved associates of former days.

WE desire a copy of No. 36, of Vol. 2. Any one having this number, and wishing to dispose of it, will please send it to us, and we will forward in place of it the CHILDREN AT WORK, six months.

BROTHER D. B. Gibson commenced a series of meetings the 9th inst., in Brown Co., Kan., and on the 19th will begin to labor with the brethren in Ray Co. Mo. He has been chosen Moderator in a public discussion between Elder W. C. Rogers, Reformer; and Mr. E. Manford, a Universalist. The debate is to take place the 26th and 27th inst., in Buchanan Co. Mo. He expects to reach Lanark by Dec. 3rd, in time for the special District Meeting.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

WE suggest to our agents the necessity of making an early canvass of their fields this year. None of our readers want to miss one number of the paper between the two volumes, therefore the necessity of sending the names in as soon as possible. If possible, we would like to have all the names in by Dec. 25, so that we can get our books in good shape before the commencement of next volume.

By having the names in early, we can tell how many to print of the first No. We do not like to keep too many back numbers in store without knowing for certain whether we are going to have calls for them. Those of our readers who do not want to miss any part of the debate should see to it that their names are in early.

SOWING THE SEED.

FROM the Minutes of the late District Meeting of Southern Mo., we glean as follows: "Will this D. M. appoint brethren to attend to calls for missionary labor within the bounds of the Southern District of Mo., and advise the churches to furnish the District Treasurer with means to assist in said work? Answer: We advise the churches to contribute for mission work something like fifty cents per member, per year, and forward the same to the District Treasurer." S. S. Mohler, and A. Hutchison were appointed to fill calls for preaching. Alternates, C. Harader, George Barnhart, and J. W. Stein. A committee was appointed to receive calls for mission work, to point out where the evangelists should labor, and appropriate means through District Treasurer to pay expenses of missionaries. They were also authorized to ascertain the propriety and possibility of opening a mission among the Indian nations in the Indian Territory. In connection with this, brother S. S. Mohler writes: "We have already the way opened by a Quaker, how to locate missionary work among the Indians of Indian Territory. Those proposed preaching for, are pretty well civilized, have good schools, and are within about twenty-two miles of the brethren in Newton Co., Mo."

This is the kind of work which should concern every district and congregation in the brotherhood. Souls are perishing for the want of that bread which cometh down from above; and as we have that bread to deal out, may we do it with all diligence!

CHURCH STEEPLES.

WHAT good common sense will not teach some would be-wise people in a mild way, the Lord sometimes has to descend to demonstrate by giving a practical lesson. This was done pretty forcibly during the late storm that so severely riddled Philadelphia. About forty church steeples were blown down, many of them falling on the roofs of the buildings, thus causing an immense amount of damage to property. To repair the damages done by these fallen steeples, will place a heavy burden on the church-goers of that place.

The better way would be to learn a lesson from the past. Build good, substantial, plain buildings, and then avoid the cost of steeples and other superfluities that the folly of mankind lead them into. It costs an immense amount of money to erect these steeples; their falling caused a still greater loss of property, and now to re-build them would be a greater folly still.

It is reported that there is a strong feeling for petitioning the legislature of Pennsylvania to pass a law forbidding the erection of steeples above church buildings. The feeling may be a good one on the part of the people, but is a sad comment on the condition of Christianity. When religion gets so corrupt, and so void of reason, that the law-makers of our land have to pass laws to keep churches within the bounds of reason, it is time these churches were returning their charter, and giving up their efforts at reform as a failure.

This extravagant practice our people have opposed from the beginning, and it will not be long till wise and prudent men and women will commend them for the good, sound judgment thus displayed. The idea that a steeple helps people to find the place of meeting, and thus increases the congregation, is folly. It is not so much what is on the outside as what is inside, that makes people come to meeting. A lofty steeple and costly ornamented church building, is pretty good proof of the amount of folly and extravagance in the hearts of those who waste their money for such unneeded display. Reason would indicate that they should spend their money for a better purpose.

GOOD CHANCE FOR THE RICH.

WE learn of some ministering brethren who have concluded to rent out their farms, retire from business, and devote their time to preaching. This is good, and certainly commendable to those who can afford it, but have we not some good-hearted private members, who would be willing to so arrange their business as to support the family of some poor minister while that poor minister devotes his entire time to preaching? There are plenty able ministers who are too poor to spend much of their time in the field, but if some among the laity would agree to do as much as some preachers are doing in no better circumstances, a vast amount of good might be accomplished. No one should excuse himself from the duty of assisting in the preaching of the Gospel because he is no preacher, for it is not right that preachers should bear the cross alone, and all the church go free. Every able-bodied soldier of the cross should put his shoulder to the wheel and push on the great and good work.

The man of property, who will appropriate some of his means to supporting a poor minister's family, while he devotes his time to gathering souls into the kingdom, will receive a greater reward than the man who invests his money in lands that neither he nor his children have any use for. What say you, gentle reader?

SPRINKLING INFANTS.

THE Pedobaptist Repository, a leading Pedobaptist paper, as well as many other Pedobaptist journals, complain that the number of children being evangelized, is growing less each year. Baptized is not just the term they use, but it expresses the thing done precisely. When John is running, it would be wrong to say, he is walking; it is not sticking to the fact. So in sprinkling and baptizing, sprinkling is one thing, baptizing is another. And the people are beginning to learn this, hence the decrease in the number of sprinkled or rantized children. Only one-fourth as many are now sprinkled as were sprinkled fifty years ago. This indicates a healthy increase towards the apostolic practice, immersion. Men are getting their eyes opened; they are investigating. They have sent for Jesus and his papers and are reading for themselves. And the more they read the divine Record, the less they believe in sprinkling for baptism. They are beginning to call things by their right names. Many can now see the Lord's Supper, instead of a little of something else before dinner. We rejoice in the growth of Truth. We rejoice that it is getting into men's hearts and making them look towards Jesus, the Christ. Looking that way they see nothing of infant sprinkling, nothing by which and upon which to predicate any faith in the matter. They are getting tired believing it because the preacher says so. They see that his saying so, does not make it so. They are seeking a better foundation, and they find the better thing in the Law of the Lord. May all eyes and hearts be turned that way. M. M. E.

THE "BELL CLAPPER."

IN every neighborhood* are those who flatter themselves that they are very righteous; and that others may think so too, the self-righteous will go to his neighbor and talk about the coldness of his brethren, the divisions in the church, how low piety has fallen, how such an one is conforming to the world. The one leading idea which the grumbler wishes you to understand, is, that he is above all these things—that he is so good, and so good in all things that he cannot possibly make a mistake. He will tell you of this man's failings, and that woman's shortcomings, how he wouldn't be caught going that way, and a score or two of such like thoughts. Now while he is doing all this, he does not, it seems, even try to think of the fact that backbiters do not belong to the kingdom of God, but that a man takes himself out of the kingdom whenever he joins the backbiter's and evil surmiser's party. Ask him to point to a single good which comes to any man by secret fault-finding and back-door grumbling, and he will fail surely. Urge him to show one real, genuine ray of love that flashes up to light the way of a weary pilgrim, by doing as he does, and he cannot. He will admit that such a course is mischievous, that it degrades the man who does it, and builds up no man for heaven and eternal life; but on this point he never was converted. Before he named the name of the Lord, he was a chronic grumbler, and not being converted in that matter, he finds himself in bad business; how to get him out of it, or rather the chronic disease out of him, is an important question. On a certain occasion, the Lord declared that a certain kind of evil spirit would not go out, save by fasting and prayer. This is perhaps the only way for a backbiter to get rid of his evil spirit. One thing is certain, a grumbler in any community will pull down more than one dozen can build up. It is an easy matter to tear down a building, but it requires labor and skill to put one up. Any one can pull a house to pieces, but it takes knowledge and labor to put it together.

Whenever I hear of a man going about finding fault because the church in which he worships does not suit him precisely, because some one does not walk and talk according to his chronic disposition, I am reminded of the story of the "Bell Clapper." Once there was a very nice bell. It was used upon every occasion. No other bell was suitable for any purpose, but the nice, bright bell. The clapper did its work well, and never wearied of its labor. But finally the bell was cracked, and then whenever any one came that way the clapper would complain. It was always telling of the defect of the bell, that it would no longer give out the nice clear ring. A great many people pined the clapper, and did what they could to sympathize with it, saying, "I pity the clapper." "The bell should do better." "It ought to be ashamed at its dull, heavy sound." At last Diogenes, who always despised such shams, came along and heard the clapper's complaint. He said: Before you make any more fuss, remember two things: First, You cracked it. Second, Nobody would know it was cracked if you did not tell them." The moral is clear, but those who need it most, will not likely see it at all. M. M. E.

A FEW OBSERVATIONS.

I HAVE frequently been impressed with the importance of offering a few remarks, regarding the influence of those who are connected with the papers and schools of the brotherhood, as well as the ministers and elders of our fraternity.

As a people, we claim to be non-conformed to the world—a separate and a distinct people, having the Bible characteristics entitling us to be regarded as the church of Jesus Christ. When our people first started out in their grand reformatory movement, to reproduce primitive Christianity, as it was taught and practiced by the apostles, they made a wholesale rejection of human creeds and uninspired confessions of faith, and agreed upon the Bible, and that alone, as their only infallible rule of faith and practice, their only divinely authorized bond of union. Upon this they stood and success crowned their efforts. They preached the Word and built up churches in many localities. From the East towards the West the star of God's eternal empire took its flight, till now, the flag of truth waves from the Atlantic in the East, to the Pacific in the West.

Our ancient Brethren displayed great caution in their search after truth. They had but one grand object in view, and that was serving God aright with all the heart. They set their eye upon the truth, with a determination to conform to its requirements. They had no creed gotten up by uninspired men, nor were they wedded to anything that had its origin this side of God's direct authority. Where the Bible spoke, they acted, and where it was silent, they had respect enough for the decisions of the supreme court of heaven, not to suppose that they knew better what ought to be in the law of the Lord than the Holy Ghost himself. Where the Bible was silent they were too.

One peculiar and Bible characteristic of this people, that came up out of the wilderness, was their non-conformity to the world in dress. They learned that they should not wear fine apparel or costly array, nor should they fashion themselves after the world, but should be a separate and distinct people, not in conversation and dealings only, but in their appearance also. They did not need to go to the minutes to prove that. The doctrine of non-conformity to the world was taught by the apostles before the minutes were ever thought of; and it makes no difference to me, so far as authority is concerned, whether it is in the Minutes or not; just so it is in the Bible. That is where I propose to get it from in this nineteenth century.

The welfare of the Brethren church largely depends on the perpetuity of this doctrine, though it has long since become unpopular, and has been rejected by the leading denominations of the day. Yet that should have nothing to do with God's authority in the matter. When we, as a people, reject God's Word on this subject, and thus forever erase that mark of distinction between us and the world, we will lose much of our power over sin, and virtually depart from the Gospel simplicity and order.

In an early day the Brethren agreed among themselves to retain the plain, simple order of dress then in use, and not change with the fashions. They did this that they might take the advantage of Satan's cunning ways, and thus overcome him in his attempts at getting them to depart from the Gospel simplicity. They knew that if they could succeed in maintaining this order among themselves, there would be no danger of them fashioning themselves after the foolish and changing forms of the world. Why did they adopt an order? Because they saw, by so doing that the Gospel simplicity in dress could be better maintained. Then this agreeing together to conform to an order of plainness, enabled them to sustain a bold front and a decided opposition to that strictly forbidden in the Gospel. Their bonding together gave them more strength and greater positiveness in the work thus undertaken.

It is to the credit of the church to say, that this order has been pretty generally maintained, though in some instances it has been departed from, much to the injury of the cause. Its perpetuity among us has had much to do with our present degree of plainness. The churches that have departed from this order are fast losing that simplicity of dress that should characterize all true congregations in Christ, and unless checked,

Our Bible Class.

"The Worth of Truth no Tongue Can Tell."

This department is designed for asking and answering Bible questions, and for the solution of Scriptural difficulties. All questions should be stated with candor, and answered with as much clearness as possible, in order to promote Bible Truth. Articles for this department, must be short and to the point.

Please explain Daniel 2: 44, 45. In the days of what kings? What does the word kingdom refer to, and what the stone? W. T. HAUBINO.

QUERIES ANSWERED.

Please tell me who that man was, Paul spoke of in 2 Cor. 12: 2, that was caught up to the third heaven. SAMUEL CRIST.

1. Please give your views on Luke 10: 4. "Carry neither purse, nor scrip, nor shoes; and salute no man by the way."

2. Also Matt. 23: 9: "And call no man your father upon the earth; for one is your father which is in heaven."

3. Also 1 Cor. 7: 39: "The wife is bound by the law as long as her husband liveth; but if her husband be dead, she is at liberty to be married to whom she will; only in the Lord." EMMA FISHER.

CAUGHT UP IN THE THIRD HEAVEN.

PAUL wrote both epistles to the Corinthians. We also read in Acts 22: 17, that Paul was in a trance after he was baptized and had come back to Jerusalem. Here he does not, as all through his writings, glory except in his weakness, hence his meekness forbade him to say, I was caught up in the third heaven. He therefore only says, I knew a man, &c., when in truth it was himself while in a trance.

SALUTING BY THE WAY.

These seventy disciples had a great commission to fulfill; the society of the world was to be brought on a nobler foundation, and Christ himself knowing the weakness of human nature, tried to guard their minds from being diverted from the good cause on which they had entered. We read in 2nd Kings, when Elisha sent his servant to raise the Shunammite's son, he gave him orders to "salute no man by the way; if any salute thee, answer them not, and lay my staff on the child." This also was an important work, but the servant returned without accomplishing anything, probably because Elisha, as God's prophet, had only the power to raise the son. Thus Christ wished to impress His disciples that they had an important work to perform and wished them not to be encumbered with the cares of this world; neither to let their minds be diverted from the true cause for which they were sent; and they returned rejoicing because the devils were made subject to them in the name of Christ. We may all learn a lesson from this, by not having our minds centered on things of this world, but seek first the kingdom of heaven and his righteousness.

CALL NO MAN YOUR FATHER.

This does not mean that we shall not call him, under whose care we were raised as children, "our father," which is the same as the little child who calls "papa;" we must honor, obey him, for this is the first command with promise; "Honor thy father and mother." Malachi, the prophet says, "A son honoreth his father and a servant his master;" but Christ saw that the Scribes and Pharisees had deceived the multitude and were looked up to, as some church-goers look up to their ministers and say, "We pay them and they may pray for us." Or like the priests of the present day, who are looked upon as having the keys of heaven, and forgiving their followers' sins. This was an error in which the Jews had fallen, they did not look for themselves, but believed the Scribes and Pharisees, as some people now believe their ministers, and search not the Scriptures for their own salvation. Christ wanted them to look higher, to call no Scribe or Pharisee "master" or "father," with the impression that through them they will be saved. He wanted them to go to the fountain-head, to work out their own salvation independent of any creed, or man-made doctrine. To make this plain, I will relate an incident:

An Irishman came to the priest and asked the price to have certain sins forgiven. "Two shillings." "To whom do you go," Pat asked, "to have your sins forgiven?" "To the bishop." "What does he charge?" "Two shillings." "Where does the bishop go?" "To the pope, who also charges two shillings." "And," continued Pat, "where does the pope go?" The priest answered, "To God." "What must he pay?" "He? He pays nothing." "Well then I will go to God too," said Pat. So with us, let us go to the Fountain-head, to God, call no man father, trust no minister, but prove all and hold fast to that which is good, to that which cometh from God. His Word is truth.

THE WIFE.

If the husband dies, the wife is free from the law, free to marry again the same as a virgin, but I think the explanation is wanted on the latter clause, "only in the Lord." That is, for a brother or sister to marry in the Lord, to marry one who obeys the Lord, who is in the church. To marry outside of the church is going on dangerous ground; but as Paul says, verse 25, that he has no direct command of the Lord, but gave his judgment, so it may be allowable, under some circumstances, to marry such as are not in the church, such as are friendly to the cause and for whom there is hope, such who are not classed with unbelievers. 2 Cor. 6: 14. But since it is allowed in some cases, great care should be exercised, and an understanding of some kind be had before the too oft fatal leap is made. CYRUS BYCNER, Keistville, Pa.

COMMENTS ON MOLLIE UMB-BAUGH'S QUERY.

Please give an explanation of the following words: "Whosoever is born of God, doth not commit sin; for his seed remaineth in him, and he cannot sin, because he is born of God." 1 John 3: 9. MOLLIE UMBBAUGH.

WHO IS IT THAT IS BORN OF GOD?

"BEHOLD, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God!" But even this is not all; not only are we to be recognized as the children of God, but also conformed to the image of His only begotten Son. And such is the transforming efficiency of His glory, that when "we see him as he is," we shall be changed into His image, we shall be pure, as He is pure; for we "know that he was manifested to take away our sins; and in him is no sin."

This similitude will not, I confess, be complete in the present life; we must see Christ even as He is, before we can be conformed wholly to His image. There is, however, a partial resemblance which becomes more complete as grace prevails in us. In this state we "know, but in part," and are sanctified but in part, as John tells us, "If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us." John cannot mean to be understood absolutely, when he says, "He that is born of God doth not commit sin." But it is yet a question how the words can be best explained in harmony with other passages in the Scriptures. John tells us to "walk as Christ also walked." In the case of this epistle the apostle speaks of apostasy—that is, of complete and final apostasy as, "a sin unto death," as a fatal, soul-destroying sin. This sin is utterly inconsistent with true godliness. He that is born of God, in this sense, "sinneth not," and "cannot sin," for sin we substitute apostasy, meaning, inveterate and complete apostasy, and the text reads, "Whoso abideth in him, apostatiseth not; whosoever apostatiseth hath not seen him, neither known him—he that is guilty of apostasy is of the devil; for the devil hath been an apostate from the beginning. Whosoever is born of God, doth not apostatize, for his seed remaineth in him, and he cannot apostatize, because he is born of God."

Mutual love among Christians is the burden of this epistle; but that love must be connected with love to Christ, because we are commanded to love them as Brethren, and be ready to lay down our lives for them. Verse 16. Now this mutual love produces mutual fellowship and Communion, not with them only, but with God, our Father, Christ our Savior, through the medium of the Holy Ghost, which He has given to abide with us forever. THE WORTH OF THE SOUL.

BY SILAS GILBERT.

THE Savior gives us to understand that the value of the soul is greater than that of anything on earth. We should seriously consider this, both as applied to our neighbors and ourselves. In fact we cannot prepare ourselves for eternity without a concern and interest in the welfare of our fellow-man. Christ died for all—for them as well as us. Every possible effort must be made to draw souls unto him. "GO TEACH ALL NATIONS." The invitation is not limited, it is so broad that it includes every kindred, tribe and tongue.

Christ wants all to know what it takes to purify the soul. It cannot be bought with this world's goods. We learn our souls are purified by obeying the truth. The apostle tells us, we should not weary in well doing. If an effort is made to preach the truth and it takes a little of this world's goods, and scores and hundreds are not converted, but only a half dozen or so, we should not set up the plea, "The missionary work does not pay; for in an early day, the time of Abraham, we learn a few men could have saved a city—ten men could have saved Sodom. No doubt Noah went to a great deal of trouble and expense to save only "eight souls," but souls are precious. "For what is a man profited, if he gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?"

QUERY ANSWERED.

Please give an explanation of Matt. 21: 2; also Mark 11: 2. Do both mean the same? If so, what is meant by the ass tied and the colt with her; loose them and bring them into me? Did he ride both, or only the colt? I. H. CURSER.

MATTHEW 21: 2 and Mark 11: 2, both mean the same. The colt was tied with its mother. Mark and John mention only the colt, upon which Jesus rode. See Mark 11: 7, John 12: 15, 15. The colt upon which "never man sat," was alone fit for sacred use. See Sun. 6: 7. Now if it was necessary to make a new cart and to take line "on which there hath come no yoke," to draw the new cart (that bore the ark of the Lord, how much more to take a young colt "whereon never man sat," to bear the Lord himself?

PRIDE.

BY CHARLES M. YEABROFT.

"The lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eye, and the pride of life, is not of the Father, but is of the world. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof."—1 John 2: 16, 17.

HENCE all who participate in these evil things shall pass away and where God is, they cannot come.

Many so-called Christians are in the front ranks of the devil, following all the evil desires of the flesh. "Come ye out from among them," "The world passeth away and the lust thereof."

"Be not conformed to the world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable and perfect will of God." We are not to engage in those things that are hurtful to our eternal welfare; the things we once loved and tolerated we now hate; and the things we once hated we now love. This is the difference between a regenerated and an unregenerated person. If we be risen with Christ, let us seek those things which are above, where Christ is. If we are in Christ, we have no desire to engage in the pleasures of the world; "For," says the apostle, "know ye not that the friendship of the world is enmity with God?" So we see that he who is a friend of the world is an enemy of God. "If any man love the world, the love of the Father is not in him." If we be the friends of Christ, the world will hate us, because it hated our Master. If we were of the world, then would the world love us, but as we have renounced it, it despises us.

We are commanded to lay off all filthiness and superfluity of naughtiness, and receive with meekness the engrained word, which is able to save our souls. We shall notice some of the things which are unnecessary, that do not add any to our comfort or convenience: Gaudy dress, extravagantly furnished churches. Some ladies are a shame to any civilized community, the way they dress themselves, their dresses all ruffled and scalloped and puckered from head to foot; and yet these very ladies are held up in their respective churches as model Christians. Beautiful "lights" they are! No sacrifices, no change whatever. They go to all places where Diabol is king: such places as shows, theatres, dances, &c. "If you will be my disciple, take up your cross and follow me," is Christ's command. "Pure religion and undefiled before God the Father is this: to visit the fatherless and the widows in their afflictions, and keep yourself unspotted from the world."

The Lord help us to flee the lust of the eye and the pride of life.

BE AFFABLE—Much of the happiness of life depends on our outward demeanor. We have all experienced the charm of gentle and courteous conduct; we have all been drawn irresistibly to those who are obliging, affable and sympathetic in their demeanor. The friendly grasp, the warm welcome, the cheery tone, the encouraging word, the respectful manner bear no small share in creating the joy of life; while the austere tone, the stern rebuke, the sharp and acid remark, the cold and disrespectful air, the supercilious and scornful bearing are responsible for more of human distress, despair and woe, than their transient nature might seem to warrant. —Mt. Joy Herald.

CORRESPONDENCE.

From D. B. Gibson.

At the Silver Creek feast I met many that obeyed the Lord, when we were among them a year before. It does us good to meet them, and hear such expressions as this, "I never regretted the change from the world to Christ." I bade them adieu and went to Mt. Morris on private business. In an hour was on the road to Shannon Love-feast, in company with Bro. E. E. Price and others. Stopped with Bro. Samuel J. Labman. Meeting on the 10th, at ten A. M. Met brother Enoch Eby and Boyer, of Waddam's Grove, brother Marcus Fowler, of Yellow Creek, Moore and Bachelman, of Lamart, Bro. Martin, of Cherry Grove, George Zellars, of post-office inclination, of Hickory Grove, J. J. Emmert, of Arnold's Grove, and others, with whom I had a slight acquaintance, whose names I have not remembered. The Feast was the largest, I think, I ever witnessed, and one long to be remembered. The Spirit of the Lord seemed to pervade every heart. I continued the meetings for a week.— Although the weather was stormy, and nights dark, the attendance was as good as could be expected; and the order was excellent. The Lord blessed our labors here, several made the good confession, and were enrolled in the Lord's army. May they fight the good fight of faith, never disturb, nor lay the armor by, till they fall in death; and on the golden shores, reap the exceeding great reward.

On the 18th Bro. Bashor came, and relieved me. I remained however till Monday the 21st, to attend council meeting, at which Bro. Franklin Mc'Inne was advanced to the 2nd degree of the ministry, and Bro. Samuel Spangle chosen speaker. May the Lord make of them able ministers of the "Word of Life." I left them in council and boarded the 2 o'clock train, and was homeward bound, where I arrived next morning at 9 A. M., without accident or delay.— Found my family all at home, and in good health; although there had been many casualties and considerable sickness in the neighborhood, during my absence. The Lord be praised for His goodness forever. More anon.

From Enoch Eby.

Dear Brethren:—

WHILE waiting for the cars, I shall improve the time in penning a few lines to you, to inform you that I arrived safely at Wyandot, Bureau Co., on Wednesday the 23rd. After having been brought on my way to Foreston, by brother David Rowland, and finding a team from the country, I was only obliged to walk about two miles. I arrived about dark, at the house of friend David Stoutter, who informed me of the meeting appointed, some miles West, which was very unexpected to me; having set the first appointment for the 25th, fearing I could not get there sooner. But they understood my letter the 23rd, hence the appointment. I was glad I went one day ahead of my time, which in all similar cases, is better than a day behind time. I then continued meeting for nine evenings, at two places, about three miles apart. Had five appointments at each place, Hank's school-house and the United Brethren meeting-house. Had ordinary interest, considering the dark nights and busy time. The interest began to increase, and the moon to give light, and a strong desire being manifested on the part of our dear brethren and sisters and some others, to continue the meetings a week or two more. I felt much like doing so, but I conceived it to be my duty to visit all the other points of labor in this mission field. Hence could not spend much more than a week in each place; and return by the 3rd of Dec., so as to be to the District Meeting. Hence reluctantly, seemingly upon the part of all present, we bade farewell; and this morning at an early hour, was brought to Sheffield, on the Chicago and Rock Island road, by brother Culbertson, and soon arrived here at Bureau Junction; and in the midst of the bustle and noise, incident to R. R. depots, (especially at junctions) I am penning these thoughts. But to return again to the little despised, but faithful flock of Nazarenes, our dear brethren and sisters in the Ford, near New Bedford. I am happy to say I found them hungering for the bread of life, and the associations of the brethren and sisters from a distance. Brethren do not forget them in your travels and prayers.

The health among them was good, except Bro. Joseph Osborn who was confined to his room and could not attend any of our meetings, but when I left, he had hopes to hear and in a few days. Many deaths occurred in the neighbourhood lately among children caused by diphtheria. Brother Culbertson and myself also visited a sister, by the name of White, living one mile South-west of Tampico in Whiteside Co., formerly from Fayette Co., emigrated to this country twenty-three years ago; and has not heard a brother preach since. For a time she united with the Campbellites, not in faith, but for a temporary home, thinking a poor house is better than none. She is quite delicate in health, but seems strong in the faith, and enjoyed our visit and season of worship very much. She was left a widow eight years ago, with thirteen children, of which two remain at home single, and do the work on the farm. She has the comforts of life ordinarily. Dear brethren and sisters remember her in your travels and prayers. More anon.

Bureau Junction, Nov. 1st, 1878.

From J. F. Neher.

OUR Love-feast, which was on the 12th inst., passed off pleasantly. Ministers present besides our own, were, Brethren Martin White-neck, Jacob Reed and Joshua Kesler, all from Bond Co., Ill., who are all young in the ministry, but manifest a willingness in discharging their duty. Strongly the members were all built up and edified. On the 18th inst., we were with the Brethren, at the Love-feast, in the Mulberry Grove church, Bond Co., Ill.

This church at present, is in somewhat distressing circumstances; and should be remembered at a throne of grace. Of their ministers, three in number, only one of them could be at the Communion. Elder John W. Goodman, has lost his eyesight, and would not venture out after night. He however was at the day meetings, and enjoyed himself very well. Brother Allen Taylor, a minister in the second degree, is prostrated by the hand of affliction, and his situation is not a very hopeful one.

The feast however was a pleasant one. Ministers present were Elder David Frantz from Marion Co., Henry Jones and Martin White-neck from the Hurricane Creek church, Bond Co., Ill. After the self-examination, instructions were given and the supper prepared, the ordinance of feet-washing was observed by the officiating brother, first girding himself with a towel, then turning to his brother to his side, washing his feet and wiping them with the towel, wherewith he was girded; then the Bro. that had his feet washed, took the towel and did the same to the brother to his side and soon around the table to the place of beginning.— All passed off in the best of order; and all obeyed the command and example of our Savior. The Supper and Communion passed off with due solemnity, and when we had sung a hymn, we went out and it was night. Met again next morning, at eleven o'clock. Preaching by David Frantz. Text, "He was led as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before his shearers; so he opened not his mouth." Showed to the congregation how lamb-like our innocent Saviour was led to the slaughter, and shed His blood for the sin of the world. Also how sheep-like He was shorn of His glory with the Father, in order that His children might be clothed with glory, honor and immortality. At three o'clock some of the members met at the house of brother Allen Taylor's, who had called the elders of the church, and was anointed in the name of the Lord, as instructed by the apostle James. In the evening brother Frantz again addressed a large congregation, on the "Love of God, proving by circumstantial evidence, that though human love will, and has failed, yet God's love is ever the same. Next day, Frantz again addressed a very large and attentive congregation. Subject, "The Christian warfare, showing that in many respects, there is a similarity between the carnal and Christian warfare; that soldiers enlisted in carnal warfare, must be true and faithful to their promise in order to get an honorable discharge, and to be admitted in, or enjoy the soldier's remission. So likewise the soldiers of Jesus Christ must be faithful and put on the whole armor of God, and fight the good fight of faith, in order to get an honorable discharge at death, and in order to be admitted into the grand reunion above.

There was another appointment for Sunday evening, but we were not present. I feel assured that the congregation was well entertained.

Sabon, Ill.

From Abilene, Kansas.

THE church in this part of the West, is still moving along slowly. Now and then in addition by baptism, but more by persons moving here. I am glad to say that the Brethren are still flocking in, seeking for new homes.— We can use them all. The field is large. Bro. G. Maurer from Naperville, Ill., was with us and spent a few days here. He gave us a few good sermons, which will long be remembered. He also has bought a farm ten miles South of Abilene. I hope and pray that his new field may be blessed with a rich harvest. And while we rejoice in his coming to locate with us, no doubt his departure will be a sad one among the Brethren in Ill. But may they bear in mind, that their loss is our gain, for we are scattered over a vast scope of country, and need those those who can help hold forth the ancient landmarks. Now a word to our many traveling Brethren that come to look for homes through this part of Kansas. Do not forget there are a good many members living through this part of the State, and we would be glad to see them stop off. Those who let us know of their coming, we will be glad to meet at the depot. No difference whether ministers or lay members, inform us and we will be glad to welcome you to our homes. Don't be afraid you make us too much trouble. Our aim is to get Brethren to stay and settle with us; for I do think no one can better himself in the State, take all in all. I am well aware that there are scores of Brethren come West, who don't know that there is a church in this part of Kansas.— So I thought I would inform them. You will find friends who will care for you while you stay with us. Homestead lands we have none that are good, but other lands can be bought from five to fifteen dollars an acre. Plenty of good water, some timber. As yet, no coal has been discovered in this county.

I will give a few names, so that those who would wish to correspond, can do so. The writer, Abilene; brother Michael Forney; J. Humlberger; S. A. Smith, all Abilene. Would further say that brother M. Forney lives in Abilene. He can direct you to some of the rest.

H. S. MASHLEY.

From the Maple Grove Colony.

WE will say once for all to the members and those that contemplate becoming such, that when you write to us for information in regard to the colony. Please enclose enough to cover expenses for writing. Many write for information and ask many questions and request immediate answer, but fail to send the wherewith to pay the expenses of writing. We hope all will remember that one three-cent stamp does not cover all cost of a letter. I am willing to give my time in writing free, for I am a rapid writer, and require but a few minutes to write a long letter, but do think those for whom I write, should pay for writing material and stamps. I have a heavy correspondence, consequently considerable expense. We feel that it is to the advantage of those that intend to move West, to go in a colony and settle near together for many reasons. We are willing therefore, to do all we can to assist and encourage such, by giving all the information we can.

We will also say to those that send their names to us, desiring to become members of our colony, to please enclose with their names, fifty cents for each name to be applied on other expenses, such as blank books, maps and the expenses of the locating committee, which have just returned after a five weeks tour. The expenses of that committee were considerable, which we think the members ought to assist in paying. If "scrip" is not at hand, send postage stamps. In sending in your names for membership, don't fail to have them accompanied with responsible vouchers. We want none that cannot furnish good references as to applicants' good character, etc. We will briefly answer a few questions that are asked by many:

1. How much means are required in order to become a member of the colony?

Ans. No specified amount required; the more the better. Each member ought to have some means after settling on his claim.

2. How much government land can a person take?

Ans. 480 acres, 160 homestead, 160 timber claim and by pre-emption 160 acres.

3. How much will the land cost?

Ans. Homestead and timber claim $17.— Each pre-emption right $125 per acre. Law requires to live on and improve a homestead for five years, then the government makes you a deed. No taxes to pay on the land until you get your deed. (See homestead laws).

4. Who can take claims?

Ans. All persons over twenty-one years, that have never had the benefit of a homestead.

5. Does $17. cover all cost?

Ans. It does till the five years are up; then you pay $3.00 or $5.00 when you get your deed.

6. Where have you located?

Ans. Norton Co., Kansas.

7. How far from settlement, is the location?

Ans. Five miles.

8. How far from mill and store?

Ans. Six miles; dry goods and groceries as cheap as here in Iowa.

9. How far from railroad?

Ans. 60 miles, but will be within 20 another season and within a short time will be within six miles from railroad.

10. What is the price of good cows?

Ans. From $20.00 to $30.00

11. Is there any timber in that county?

Ans. Yes; I think they have as much timber there as we have here in Iowa. Wood can be bought at $2.50 to $3.00 per cord.

12. Does every person have to take his own claim?

Ans. Yes; every person must take his own claim; law requires it.

13. Are nearly all your colony members also members of the church?

Ans. Yes; about nine-tenths are members of the church. We have between fifty and sixty members now in the colony and still adding at every meeting. Address all communications to,

From Landon West.

ON Monday morning, Oct. 7th, in company with Bro. James Johnson, of New Lexington, Ohio, left the home of brother Reed, and came through to brother Johnson's home.

One can not well grow tired of an old man, when in his company, if his mind has all the vigor of youth, hence the ride to us was most pleasant. From this old brother we heard much that was interesting and some that was quite amusing. From his home, we came at night to the home of brother Hixon, where he and his wife had just arrived to find a little daughter very sick. She had had symptoms of spasms in the day and night before, and on this account, and because the Love-feast at their meeting-house was set for Oct. 12th, and his school to commence on the 14th, he could not come with us, as was wished, to the Love-feasts in Miami. We however came on alone, and did wish to reach the meeting-house near Covington, on the 8th, but could not. We then went to the meeting on the 9th at.

DONALD'S CREEK.

This church is in Clark Co., Ohio, about nine miles West of Springfield. We arrived there at 12 M., on the 9th, and were very warmly received by our many friends. The day was pleasant, and a large crowd had assembled for the services, at 10 A. M., when they were addressed by brother O. F. Yount. Some were ready for baptism, and this was attended to before the Love-feast.

The elders in this church, are brethren Joseph Kaufman and John Frantz. Ministers are Aaron Frantz, Peter Heck and George Funderburg. Those in attendance were brethren Joseph Arnold, Oliver Yount and George Miller. Brother David Workman, of Ashland, Ohio, had been expected, but it was learned that he had been called home, on account of an injury to his wife, by being thrown from a buggy.

The attendance however was large, especially by the members, and all seemed to enjoy the occasion well, but to us it was a feast indeed, for we had never before seen so many brethren and sisters at one Love-feast. This was our first, among the churches of Miami.

The crowd both in and out of the house, was large, and there was at times confusion—so much as to interfere greatly with those whose only object, was to worship God aright. This made it quite difficult to speak to those who were willing to hear, and lessened greatly the happiness, which would otherwise have been felt. But with all it was an occasion to be remembered, especially by those, who thought of him who died "without the gate."

We lodged for the night with Bro. George Funderburg; came again early to the church, where worship and breakfast were had, then for some time, a very pleasant season was spent in the last service. They came the time for parting, when we in company with some others, came to the house of brother Frank Miller, where quite a pleasant time was spent in comparing views upon what the Lord had said, of which quite an agreement prevailed, both with those who were members, and with those who were not.

At night we came and staid with elder John Frantz, whose age and infirmity make us think that the work of our more of the fathers, is well nigh done. From his home we came South to the Love-feast in Green Co., known as BEAVER CREEK CHURCH.

The elders who have the oversight of this body, are Moses Shoup, who is now eighty-six years of age, and brother George Halter, of the Lower Miami church. The ministers are David Bates, B. F. Darst and Henry Duncan. Those from other churches, were brother Jacob Garber and the writer.

On account of troubles, which had existed here for some time, there was no feast held at this place last year, but a committee of brethren having visited this place in Aug., and having adjusted the troubles to quite a general satisfaction, it was concluded to hold a feast this year; and such we think it was to all who attended it. The heavy rain on the evening of the 11th, prevented some from enjoying the meeting as they wished, but to those who were there it was regarded as a feast indeed. Among those who partook were some who had quite lately come into the church at this place, and to them this was their first opportunity to show forth their Lord's death. The order at this meeting was praiseworthy, and the occasion is one long to be remembered.

From F. P. Læhr.

AN apology is due from us as a church to the Christian world for holding up the idea, that we believe to be as near, if not nearer in doctrine and practice of the pure Gospel as any other denomination of Christians; and yet for all this, are the least known perhaps of all.—Why don't you send out missionaries? If your's is the pure Gospel doctrine, why not exert yourselves to teach it every-where? You are right, dear friends, for if somebody or some company has something useful for the multitude, they will use every means to advertise.—But sometimes another class of men have a preference right, and not until their time is expired, can the other party assert their change. So it is with the pure Gospel of Christ. There had been an interdict upon it for 1200 years, and all this length the true believers were in guise of the woman in the wilderness. For upwards of six hundred years the Christian church was persecuted by Jews and gentiles.—The devil however saw that he could not gain his end by persecution, so he befriended them and made them a head that gathered the Christians into armies, to convert the world to Christianity; but as this was not the doctrine of Christ, those who were true and would not accept of it, were killed, persecuted and driven from place to place; and though the dragon cast a flood after the woman, the flood (false doctrine) did not reach the woman or church 1200 years ago. This church existed under various names, and in different places, and finally crossed the Atlantic ocean about 1719, bringing the same doctrine, for which they were fined and imprisoned, and driven until they reached the American shore. They were very careful to keep that part of their creed a secret, for which they had suffered persecution in all other countries. For nearly a century and a half, this American country knew but very little of this people. Even Buck in his Theological Dictionary, loses them at Ephrata, in Pennsylvania under the description of the Seven Dayers or Tankers; hence the many erroneous ideas of us. Until the late Rebellion, our Brethren would try in every way not to become popularly known with this conviction, that they were in the wilderness, supposing to remain there until the second coming of Christ. But some few had an idea that the flight of the woman took place till about A. D. 606, and consequently would come to a close about 1866.—Now we want to see how she came out or whether she came out; so we must consider that whenever the church took up carnal weapons to convert the world and took the government of the world in her hand, instead of coming out of her, the true Christian was made known as a non-combative, non-swearing, non-conforming man. Thus all true Christians were persecuted. When the Rebellion broke out we had to appear before magistrates and governors, and make our principles known. Thus ended the 1200 days of prophecy. Since that time we need not hold private council when persons apply for membership.—The Gospel peace principle is accepted by many and is growing stronger, while on the other hand, Satan's work of hatred is smouldering invisibly like fire in the ashes.

Now friends, I have given you some cause and reason why we have not been as energetic in carrying the Gospel as we believe it, to other nations and countries. You have done nobly in carrying the Bible to the ends of the earth. If your missionaries only had backed it up fully. Saying one thing and doing another hath caused thousands to become skeptics.—Well might the Lord have said "Whatsoever they tell you to do, do it, but after their works shall ye not do."

Our apology I think, is reasonable, for the door was closed in most governments; is closed yet; witness the Mennonites in Russia. But Brethren, my apology is at an end. The Lord saith, "Behold I have set before thee an open door, and no man can shut it." Rev. 3: 8.

Never since the opening of the Christian era, was there such a time, not only privilege, but call for the pure Gospel. The fulfillment of the 9th verse, was never more clear. The promise for keeping the word of my patience is great, and should encourage every brother and sister, and give them new zeal and energy, to throw off the shackles that bind us to the earth. Behold I come quickly! What kind of a people ought we to be when He comes?—Ought we not to have worked while it is called to-day? Ought we not hasten to carry the glad tidings, by lightening speed to every nook and corner, since the door is opened by the Lord? Shall we not call conventions from one end to the other of our free country, to consider the best ways and means by which the most and best work can be done? where we could put our strength and our means, that God has bestowed to us, to the best use and largest profit. And ye old veterans of the cross, don't dream of the church going to "sticks," as some have said. He has said He would keep her from the hour of temptation, that is to come upon all the world. Pray with me for the young ones around us on every hand, whom God has given an outfit of spiritual strength for the great work before them. And you young David be strong in the Lord, fear not Him that defies the armies of the Lord. The pebbles Thou hast chosen from the brooks, are very bright; they shine throughout the camp of Israel.

Every throw makes a mark, only keep on low ground, keep in the valley till the battle is over, the victory gained. Thou shalt be led in triumph to the City of our God. Now a word to you dear editors; your editorials are appreciated, and the less advertising, the more approval. I agree fully with you Bro. M., about the A. M. God knew why He wanted the children of Israel to come together stately at Jerusalem. Fifty years' observation, and studying the character of our Brethren, has made me consider the A. M. as one of the best means to bind the members into one body and keep them in one. Many a Summer kitchen has been gotten up outside of the house. But none remains through stormy weather. The builders failed of their object. According to my interpretation of the church's work now, nothing is calculated to be of greater benefit to the church, than the holding of the A. M. Thousands get to hear of a doctrine, which is nowhere preached but right with us. I proposed, and it was accepted and carried out to a degree at last A. M., to preach all around the meeting place. I was in company lately with one of the Standing Committee, who is fully with us to continue the liberty to all and give the thousands a chance to hear the pure Gospel, while those more interested to participate in the discussion, can do so. Never give that which belongs to all into the hands of a few, and if they were pure as angels at first, the devil knows how to defile them. But few men can stand prosperity without becoming inflated and corrupted.

Half a Point off the Course.

A GENTLEMAN once stood near the helm of the ship while crossing the English channel. It was a calm and pleasant evening, and none dreamed of danger, but a sudden flapping of the sail, caught the ear of the officer and watch, and he sprang at once to the wheel, examining closely the compass, "you are half a point off the course," he said to the man at the wheel, the deviation was corrected and the officer returned to his post, "You must steer very accurately," said the lookout, "when only half a point is so much thought of, as half a point might in many places, bring us on the rocks," he said.

While reading the above, I was strongly impressed with these thoughts. Ah! so it is in life; half a point from strict truthfulness strands us upon the rocks of falsehood; half a point from perfect honesty, and we are steering straight for the rocks of crime; and so with all kindred vices. The rocks may well be termed the slippery rocks of death, which are beset with all manner of sin, beneath which is the gulf of destruction. The descent upon them is very gradual, and often times barely perceptible at the beginning. No one would think for a moment of taking one full stride into the yawning gulf beneath; but step after step men and women go on with their little sins, or what they call small sins, until these rocks become fearful. They begin to examine the course in which they are traveling, and find that their sins, though small at first, have like a mountain rose behind them, and they are fast on the descent. They begin to realize their fearful condition; they try to retrace, but find it a difficult retreat. They begin to look around for help, they call upon their nearest friend to assist them, they close their hand and say, we can not do anything, but trust in Jesus, then fold their hands and sit down to close the eyes to all duties and lull themselves to sleep on the top of faith alone.—They forget that Jesus had said to awake from sleep and arise, that he may give them light; that they may see the danger before them; hence they glide along the tide of time, till at last the brittle thread of life is severed and they are carried to their silent place of rest, to await the morning of the resurrection, when they will only, like the rich man, wake to behold the active saint in Abraham's bosom, with the unfathomable gulf fixed between. Then dear friends and kind reader, may I not give you warning? Will you not hear the voice of the watchman? Though I am but a painted stick floating upon the waters, I tell you of the rocks that lie hidden beneath the waves, and if you would enjoy that heavenly bliss beyond the skies, you must cease those little sins till you have overcome all, and follow Jesus through life. By denying yourself, which is the greatest cross of the sinner, you must enter into a covenant with Christ in baptism, and arise to walk in newness of life, which you can only do by asking Him for instructions. He will guide you to His Gospel, the New Testament, and when you have learned one command, go and do it, as the child will do his sum on the slate, that will prepare the way for another lesson. Go and do likewise and you will soon become a diligent learner or a disciple in Christ, and thus you can "grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." You should be very careful that you don't get half a point off the course, as that will lead you among the rocks.

Found Dead in a Well.

ON last Monday the 7th ult., David Landis and his wife, living about four miles South-east of this place, were out digging potatoes. They had left their children playing about the house. They had not been gone a great while, until one of the little girls came and informed them that little Erva, aged two years, one month and eight days, was missing, and could not be found. So the father went in search of the little boy, but not finding him returned, when the mother went to look after him. In the yard between the house and barn stood an old well, used only for watering stock, surrounded by a rail pen, and the mother in passing there saw it uncovered, looked in.—Who can imagine her griefs as she beheld her darling child floating on top of the water; her cries soon brought the father and neighbors.—They took him out and carried him to the house, where every effort was made to save his life, but without effect; his little spirit had taken its flight. That the father and mother have the entire sympathy of the whole neighborhood was shown by the tears that were shed, as they viewed the remains of little Erva. Erva was a bright little boy, and cannot help but be greatly missed by the stricken family.

[The above was sent us for publication, by a brother who clipped it from some paper, the name of which he forgot to mention.—Eus.]

GLEANINGS.

From Turkey Creek, Neb.—Our Communion meeting was held September 27th and 28th. We had a very good meeting, pretty good order among the spectators during the meeting, considering they were much crowded. It was the largest meeting ever held at this place. I often think how good we feel at the feasts here, but if we only can be able to meet around the Lord's table at that good feast, when Christ will gird himself and serve us. Oh how happy we will be then! There will be no parting.—Brethren present at our last elder J. J. Lucht, from Brown Co., Kan., C. Forney, J. Johnston, from Falls City, Neb., I. Dell, from Beatrice, Neb., Bro. Buechley, from Waterloo, Iowa and Bro. Goshorn, of Ind. May the Lord bless them for their labors of love, while among us. The church thought it best to appoint more deacons. The choice was held on Saturday afternoon; the lot fell on J. Bonewitz, H. Bronhard and A. Forney. Brother William Pollen and J. Shuss, were advanced to the second degree of the ministry. May the good Lord bless them in their labors, and all His children, that we will receive the crown of life that is laid up for all the righteous. The ark of the Lord is still moving along. We now have three speakers, five deacons and in all we number forty-four. ELIZABETH SMITH.

Pearce City, Neb.

From S. T. Bosserman.—Let God be praised, one more added to the fold at Eagle Creek church by baptism. May the good work go on. This makes nineteen by baptism and three by letter, during the present year.

Dunkirk, Hardin Co., Ohio.

Notice to Ashland College Subscribers.—You are respectively informed that the second installment of all subscriptions to Ashland College given prior to May 1st, 1878, will be due Nov. 1st, 1878. Will you please pay amount at once to local agents, as the money is needed to further the construction of the building. The carpenters are at this time (Oct. 28th), putting on the roof, and everything is progressing finely.

E. C. PACKER, Solicitor.

From Jacob Rife.—Will say that Bro. S. H. Bashor is holding a meeting in the Four Mile congregation, Union Co., Ind. The meeting is very interesting; the house is crowded, and eleven have been received by baptism, and future prospects encouraging. Hope the Lord may bless him and his labors. Nov. 6th, 1878.

To Those Concerned.—This is to kindly inform all who are concerned, S. A. Walker, of the Seneca church, John P. Ebersole of the Rome church and S. T. Bosserman, of the Eagle Creek church, all of Ohio, are local agents in their respective congregations, to whom all subscriptions for Ashland College may be paid. E. C. PACKER.

From Eight Mile Church, Kan.—We are slowly moving on in Zion's cause. Seven were added to the fold this month. That God's blessings may rest upon them and enable them to hold out faithful to the end of their journey of life, is my prayer. J. S. REIM.

DIED.

Obituaries should be brief, written on but one side of the paper, and separate from all other business.

BURK.—In Poplar Ridge district, O., Viola, daughter of Bro. Peter and sister Burk, aged 6 months and 11 days. Services by Simon Long.

LANDIS.—In the Bachelor's Run church, Ind. Oct. 7th, 1878, Erva Landis, son of Bro. David and sister Elizabeth Landis, aged 2 years, 1 month and 8 days.

FLORA.—In the same church, Oct. 17th, 1878, sister Catherine Flora, wife of elder J. Flora, aged 66 years, 6 months and 9 days. HENRY LANDIS.

WONDERLICK.—Near Richland, Keokuk Co., Iowa, Nov. 2nd, 1878, sister Mary, wife of Eld. Charles Wonderlick, aged 60 years, 9 months and 19 days.

She was a consistent member of the church for about forty-three years. She leaves a husband and four children to mourn the loss of a kind companion and an affectionate mother and the church has lost a mother in Israel.—We believe she died in the full triumph of immortal glory. Hence the loss to those to whom she was near and dear, is her eternal gain.—Funeral discourse from Rev. 14: 13, by brother Solomon Stany, from Linn Co., to a large and sympathizing congregation. SAMUEL FLORY.

SING OF JESUS.

BY J. W. SOUTHWOOD.

Sing of Jesus, sing of Jesus,
How He came to earth to die,
To redeem this fallen people,
And to bring salvation nigh.

Sing of Jesus, sing of Jesus,
How He died for you and me,
How he came and died and suffered,
And from sin did set us free.

Sing of Jesus, sing of Jesus,
I understand what we sing;
And with spirit always trying,
To obey our heavenly King.

Sing of Jesus, sing of Jesus,
Oh His love and grace so free,
That to all it now is given,
Who will hear and humble be.

Sing of Jesus, sing of Jesus,
Of His glorious Gospel given,
How on earth it here doth cheer us,
And will cheer us up in heaven.

Sing of Jesus, sing of Jesus,
Even till we're called to die,
Then we'll sing of Him in glory,
When we reign with Him on high.

ALPHA AND OMEGA.

BY C. H. BALSBAUGH.

To Brother J. F. Oller, of Waynesboro, Franklin Co., Pa.:

GREAT souls are fashioned only under the sovereignty of the Holy Ghost. Intellect may be expanded and enriched apart from and in defiance of God, but that which is deepest and highest, and best in man can be reached and perfected only by the inbeing of the Uncreated. To have our will developed and roused to the highest tension of power and activity without a sense of will, is a work which taxed the utmost possibilities of Godhead, and which alone constitutes the fellowship of redemption. Fellowship means community of nature. To be fellow with God is to have His very life as the Alpha and Omega of our own. In relation to the Father, Jesus Christ is called "the Man that is my Fellow," Zech. 13: 7. Amalgamation with Emmanuel in His dual constitution is a wedlock in which Spirit and spirit blends. There can be no sublime unfolding of soul where there is no all-dominating incomming of Deity. God is content with a mustard seed, but it must be all mustard. A stone easily swells into a mountain, and two fishes and five barley cakes into a feast for thousands, under Omnipotent Word that rolls worlds into spare by the mere expression of a thought. Daniel 2: 34, 35; John 6: 9-13. To be "strong when we are weak," and to move in the double consciousness of self-nothingness and Divine fullness, is the grand triumph of God in Christ, in which He has a compensating satisfaction for all the cost and agonies and horrors that were crowded between His descent into the Virgin and His ascent from Olivet. We can only faintly gauge the "grief" experienced by "the Holy Spirit of God" when we follow our own inclinations instead of His prompting.

Cursed is the man who writes for his own praise. Christ is not his Alpha and Omega. Duties to preaching. Rigid introspection will perhaps uncover the awful vision of Ezekiel 8:

8-17. I believe that one of the deepest sorrows of Jesus was the fact that His fidelity to righteousness would be the occasion of deeper damnation to thousands. He could not compromise. "I am the truth" is His whole autobiography in four syllables. "I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father that sent me." In this single line lies the essence and history of sin, and the whole philosophy of salvation. As I will: This is the Key that unlocked Hell. "Not as I will." This unbarred the Doors of Pearl. Here is the equator between the Eternities of bliss and woe. It is the straight line that runs through the soul's centre. Woe unto the Pharisees. Jude 11. "Cursed children," whose "hearts are exercised with covetous practices." 2 Peter 2: 14. Cursed are they who write or preach for money. To receive our hire is a Divine ordination. Matt. 10: 10; 1 Cor. 9: 14. But to balance our duty by greenbacks, and select our post in consideration of graded salary, sets the devil at the helm. Self as an idol is low, but money is still lower. Its sway of the affections is the root of all evil. How inclined is human nature to lose the essential in the incidental. How many things are maintained with all the vehemence of enthusiasm, which are purely the outcropping of selfishness. What "strong crying and tears" it requires in marrow-boring trials to say in spirit and truth, "not as I will, but as Thou wilt." Many a comfort I might have purchased for my suffering body, even in the Brotherhood, had I consented to sell myself to the service of tradition and fashion and creed-worship. Give me bread and water, "sheep-skins and goat-skins," a hovel for a home, and "a stone for a pillar," rather than barter my birthright for "a mess of pottage."

The Alpha and Omega is so complete in all the constituents of solid character, that grief is no diminution of felicity. It is our participation of this completeness that makes our Heaven, here and hereafter. Col. 2: 10. As soon as we deviate the fraction of an iota from the sense of right, or suffer ourselves to be swayed by self-interest, or ebalistic ends, we lose our singleness of eye, and turn the light that is in us into darkness. If we are ever ready to "become fools for Christ's sake," the "truth of the Gospel will continue with us." Gal. 2: 5. Otherwise "God will send us strong delusions, that we should BELIEVE a lie." 2 Thess. 2: 11. We cannot be too vigilant to preserve the integrity of faith. A grain of sand will blind the eye, and an atom of air will mar the finest crystal. One deflection to save self at the expense of an unsodden conscience, will turn all the batteries of Sinai against us. James 2: 10. "Whoever is not of faith is sin." Doubt and damnation are twins. Rom. 14: 23. This devilism creeps in and creeps out in a thousand shapes. Unless we are immovably established in this ground-truth, that God in the flesh is our Alpha and Omega, and that no dearest consideration shall turn us from the most painful sacrifice of the Cross, before we are aware our fairest jewels will be turned into a calf. There is nothing that keeps us in the realization of John 1: 31, and of 2 Cor. 3: 18, but unswerving fealty to "the truth as it is IN JESUS." "In Him was not ye and any, BUT YE AND AMEN." We must not suppose that the Eternal Love is a soft, mushroom principle that takes the impression of every thing it comes in contact with. Its nature and purpose is to give impressions. There is "lightning and thunder" in God, and yet He is Love. Nor only does "a pure River of Water of Life, clear as crystal" flow out of the Trinity-Throne, but also a stream of Righteousness, glowing and hissing and surging with fire and brimstone (Rev. 4: 5). Lambhood and Lionhood make up the perfection of Jesus. He never confounds the Ident and the roar. In these blended yet distinct opposites He is not only for but in His saints. He never sinks the Lion in the Lamb, nor vice versa. The two make an eternally righteous love—the possibility of salvation by the Cross.

To reveal "the kingdom of God and His righteousness" was the whole of Christ's mission. Its establishment in us and exhibition by us is the joint work of "the Spirit and the Bride." On the pivot of Righteousness rests God's Throne. All moral being in Heaven, earth, and hell, swings round this centre. God is in it as both Law and Sacrifice: so must we be if Heaven is to be ours. The possibility of God being Emmanuel lies here. Heb. 1: 9. Hell is the retributive action of "the Law of the Spirit of Life." Love takes its predetermined course. A STRAIGHT LINE is its eternal symbol. This is the Fountain of our individual and corporate bliss and power. Let this crowning truth be our inmost study and jewel night and day. It may not be forgotten a moment without loss. "Looking unto Jesus:" not only once in a while, but such looking as means living. At this door God always stands waiting for souls. Here no one ever knocked without admission. This requires an honest appropriation of Ps. 24: 4. As soon as tradition, and ancestral customs, and ecclesiastical legislation become our ruling statutes, we miss the great principle in which God Himself is strong and good and glorious, and out of which He would be an everlasting Imbecile. God has no three wills although He is Tri-personal. There are differences of administrations, diversities of gifts and operations, but one Lord and one Spirit. 1 Cor. 12: 4, 5, 6. God can be Three in One because with Him Love and Righteousness are synonyms. To a certain extent He accommodates Himself to our ignorance, but not to our perverseness and pharisaism and self-conceived regulations. Expedients and makeshifts, circumstances may demand; but they are no gospels. They may not be "earnestly contended for" as if they were the very "faith which was once delivered unto the saints." The "Word made flesh" is so comprehensive and all-sufficient that it needs no supplement. When we fail to compass its meaning we do the best we can under pressing exigencies; but we should not bar its further opening at such points by making our guesses its equivalent. This has done us incalculable injury, and will do us more unless past experience has given us the requisite wisdom. Christ is Alpha and Omega. This great truth must prevail if the Brotherhood is to evangelize the world. We want nothing but the Logos to carry to the ends of the earth. We want nothing else to carry in our hearts, and manifest in our lives. We want no missionaries who are no true representatives of Jesus. A man who is scented with cologne, pomade, tobacco, and alcoholic stimulants, and who is afraid of "tent-making" lest his lily-hands be smirched, is too far out of sympathy with the Cross to be its herald. Mammon-worshippers, position-seekers, dogmatic speculators, those whose heads are Bible Dictionaries, and whose lives are Chesterfields expositors—all who are not willing to "crucify the flesh with the affections and lusts," had better stay at home and trim their wicks, and buy oil with currency coined out of their own blood. It is abhorrent to God, disgusting to angels, and laughable to devils, that Christendom swarms with so-called ministers of Jesus who are a perfect mockery of humility and holiness. The world cannot be charmed to the Cross by white-washed mummies. The nations must hear us chant Habakkuk 3: 17, 18, 19, and Romans 8: 35-39, before they will be "persuaded that God is in us of a truth."

Let us not forget the "hind's foot" in the above passage, what leaps they can make, and on what condition they become ours. There is a thrilling sermon for us in those wild denizens of the rocks. Between here and the poles, and the antipodes, there is many a crag to climb, many a chasm to spring. What mountains and gulfs in our own nature. He that has traveled to Calvary has seen all the world in its ruin, and is ready for the "go" of the final commission. Emmanuel is the Omnipresent Man, and in Him we are bound to the race. Christian is derivative from Christ, both etymologically and characteristically. CHRISTIAN. Word of awful meaning, and practically meaning so little. Christ is the fullness of God, and the fullness of men, and His Atonement is ours on condition that our faith and love take in the whole Christ. We are a blessing to the world only as we are like Christ, and geographically to the extent we carry His likeness. The more sun-like we become, the more potent will we be to scatter the surrounding darkness. "YE ARE THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD. Christ's being made His office effective. So with us. We must be Christed before we can accomplish a genuine Christian mission. Where the leaven of the Incarnation is unaltered, the expansive principle will operate "till the whole is leavened." The "three measures of meal" are applied by Christ to the care through the individual. No one can be learned by the Godman without conformity to His Mind, and being fired with His ardor for the salvation of sinners. I have listened to prayers "for all men" in glowing phraseology, and the sounds had scarcely died on the air till the same tongue and lips were busy in levity. This falsification of profession and prayer is the carrion that nauseates the world, and over which the buzzards of Hell flap their fire-dripping wings. We cannot ride the leopard on God's errand, tattooed on hands and face with the hieroglyphs of the flesh. Let us study God's character afresh, and penetrate to the very heart of the Atonement, so that we may hate sin and love the sinner as does God Himself. Then will we be saints indeed, and missionaries to all we meet.

LEARNING.

HUMAN beings come into the world a blank, and whatever they become has to be learned. The Lord Jesus said, "Learn of me." He does not say in the same connection what men should learn of Him, but by adding, "For I am meek and lowly in heart" He implies that what is to be learned comes by such a humble disposition, and also that it is of a character that the meek and lowly can easily obtain. What will come to man when he learns from the Lord, is thus added: "And ye shall find rest unto your souls."

In saying, "Learn of me," is implied, that they should observe Him, and consequently learn from His example; and it therefore means the same as when He said, "Follow me." As He must work in man, "both to will and to do," all His teaching is the same as to ask the people to put in practice what He gives them. Hence He addresses those who "labor and are heavy laden," namely those who are not comfortable in sinning; and by saying that He is meek and lowly in heart, is shown that such is the state that persons must come into in order to learn of Him.—Mt. Juy Ho, 33.

TEMPTED BY DEGREES

JOHN Newton says Satan seldom comes to Christians with great temptations, or with a temptation to commit a great sin. You bring a green log and a candle together, and they are very safe neighbors; but bring a few shavings and set them alight, and then bring a few small sticks and let them take fire, and the log be in the midst of them, and you will soon get rid of your log. And so it is with little sins. You will be startled with the idea of committing a great sin, and so the devil brings you a little temptation, and leaves you to mangle yourself. "There is no harm in this," "no great peril in that;" and so by these little chips we are first easily ignited up, and at last the green log is burned. Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation.

BREATHINGS OF THE SOUL.

JESUS, take away my sadness,
Tell me I am loved by Thee;
Fill my heart with holy gladness,
Whisper now sweet words to me.

"Lord, my frame is faint and weary,
And I feel too weak to pray;"
But thine arms are still around me,
And Thou art my only stay.

Help me, Lord, to bear in patience
What thy love sees good for me;
Sanctify my tribulation,
Let it bring me nearer Thee.

"May my thoughts be full of heaven,
Less of earth and earthly love;"
Loving Thee, Lord, more than ever,
Waiting for my rest above.

"Thou art all my consolation,
Lord, I sink myself in Thee;
Thy most precious blood I value,
It has done such work for me."

"May I realize with sweetness
All the promises in Thee;
Enter more into the fulness
Of what thou canst be to me."

"Let not life around distress me,"
Keep me safe, and calm, and still,
Keep me resting—keep me trusting,
Clinging to thy holy will.

Be Thou very near and precious,
"Make me happier, Lord, in Thee;"
Soon I shall awake in glory,
Oh! what happiness for me!

I shall see God's face forever,
Know no longer sin nor pain;
I shall then be like my Savior,
And with Him shall live and reign.

Weep not, friends, though sad the parting
"Twill be but a little while;
Think of me as safe with Jesus,
Happy in His loving smile."

THE TRUE ORDER OF THE CHURCH OF GOD.

A Little Discussion on a "big" Subject.

A SERMON DELIVERED BY S. H. BASHOR.

WE come now to the labors of the apostles and evangelists of JESUS CHRIST;

and show that their entire aim and effort was, the conversion of souls. On the day of Pentecost three thousand were added to the saved, a revival that stands without a parallel in modern times, and carries with it the approbation of God, and the direct fruits of the Holy Ghost. Again Philip preached Christ in the city of Samaria. He did not preach one, two, or three discourses, and discontinue preaching, but preached and continued to preach, until there was "great joy in that city." Acts 8: 8. And again, Paul preached at Thessalonica until a great multitude believed. Acts 17: 4. Following the history of apostolic work, we find in Acts 18: 11, that Paul preached in one place a year and six months. Right along in order comes the great revival at Ephesus, recorded in Acts 19: 16, 21, and many more to which we might refer, showing beyond controversy, that the apostles were advocates of revivals and held revivals, which in extent will never, probably have a parallel in modern times.

But the revivals they held were all,

GENUINE,

and were followed by an increase and general extension of vital piety. There was, in these revivals a solemn attention to religion. Men were aroused by the powerful appeals of the great preachers, to a sense of their ruined condition, and cried out, "What must we do?" Were told what to do, did it, and in after life showed themselves men of faith, strength, vigor and activity. These revivals were manifestly the work of God; the Holy Spirit combined with, (or more properly) propelling the preaching of the Gospel. No enemy of revival work will say, that because great multitudes were converted at once under the preaching of the apostles, it was not the work of the Holy Spirit. The argument in this, is, that these conversions, though produced, (some of them) by continued effort, were genuine, and had in them all the experiences accompanying individual cases. If we oppose continued effort now and the conversion of many souls during one series of meetings, upon the supposition that it is the work of man, we are brought to the unavoidable admission that the apostolic revivals were the work of man and not of God, for in them was no lack of combined effort and numbers added. A genuine revival now, will have in its attending circumstances, like results as it did among them. No one, however opposed to revival work, will doubt that when one man is converted at a time, and whose genuine fruits of repentance, that it is not the work of the Lord, and makes him a "new creature." This being true, why then deny the same instrumentality in the simultaneous renewal of the hearts of members? Scores or even hundreds. Why is it, when one man is converted by preaching, we all rejoice, but when scores are aroused, and the same work effected in numbers of hearts by the same preaching, some doubt and attribute it to a less divine power? But, that real conversions did occur during these apostolic revivals, none dare dispute, and that some of the most intelligent, pious, and exemplary Christians that now adorn the church, were converted during series or revival meetings, is an established fact.

Genuine revivals are not therefore the work of man, but of God. This argument is not influenced in the least by the admitted fact, that some cases of supposed conversions at revivals, are afterwards proved spurious, by the conduct of the individuals. It only shows that like Simon Magus, they were either deceived or acted the hypocrite. And the records of churches blessed by genuine and properly conducted revivals, show, that there are no more "backsliders" comparatively from among those who professed then, than there are of those brought in the church under other circumstances. Some who join at the regular meetings, fall away, and the ratio is equal to that of the falling away of revival converts, if the revival is genuine. I am not an advocate of everything which passes under the name of revivals; I am not the friend of mere spurious excitements in religion. Excitement is not religion. Nor does it prove that we are religious, because we are excited, for men become excited in politics, finance, horse-racing, and most anything in which they may take an active part.

That an undue excitement may sometimes exist among professed Christians, and are called revivals, we must admit. And that in a live work of grace, animal excitement may exist, we will also admit. Men may so interfere with the work of God, as to drive away the true Spirit of God and turn the work into wild fanaticism. But this does not prove that genuine revivals are the work of man; nor does it form a legal objection to them. Tares will grow among the wheat whether sowed thick or thin; and shall we refuse to sow altogether, and condemn both and bind them in the same bundle to be burned?

David favored revivals when he prayed, "Wilt thou not revive us again, that thy people may rejoice in thee?" Psa.

85: 6. Habakkuk also prayed, "O Lord revive thy work in the midst of the years, in the midst of the years make known; in wrath remember mercy." Hab. 3: 2. No one will say, the great revivals held by the apostles on Pentecost, and at Ephesus, were the works of men. Any man now-a-days who contends that genuine revivals are the work of men, is either ignorant of their true nature, or an infidel, too prejudiced to see the truth. We do not want to be understood as saying, that God works without means, and the same means he works with on other occasions. The means are the same, only greater results from a more intense application of the same means. By preaching, prayer and labor, we do our part, and God gives the increase. We must plant and water, but God alone can give the increase.

Again, if genuine revivals are the work of God, it follows that all opponents of true revivals, are fighting against God himself. We are unavoidably brought to this solemn conclusion, which we suppose should make every opposer of the work of God tremble. Will not the blood of souls be required at the hands of such men? God has vindicated in a most glorious manner the revivings of his work, and woe be to that man who stands in the way of the triumphant march of the converting power of the Almighty.

GRACE, LOVE AND TRUTH.

BY B. F. MOOMAW.

JUST at this particular time, when looking over the columns of the BRETHREN AT WORK, and noticing the announcements of so long a number of Love-feasts, we think of the renewal of our covenant with Christ, and the pledges of fellowship with one another, as the children of God.

Brethren and sisters in the one glorious union of our common Brotherhood, when once more the candles are lighted to search for the leaven, that may be in our houses causing sourness, and if not removed, will dwarf our Christian character, and retard the profession of the cause we have espoused, it would seem especially appropriate that the mind should be devoted to the subject of examination. In doing this, we naturally enquire for an apostolic precedent, so that our reasonings and conclusions are directed and sustained by divine authority, and not by sensuality or human tradition, and for this purpose the eleventh chapter of first Corinthians is usually read as a basis of examination, and if properly understood is pre-eminently suited for the occasion, containing as it does, the elements of real Christian union, which is an essential constituent in the qualification for a Communion. These elements as I understand them exist in the following propositions: First a union in sentiment; Second a harmony in practice; Third a union in affection.

The first is contained in the introduction of the chapter in question, in which is set forth, clearly and forcibly, the great principle underlying the whole Christian system, and so ardently prayed for by the Son of God while agonizing in the garden of Gethsemane—while the purple blood drops were falling to the ground from his immaculate body, that his children might be one, even as he and the Father are one. For this, the apostle praised the Corinthian brethren; "that they remembered him, and kept the ordinances as he had delivered them unto them." For this purpose the church at Corinth was assembled to keep the ordinances; so far they were right. There was no controversy on this point. All agreed that the ordinances ought to be kept; and they intended to keep them, that is to observe them literally. Had they practiced them accordingly in the proper spirit and with suitable affection, there would have been no cause for complaint; but this was not the case, as the sequel clearly shows. In this very essential point they were fearfully delinquent. This point carefully considered, is a sufficient bar against the doctrine of free or open Communion. So long as there is such incongruity in sentiment as to the obligation to "keep the ordinances," there being such a palpable want of union, there cannot be a sacramental Communion.

Under the second proposition is contemplated not only a union in practice in the observance of the ordinances, but also non-conformity to the world, in dress, in pursuance of the great principles of peace, foregoing all the trifling amusements of whatever kind, keeping aloof from all oath-bound and secret organizations or all modern, human institutions, of whatever name they may be called, whether they claim only to be moral, social, or benevolent in their intention, or whether they propose to be an auxiliary to the church; the divine agency needs no such helps, and therefore all such should be carefully shunned as being nothing more than an insidious device of the arch enemy to divert, allure and decoy God's children, step by step, away from the path of duty prescribed, and even exemplified by our divine Master, the great Head of the church. This point should be carefully guarded in order to have union with Christ and fellowship with his true disciples, as a qualification for a holy Communion.

So far the Corinthian church, and so far the church of Christ at the present day may, in the main, be eligible to the Communion, yet we fear that in some instances, there may be a departure or an inclination to depart from "the simplicity which is in Christ." But in the third and last point is where the church at Corinth was at fault as indicated in Paul's lecture, commencing at the 17th verse. There were divisions among them, divided into parties, some for Paul, some for Apollos, and some for Cephas, followed up by envyings, jealousies, hatred, selfishness, ambition and strife, all of which disqualified them for the participation of the holy Communion, and subjected them to the discipline of the church, a separation from the church, as indicated by the expression, "There must also be heresies among you;" (a separation) for so the word at that time signified. These Corinthians exhibited their deformity in thus selfishly dividing themselves into parties and eating their own supper, thus insulting the Majesty of heaven, and bringing reproach and injury upon the church by this shameful manifestation of the want of that love and union that should characterize God's children everywhere and at all times.

While these incongruities and inconsistencies may not be visible among us as they were among the brethren at Corinth, they may, and it is to be feared that they do, secretly exist by far too frequently, and in the sight of God, just as obnoxious, and as detrimental to true happiness, and to the prosperity and success of our blessed Christianity; and may and do appear to the experienced and spiritual eye, in the following forms: Of these selfishness may be regarded among the most prominent, and is a peculiar characteristic of our race, the profession of Christianity notwithstanding; as was clearly manifest among the first disciples, and prompted the inquiry, "Who shall be the greatest in the kingdom?" and in order to get to the front and to obtain the "uppermost seats," various means are resorted to, fair and unfair. In some instances being endowed with a superior order of intellect, and a large share of grace, with a strong desire for the success of the cause, and a large fervent zeal for the glory of God, an industrious worker in the Lord's vineyard will steadily and surely advance to a position of eminence in the face of all hindering causes, and where these qualifications exist, there is no inclination to hinder the progress of others in that direction, but rather to encourage and assist other's efforts in the same direction. All this is commendable and should be emulated by all, and inspire the most profound Christian affection in the hearts of every one. Was this generally or universally the case, the White-winged Messenger would perch upon our banner every-where and at all times, and the word "fail" would soon be stricken from our Christian vocabulary. But unfortunately this is not the case; for there are others who are in some respects favorably endowed, which, if properly directed and applied, might be eminently useful, who, instead of employing their energy and talent to their own improvement, mentally and spiritually under the influence of the spirit of the monsters, Envy and Jealousy, by the dictates of which all sorts of devices are resorted to, and every considerable stratagem employed to disgrace and pull down the object of their hate, whom they conceive to be standing in their way to promotion, because they occupy a position in the mind of others a little above their own level. To accomplish this, if not able to find any unrighteousness in them like the accusers of the prophet Daniel; they will so manage to construe their brightest virtues into the gravest parts, insidiously finding fault of something about them, and if nothing else can be found, and it can be so manipulated as to get a run of popular sentiment, and a continuation of opposition and persecution, they will find fault with their subject, even of something about his or her person, as God has made them, and so exert an influence which, as to result in the organization of parties, each inspired with the spirit of their leader (which is generally found among the ministry), and embodied hate on one side and apprehension and distrust on the other; and thus union and affection, the grand essentials for Communion, are crushed out, spiritual growth is dwarfed, and the prosperity of the church paralyzed. And if at last the perpetrators of these enormities, are defeated in passing through the crucible of church discipline, and if allowed a membership in the church, they will lose no opportunity for exhibiting their want of love, by evading all social intercourse, even in some instances, going so far as this, that before they will decide to go to a neighboring meeting or Communion, will first have to know whether, A. B., or C., is going to be there, and all that A. B., or C., can do to secure their affection, is like casting pearl before the swine.

It is not pleasant to write such things, and were it possible to cover them with a cloak of charity, how gladly would we do it. If the three grand principles which stand at the head of this article, are found in the church, there will be but very little need to enquire any farther into the condition of the members as to their eligibility to the Christian Supper and holy Communion, but everything being comprehended in them all, further examination may be dispensed with; but if these are wanting, and we would propose to particularize upon minor things, it would be like trimming off the branches to destroy the tree, which would only encourage its growth.

NON-CONFORMITY.

BY DAVID E. EBY.

I HAVE never felt that any particular good would result from my writing, but I cannot help thinking a little less writing and a good deal more sound preaching and practicing would be considered of more real good; but as there is much said on the subject of non-conformity in dress, I feel like advancing a few arguments in favor of the humble garb. We often hear the argument advanced that, Peter was known by his speech and not by his garment, and that through all the dark ages, the true followers were only known by their profession, and not by their dress, as in the case of Menno Simon on the coach &c. But we must take in consideration, that we live under a different government. In all aristocratic or monarchial governments, people are divided into different classes; and so it was in the days of the apostles. We will take in consideration but two classes, the nobility and peasantry. The nobility dressed gay and in costly array, and followed every change of fashion, while the peasantry dressed in more humble raiment, in home-made cloth, and retained their fashion, as there was no inducement to change it, because the laboring class of people could not associate with the nobility, even if they would accumulate wealth and dress gay.

We will find the same in Europe today. In England there are lords and peasants, and a laboring man cannot become a lord only in rare cases. If a laboring man does get rich and dress gay, he can no longer associate with his former companions, and the lords consider him as nobody; so the poor fellow must stand alone. There is no inducement in aristocratic governments for the humble man to follow after the gay fashion; and when Christ chose the apostles, he did not go among the nobility, but called some out from among the humble fishermen. And we do not believe that they were dressed in purple and changeable array which were the fashionable colors at that time.

If we examine the Scriptures and history closely, we will find that very few of the aristocracy believed in Jesus. His teachings were too humble for the high and lofty mind. His teachings were more adapted to the humble class, consequently more readily accepted by that class of people. We have reason to believe that if any of the higher class accepted the teachings of Christ, and attached themselves to the followers of the meek and lowly Lamb, that they laid aside their costly robes and took up with the custom of the people they joined in the work of the Lord, as in the case of Menno Simon and Lollard. They were both Roman priests, but after they joined the Waldenses, we are informed they wore an humble-appearing dress, but in the United States, it is a different thing. Here we know no lords, no nobility; any man can elevate himself; any man that accumulates wealth, can dress in costly array, ride in fine carriages, furnish his house with costly furniture; can rank in the highest society. Here the temptations are very strong to follow after the fashions, especially since man is naturally inclined to elevate, rather than to abase himself; therefore it is very necessary that we deny ourselves of these worldly superfluities and keep in fashion with the humble, as we are commanded in 1 Tim. 2: 9; 1 Peter 3: 3, 4.

If we read the Scriptures carefully, we will not conform to the ever-changing fashions of the world. A man may preach on non-conformity with all the eloquence and power he can command, if he does not prove by example that he believes what he preaches, it will have little, if any effect for good. If all those who are placed in the church as house-keepers would set a good example of plainness in dress, there would not be half the trouble of getting all to conform to the order. But the cut of the garment alone is not wanting. If the Confederate soldier wanted to pass as a Union soldier, he needed only to put on the blue dress. Color had something to do with the passing.

The house-keeper's wives should also be particular in setting good examples in regard to dress and the covering as required by the Law of the Lord. Where the man is required to uncover his head, the woman is required to do the opposite, cover her head. When we go to the BRETHREN AT WORK office, and find our brethren reading and writing about the good and holy things of the Lord's house, with their heads uncovered, as God most surely directs, then we conclude that if we had a sister editor, she should labor with her head covered, with that modest and prettiest of all coverings, a clean, neat, white cap. Non-conformity to the world is a great subject; I have simply touched it in this brief article.

SEPARATE FROM THE WORLD.

BY A. BRICKER.

THE people whom Christ has chosen out of the world, are the children of God and constitute what is known in Scriptural language as "the church of God." Those who constitute this church are called out of the world. Christ says, "Because ye are not of the world, therefore the world hateth you." God has laws to govern his children. We read in Matt. 6: 24, "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." There are some, however, who have their names in the church who serve mammon, the world. They do not heed first Peter 3: 3, 4, 5, and Tim. 9: 10. These are God's rules. He has given them to his children and intends they shall be governed by them. Christ has said, "Ye are the light of the world: let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

Some members say, "the church is opposed to the fashions, so we shall not indulge in them ourselves, but we will rig and fix our children up as gay as the gayest, as fashionable as the most fashionable." Some one will say, now, "Religion don't consist in dress." That is all true, it does not, but let me say, the religion of Jesus Christ will change the outward as well as the inward man. If it does not, I would not give much for it. Christ said, "Ye shall know them by their fruits." An evil which I protest against, is professors of Christianity taking boys into saloons, and treating them to drinks and cigars. For when this is done, there follows puffing, smoking, foolish talking and jesting. The fruit is on the outside—we can all see it; and by it we should know the tree.

We have read a legend of a man who sold his soul to the devil. The conditions were: For a certain number of years this man was to have all his desires gratified by his satanic majesty at the expiration of which time, his soul was to be forfeited. When the time agreed upon had expired, the man was unwilling to fulfill his part of the contract, and asked the devil on what terms he could be released. The reply was, "If you will curse your God, I will release you." "No," said the man, "I cannot curse the Being whose nature is love—give me something less fearfully wicked." "Then kill your father" replied the devil, "and you shall go free." "No" answered the man, "that is too horrible to think of for even a moment. I will not commit so great a crime. Are there no other conditions?" "One more" the devil replied, "you must get drunk." "That is very easy to do," the man answered, "and I accept your last proposition. I cannot kill my father, I will not curse my God, but I can get drunk, and when I get sober, all will be well." Accordingly, he soon became drunk, and when in this condition, he chanced to meet his father, who upbraided him, which so excited the ire of the drunken and half-crazed man, that he slew his father, cursed his God, then fell down dead, and the devil had him sure.

This so faithfully portrays the possible, nay more, the probable result of drunkenness, that comment is unnecessary. The person who allows himself to become addicted to pride and intemperance is ripe for almost any crime. Let us avoid the very appearance of evil.

THE MOTHER MOLDS THE MAN.

WHAT it is the mother who molds the man, is a sentiment beautifully illustrated by the following recorded observation of a shrewd writer: "When I lived among the Choctaw Indians, I held a consultation with one of their chiefs, respecting the successive stages of their progress in the arts of civilized life; and among other things, he informed me that at their start they fell into a great mistake—they only sent boys to school. These boys came home intelligent men, but they married uneducated and uncivilized wives—and the uniform result was, their children were all like their mothers. The father soon lost all his interest in both wife and children. 'And now,' said he, 'if we were to educate but one class of our children, we should choose the girls, for when they become mothers, they educate their sons.' This is the point and it is true. No nation can become fully enlightened, when mothers are not in a good degree qualified to discharge the duties of the home work of education."

No matter how pious men are, the moment they place policy before principle, they become incapable of doing right, and are transformed into the most odious tools of despotism.

NO RETREATING.

LOOKING over the conflicts that are coming up from the four corners of the earth, what position are you going to take? Is not your work full of care and vexation? These are questions that reach us sometimes, and at this time are worthy of fair and candid answers.

What position are you going to take? From the first we planted our feet on the Rock, the "one Lord" of heaven and earth. The grace of God has been with us thus far, and by the same grace we expect to remain on the immovable Rock, the everlasting Foundation. On our part there is not the least disposition to slide off. We have no idea of forsaking a single principle in the one grand religious system set up and established by Christ and the apostles. The armor is not worn out, the shield is not impaired, nor has the sword of the Spirit lost any of its keenness to us. There is no pay in going backward. Pressing forward towards the prize is the proper direction for us. The field in which to labor is before us, and those who get weary and fall back will likely occupy the fields that are behind. There is a great demand abroad for true men and women. The places behind are always kept filled.

The distinctive idea—the one Book, containing the one revealed will of God to man, for man, is the great Storehouse, the inexhaustible Treasury from which an indulgent Father ever helps us to draw. The one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one hope, one body, the ground and pillar of the Truth, described and governed by the one Law of the Holy Jesus, the Crucified, prescribed for the cure of the sinner and the well-being of the saint, afford subjects rich enough for any pen. The question, then, is not, "Where are you going to stand, but will you continue to stand on the one Rock—the never-failing Foundation?" Only by the grace which the Father supplyeth will we so do. We made no provision for retreating—never thought of it, have had no occasion to go that way. The Lord made no provision for His people to go backward, for the simple reason that they need not. With them it is advance all the time. Their King and Captain is a sure Leader. He wins all the battles he fights, and fights only to win. A King who is always victorious needs no provision for retreating. A man who serves under this King will not have his boat upset by the theological breezes that are continually beating against its sails. The only true Captain has hold of its helm, and he will guide the good old vessel over the mighty waves of unbelief and corruption.

You have read the ideas already given you the past few years. You did not pay for them, and read them, simply to please us, but to see if we were going the right way, to get some encouragement in the good old way. Whether you have received what you sought, you know. What a pity if none of us should have become better since we first learned to know each other!

It is our desire to advocate the one religion of the New Testament, not as set forth therein, nor a part of what it demands, but precisely as set forth by the Lord Jesus and the apostles. To maintain and advocate the entire worship, taught and practiced by the disciples and early Christians; to urge purity and holiness of character, is the work and business of every child, born of God. To advocate the way of evangelizing as handed down by the apostles—and all who did as they did—to advocate, maintain and defend the old order of government, introduced by Inspiration, to advocate the equality of God's people,—to believe, defend and maintain all that came from the Lord, and to oppose all that did not come from Him, is work that we seek not to shun. You can understand this. If any among us are not for the one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one hope, the prescribed worship of the Lord, the whole armor of God, the way of salvation, the old Jerusalem order of things, the equality of God's people, the downfall of caste, the destruction of pride, the overthrow of covetousness, the perpetuation of the apostolic way of evangelizing, I would like to see them come out and tell what they are for. There is no neutral ground. "He that is not with me is against me." You must be either for King Jesus, his prescribed, blood-sprinkled order, or else against Him, against His system.

True and faithful editors court neither policy nor popularity. With them truth stands first in order. If they would succeed in the Lord's work they must permit no fleshly arm between them and the Lord. The main questions with godly editors, and with godly farmers, and godly mechanics, are, "Is it right?" "Is it the truth?" "Will it do men good?" Mistakes will be made, for we have not yet attained unto perfection in our work, but if the wrong way is foreseen it shall be avoided. There is no joy in the wrong way. The wrong way is always crowded with men and women, while the right way has only a few here and there.

"Is not your work full of care and vexation?" Yes; but what of that? That does not signify failure, defeat. Is not the gold made brighter, freed from all dross, by running it through the fire? Vexation is only another name for tribulation; and did not Christ, our King, say, "In the world ye shall have tribulation?" Then, too, brother Paul declares, that "tribulation worketh patience; and patience experience; and experience hope;" and hope makes no man ashamed. Now if vexation works patience in a man, then is he not a gainer by vexation? No man vexes and abuses another with the intention of making him better, yet that is often the result. One sows tribulation with the purpose of having vengeance, and the result is, the one who receives it meekly, is made better by it. "Great is the mystery of godliness." The Lord enable all to bear with meekness and resignation, the trials and tribulations of this life. "Over yonder" they will not be known.

Perhaps no other class of men learn the weak points in human nature as do editors. They see them daily. The greater part of their business comes through the mails, and as mail matter is generally had from men's view, there is an opportunity to write things that savor strongly of "bitterness." If a man is still afflicted a little with "the old man," and he thinks the editors have erred in judgment, the "envelope" affords him an excellent chance to pour out his "bitterness" upon them. Thus, and in many other ways, editors are enabled to learn things which work patience and experience.

The Lord giving grace, the writer shall, at the beginning of Vol. 4, commence a series of articles on "The Old Order." I shall not study how to pass around error and false theories, but how to run the plowshare of truth through the rubbish that has gathered here and there upon the highway of holiness. Not having been set for the defense of men's opinions, but "for the defense of the Gospel," there is no disposition to evade the work. The number who are defending opinions and the commandments of men, is legion; but the few are advocating and defending the faith of God. On this side we have arranged ourselves, and here we mean to labor, and fight, and come off conquerors with Him who leads in the battle. We want no one to ask us to preach and advocate a progressive religion. We are fixed in the unprogressive, unchangeable system of the Lord, Christ. We are willing to grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth, but the thing by which we grow must not be progressive. Rain, sunshine, and heat are essential to a thorough development of the blade of grass, but they are not progressive. Sunshine is sunshine; no more, no less. So with the religion of Jesus. It is religion; not only religion, but divine, unchangeable, unprogressive religion. When Inspiration caused the last word in the last chapter of God's great Book to be written, nothing was to be added to, nor taken from, that which was written. By this decree we stand. The Lord help all to stand firm, and hold to the one true system of religion.

A YEAR OF TROUBLES.

IN London is an almanac maker who is gaining some reputation by his remarkable predictions. The almanac, referred to, has been published nearly fifty years, and abounds in predictions based on the conjunctions and aspects of planets. The writer says:

"In February, Saturn and Mars will combine to stir up trouble in Europe, Mexico, and India. In March, many deeds of vengeance will be perpetrated in Russia; danger will lurk in the path of the Emperor of Germany March 11; a great clerical scandal will be developed in England; there will be war and famine in India and China, and in this country discord between President and people, trouble with the Indians, and religious disputes, leading to scenes of violence.

"In April the religious world will be greatly agitated. In May, railway companies will experience great adverse fluctuations of their securities. In June there will be war in Austria, Turkey, and Greece; and in this country cruel epidemic fever, cattle disease, a high birth rate, a prosperous dramatic season, and good fortune to the advocates of woman suffrage; and so on, until December, when more than one dynasty in Europe will tremble, the Socialists become a terror to society, and the uprising of the Greek and Slav races shake Eastern Europe to its foundations.

In 1853 it was predicted that earthquakes would occur near Carthage about July 16th. On the 15th there was an earthquake at Canana, near Carthage, in which 4,000 persons lost their lives. In 1876 it was predicted that there would be misfortunes on American railroads and a great catastrophe. The Ashtabula horror occurred Dec. 28. For July, 1878, it was predicted that there would be in America "many violent, sudden and terrible deaths by sunstroke."

Having made several good guesses in the course of fifty years, the almanac astrologer points with pride to his predictions for the future, and asks the people to believe in his system. The predictions made with those made by other almanac prophets, and are curious, to say the least.

The threatening condition of things among the powers in the East, makes these predictions more interesting than they would otherwise be.

From brother D. B. Metzger, we have the following: The writing tablets of which you sent me a sample, are just the thing for those who feel moved to write for the press. They are handy, good and cheap—excellent. Make them known to our readers, they are equally as good for common letter writing, and few will do without them when they give them a trial. Of course, to get the good out of anything, we must needs learn to appreciate it. The tablets are put up in a neat and convenient form, containing one hundred half sheets ruled on one side only. It makes considerable difference to compositors whether the paper is large or small, hence these tablets are just the thing for those who write for the press. Price twenty-five cents.

TALMAGE has been preaching to large audiences on "The Four Gates of Hell," viz. "Impure literature," "The dissolute dance," "Indecent apparel," and "Alcoholic beverages." In starting out he declared that, "With the hammer of God's truth, I shall pound upon the brazen panels, and with the light of God's truth, I shall flash light upon their shining hinges." When he came to the third "gate," "Indecent apparel," he said: "I am told, that a new fashion of female dress is about coming in from Paris which is most shocking to all right-conscience. (At this statement the women in the audience looked at one another in surprise.) Oh, I charge you Christian women, neither by style of dress nor adjustment of apparel to become administrators of evil. Perhaps no one else will dare tell you this fact, so I will tell it to you, that multitudes of men owe their eternal damnation to the boldness of female attire. (Applause and a few hisses.) You wonder that the city of Tyre was destroyed. Have you ever seen the fashion plates of that city? I'll show them to you." So saying Mr. Talmage picked up the Bible and read the passage wherein the daughters of Tyre are described as using a mourning gate, whimples and erasing-pins. "Do you wonder," said he, "that the Lord blotted out that place?"

It will be seen, that the "hisses" are apt to come when a man makes bold to denounce indecent apparel. Satan generally makes a noise when his nefarious work is exposed.

An observing writer truthfully says, "Some tolerably good people listen to a sermon as they do to the Declaration of Independence, not from real interest, but out of respect."

MANY seem to think and act as if they never heard "whether there be any Holy Ghost." "Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed," seems never to have entered their mind. A good many are claiming to have received the Holy Ghost before they believed, or while they were believing, but the important question is, Have you received the Holy Ghost since you believed?

It is reported that somewhere in Missouri a Baptist member called for a letter, and upon that letter joined the Campbellites. The question is asked, "What shall the church do in such a case?" We say, let the church take up the case, and deal with that member for heresy. Titus 3: 10—Battle Flag.

Hold up, Doctor, are you not living in a glass house? How about "narrow-mindedness?" It seems to be spreading; it seems to be no longer a "local disease."

VERMONT is alarmed, and justly too, about her divorce laws. The Chronicle says: "That there is urgent need of some action in regard to the question of divorce, no one can doubt who is at all conversant with facts. The present condition of things in our State is alarming. Unless something is done, it cannot but grow worse, until Vermont shall become a by-word and reproach among men." Other States are in a similar condition, and until there is a return to the Bible on this point by all denominations, there can be but little hope for genuine, fixed reform.

ON the night of the 7th inst., the remains of the late millionaire, A. T. Stewart were stolen from their resting place in New York city. The deed was done, evidently with the hope of obtaining a large ransom for the return of the corpse. A reward of $25,000 has been offered for the recovery of the body. An advertisement has appeared in the Herald, offering to produce the body for $100,000. The robbers seem to place a high estimate upon it. Truly we have come into "perilous times," for children are stolen, graves are robbed, and crimes of every hue and character are constantly being perpetrated.

To be brief, pointed and entertaining in writing, is an art worthy every writer's attention. Some subjects need elaboration, but to string out an article just to fill up, is to court inattention by most readers. If you would be heard, and to do good you must have hearers, boil down your articles, and be sure to thicken well with pure Gospel, charity-sweetness. Many long articles that go into the waste basket, contain some good kernels of truth, but editors have neither time nor disposition to turn over so much chaff for so little wheat. If a man would say much in a few words he must study, and study means work.

THE President of the United States has issued a proclamation requesting all the people to withdraw themselves from secular cares and labors, and meet together on the 28th inst at their respective places of worship, and give thanks to Almighty God for His mercies and pray Him to continue the same to us as a nation. The pestilence which visited a portion of our country and carried away thousands of persons, has about ceased, and the nation should, in all meekness, feel grateful. In harmony with 1 Peter 2: 13, we commend this request of our chief Magistrate to the prayerful consideration of all the people of God.

WE call attention to brother B. F. Monnow's article found on another page of this issue. He deals in truths which, though sad to think about, are too apparent in many localities. Bitter envy and jealousies manifest themselves, neighborhoods and societies are disturbed, perplexed or broken up, and misery is strewn in families and churches until numbers of souls are dragged down to ruin. It is perhaps useless to try to reach those who sow discord and strife, either by preaching or through the papers, for in most cases their eyes and ears have waxed dull, and no balm can effect a cure. But it is well to warn those who will hear—to admonish those who are leaning towards that crooked way.

A FEW OBSERVATIONS.

NUMBER II.

THE question is asked, Will men of education believe and preach the doctrine of non-conformity? If they believe and preach the Bible doctrine, they will. Then some of our best educated and most influential men we have in the church, believe, practice and preach this doctrine. Paul was a finely educated and gifted man and he preached non-conformity. The best informed man who ever graced this earth was Jesus Christ, and he preached the same doctrine.

It is the want of proper knowledge that prompts people to adorn themselves with jewelry and ornamental trimmings. The wearing of jewelry is evidence of the fact that the civilized races have not yet been fully redeemed from the barbarism in which they once groped. The Mosaic law was not perfect for all time. It was given to a class of people in the midst of barbarous habits, hence instead of removing and repudiating the wearing of jewelry and ornaments, the Lord commanded that certain things be worn, having a spiritual signification—pointing the people to a higher and nobler object, thus preparing them for a law that would do away with all superfluities. This law has now come—was preached by Christ and the apostles, and handed down to us by them. On these points the Gospel harmonizes with all true principles of reasoning, and because of a lack of an understanding of these principles, people have been induced to adopt unnatural and unhealthy modes of dressing. Let the true principles of reason be carefully taught in our schools and people will soon learn to have too much sense to destroy their health by tight lacing, or comfort by tight shoes. They will learn that the spending of time to decorate the body is all foolishness, and a waste of time that might be better employed.

I am glad to know that many of our educated brethren are speaking out on the question of non-conformity. We would like to see every one of them come out and take a square stand in defense of the doctrine, for by so doing they will exert a great influence in behalf of the right. But if those who are finely educated, take a stand against the Bible doctrine of plainness, and run off into the vain fashions of the world, it will then be evident that education, as taught in colleges, is an injury to pure Christianity. This is my way of reasoning with the advocates of schools privately, and now think the time has come to thus reason publicly. I am just as much of a lover of education as any brother in America, but want to see it carefully guarded. I do not want to see fashionably adorned brethren at the head of any enterprise among us, for their position enables them to exercise great influence, especially among young people, who will follow their example more or less. Hence the importance of having the right kind of men connected with our public institutions. These seats of learning may become either a curse or a blessing to the church, and the advocates of them have the power to say which.

We have thousands of good, honest brethren who are opposed to advanced education. They are honest in the matter. They mean it all well, and think these public institutions are going to ruin the church. How are you going to convince them they are wrong? By writing in defense of education? Never, while the world stands can you convince them that way. By preaching in defense of education? That will only make matters worse. I tell you how you can do it, and successfully, too, at that. Let all the advocates of schools and education come right square out in defense of the plain Gospel order of the church. Let them come into the order themselves, and not only teach it, but practice it. Let the change commence in the heart, by a "renewing of the mind," and then let the tree be known by its fruits. Do this and I will guarantee that you will convince more people that education is beneficial, than by all your lectures and writings combined.

I do not mean that you shall dress plain just to convince certain brethren, but I mean that you must do it because the Lord requires it. Do it out of respect to the Lord and in honor to his cause, and thereby honor God with your education. Let the sisters lay aside their ruffles and ornamental trimmings. And if any should have violated the Gospel enough to wear fine apparel and jewelry let them speedily lay that aside and adorn themselves in modest apparel. Paul, in Rom. 12, requested the Roman brethren to "prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God" in being transformed by the renewing of their minds. He wanted them to prove something by practicing the doctrine of non-conformity. Now that is just what we want our brethren to do. We are an earnest advocate of a good education and want our people to prove its usefulness by living out the Gospel in all its parts. We have some finely educated brethren who are doing this. They are great believers in education, but argue more in its defense by using it in sustaining the order and practice of the church than they do in writing.

One great difficulty we have had to contend with heretofore is, that some of the advocates of education opposed the doctrine of non-conformity, thereby using their education to overthrow the order and practice of the church. Such work as that only confirms many of our brethren in their long settled convictions. They believe that learning produces pride and point to these finely dressed, well educated brethren to prove their position. Now let us have some improvement in this direction. Let our lovers of education prove by their appearance and teaching, that learning promotes plainness instead of pride and extravagance. We want to "prove all things and hold fast that which is good." If education cannot be proven to be good we do not want it, but if it can be proven then hold fast to it. J. D. M.

I'LL TRY AGAIN.

A BROTHER sends an article for publication and says: "This is the first article I ever wrote for a paper. If you think it not worthy, throw it into the waste basket, and then I'll try again."

This has the true ring in it. There is no uncertain sound about these words. He does not say, "If you do not think it worthy a place, return it to me at your own expense," nor does he say, "If you reject it, I shall not write another," but if it goes into the waste basket, "then I'll try again." Such a writer must make his mark. No difference if his first, his second and third articles, or half of all he writes, goes into the waste basket, he will try again. That man is not simply writing to be heard, but to become better himself. We admire this trait in a writer. It don't show the least trace of selfishness.

Sometimes writers feel bad because their articles never appear. Do you know that in this office even the editors' articles are sometimes rejected? We suppose a good many that appear should have been rejected, for we have not perfectly learned the art, what to leave out, but we aim to publish only such matter as will edify the church and convince the sinner that he is going the wrong way. No man should suppose that all which he writes, must come before the public, for there is too much that is lame in all of us, and the lame part is always hobbling to the front.

We wish to encourage all to write for the BRETHREN AT WORK. The church needs all the good thoughts, all the true thoughts that are in it, for its edification. Then let them come out; but if, in trying to get out the good thoughts, some erroneous ones should mix in, thus necessitating the consignment of all to the waste basket, do not be discouraged, but try again. And in trying study how to express your ideas in the fewest words possible. Terseness and clearness of expression are accomplishments that must be learned, and to learn, we must study, must think. "Whatever you do in word or deed," do all to the honor and glory of God, and you shall be blessed. M. M. E.

ECHOES FROM THE EAST.

Visiting the Sick—A Becoming Request—An Aged Believer—A "Gipsy" Camp—Our Lord's Day Services.

NUMBER XI.

(From our Special Correspondent.)

AT an early hour yesterday-morn it was our privilege to take a seat with Dr. G. W. Boteler, our brother and "beloved physician," as previously arranged, to visit some of the afflicted believers among us before our meeting. Our ride was both pleasant and interesting, as we were gratified to learn that the doctor, our brother, is as much concerned for the peace and welfare of the church, the defense and perpetuation of the doctrine, and the uniformity of practice in our church order, as when we first became acquainted with him. Sometimes brethren get divided a little in their views, and the result is they become a little divided in practice. Dear brethren, this ought not so to be. Keep the "little foxes" out, and the "wolves" too. Let us have a general union of sentiment among us, consistent with the faith we embraced, and then shall we see the beauty of the Psalmist's expression: "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!"

Our first call was at the house of a widowed sister where her sister-in-law is prostrated with that dread disease—consumption. Little can be done for this dear, afflicted sister in Christ to restore her to healthful enjoyments; but the alms, and prayers, and encouragement of brethren and sisters will do much to comfort and sustain. O brother, be a brother indeed. O sister, be a sister in truth. See after your worthy poor—your Lord's afflicted ones. We were made to rejoice in finding this dear sister faithful,—even to the wearing of the sisters' church covering, as vindicated by the apostle Paul. This is one of the evidences of her love for the church, and may she ever in all things find her greatest delight in following her Lord and Master. Long shall we remember her parting words: "Remember me to the Lord." None but a child of grace can say these words as she said them. May the Lord abundantly remember her, for the Lord's remembrance is salvation.

We next called to see the oldest member in our congregation, who was ninety-six years old on the first of May last. This venerable sister is very ill, but some hopes are entertained that she may recover for a time. Her great feebleness rendered her unapproachable on the subject of religion, but we well remember her expressed interest in religion on the last two occasions of the yearly visit.

We now started in the direction of the Amsterdam meeting-house; but, by the way, called at a "gipsy camp" where the doctor had another patient. The chief's wife was very ill. We note that these gipsies were high-toned and wealthy, judging from what we saw from our carriage. They had upwards of 50 horses, some very fine stock. We noticed about a dozen wagons well adapted to their nomadic life. These wagons were painted in fancy style, and trimmed within with lace, and furnished with the articles of a first class wardrobe and fine furniture.

But dear Christian reader, I was made to think that we, too, are a traveling people. Our tents are not like those of the gipsies among the pines, but we have tented in the wilderness of this world. We wander hither and thither, but have a definite purpose in view—the salvation of our souls. We are journeying to "a better country" where no sin nor sorrow is. The Lord furnishes us with all things necessary for the journey. More than this: He leads us. He protects us, He strengthens us. We may sometimes get spiritually sick, but we need only give ourselves into the care and treatment of the Physician of souls, and He will heal and enable us to go on our way rejoicing in His love and mercy and power. O Christian, whoever you be, have you learned well the lesson that this world is not your home? If so, see that your preparation is made in due time for your important departure. We are "Pilgrims and strangers," according to the apostle Peter's teaching. Let us be up and going forward. May our best efforts be made on the Lord's side, that we may know Him and the power of His resurrection.

Our meeting was opened by the singing of that soul-stirring hymn—

"How tedious and tasteless the HOURS,
When Jesus no longer I see!"

The 48th hymn was also sung, and exhortation to prayer made. A visiting brother read 2 Cor. 5. Brother Snider spoke on the 19th verse, and we drew the following points:

- I. The God-man.
II. The Sin-propitiation.
III. The reconciling word.

Another brother offered some remarks and the 231st hymn. After prayer, we joined in

"Press me not, O gentle SAVIOR,
Hear my humble PRAY;
While on others Thou art smiling,
Do not pass ME BY."

We now joined our little family and spent the afternoon in a very dear Christian family, where father, mother and daughter rejoice together in hope of the glory of God. O what consolation there is in Christ! A balm for every wound, a cordial for every fear. His very name is music, sweetest music. It drives away our fear and soothes all our sorrows. He is our refuge and our Foundation. O what a precious Savior we have! Let us trust Him, and patiently labor in the upbuilding of His Kingdom, and after a little while we will sit down together with all the faithful in the Kingdom triumphant on high.

Peace be with all who love the Lord Jesus sincerely.

Yours in blessed hope of life in Immanuel's land. D. D. M.

Waynesboro, Pa., Oct. 28th, 1878.

SHARP QUESTIONS.

THE Presbyterian Journal makes the following points, calling them conundrums:

- 1. If a professing Christian pays five dollars a year toward supporting his church, and twenty-five toward the Masonic institution, which does he love the most, religion or Masonry?
2. If he pays nothing for the church, on the ground that all he can spare from necessary expenses must be paid to the Young Men's Christian Association, which does he consider of the greatest importance, that association or the church?
3. If he pays ten dollars for the church, and twenty for tobacco, are we to understand that tobacco is worth just twice as much as religion?
4. If he practices strict economy only in curtailing his church expenses, what inference can we justly draw?—Selected.

THE LAW ON MARRIAGE.

BY C. P. DETWEILER.

"The wife is bound by the law as long as her husband liveth; but if her husband be dead, she is at liberty to be married to whom she will; only in the Lord."—1 Cor. 7: 39.

THE question concerning this Scripture may be asked, What has the law to do in the marriage relation with us who are not under the law, but under grace? It seems that we do not all grasp the subject of the law and the Gospel and their relation to each other, alike.

To rightly divide the word of truth on any subject, we must not suppose that the Old and the New Testament were both finished in writing and put together when Paul wrote to Timothy, and that in order to "rightly divide" it he had nothing to do but to run his scissors between Malachi and Matthew. On the contrary, all that then existed of what we call the New Testament consisted in a few letters scattered here and there, some of them having been addressed to churches, and some to private individuals. It was hardly expected by the early Christians, that the written law of the former dispensation should be generally circulated among the Gentile Christians. Yet this volume furnished the texts generally upon which the Gospel was preached, especially to those who had some knowledge of the "law and the prophets," and Peter, in his first epistle, says of them, "We have also a more sure word of prophecy; wherunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day-star arises in your hearts."

As a rule of life, the written law of God, concerning our duties to God and to our fellow-man in the daily affairs of life, the rules of justice between man and man under which the marriage obligations come, are as correct now as they ever were. Provisionary laws may change with circumstances, but principles never change. They are as eternal as God himself; and those laws which were based directly on the principles of right, among which were the ten commandments, were never done away on the ground of inappropriateness as rules of Christian life, but on account of their inefficiency as a means of righteousness and justification to man.

Man, that is born in sin, cannot be brought into a state of justification by the instrumentality of a written catalogue of moral obligations however correct they may be in principle. Paul says in Gal. 3: 21, "If there had been a law given which could have given life, verily righteousness should have been by the law." How can a man in all this wide world be saved by law when by the principle of moral law a single violation of one command is death? Paul says, "The law is spiritual, but I am carnal, sold under sin." Again he says, "The law is holy, and the commandment holy, and just, and good." And again, "I delight in the law of God after the inward man." The fact is, we are by nature sinners, and the law, in convicting us of sin, becomes "our school-master to bring us unto Christ," and "There is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." Paul says, "We do not make void the law by faith, but we establish it." Looking at the law from this stand-point, we need not wonder that Paul refers to it as authority in speaking of the marriage obligations. There was nothing inconsistent in it. "The fruits of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, and temperance, against such, there is no law." Gal. 5: 22, 23. The Christian who grasps simply at the letter, for his rule of life, has not yet learned everything about Christianity.

It is no part of the economy of redemption that the Christian is to have his rule of life all laid down in the New Testament in detail. There is no commandment in the New Testi-ment commanding us to keep the Sabbath day holy, or the first day of the week, either. Neither does it fix the limits of marriage in regard to blood relations, and yet the man who marries a first cousin or some other near kin, commits a sin against God, against the laws of nature, and against his posterity. To feel after the letter, and nothing more, is to grasp below the mark. Those who are born of God and have His law written in their inward parts, need not have all their moral duties itemized. A willing mind to take up the cross daily, and a desire to crucify the flesh, with all the lusts thereof, are the requisites to accepted discipleship, and the sequel to the faith which opens the "hidden treasures of wisdom and knowledge." Finally, in this faith, "If any one lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally and upbraideth not, and it shall be given him."

THE JUG FESTIVAL.

BY J. F. EBERSOLE.

WE read an account recently, of what is termed, the "Jug Festival," which is being introduced in some places for the purpose of raising money to pay church debts, &c. It is something like this: Each person takes something in a jug to the appointed place, where the jugs are sold to the highest bidder. The curious are expected to pay big prices for what may be termed the "pig in the poke." Since reading of it, we have been made to wonder. We wonder whether they had any "jug festivals" in the Savior's time! when the brethren and sisters could take their jugs and place them in the common stock for benevolent purposes! where Peter, James and John could contend with each other as to who was able to buy the largest jug! And there was Judas, too, of course he would be in favor of it since it would afford him an excellent opportunity to replenish the treasury, for he had the bag and bore what was put in it! We wonder if some modern Judas did not conceive the idea of the "jug festival" with a view of having the treasury replenished!

We suppose that the custom had declined in Paul's time, for in writing to Timothy he tells him to bring the cloaks, books and parchments with him when he came, but says nothing about bringing a jug along. It remains for modern Christianity to introduce customs that are even denounced by the better class of non-professors.

NEITHER HOT NOR COLD.

BY ENOCH EBY.

"Because thou art lukewarm and neither cold nor hot, I will spew thee out of my mouth."

THE above text of Scripture is spoken to the Laodicean church, and describes a condition of mournful indifference and carelessness. They were not cold, nor were they hot; they were not infidels, yet they were not earnest believers; they did not oppose the Gospel, neither did they defend it; they were not working mischief, neither were they doing any great good; they were not disreputable in moral character, but they were not distinguished for holiness; they were not altogether irreligious, but they were not enthusiastic in piety nor eminent for zeal.

The Lord did not reprove them for neglect of duty, so much as the manner in which it was performed. Good things were maintained among them, but they did not make too much of them. The right things may have been done, but as to doing them with all their might and soul and strength, was an idea foreign to their minds and feelings. They were not so cold as to abandon their work entirely, to give up their meetings, or to reject the Gospel; if they did so, then they could be convinced of their error and brought to repentance. But on the other hand, they were neither hot for the truth, nor for conversions, or hot for holiness, they are not fiery enough to burn up the stubble of sin, nor zealous enough to make Satan angry, nor fervent enough to make a living sacrifice of themselves upon the altar of God. They are "neither cold nor hot."

When a church gets into the condition of half-hearted faith, tolerating the Gospel, but having a sweet tooth for error, they do far more harm to their age than down-right heretics. It is harder for the minister of the Gospel, to labor successfully for the Lord, with a lukewarm church, wrongly educated, than it would be to commence without a church. He can do more with one dozen good, earnest workers, than five hundred drones, who feel satisfied to live from the honey gathered by the hard labor of others. Better nothing than lukewarmness.

Alas this state of lukewarmness is so congenial to human nature, that it is hard to get people out of it. Cold makes us shiver, and great heat causes pain; but a tepid bath is comfort itself. The world is always at peace with a lukewarm church, and such a church is always pleased with itself, and may think that they are rich and have need of nothing, and yet be poor, and blind, and naked and miserable. She is always ready to say, "I am not miserly," but will give as little as she can to the cause of Christ. We will not altogether forsake the house of worship, but will go as seldom as we can. We will not altogether forsake the people to whom we belong, but we will also mingle with the popular, fashionable churches, in order to gain society suitable to the carnal tastes and desires of our children. How much of this there is abroad in the world! Compromise is the order of the day. Thousands are for God and mammon, Christ and Belial, truth and error, and so are "neither cold nor hot."

Do I speak somewhat strongly? Not so strongly as my Master, for he says, "I will spew thee out of my mouth." He is displeased with such conduct, it sickens him and he will not endure it. Hence the language of our text, "I will spew thee out of my mouth."

Dear reader, pause for a moment, and consider well what a lamentable, miserable, God-hating, and devil-pleasing condition the lukewarm professor is in. Should any of us have fallen into it, let us speedily inquire for the remedy. Here it is, "I counsel thee to buy of me, gold tried in the fire," that we may be rich, and raiment that we may be clothed, and eye salve to anoint our eyes that we may see; and I feel assured dear brethren and sisters, if we follow the above counsel, we will soon be able to see ourselves as the Lord sees us. If a cold, formal religion has blinded our eyes with self-righteousness, apply a little of the eye salve—the Word of God, every evening before retiring to bed, warming it in with a fervent prayer, and in the morning, before you enter upon the duties and concerns of the day, renew the application and follow the practice regularly, with a desire to see, and your spiritual eyes will soon be opened. The Word of the Lord has opened the eyes of more than one, even if they were born blind; but we must exercise faith, and when our eyes are open, and can see clearly, we will soon discover our own filthy rags, not sufficient to hide our shame. What will we do then? sew fig leaves together and make another of our own? No, but we will go to Jesus, and he will give us a robe, washed in his own blood. He gave Adam and Eve goat's skins, and to get these, he must shed blood, so Jesus' blood must be shed, before we can wash and make our robes white; and that one that wears the beautiful robe of Jesus' righteousness, and keeps it unspotted from the world, has purchased the gold tried in the fire, for it will never perish, hence richer than if he possessed all the gold that perisheth. O come then and buy.

CAN YOU READ?

A STUDENT at the theological seminary at Andover, who had an excellent opinion of his own talent, on one occasion asked the professor who taught elocution:

"What do I specially need to learn in this department?"

"You ought just to learn to read," said the professor.

"Oh, I can read now," replied the student.

The professor handed the young man a Testament, and pointing to Luke 24: 25, he asked him to read that. The student read: "Then he said unto them, O fools and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken."

"Ah," said the professor, "they were fools for believing the prophets, were they?"

Of course that was not right, and so the young man tried again.

"O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken."

"The prophets, then, were sometimes liars?" asked the professor.

"No. O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken."

"According to this reading," the professor suggested, "the prophets were notorious liars." This was not a satisfactory conclusion, and another trial was made. "O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken."

"I see now," said the professor, "the prophets wrote the truth, but they spoke falsehoods."

This last criticism discouraged the student, and he admitted that he knew not how to read. Who can read it correctly?

BETTER BEEN BURIED.

THE well-known anti-tobacco man, George Trask, tells the following of himself:

"About fifteen years ago we gave a lecture in which we aimed to show that, as the common use of tobacco takes away desire for food, blood, muscle, health and strength, it must, without fail, shorten life, and if so, the habit would at last lead to the person killing himself, hence a breaking of the command of God, 'Thou shalt not kill.'"

"As we closed, the preacher rose and said:—'I believe the argument in this lecture is final; I believe thousands who use tobacco are poisoned to death and cut short their lives. But I have a hard case to solve, and I wish Mr. Trask to solve it. I know a man within ten miles of this place, who smoked his pipe till the day of his death; and he lived to be 104 years of age.'"

"We confess we were puzzled. The question was to the point and the people laughed at our expense. At last we hit upon the Socratic style of reasoning, and questions helped us out of the trouble. Sir, I asked, are you sure the old man lived and smoked till he was 104? 'Yes,' he replied. How did he look? 'He looked like an Egyptian mummy.' Had he moral feelings? 'O, no; he seemed to have no sense of God or religion whatever.' Did he manifest any public spirit? Did he like good schools, good roads, good order and the like? 'Oh, no; no more than a mud turtle or oyster.' Had he a family? 'Yes, a large one and a mean one—altogether too large.' Did he love his family? 'No, I think not.' Did he hate his family? 'No, I think not.' All in a word—did he love anybody or hate anybody, dead or alive, in this world or in any world? 'No, I think not.' Well, well, brother; the conclusion of the whole matter is simply this—the old man was dead fifty years ago, only you did not bury him!"

ALONE WITH JESUS.

BY EMILY R. STIFLER.

THINK of it, dear reader, alone with that precious Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world. Alone with Him who will heal all our sorrows, wounds and heart-lacerations. Alone with Him whose sweat-drops were as great drops of blood. Alone with Him who was nailed to the cross to atone for our sins, and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world. Alone with that precious Savior who has promised to be a friend that "sticketh closer than a brother." Prov. 18: 24. Glorious thought! Let us not forget this blessed Jesus. Daily, hourly, yea all the time let us welcome Him into the secret chamber of our bleeding hearts. "Pray without ceasing." 2 Thess. 5: 17. There is not an earthly friend that can give us the comfort and consolation which He has promised. May we solicit His company in the closet, where undisturbed we may receive healing balm for our wounded hearts. May we crave His tokens of love and sympathy in every time of need. He is a Friend with whom we can hold silent communion when all around us is noise and tumult. He has promised to be a friend in secret. Then, dear reader, let us welcome this heavenly Guest into our hearts and homes. Make known our trials and troubles to Him, and He will give us comfort and consolation beyond measure.

PRaise OTHERS Wisely.—Nearly everybody loves to be praised. Some can receive much, some little. Some seek praise, some avoid it. To receive praise properly is a nice problem. To bestow praise on others is also an art which may require some study or grace to do it as it should be done. The effects of praise are different according to the kinds of mind it meets: it will produce modesty upon persons who are possessed with wisdom, but it will engender pride in a fool. This is the difference more or less. When we have any praise to offer to any one, let us think twice to see if it be in place. Then offer it sincerely, and best of all, in private. But above all, with a true and loving heart. "Praise the Lord." D. B. MENTZEL.

The pleasure of doing good is the only pleasure that never wears out.

CORRESPONDENCE.

From Hutsonville, Ill.

OUR Love-feast was held according to arrangements, on the 15th of Oct. Service was held at 2 P. M.; after which two were baptized that belonged to the Cumberland district, and took part with us in the exercises of the evening. The congregation was about as large as usual, and the order was very good. One afflicted brother, whose earthly life is near its close, living some eight miles off, could not be with us; so a few brethren and sisters the next evening visited him, and held a quiet little Love-feast at his house, which strengthened him very much. It seemed to have a very good effect on him, both physically and spiritually.

The ministering brethren present were two of our missionary brethren, viz., Metzger and Hendricks; the other ministers were Jones, of Bond Co., Sell, of Martin Co., Ind., Samuel and Michael Forney, of Richmond Co., Ill.

It pleased the Lord to remove from our midst, our much beloved housekeeper, brother Hyre. The command came, "Tis enough, come up higher," and we poor weak mortals wept tears of sorrow over an event that was his great gain; yet our tongues exclaim, "Blessed be the name of the Lord, who doeth all things well."

Brother Hendricks was selected by the congregation, as our housekeeper.

H. R. KING.

From Lemuel Hillery.

AFTER leaving Bro. Henry Brubaker's, we went to the "Otto Reservation," to look at it and the adjacent country. This reservation takes in a strip from the South side of Gage Co., Neb., about six miles wide, running along the entire length of the county, and the same amount from the North side of the county in Kansas. The lay of the land is splendid; the water is uniformly good. The wells are from fifteen to forty-five feet deep. The soil is rich; timber for present use plenty. Price of land from three to seven dollars per acre, four to twelve miles from railroad towns. Terms are good; only one half of the reservation in market; terms on that, one third down and balance in two years. Speculators' land joining the reservation, three dollars per acre, one tenth down and ten years to pay the balance.

One active ministering brother with four members, has started in this beautiful country. We again went back to Bro. Brubaker's, where my traveling companion left me; and I started West. Traveled about 150 miles, making some over 200 miles West of the Missouri River. I thought it was as far as was prudent and safe for me to go, but I found no government land, except a few refused pieces. I saw plenty of good country along the North and South fork of the Solomon River, but no homestead land.

Now I will answer your question in regard to the means a man should have in coming West. If a man has a good team, wagon, harness and three hundred dollars in money, and is industrious and saving, and will not make debts, he will do better here than in any country I know of; and with this start in his hands let him settle from sixty to eighty miles West of the Missouri River, and pay from three to four dollars per acre for his land, and he will make a home much quicker and with less hardships than with the same start 250 or 300 miles West and his land given to him. My humble judgment is, unless he has the above to start with, he better not risk it. To-day there are hundreds and thousands of persons on these wide bleak plains, who have no shelter but their wagons. Some of them have no money and others but little. Women and children are suffering from cold, it not for the want of something to eat. The fact is, the people are all poor in this country with but few exceptions; and not a few, without any just cause, have run into debt and that has a tendency to add suffering, not only to themselves but to others. And this is just like all other States; it is a good place to make debts, but a poor place to pay them. But if people would live according to their means, they could live just as well here as in Iowa or Ill., and I think, do about as well.

People coming West ought not to make calculations to live in a "dug-out," not but what it is good enough so far as quality is concerned, but injurious to health. People come out here and go into such places, and their families are sick about all the time. They stay about one season and then go back and report how sickly it is in Kansas and Nebraska. Poor miserable people! Would it not be the same in any State East? Man is not a ground hog, as some suppose, but man. If he were a real confirmed soul-sleeper, such a place might do quite well, and he would be healthy, but as long as he is composed of soul, body and spirit, and believes it, he wants sun light and Gospel light, but when he don't believe this, he may want sun-light, but not Gospel light.

It costs no more to build a frame structure 14x16, than it does to build a dug-out. Doctors tell me that nearly all of the sickness in this country is found in dug-outs. The dieties of the people here are good, substantial, except fruit, and in a few years their want in this, will be abundantly supplied, for this will surely come to be a noted place for fruit-growing.

What about the colony? ask several. I will not settle in any colony farther West than Osborne Co., Kansas. In Jewell and Osborne counties there are good chances yet to get school and state land from three to four dollars per acre, and good claims of one hundred and sixty acres, from four to six hundred dollars, with considerable improvements. The water in the streams here is clear and fresh. The average depth of wells in these counties is from twelve to twenty-five feet. The soil is good; the only drawback, here, is, the distance to railroad, being from twenty-five to thirty-five miles, but by February the distance will be cut down one-half. There is sufficient fuel here—wood from forty to seventy-five cents per load.

In two or three weeks I shall determine where I shall locate, and then let you know.

The prospects of building up societies or churches of the Brethren are good, in fact wherever the Brethren live up to the Gospel order of the church, they take the lead in the West, but whenever a congregation will sacrifice its order to get numbers into the church, the sensible people lose their respect for that church, and she goes down. Whenever a congregation of the Brethren will throw off the Gospel plainness and ape the corrupt societies around her, she will get numbers. But a class of people who are loose in the world, and as a general thing, just as loose in the church,—they despise the Christian order, but love a loose and profligate religion.

White Rock, Kan.

From J. P. Horning.

OUR Communion here is among the things of the past. Quite a goodly number of members present. Our ministerial aid was also large. There came to our assistance brethren John Metzger, Joseph Hendricks, Henry Jones, Michael Forney, Samuel Forney and brother Sell, of Ind. Had a large congregation at night, and the best of order and attention.— Meeting again next morning, and in the afternoon the funeral of Bro. Hyre, our former elder, was preached by the Brethren. Continued meeting at night for several nights. Two precious souls agreed to follow the Savior and were baptized. We humbly trust and pray, that lasting impressions here have been made upon many others, and he made willing to follow in the footsteps of our dear Savior, and increase the Truth, as it is in Him. Truly the harvest is plenteous, but the laborers are few. Brethren pray for us that the good Lord may send more laborers into His harvest, and assist our efforts to spread His Gospel, that yet many may seek Him while He may be found.

Notes of Travel.

Dear Brethren:—

I LEFT home Sept. 24th to see the West. Arrived at Bro. Geo. Myers', Miami Co., Kansas, the 27th, and found him sick and in bed; the rest of the family all well except a few who had chills.

On the 2nd of Oct., I left Bro. George, and went to Fort Scott. Thence to Paint Creek church, to a Communion meeting at Bro. John Bollinger's, Oct. 3rd. Had the meeting under a canvas tent, which was something new to me; but we had a very good meeting and good order. An election was held for deacons, the lot falling on brethren Zook and Byers. Meetings also next day.

Oct. 5th started out with Bro. Daniel Harader to Neosho Co., to another Communion meeting. Here the strong South wind blew down the tent. Four souls came out and were baptized. Put up the tent again in time for evening exercises, and had a good meeting and good order. Meeting next forenoon, and two more were baptized. Had meeting in the school-house in the evening, when another soul was made willing to come out on the Lord's side.

This morning, Oct. 10, about forty of us in number started out for Wilson Co. Had a pleasant time for traveling, but a heavy shower in the afternoon prevented us from having any meeting that evening. This is called the Fall River church. Meeting under the tent next day at 11 o'clock. Brethren Hodgden, Harader, Hess, Clinganpeal and the writer, were the ministers present. Had an election for a minister, the lot falling on Bro. James Murray. Attendance and order were good at the meetings. This church numbers about thirty members, and only one of them uses tobacco.

Monday, Oct. 14th, we started for Elk Co., and crossed over some rough country. Had a meeting at Bro. Clinganpeal's, Oct. 15. Then started for Cowley Co. Passed over some more rough country, and stopped with Bro. L. E. Prickett. Meeting at the school-house on the evening. The 16th had meeting in the hay-shed put up for the Communion. Love-feast in the evening, and good order and attention were given by all. The Sullivan Creek church numbers about twenty members. Only one brother uses tobacco. Here the meetings were continued a few days, and four souls were added by baptism.

We looked about some, in Cowley Co., and are well pleased with the country here. Oct. 19th our Wilson Co. friends started home. We were sorry to part, but expect to meet again.— The 22nd left Cowley Co. Traveled through Butler, Greenwood, Lyon, Gage and Doughess counties in company with our dear Bro. D. Harader, who was kind enough to take me in his wagon all this trip. The Lord reward him. I am much pleased with my trip through Kansas, and have formed acquaintances that will not be forgotten soon. Many have said, "Pray for us," and "Remember us!" This we will try to do, and at the same time we ask an interest in the prayers of all our brethren and sisters.

Hartleton, Pa.

From Modesto, California.

WE write you this morning, some happy news from this part of the Lord's vineyard. We commenced a series of meetings on the 19th of Oct., and continued till the evening of the 25th. On the last day of the meeting, the church was made to rejoice in the reception of two members, husband and wife, into the fold by baptism. The rite or ordinance was administered in the presence of the largest concourse of people I ever witnessed at baptism, the entire congregation, going a distance of over three miles, to witness the scene. The best of order prevailed during all our meetings; and we closed with a growing interest.

The brethren feel to "thank God and take courage." Unto God the Father belongeth all the praise, through Jesus our loving Savior.

Dear members do not weary in well-doing nor faint by the way. Ever remember the necessity of watching unto prayer, and as you journey along, miss no opportunity to cast "bread upon the waters," and in due time it shall be gathered, though it be after many days.

The prayers of the Brethren everywhere are humbly and earnestly desired.

In Brotherly Love,

P. S. GARMAN.

Huntingdon Normal School.

[The following in regard to the Huntingdon Normal school, we clip from the Altoona, Pa. Tribune of Nov. 2, 1878. The article was sent to us with request to publish either entire or in part. We publish that part, relating to the aim of the institution.—Evs.]

THE aim of this institution is to provide a cheap and at the same time first-class and thorough education. The classics and higher branches are taught those who desire to study them, but the main idea has been thus far to educate teachers. The course is designed to lay the foundation for the higher branches. The principal, J. M. Zuck, A. M., is a graduate of two of the leading normal schools of the country, and is highly spoken of by all with whom he has come in contact. Three of the other teachers are also graduates of well-known normal or other educational institutions.

The extreme cheapness of tuition at this school, will recommend it these hard times.— The whole cost for one year of forty-eight weeks is only $25.00, and when we consider that boarding can be obtained for a nominal sum, say $3.00 per week, it is indeed an opportunity for those who are needy, to educate themselves. The original intention was, to have the school exclusively for the children of the Brethren or Dunkard denomination, but it was afterward wisely determined to throw it open to all sects and creeds. There is connected with the institution an excellent library of standard works, which is open to the students; also a flourishing literary society, which holds weekly meetings. Sectarian dogmas or doctrines are not enforced, and any attempts in that direction are frowned upon. Moral conduct is required of every pupil, and religion is taught by example rather than by precept."

From Manhattan, Iowa.

Dear Brethren:—

A SHORT account of the Communion in the South Keokuk branch, may be of interest. The meeting took place Nov. 1st, at 4 o'clock P. M. Ministers present were Solomon Stamy, of Linn Co., Ia.; Samuel Miller of Poweshiek Co., Ia.; Samuel Flory of South English.— There were about fifty members that communed. Though a large crowd was in attendance, good order and attention were manifested throughout the meeting, which lasted until the 3rd inst.

One of our faithful members went to her long home on the 2nd inst. It was the consort of elder Charles Wonderlick. Thus a gloom was cast over the vicinity and especially the church, she being a consistent member for forty years.

Her funeral discourse was preached on the 5th inst., at eleven o'clock, to one of the largest crowds that ever attended a funeral there.

Yours in Christ,

E. R. FRITS.

Dear Brethren:—

I WILL attempt, in my weakness, to pen a few lines for you. Not long since, every thing was green and looked so pleasant. Now everything in nature has faded. Where is the beautiful foliage? Gone, all gone! The trees are all stripped of their leaves. Their beauty has faded. Their leaves have dropped off and fallen to the ground. So it will be with us.— We will soon fade away like the leaves. They lie under our feet. We tread upon them as having no beauty or comeliness. The cold frost nipped them. The trees stand bare and look as if they had no life in them. So it will be with us. The cold, icy hand of death will chill our flowing blood. Then we shall fade like the leaves of the forest. We shall then look like the bare trees, stripped of our beauty.

But we will bloom again in the resurrection morning. Our bodies may lie in the cold, silent grave, but they will live again.

While we live in this world, we should live a Christian life. We should let our lights so shine, that others may see our good works, and glorify our Father in heaven.

When we see the trees in their beautiful green leaves, what does it teach us? It teaches us that God Almighty created all things for man's enjoyment, that man should glorify God in his body and in his spirit, which are God's.— He has created us, that we should let our beauty shine, that we should live in righteousness and true holiness before him all the days of our lives. If the people would let their beauty appear as the flowers of Spring, what a light that would be!

If we let our light shine that others may glorify our heavenly Father, then, when we fade away like the Summer flowers, we shall bloom above where all is love. But how do we let our light shine? I think sometimes our light is very dim. I think sometimes my light has not always shone so brightly as it should.

Let me say to my dear brethren and sisters that I have left in the far East, when I gave you the last farewell, I never expected to see you again in this world. But I would say, Be faithful and continue in prayer, that we may meet where all is love, joy and peace. It will soon be one year since we took the parting hand. How long will it be until we shall clasp glad hands again? God only knows.

My parting hymn was,

"Time is winging us away,
To our eternal home."

I often think how swiftly time wings us away.

"But the Christian shall enjoy,
Health and beauty soon above,
Far beyond this world's alloy,
Secure in Jesus' love."

How much we admire beauty! And what a great blessing is health! May we all enjoy health and beauty in the paradise of God.

Dear Brethren—

I HAVE just returned from a series of meetings in Fayette Co., on the west side of the river, and can heartily say, I never witnessed such a meeting. Much unity existed in the church, and a great deal of kindness and care were bestowed upon us even by those outside of the church, who were strangers to us, but we hope, one day will be inmates of one house, and one Father be the Father of us all. May the Lord bless those that were gathered together in one place to worship and hear the truth, for their kindness and gentleness and good behavior. I have been to five Communion since I have been a member, and never witnessed as good behavior before, as there was at the Fayette meeting.

It was evident to all that the Spirit was with us. One gentleman, after services, expressed himself as being fully satisfied that he had seen the Scriptures practiced properly. He also remarked, he long had wished to meet with some denomination that would practice all laid down in the holy book of God, but never until then. Oh may that all-seeing eye cause others who say that there are so many non-essentials in the Bible, see their own wrong, before it is too late.

We had preaching on Sunday and one addition. On Sunday night Bro. Harry preached for us, and had one more addition, a young lady. On Monday Bro. James Hutchison preached a very warm sermon, and had the pleasure of seeing one immersed.

On Wednesday attended preaching and one who had gone astray, returned to the church, desiring to live for Jesus, who died for us all.—May the Lord strengthen him and his brothers who have enlisted in the holy warfare, that they may be faithful brethren. May the Lord guard and protect them from all harm and induce others to join the service of the Lord.

GLEANINGS.

From Jewell Co., Kan.—Our Love-feast in Lime Stone congregation, passed off very pleasantly. No additions, but a general rejoicing among the members. Bro. Hillery was with us and preached the word in its purity. We would like if some more brethren would come here and preach the Gospel. We certainly stand in need of the Gospel here as much as elsewhere. The harvest is great, but the laborers are too few.

A. W. ACSTIN.

From Lecompton, Ohio.—We, as a church are progressing slowly, but have not had any accessions since last Spring. We had our Love-feast at the Bethel meeting-house, Oct. 19th. Although the attendance was small on account of the inclemency of the weather, the order was good, and had a little interest manifested on the part of the spectators present as well as the members. The ministerial aid during forenoon services were brethren Conrad Kahler and Aaron Shively, and in the evening to the joy of all brethren, Samuel Garber and J. A. Clement arrived from Bristolville church, where the Brethren had a feast on the 18th.—The brethren in their weakness tried to hold up Jesus and the suffering and death of our Lord to a dying world. God grant that the feast may long be remembered by all the saints. Our church here, numbers about sixty in all.—Although small in number, we have the promise of God, and He be praised for the same. We had Sabbath-school on the West-side of the church for four or five years. In the Winter every two weeks before services, and in the Summer season every Sunday. Sabbath-schools ought to be kept up throughout the Winter. It is good to be zealously affected always in a good cause.

LEVI LONGANECKER.

From Sister Sidler.—Enclosed find which appropriate to the fund for sending the paper to the poor. The Savior says: The poor ye always have with you, and if you will, you can do them good.

I know if our faith is practiced, the poor will be helped, the Gospel spread, and bread will be cast upon the waters, which we shall find after many days.

Charity, best offspring of Heaven, how dost thou ennoble and adorn thy possessor. Thou renderest him truly amiable and lovely. "Although I speak with the tongue of men and angels, and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal. "Blessed is the man that considereth the poor, the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble. The Lord will preserve him, and keep him alive, and he shall be blessed upon the earth." Ps. 41.

Setzler's Store, Pa.

From D. N. Workman.—Sept. 21st commenced meeting in the Gingham church, Miami Co., Ohio. Continued a few days and baptized eight. Enjoyed the meeting very much. This church is alive to the work of the Master, which makes it very attractive here. May the Savior bless and keep them.

Ashland, Ohio.

From Fall Creek church, O.—Seldom do we see any news from this vicinity. I wish to say that all the Love-feasts are over, and I believe, were as pleasant meetings of the kind as have ever been held in this part of the country. Help in the ministry was scarce, as none of the Brethren written to, came. At our place there was one addition by baptism, and we hope, good impressions were made upon others. We hope some good zealous brother, interested in his Master's work, will try and visit us this Winter, and hold series of meetings in the different churches. Correspondence to this end solicited. Address me at Highland, Ohio.

A. J. HIXON.

From J. K. Harley.—We would say through your columns to the many dear brethren, sisters and friends in the West, that we arrived safely home on the evening of the 31st of Oct., all in good health, and found those, we had left for a while, well as usual. We can truly say, "Providence has smiled on them in every respect." We all return our sincere thanks to the many dear brethren and sisters and friends in the West for their kindness, while with them. We have seen at many different places the effects of the recent Eastern storm. No serious damage at our place, although our neighbors cannot all say so.

Hurleysville, Pa.

From Vermillion church, Ill.—Our Communion meeting passed off very pleasantly on the 13th and 14th of Sept. We held our meeting at Bro. Wm. Lehman's, two miles north and one mile west of Chenoa. The ministers present were, Elder G. W. Gish, P. A. Moore, Jacob Sollenberger and J. J. Kindig. The brethren labored earnestly in the Master's cause. Altogether we had a good feast, which will long be remembered by the brethren and sisters. I sometimes think, there is too much lukewarmness among the members. We should be more engaged in our Master's cause! let us not forget to work while it is called to-day, for the night cometh wherein no man can work!

The church saw fit to divide this congregation into two branches, on account of the members living so scattered. The south end is now called Pike Creek church, having one speaker and two deacons; leaving the north end two speakers and two deacons. The Lord bless those brethren for their labors of love, whilst among us.

N. S. DALE.

From Mahaska Co., Ia.—Our Communion is over, and I am happy to say that two came out on the Lord's side to live faithful through life. O may God help them to prove faithful! We feel very thankful to our dear brethren, who came to us, for their labor of love, to preach the word of God to us in deed and in truth. Our Communion was held in our new meeting-house, six miles East of New Sharon.

If any Brethren wish to emigrate West and purchase a farm in Iowa, please come to see us and our country and we believe you will be pleased with it. There are three farms within half a mile of the meeting-house, which can be bought very low at this time. Dear brethren, come over into Macedonia and help us. We are very much in need of ministerial aid, as we have only one, our dear young brother Charles Hillery, who is laboring hard and doing all he can in the Master's cause.

C. PROUTZ.

From Waynesboro, Va.—According to previous arrangements, the Brethren in the Virginia Valley met at the Linwell Creek church, Rockingham Co., Va., on the 23rd day of Oct., and made the necessary arrangements for A. M. of 1879. The place of meeting is at Bro. S. Cline's, near Broadway depot, on the Valley R. R., it being a branch of the Baltimore & Ohio R. R. The location for the meeting is a good one. It was resolved to feel the members only at the meeting.

We have had some additions to the church by baptism, but not as many as we would wish to see. We also have some sickness and deaths amongst us. That fearful disease, diphtheria, has taken some to the grave. Bro. J. M. Cline has buried two of his little daughters. Thus two loved ones have been snatched away from the family circle, but we would say to our dear brother and sister, weep not, for they are not dead, but asleep in Christ. Paul, the apostle, says, "To die is gain." E. L. B.

From C. H. Balsbaugh.—It is pitiful how blinded the mind may become through the deceitfulness of sin. The essential claims of truth and the absolute authority of Deity incarnate are the two great factors in the final judgment, and they should be the two controlling elements of our probationary state. There are numerous personal considerations which warp our judgment by influences so subtle that we draw a film over our inner vision, before we suspect our false attitude to the cross. The mind admits of so many prismatic variations, that with a self-approving conscience people enhance and maintain error as the very essence of the Gospel. Let us watch!

From Mt. Vernon Church, Va.—The church here is small, not having been organized more than ten or twelve years ago. The Brethren met with much opposition here, as they are surrounded by professors of religion of several different denominations. James B. Gish of Ill. has labored a great deal here, especially about the time the church was organized. Last January Bro. J. D. Trostle of Langmore, Md., labored with us eight or ten days. In the early part of May Bro. James Quinter, of Huntingdon, Pa., labored with us a similar length of time. In the meantime quite a number of the brethren from the neighboring districts have been with us, especially at the time of Love-feast, which was held Oct. 5th. It was really a feast of love. The local ministers are J. A. Cline, G. S. Wine, E. D. Kendig and J. Farrer.

S. W. GARVER.

Stuart's Draft, Va.

From Pike Creek Church, Ill.—On the 13th of September we held our Love-feast.—Brethren J. R. Gish, P. A. Moore and Sollenberger were with us. We had a very good meeting. It was very encouraging to our little band of twenty-seven. Sinner, give Jesus your heart and us your hand, and let us together journey on to Zion.

DIED.

Obituaries should be brief, written on but one side of the paper, and separate from all other business.

CLEAR.—In the Poplar Ridge church, Defiance Co., O., Oct. 19, Clara Clear, daughter of Bro. Zedock and sister Maria Clear, aged 5 years, 7 months, and 27 days. Died with croup.

This makes three in the same family, inside of about two months. Funeral discourse by Jacob Kintner.

NOFFSINGER.—In the same congregation, Oct. 30th, 1878, William Noffsinger, aged 56 years, 4 months and 9 days.

The funeral discourse was delivered by Elder Jacob Brown from 2 Tim. 4: 7, 8. On Tuesday before he died, he was in Defiance, and upon being asked by some brethren about his health, he told them, he did not feel very well. He went home about noon and took sick about four o'clock that afternoon. He fell backwards on his bed with his clothes on, after which he was not able to speak again. He departed this life about three o'clock next morning. He follows his companion, who preceded him about two years. He leaves four children, many relatives and friends to mourn his departure.

Our deceased brother was a minister in the second degree for a number of years. The church loses a very faithful laborer, but we hope our loss is his great gain. We can well think of our brother, what Paul of old said in his last days: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them that love his appearing."

ELD. J. LEHMAN.

BEAR.—In the Pike Creek church, McLean Co., Ill., Nov. 9th, sister Patience Bear, wife of Bro. Joseph Bear, aged 48 years and 18 days.

Our sister's sickness was long and protracted. She suffered from the painful affliction of cancer, but died, or rather, fell asleep without a struggle, leaving a dear husband and loving children to mourn their loss, which, we hope, is her great gain. The funeral was largely attended; services from Rev. 14: 12, 13, by the undersigned. Tuos. D. LYON.

Primitive Christian, please copy.

DAVIDSON.—In the South Keokuk church, Keokuk Co., Iowa, sister Hannah, wife of friend D. J. Davidson, Sept. 23rd, aged 66 years, 4 months and 29 days.

Decensed was born in Farmington township, Trumbull Co., Ohio. Funeral discourse by Stephen Yoder of Washington Co., Iowa.

WELSH.—Also at the same place, William M. Welsh, son of Bro. William H. and sister Charlotte Welsh, aged 7 years, 11 months and 4 days. Funeral discourse by Bro. Abraham Wolf, of Washington Co., Iowa.

J. S. FURS.

Primitive Christian, please copy.

GEISTWITE.—In the Arnold's Grove congregation, Carroll Co., Ill., Nov. 7th, Henry S. Geistwite, son of friend Henry and sister Geistwite, aged 3 years, 4 months and 16 days. Funeral services from 1 Peter 1: 24, 25.

J. J. EMMERT.

PRICE.—In Rock Creek church, Whiteside Co., Ill., Nov. 6, Bro. John H. Price, of typhoid fever, aged 51 years and 6 days.

Bro. Price's wife is also lying ill with the same disease. He left a dear companion and seven children. Funeral sermon preached by Bro. Martin Meyer and Tobias Meyers from 2 Cor. 5: 1-10.

WHITE.—In Rock Creek congregation, Knox Co., Mo., Nov. 4th, Harriet A. White, wife of Bro. Samuel White, aged 24 years and 9 days.

She leaves a sorrowing companion and three little children to mourn their loss.

ANDREW J. WHITE.

LONG.—Near Falls City, Neb., Sept. 5th, Frank Worley, son of W. Pym and Hettie Long, aged six years, seven months, and fourteen days.

On Tuesday evening he was bright and healthy, and on Thursday morning death claimed him, thus showing, that he sometimes comes when we expect him not.

DURA.—In Middle Creek church, Mahaska Co., Iowa, infant son of Bro. C. and sister T. Dura, aged 6 years, and some months.

HILLERY.—In the same congregation, Willie, infant son of Bro. Charles and sister Lizzie Hillery, aged 4 years and a few months.

PETER PROUTZ.

HOCKENSMITH.—In the Ashland church, Ashland Co., Ohio, Nov. 4, Susan A. Hockensmith, aged 7 years, 11 months and 7 days.—Funeral services by the writer.

I. KUTHEBERG.

ULLERY.—In St. Joseph Co., Ind., Nov. 2nd, Mabel P., infant daughter of Bro. Aaron and sister Jeanne Ullery.

F. E. C.

METZ.—At his residence, Noble Co., Indiana, Oct. 11th, Bro. Aaron Metz, in the 48th year of his age. Funeral discourse by the writer, assisted by elder Jacob Berkeley. Text taken from Psalm 116: 15.

NIGHT MUSINGS.

BY JAS. Y. HECKER.

All our troubles, cares and trials
Will at last come to an end—
Abrogations, self-denials,
Which the Lord can comprehend,
Will, thank God, not last forever,
Even in this vale of woe;—
After rain there comes fair weather,
And the clouds disperse and go.

Many heavy hearts are beating
In affliction and distress,
Many youthful hopes are fleeting,
In this weevil wilderness,
Many tears of grief are falling
From the widows' eyelids red,—
Many orphan children calling
For their parents who are dead.

Many thousand sighs and sorrows
Sweep across the human breast,
Many dark and long to-morrow's
Disappear to the distressed,
Many smiling, sunny glances,
Sliding through the rifted sky,
Drive away our foolish fancies,
And declare that God is nigh.

Disappointment, cares and sorrows
Darkens oft our rugged way,
But there is a brighter morning
In the realms of endless day,
All our trials and temptations,
Which we here with patience bear,
Will be changed to approbations,
In the regions over there.

STEIN AND RAY DEBATE.

Prop. 1st—The Brethren (or Tunker) Churches Possess Bible Characteristics entitling them to be regarded as Churches of Jesus Christ

J. W. STEIN affirms.
D. B. RAY denies.
J. W. STEIN'S 4TH AFFIRMATIVE.

As a telegram evinces a wire, the electric influence and its own source, so any congregation whose teaching and practice harmonizes with the word of God, evinces through that its divine workmanship, the Spirit's presence and its own connection with Christ and the apostles who, I repeat, were as much Tunkers as the Brethren. Moses didn't immerse people. The apostles did, hence they were Tunkers, i. e., Dippers. John the harbinger of Messiah is expressly called "the Dipper" (Tunker) in the New Testament, in various versions and languages. See Robinson's Hist. of Bap., 6, 44; Lou. Ed., 1790. Brother Neal used the word "regeneration" in the sense of "the new birth," John 3: 5, which Christ makes include baptism. I employed the term "regenerated" in its derivative sense from "re," again, and "gennao," to beget. Begetting (not the new birth) takes place before baptism. Brother Neal referred to birth, and to begetting, two distinct events variously designated in the Greek Testament by the ambiguous "gennao." We never taught baptismal salvation that we might surrender it. He might as well say I surrendered transubstantiation. He persistently dodges the true issue, i. e., baptism in order to the remission of sins. He makes Peter 11 Peter 3: 20, 21 represent baptism as a mere figure, whence he infers that sins are remitted in it only figuratively. Peter makes it a "like figure" or antitype ("antitypon") of Noah's salvation by water. My friend is reduced to the absurdity of making an antitype only a type, and Noah's salvation in the ark by water only a figure of a figure. Abraham received "Isaac from the dead" "in a figure," Heb. 11: 13, of which Christ's resurrection was the antitype or "like figure." Did Christ therefore only rise from the dead figuratively? He says the conscience is good before baptism. Peter makes baptism, according to the original, the seeking or inquiring after (epiteta) a good conscience.

My friend says those texts "that mention water, washing, and cleansing refer to 'spiritual cleansing.'" He teaches that "water," John 3: 5; Eph. 5: 26, don't mean "water." David didn't say, "Wash me with water." I ask my friend if by "spiritual cleansing" here he means the renewing, or birth of the Spirit? Also if he denies that "form of doctrine," Rom. 6: 17, includes baptism? His quotation from Butler fails to show that repentance and faith are not positive commands. Barnabas, of the first century (see Acts 13: 2, 3, 48, 47; 14, 14; 1 Cor. 9: 6), says, "We indeed descend into the water full of sins and defilement, but come up having the fear of God and trust in Jesus in our spirit." Apostolic Fathers, 121. Irenaeus, of the same age (see Rom. 16: 14), says: "Before a man bears the name of the Son of God he is dead; but when he receives the seal he lays aside his deadness and obtains life. The seal then is the water; they descend into the water dead and they arise alive. And to them accordingly was this seal preached, and they made use of it that they might enter into the kingdom of God." Ibid., 420. Justin Martyr, who was born about 11 years before the death of the apostle John, and died about A. D. 164, says: "We obtain in the water the remission of sins formerly committed." Writings of Justin Martyr and Athenagoras, 90. Here are two apostolic fathers and a Christian martyr and apologist of the second century teaching baptism in order to remission. My friend says, "It was not until about the beginning of the third century that the error of baptismal salvation began to be introduced." Baptist Succession, 288. Therefore I prove by him that baptism in order to remission is not "baptismal salvation." Thus his negative argument falls by his own hand. I agree with him that he who sends a sinner to hell by refusing him baptism is antichrist. Who does that? He admits that believers put on Christ and are clothed with him in baptism. Are those who have no Christ on, pardoned? Look at his logic.

Christian!—unbapt!—defenseless!—going through the world without any Christ on!?" Paul being a "chosen vessel" before baptism don't prove that he had received the Holy Spirit before baptism. Are not all saints chosen of God before their pardon? Since my friend mentions Cornelius again, I ask him to tell us plainly if he holds that the Spirit of God was never upon any one, imparting the gift of prophecy, &c., before they were pardoned? Will he do it? He continues to talk about salvation by faith. Who disputes that? I ask my friend to tell us whether a believer is adopted into the divine family without baptism? And whether one can be in Christ and not be a member of his body? We hold that true baptism can only be received by one after he loves God, just as true citizenship is consummated after a foreigner loves a government, and as true marriage is effected after the parties know and love each other, in which cases however the relative objections and knowledge cannot be perfected without the rite of allegiance in one instance, and of marriage in the other. But my friend reminds me that "every one that loveth is born [begetten] of God and knoweth God." 1 John 4: 7. I add: "Whoso keepeth his word in him verily is the love of God perfected; hereby know we that we are in him." 1 John 2: 5. Can one know this without keeping his word? "This is the love of God, that ye keep his commandments." 1 John 5: 3. "Hereby do we know that we know him, if we keep his commandments. He that saith I know him" (solemn profession) "and keepeth not his commandments is a liar and the truth is not in him." 1 John 2: 3, 4. How will this apply to the unbaptized who says he knows that he loves and knows God? An applicant for citizenship should know and love the government, and a bride should know and love her betrothed, and that love in both cases may be begotten by the government and the bridegroom respectively through their love, overtures, &c., yet the applicant cannot know nor love the government as his government, nor can he know that he is a citizen but by the rite of allegiance; neither does the bride know and love her betrothed as her husband, know that she is his wife, take his name and become his heir, without marriage.

Again, the Brethren usually examine a candidate for baptism very closely to be satisfied that he (the old man) is dead before they bury him. They then plant him "in the likeness of Christ's death," where he is "freed from sin," Rom. 6: 3, 7, by virtue of Christ's blood, which flowed in his death for the remission of sins. This freedom from sin is not by virtue of his own death which precedes baptism, but by virtue of Christ's death into which he is baptized. "So many of you" says Paul (any more?—any less?) "as were baptized into Jesus Christ, were baptized into his death," &c. See Rom. 6: 3-8. The repenting rebel don't receive pardon from his government in dying to his rebellion and forsaking it, but in the subsequent rite for which that death qualified him, which professes that death and introduces him into citizenship.

Its Characteristic, and my second reason confirmed. My friend says I find fault with, and add to the commission "in order that the grammatical construction may suit the Tunker doctrine." Its grammatical construction exactly suits and teaches our doctrine, as my friend's statement virtually concedes. Thus I showed by seven incontrovertible proofs with which he has not dared to grapple, because he knows it would be fatal to him. Hence, rather than surrender like a man, he lets himself right down beneath his character as a literary, ecclesiastical and biblical scholar, critic and polemic, and vainly accuses me of adding to the word of God. He knows that ellipses are not additions to, but essential parts of language, which though omitted to avoid needless repetition, etc., are essential to the construction and must be understood and retained in the mind. Did he add to the word of God when he supplied the ellipses "ye" in Acts 2: 38? which he reads thus: "Repent ye, and be baptized, every one of you." Ray-Lucas Heb. 221. Prof. Westcott, of Cambridge, author of "The History of the New Testament Canon," says: "All intelligent interpretation of scripture must be based upon a strict analysis of its idioms and words. To suppose that words and cases are convertible, that tenses have no absolute meaning, that forms of expression are accidental, is to betray the fundamental principles on which all intercourse between men is based. A disbel in the exactness of language is the prelude to all philosophical skepticism. And it will probably be found that the same tendency of mind which discredits the fullest teaching of words, leads, however little we may see it, to the disparagement of all outward revelation." (Introduction to the Study of the Gospels, 62, 63.) Again he says: "The laws of language, as those of criticism, are absolute, and the Christian may trust in them as the certain outward expression of the deepest truths."—Ibid., 65, 66. My friend treats the laws of the language, the meaning and relations of the words employed by the Savior in Matt. 28: 19 (the only passage of inspiration describing his own appointed form of baptism), with impious skepticism and unbelief. I ask him to tell us plainly if he denies the grammatical use and construction of language? If he does, our medium of intelligent, safe and well-defined interchange of thought and argument is at an end. My friend teaches that 'name' don't refer to the title of the Father, nor the Son, nor the Holy Spirit, but some how to "the three-one God." He will have to reverse the commission partly before he can support that theory. Purves says: "If it ('name') does not refer to the name of the Father, and the name of the Son, and the name of the Holy Spirit, it would seem that the text should in part read the very reverse of what it does; that is, it should have read, 'baptizing them into the name not of the Father, nor of the Son, nor of the Holy Spirit, but into the name which denotes the unity of their essence.' I suppose any one may see the absurdity of this, and what difficulties it would present to a serious inquirer; while the text as it stands is suited to convey instruction to the most ordinary capacity." Quinter-McConnell Deb., 62. Since my friend's position on this issue is evasive and unintelligible, I ask him to tell us if he denies that "name" agrees to any given title or appellation of the Godhead? If not, to tell us plainly what that title is? And what his "one name" is? Will he do it?

2. The meaning of other examples analogous to the baptismal formula in construction, confirms our position. (a) "They builded . . . it [the temple] . . . according to the commandment of Cyrus, and Darius and Artaxerxes." Ezra 7: 14. Was it not according to three edicts? Ezra 5: 13; 6: 1-12; 7: 26. Will my friend deny that the ellipses, viz., "according to the commandment of," are not understood before "Darius" and before "Artaxerxes" in the above example?—or that they are not necessary to its grammatical sense and construction? (b) "A [one] superscription was written over him in letters of Greek and Latin and Hebrew." Luke 23: 38. Was it not written in three languages? Will he deny the ellipses, viz., "in letters of" before "Latin" and before "Hebrew" here? Is this adding to the word of God? Will my friend answer these questions? (c) "Delivering you up to the synagogues and into prisons." Luke 21: 12. Here "delivering" occurs only once, like "baptizing" in the commission. Were they not delivered "up to synagogues?" and delivered "unto prison"? (d) "Approving ourselves as the ministers of God, in much patience, in distresses, in stripes, in imprisonments, in tumult," &c. 2 Cor. 5: 4, 5. "Approving" occurs here but once. Does it not therefore apply to each of these texts? Were they approved in all of them by the same action? I might multiply this kind of examples, but this will suffice for the present.

3. I ask my friend for one principle against baptism into each name of the Trinity which cannot be urged with equal propriety against the mention of the names, "Father," "Son," and "Holy Spirit," in baptizing?

4. The legitimate conclusion of the theory which rejects baptism into each of the three names, viz., "Father," "Son," and "Holy Spirit," or trine baptism, denies the trinity of the Godhead, the Hebrew Elshem corresponding to "us" and "ours." Gen. 1: 1.

With some people, prayer is one of the most convenient things in the world. They go to prayer just as if everything depended on the asking, forgetting that in all ages, God's blessings were bestowed upon the compliance with his own conditions. If we are not willing to comply with those, we have no more right to ask, or expect to receive, than the common employe has a right to demand his wages from his employer before he has complied with his terms.

The meanest and most illegitimate of all human pursuits is the direct pursuit of reputation. It is supremely selfish and contemptible; and there is no man who really deserves a good reputation, who does not make its acquisition a subordinate aim in all his actions.

FADING FLOWERS.

THE green is fading from each leaf;
The flowers die on the hill,
The whispering of the winds have lushed,
The murmurings of the rill;
The sun that lit the earth with gold,
While sinking to its rest,
Has hung its crimson banner out,
To light the distant West.

The song birds, too, have ceased to sing,
Among the fading flowers;
And left a requiem sighing there,
For Summer's dying hours!
And even nature seems to mourn,
To watch bright moments die;
Yet fading beauty lingers on,
Each leaflet floating by.

How can they say the Summer-time
Is sweeter than the Fall?
Oh! are not Autumn's withered leaves
More beautiful than all?
And can the bright blush of the rose,
However soft and fair,
Be half as lovely as the touch
Of fading beauty there?

Ah! no; let others weep to see
The beautiful Summer fade,
There is a sweeter charm for me
In Autumn's mellow shade!
The withered flowers that droop and die,
Each ere and yellow leaf,
Seems but an emblem of this life,
So fleeting and so brief.

The flush must fade from every cheek,
The luster from each eye;
And all things beautiful must fade,
For all were made to die!
The smile must leave the laughing lip,
And joyous hours depart;
For death's cold touch at last will chill
The fountain of the heart.

THE TRUE ORDER OF THE CHURCH OF GOD.

A Little Discussion on a "big" Subject.

A SERMON DELIVERED BY S. H. BASHOR.
NUMBER III.

A GENUINE revival of religion, is not a scene of confusion and wild disorder of mere

ANIMAL EXCITEMENT,

but a genuine work of all the means, the Lord brings to bear upon the human heart. "God is not the author of confusion, but of peace, as in all churches of the saints. There are two classes who are detrimental to the success of the revival cause. One is the professed friend in whose mind exists the idea, that nothing can be done outside of revivals, and always associates with revivals, scenes of wild enthusiasm and the uttermost confusion and weeping. They look for such scenes to be inseparably connected with revivals, and hence ruin the cause. Others oppose revivals on the grounds of this confusion and excitement. They probably never have witnessed a true series of services where "Only Christ is heard to speak,

And Jesus reigns alone," and have had no opportunity of examining the nature and good fruits of such meetings. They have not been able to distinguish between wild fanaticism and calm Gospel work. They as judges are unqualified and act an inconsistent part in condemning all series of meetings. I will now submit a few stubborn facts and then leave the matter with you. It is a fact that a single revival of religion has frequently changed the character and destiny of a whole neighborhood, or even an entire town or congregation in the short space of a few days; more souls converted, more formalists undeceived and backbiting members reclaimed with the true people of God, built up and revived than for years before. More real good has been accomplished in some neighborhoods in one series of meetings, than was accomplished in years before by ordinary means. Revivals under my own experience have been the means of breaking up the haunts of vice, and of extending and firmly establishing the Redeemer's kingdom in places where all other means had failed.

At New Enterprise, Pa., where regular preaching had been for years, and pious examples had failed in two short weeks over one hundred souls were brought into the church, and that these conversions were genuine is attested by the general warmth, zeal and activity of the church there now. Those converted there, are all or all with one or two exceptions workers in the church to-day, and the most of them among the most pious and exemplary members of the flock. The influence of that revival is felt there yet, though near two years have rolled by. It is true, some of them are gone, not to the world, but to their home above. The same can be said of Johnstown Pa., and Waterloo, Iowa, "but" says some one, "have you not had trouble at Waterloo since?" Yes, we have, but the trouble was not with those who came in during the revival there, it was among the older ones, who were members long before. You go into congregations where genuine revivals have been held, and your soul is not frozen and starved with coldness, drouth and moral death, a lack of attendance at church, no family prayer, but you find life, zeal, devotion, and love, you are among warm hearts, devoted people, and you seem to be transported into the atmosphere of heaven itself, and join in the worship of the heavenly host. We do not want the revivals of that invariably succeeded by reaction, and backsliding which loses its force in a few months, and leaves the church in a state of religion, and moral inactivity; worse than before the revival was held. Neither do we want a revival that runs into excess and disorder; one that is attended with extravagance and wild confusion, kept up until late hours at night; but the old-time Gospel meetings where only the good news of the Son of God is preached, and close each meeting in order, like our Communion meetings, and go home. We want to hold those meetings in Gospel order, and preach nothing but the Gospel. Hammer the hearts of the wicked until they yield, are pierced through and then call them to Christ.

An aged brother said, he saw an Irishman take a heavy hammer and pound upon a large rock. He hit it twenty-one solid blows, but the hammer only bounced. At twenty nine blows a few pieces flew off, but at the thirtieth blow the stone was crushed. So with the hearts of men, one or even two solid sermons may not affect them, but fifteen may only soften them; while eighteen may crush them. Our children go to other churches and hear so much preaching that they become hardened, and one, two or three sermons from us, will not affect them. We had better warm up once and awhile, than to be forever cold. We do not always want to be asleep and inactive. We want a lively state of piety in our congregations at all times. We do not want ebbs and flows, storms and calms, but we want Gospel preaching and the more of it the better; we want Gospel religion, where there is a lively state of piety at all times, and thus have constant revivals. Let that state begin now, this week, and each day we will come up to the Lord's house until we are revived, and our children are revived, and we all believe God together, and then keep on reviving in our families until we reach heaven itself and we will have an eternal reward. The man who cannot stand more than three Gospel sermons here, will be in an awful state in heaven where there is eternal worship and everlasting praise. We want a refreshing revival now, here, at this place, but we want a Gospel one, a revival of true vital piety, honesty, integrity and holiness; for that we pray, for that we labor, and may he who loved us, and to-day pleads with the Father for us, be heard and felt in this assembly while we sing aloud in praise to his blessed name, the 434th hymn. Sing one, sing all, and may angels echo back the praises that arise from devoted hearts. Amen and Amen.

ECHOES FROM THE WEST.

The Train is Leaving—Don't Run—We are Left Anyway—Who is Right.

[From our Special Correspondent.]

NUMBER III.

NOT long ago some of our boys from Falls City Neb., made a trip to Lincoln, on an excursion, to attend the State Fair and take a look at the sights of the city. After spending some time in the city, some one was heard to exclaim: "The train is leaving." The boys set out at once in full run for the train, for fear of being left. It is strange that travelers should make such great exertions to get on board the first train. Since all that can be lost, is only a little time and money.

The Gospel train is running daily, and constantly inviting everybody to get on board. Jesus paid the fare and conducts this train. Boys make haste and get on board this train! To-morrow may be too late. Many have waited for to-morrow's train, to whom to-morrow never came. "To-day if ye hear his voice, harden not your hearts," says Paul. The boys were afraid of being left, they ran to be on time. To them it would have been a great disappointment, nothing but a temporal loss. Readers, it is important that we take this train at once; to neglect this train, is to neglect the duty we owe to God, and miss heaven. The Lincoln excursion was a cheap train, on that account many more made the trip. The train to the Celestial City, is cheaper. If you lack two dollars, you need not wait on that account. Jesus—the Conductor of the Celestial City train, pays your fare, if you will only obey his instructions; you are invited to go without money and without price. He not only takes you free, but promises to all a great reward.

exclaimed one of the boys! Of course, he knew they could take the next train and arrive at Falls City, only a little later. Boys, why do you not make haste to get on the Celestial City train? The sights and entertainments are so transcendantly more grand and beautiful, that Lincoln and all other places will be forgotten. Do not wait for to-morrow, for your life may close with to-day. When once you are made to exclaim: "We are left anyway." you will not so soon be resigned to your lot. It will then not be at Lincoln waiting for the next train, but away from God to await the awful denunciation, "depart from me."

TODAY'S DAY.

Meeting at home in the Falls City church. Brother Michael Lichty addressed the audience. Text "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers."

2 Cor. 6: 14. The subject was handled in a general manner.

1. That we must be a separate people.

2. That God in all ages had a separate people.

3. That joining secret orders, such as Freemasonry and Odd Fellows etc., is to some extent equal to being unequally yoked together with unbelievers.

After meeting, one applicant for baptism.

WHO IS RIGHT?

There are so many different ways by which men claim to worship God, that it has become a question with many, as to which is right. It does not seem right to many, that God should accept so many different ways, after pointing out to a man but one way. The Bible accepts one way as being right, and that is revealed in it. All other ways must be wrong. God will accept all who walk in his way, but reject all others. He who takes God at his word, and acts accordingly, is right; whether others are or not. It is safe to walk in God's way, and dangerous to walk in all other ways. It is not the number of adherents that make a way right, but the sanction and testimony of God's Word. C. F.

ECHOES FROM THE EAST.

Another Member Gone Home—A Serious Occasion—Our Evening Meeting—Sunday Services at Antietam—An Aged Lady Departed—Sunday Evening.

[From our Special Correspondent.]

NUMBER XII.

IT is with sadness we chronicle from time to time the death of those we have known in life. To think of separation from each other for all time, is indeed very serious. But there is a bright side to this gloomy picture. We shall meet again in the sweet by and by, when our blessed Savior comes again.

To-day (Nov. 3) the funeral services of sister Eliza Welty took place. Several members of the family have been called from time to eternity within a comparatively short time, and the mother also has gone to the city of the dead. O, mother gone! Who can estimate the loss! Only they who know by experience. I cannot, but I can imagine. But death has done its work. Consumption is its fatal agent, and takes one after another. O how sad must be the lonely few that remain. May God grant the dear ones grace and comfort.

The sermon was preached by brother Oller upon the text: "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord." What a comforting idea is expressed in this beautiful beatitude! No blessing is thus promised to those that are not "in the Lord." If we die in the Lord, we shall "sleep in Jesus."

A BLESSED SLEEP!

Having lived the life of faith and obedience, we shall die in this happy condition. And when the Trumpet of God shall sound through the spacious skies, and Jesus comes in the clouds of heaven, then we shall rise, and "be ever with the Lord." It is not enough to believe in the Lord, to "put on Christ," we must live in the Lord and follow Christ, that we may also "die in the Lord." We are reminded of the following beautiful lines:

"Drop by drop the streams are flowing,

Flowing onward to the sea,

One by one the saints are going

To a vast eternity.

Where the sunshine ever lingers,

In that happy land so far,

Just beyond death's gloomy river,

One by one they gather there.

One by one the saints are going,
In the bliss of heaven to share;
Where the light of life is glowing,
Soon they rest forever there."

At our evening meeting in town, Bro. Amos Kaylor, of Westminster Md., preached. His text was in Matt. 3: 15. How glad we feel when our established brethren come among us, knowing nothing but the true old way of salvation as introduced by our loved Savior when He was here among men, and perpetuated by the true church of God. No one can become a disciple of Jesus without accepting His discipline, and entering upon an actual scholarship under the tuition of the Holy Spirit in the laws and principles of the Word of God. Faith and works must go together. The doctrine of Christ has

NO "NON-ESSENTIALS."

The doctrines the blessed Master taught were at once made effective and spiritual, by His own humble example. Both precept and example were beautifully and powerfully set forth in the life and teachings of Jesus. His ministry was, and is, and ever will be a model ministry for all preachers. The great Baptist's sense of unworthiness is also a grace too much unknown and unobserved in the ministry of the present day. What an influence the church has where her people, and especially if the leaders and teachers, are humble, self-denying, obedient, uniform and primitive in their Christian lives. These are subjects for prayers of faith and labors of love.

Lord's Day, Nov. 10th. Another week has passed, and all over this broad land the brethren and sisters in the Lord are attending their places of worship. What a pity that any one should remain at home, not having a good reason for doing so. To-day the old stone meet-house—Price's—was well filled with an attentive congregation. Our loved elder introduced the services with a hymn, and remarks upon our accountability for Gospel privileges. After prayers an excellent verse was sung:

"Nearer, my God, to thee."

How inspiring! How heavenly and divine the thought to get nearer to God, our Father, and enjoy His holy presence and blessings! Rom. 12, was read as usual, and then brother Snyder spoke of THE NEW MAN.

We drew the following inferences:

- I. Conversion.
- II. Transformation.
- III. Love—an essential power.

Exhortation and singing followed. Please note the 4th stanza of the hymn—345. O that every one could be impressed with the sentiment!

At 4 P. M., yesterday brother Good preached, by request, in the Trinity Reformed church, the funeral sermon of a lady of nearly four-score years, wife of Henry Bonner. Also, in our own meeting-house in the evening, discoursing upon Revelations 20. The leading thoughts

- I. The last day.
- II. Self-judgment.
- III. Expecting the Savior.

Brother Snyder following, gave a hearty exhortation to love and a due preparation for such important events. The 29th hymn was sung appropriate to the subject spoken of. This hymn is a glorious tribute to the praises of the church militant. It is one of the few hymns of the church that contains the "Hallelujah" of the saints on earth. Yet, a little while, my dear brethren and sisters, and we shall know what Hallelujah means among the angels and the just made perfect. Over there in that land of sweet song, there will be no silent tongues—none can refuse to sing. All, all will "Unite to praise

The Savior of mankind."

O let us seek the inspiration of the angelic singers that we may indeed "sing with the Spirit and with the understanding also." The meeting was closed, not with the "popular doxology," but a verse of

"When shall we meet again?"
Yours in the faith.

ECHOES FROM THE SOUTH.

Christian Festivals—Teaching the People—An Educated Ministry—Training the Boys—Neglecting the Girls.

[From the Special Correspondent]

THERE is much ado now-a-days about the "essentials" of salvation, and many persons use the term with a very imperfect conception of its meaning. While there is a wide range of views relative to what are essentials of salvation, there can be but few who would dispute the proposition that all Bible injunctions are essentials of holiness.

Prominent among these, is,

THE CHRISTIAN FESTIVAL.

originating with the blessed Lord in purity during the apostolic age, we may reasonably conclude that it has continued, without interruption, all along the path of the Christian church to the present time. Our church is a unit on the importance of its perpetuity, and I think I may safely say, that no institution of the Gospel is fraught with richer results than it is.

How sweet and precious are the songs and prayers on such occasions. How warm the fraternal greeting, how kindly the social intercourse, and how susceptible is the soul to the holiest impression. We regard the Communion meetings, with all their attendant circumstances, as an indispensable aid to holiness.

It affords an inexceptionably fine opportunity to TEACH THE PEOPLE.

Before we enter on such important work, we should study very prayerfully the subjects to be taught and then boil down our speeches to at least one half their present volume. Let our words be as carefully studied as our subject, and then, with the tact to know where to begin and where to stop, these opportunities may be utilized to the advancement of the church in that knowledge that works by love, "that is from above."

In order to secure more effective labors in this field, we should (anticipating the wants of the future), consider the subject of

AN EDUCATED MINISTRY.

not in the popular sense, but in the Bible sense. An educated ministry according to Bible views comprehended:

1. A heart uncompromisingly devoted to the doctrine of the Bible.
2. A natural endowment of special, mental qualities peculiar to the work of teaching.
3. A miraculous development of the mental faculties.

We should insist that a person who is contemplated for the work of the holy ministry should possess the first qualification, and he should bear, without doubt, the test of the Bible, and that test should be made through the Bible alone.

The second qualification is as important as the first. A brother who is devoted to the peculiarities of the church, or in the brethren's parlance a "contender for the old order," is not for that reason alone, qualified for any official work. A fair Gospel faith, is not sufficient of itself to qualify one for the work of a teacher. He must in addition to the foregoing, be apt to teach. The art of communicating our ideas in the form of sermons, is a grant of the Master of the vineyard, and not miraculous as in the days of the apostles; and no brother should be elected to the ministry, who has not given some evidence of the possession of that gift. That gift should be cultivated. Nature's endowments are given in the crude state, and regular methodical training by competent teachers is necessary to secure that efficiency which will constitute us workmen that need not be ashamed. I do not mean to say, that uneducated preachers are always the most inefficient. On the contrary, the educated are frequently very inefficient and mere stammerers of whom every lover of correct expounding of the Bible is ashamed. Neither do I mean to say, that our ministers should all have a collegiate education. I believe such a state of affairs would be very injurious to the cause of the church.

A thorough familiarity with the laws of our own language constitutes the basis of education, and, as the means to procure that, are accessible to all, the brethren should use much diligence to enable their sons to obtain it. Don't be afraid that it will make them proud.

The worst form of pride that threatens the prosperity of our church now, is, the egotism of our educated men. Such are apt to have an inflated idea of their own importance and abilities, and instead of improving their uncultivated talents, they seek the injury of those whom they esteem their rivals. A true education makes men humble. An ever-abiding sense of the vastness of the unexplored, mental fields prevents them from harboring that silly vanity which is only exhibited by weak minds. In view of these facts, let us not neglect to TRAIN THE BOYS.

Begin the important work early. Lay a solid foundation by a Christian example, and by timely advice. Teach them the first commandment and see that they exemplify it. Teach them habits of industry and show them how to utilize the golden grains of time.

Commence their education in the schools as early as their minds are sufficiently matured, and, ordinarily, they are sufficiently advanced at 16 years of age for all practical purposes. The ornamental branches of learning may be left for those who have no higher aim in life than to gratify their sensual appetites. The dead and foreign languages are of great utility to certain classes. The missionary, translators of useful literature that otherwise would be buried in unknown tongues, and others, utilize them with great benefit to the world, but our lives are too short, and their aid is too meagre to the mass of mankind, to recommend their study to the general ity of our youth.

While we advocate the training of our boys, we should not

NEGLECT THEIR SISTERS.

The girls of this generation, are the mothers of the next, and who can properly estimate the influence of a mother over her children. It is as boundless and fathomless as the great ocean of eternity. Then as the girls of to-day are destined to train the first germ of thought of those who shall preach Christ's Gospel during the next century, how infinitely important that they should be well fitted for their great work. Then educate them with their brothers. What is useful for a boy, is useful for his sister. The public schools are now opening the gates of learning to the poorest of our land, and every brother ought to see that his children get a sound, practical education.

If we avail ourselves of this important aid, and preserve our devotion to the peculiarities of the Gospel, with a due regard to the opinions and usages of our ancestors, we are destined to become a religious power of enviable magnitude.

OUR HOPES OF HAPPINESS.

BY CHARLOTTE T. KONT.

I HAVE been made to wonder why we are so prone to neglect making provision for our eternal welfare. These mortal bodies—these tenements of clay that we give so much care, must soon return to dust—must soon moulder back to its mother earth from whence it came. yet we spend most of our time in preparing for its comfort and enjoyment, and neglect to provide nourishment for that immortal part of us that must live through ages of eternity. How absurd and inconsistent to spend our time toiling for that which can never satisfy our immortal souls. We buy, we sell; we get gain and lay up treasures, we imagine this will bring happiness, and find ourselves more miserable than ever. Wealth and station cannot bring happiness, it must be drawn from the true Source—from the pure Fountain. We are promised on certain conditions eternal happiness beyond the grave, and these same conditions, if complied with, will give us a foretaste of those pleasures. We have the proof within ourselves that God never intended that our time should be spent seeking happiness here below; for the more of this world's goods we possess, the less enjoyment we have in them, and instead of satisfying, it only creates a desire for more, and while the body is overrun with the comforts it cannot enjoy, the soul is starving and that inward craving for happiness, that we are trying to subdue by accumulating this world's goods, is but the demand of that immortal part of us that cannot be satisfied with worldly objects. It is that part of us that will not be satisfied with anything short of the companionship of that blessed Spirit that brings peace and quiet to the soul, that Comforter that was to come to teach us all things, that Spirit that guides into all truth. This, and this alone brings the happiness that every one is seeking for. If we have this, and we are rich, we become poor, and if we are poor, we become rich; all are one in Christ Jesus, who is no respecter of persons. We are filled with new desires, and carnal desires are changed into spiritual. The longing soul is fed from the Word of God, and expands, and there is daily growth in grace.

Then let us cease to build upon sandy foundations, and establish ourselves upon the Rock, that wind nor waves cannot move, and our happiness will be permanent; the turmoils, up's and down's of life can have no effect; sickness can be born patiently; we can see in every affliction and sorrow, that all is working together for good. Our faith will become so strong and our trust so permanent that all circumstances will be the same to us. Wealth and prosperity cannot elevate, neither can poverty and misfortune prostrate.

LANARK, ILL., NOVEMBER 28, 1878

We are prepared to fill orders for the Brethren's Almanac. Price ten cents, or 12 copies one dollar.

The address of Henry Lawver has been changed from Van Wert, Pa., to Wade's Branch, Miami Co., Kan.

ANY one who will send us eight names for the BRETHREN AT WORK and $12.00, will receive an additional copy free.

The address of Jacob Berkeley has been changed from Goshen, Ind., to Sherman, Texas, where he expects to make his home.

JOHN P. Schenck, of Holmdel, Monmouth Co., N. J., desires the address of C. A. Mason. Write him at the above named place.

If there are any Brethren living in Green Co., Mo., they will oblige Bro. George W. Bishop by addressing him at Republic, Green Co., Mo.

BROTHER Stein's present article was delayed by Ray's reply, reaching him one day late, and by that means did not reach us in time for insertion last week.

BROTHER J. S. Flory is now in Kansas City, where he will remain on business till Dec. 25th, and may be seen by those passing through the city, by calling at his place of business near the depot.

Those who order "The Gospel Hammer" will please bear in mind that orders must be accompanied by the cash, as the book belongs exclusively to Bro. Bashor, we having no interest in the sales whatever.

BROTHER R. F. Miller and wife, of Cedar Co., Iowa, are now visiting among relatives and friends in this locality. He preached for us last Sunday evening.

A number of non-Mormon women have petitioned Congress, to take steps looking to the abolishing of polygamy, the curse of that country, and are asking all Christians to sign the petition.

We have received more than enough of No. 36, Vol. 2. Please do not send any more. If those who have sent us this number do not receive the Children at Work it will be because we cannot ascertain their addresses.

A card from Bro. D. B. Gibson, who is now preaching in Kansas, informs us that he will not likely reach Illinois before the last of December or first of January. He thinks of visiting Falls City, Neb., and several other points in the West.

In order to supply back numbers of the debate to new subscribers, we have printed it on separate sheets which will be sent to all new subscribers desiring it. There are four speeches on each sheet. The first sheet has been sent out, but the other will not be ready for about two weeks yet.

NEXT week will be published an interesting letter from the Central Mission held, by Enoch Eoy showing that he and Bro. J. R. Gish know how to do apostolic missionary work. The letter came just as we were ready to go to press, hence too late for this week.

All the methodicians were truly convinced that Noah's preaching was right, but with nearly all, the conviction came too late to be of any benefit. They died, believing that what Noah preached was true, but their faith availed them nothing. Thus we fear it may be with thousands in the day of judgment. They will have to believe the Bible sometime, and if not now, it will be after it is everlastingly too late.

BROTHER R. H. Miller informs us that he will likely visit Northern Ill. this Winter, as his health is improving so that he can now fill some of his many calls. Having sold his farm near Badoga, Ind., he will likely locate elsewhere where the climate is better adapted to his health. Of our own accord we here state that those who write Bro. Miller, expecting a reply, should not fail to enclose stamps, as he is very limited in means, and the amount of writing he has to do is becoming quite expensive for him. Also enclose $1.00 and get a copy of his ably written book.

We are continually adding to our list, the names of such who themselves did not order the paper sent, but who are kindly remembered by loving friends. Do not become alarmed and think we are trying to push our paper into your house and afterwards present a bill for collection. We are not doing business that way. The paper is only sent by order, and our rule is cash in advance, unless by special agreement with those who do business for and with us. When a man gets a copy of our paper, he need only look at the right of his name on the paper or wrapper, to see how long the paper has been paid for. We hope all will find pleasure and profit in reading the BRETHREN AT WORK, whether they paid for it themselves or not.

Give your children a good, wholesome paper. Thousands of pernicious papers filled with romance and fiction are sent out every day. They reach the children, and their minds are poisoned. Shall it be that juvenile papers containing pictures of God's ordinances being practiced in a corrupt manner, are to find a place in your family in preference to those which are established on a true and holy basis? Will you permit your darling offspring to see such reading matter as will degrade and sink it into vice, when you can supply them with the pure and good? Then be careful that they have that which is of great value to the soul. Give them the Bible. Show them how to read it. After this, put some sound paper into their hands as a help on their way to the just and right.

Nor long since a man (?) was seen parading the streets of Akron, Ohio, painted and clothed as an Indian, bearing aloft a sign on which was painted in large letters inviting a curious public to attend "Bazar of the Methodist Episcopal Church." Going to the papers of that city the reader would have found the announcement that at said "Bazar" there would be a "grand exhibition in calisthenics by a class of thirty young ladies." What mockery! The house of prayer turned into a house of playing and worldly display! And then on this a sinking world is asked to build, calling it Christianity. O blessed Christianity, when will hypocrites and deceivers cease heaping such indignities upon thee! The object of the "Bazar" was to make money, and the money was wanted to run a $140,000 church. Backward progress is this, indeed! Where are the missionaries? Let them go to Akron.

SPECIAL DISTRICT MEETING.

ARRANGEMENTS are making for the special District Meeting of Northern Illinois, to be held here Dec. 3, 1878, and it is hoped that those who attend, and expect to take part in the business will come prepared to take their time to it, that what is done may be done well.

As the meeting will be in the Winter season of the year, and it may likely be very cold, special arrangements will be made to care for those who attend, in such a manner that all may have good accommodation. There will be no meals at the meeting-house, but all will be fed at our private houses, there being but two meals each day. There being a number of members in and around Lanark, this can be done without inconvenience. At the meeting-house each one will receive instructions where to go and lodge during the meeting. A committee has been appointed for that purpose. By this method each one can have a good lodging place and nobody will be over-crowded.

The meeting is to be opened at 9 o'clock and close at 2, there being no intermission. Dinner will be served at about 3 o'clock. This will give all a chance to do their work, attend evening preaching. It also gives those from the country a chance to attend and enjoy all the meetings. We will commence meeting here on Thursday evening, Nov. 28th and keep it up over Sunday and at night during the District Meeting, expecting some of the ministering brethren to be here during that time.

WEEKLY SUPPLEMENT.

OWING to the fact that we are getting more good matter than we can possibly find room for in our paper, we have now concluded soon to commence running a weekly supplement without any extra charge. This supplement will be large enough to contain the debate in full, so that our readers will not only get a large paper well filled with good reading matter, but the debate besides on a separate sheet. We have several good reasons for printing the debate on a sheet to itself:

- 1. Many of our readers wish to preserve the debate without preserving the entire paper.
2. Many, after reading the debate, wish to lend it to their neighbors without having their papers soiled.
3. Quite a number are preserving the entire debate by pasting it in a scrap book, and for these the supplement form will be particularly handy.

Our agents will keep this in view when canvassing for subscribers. We have on hand much valuable matter that ought to go in the paper for the benefit of our many readers; some of it is very interesting. Many good articles have been waiting for months, and they are still accumulating on our hands, and we know of no better way of disposing of them to good advantage than to run the debate on a separate sheet, to be folded in and sent out with each paper, and then fill the entire paper with other articles.

We do not want our contributors to stop writing just because we are getting much good matter, for we will have use for it after awhile. The winter season is the time to prepare good, sound articles, and then it is always better to have too much than not enough. We will commence publishing the supplement in a few weeks.

VISIT TO CHAMPAIGN CO., ILL.

OUR visit to Champaign Co., Ill., was a pleasant one, though the wet weather interfered some with our meetings. It was a source of considerable pleasure to visit and travel over the field so often traveled over before.

It was here that I was called to the ministry while yet young, and without even ordinary education. The field being large, and laborers few, I had to enter into active service at once, and from that day to this but few Sundays have passed that I did not preach from one to three times. Having no means aside from what was made by day's labor the pressure was rather severe, yet from the experience of these years I have learned things that will be valuable to me in after life.

It was also here that I commenced my pamphlet work. Having had considerable to do in defending Trine Immersion I commenced writing an article on that subject for one of the papers, but the result was my "Trine Immersion Traced to the Apostles," of which something like 20,000 copies have been distributed. My "Perfect Plan of Salvation" was written between times one Winter while chopping cord wood.

Preaching in this country was then attended with many difficulties. The members were very widely scattered, necessitating much traveling to attend the appointments. The opposition was also great, as many of those opposed to our doctrine were well skilled in the rudiments of controversy. They were many and we few. At first, congregations were often small, and not very much interested. Bro. John Barnhart was the first resident minister of the Brethren in the county, and A. B. Snyder the next. Bro. John Metzger was the first brother who preached there. George Dilling and wife were the first members then known in the county. Now there are not far from 100 members scattered over different parts of the county. At present they have but one minister, A. J. Bowers, who lives near St. Joseph, though there is enough work there to require the entire time of one man. There are of course many places where a regular meeting ought to be held, with prospects of doing some good. While looking over this field, and seeing the want of further ministerial aid, I felt as though I would like to return to help work again, and aid my brethren in building up churches. With proper effort I believe several good churches might be built up in this part of the State. Our missionaries in Southern Illinois ought to give this field special attention.

It is in this congregation that sister Mattie A. Lear lives. She is a married sister, about 40 years of age, and very finely educated. Her acquaintance with science, history and theology is good. She is a hard working sister and does her writing and studying during odd moments. Generally while sewing or washing she has the Bible lying at some convenient point so that she can read while working. Her husband, Bro. John Lear, is a deacon in the church. They have but one child. Sister Lear promises to give special attention to "Our Bible Class" department the coming volume. We here state that our readers should not expect her to answer many queries by letter. She cannot spare the time from her work to do so much writing. She prefers answering queries through the paper, and in this way all can get the benefit.

During our stay, we held a few meetings in the Harmonson neighborhood, and also at the Brethren's meeting house four miles East of Urbana. The interest was good. Our last meeting was on Sunday the 17th, to a crowded house of attentive listeners.

While at Urbana I visited the Illinois University college building. This is likely the best school in the State. Dr. Gregory, a teacher of rare abilities, is Professor. He kindly showed me through the building, visiting the various departments, and explaining each item of interest with great care. A visit to the college Museum and Art Gallery is a treat to the students of nature and history. The library room is large and being well filled with choice works. It is likely destined to become one of the best libraries in the West. Had I time, I would like to give our readers a description of some things seen here, but must defer that to a future visit.

Financially Champaign county is not in a good condition. Most of the farmers are much in debt, and many of them so deep that they cannot pay out and hence will have to suffer considerably. The country is good, and the land of the very best quality. J. H. M.

THE PROPHETIC CONFERENCE.

THE Prophetic Conference held in New York a few weeks ago, was both profitable and interesting. It was composed of a class of ministers altogether different from some fanatics who have heretofore had much to do with this question. Many of the men were persons of considerable scholarship and reputation, and looked at the Scriptures relating to the second coming of Christ with well balanced judgments. Though a considerable diversity of views on some points was apparent, but the following exhibits the common faith of those who were present, and took an active part in the Conference:

I. We affirm our belief in the supreme and absolute authority of the written Word of God on all questions of doctrine and duty.

II. The prophetic words of the Old Testament Scriptures concerning the first coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, were literally fulfilled in his birth, life, death, resurrection and ascension; and so the prophetic words of both the Old and the New Testaments concerning his second coming will be literally fulfilled in his visible bodily return to this earth in like manner as he went up into heaven; and this glorious Epiphany of the great God, our Savior Jesus Christ, is the blessed hope of the believer and of the church during this entire dispensation.

III. This second coming of the Lord Jesus is every-where in the Scriptures represented as imminent, and may occur at any moment; yet the precise day and hour thereof is unknown to man, and known only to God.

IV. The Scriptures nowhere teach that the whole world will be converted to God, or that there will be a reign of universal righteousness and peace before the return of our blessed Lord; but that only and by his coming in power and glory will the prophecies concerning the progress of evil, and the development of Antichrist; the times of the Gentiles, and the ingathering of Israel; the resurrection of the dead in Christ and the transfiguration of his living saints, receive their fulfillment, and the period of millennial blessedness its inauguration.

V. The duty of the church during the absence of the Bridegroom is to watch and pray, to work and wait, to go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature, and thus hasten the coming of the day of God; and to his last promise, 'Surely I come quickly,' to respond in joyous hope, 'Even so, come Lord Jesus.'

In reference to millenarianism and missions, this resolution was adopted:

Resolved, That the doctrine of our Lord's pre-millennial advent, instead of paralyzing evangelistic and missionary efforts, is one of the mightiest incentives to earnestness in preaching the Gospel to every creature 'till he come."

The interest manifested in this question just now, signifies something more than we may be able to fully comprehend. During past years, men's hearts have been failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth, but now many begin to lift up their heads, and conclude that their redemption draweth nigh. They see certain things coming to pass, spoken of by the prophets and holy men of old, and now believe that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand, and that Christ will soon appear in the clouds of heaven.

To them the precise day and hour is unknown, for that is in the mind of the Father only. But they see that the Jews have fallen by the edge of the sword, have been led captives among all nations; Jerusalem has been trodden down of the Gentiles, and from the way things are now working in the East, it would seem that "the times of the Gentiles" is nearly fulfilled. I fully and candidly believe that the second coming of Christ, is not many years in the future, and for ought we know, many of our readers may yet see him coming in the clouds of heaven. That will be a grand and glorious time for those who are prepared to meet and reign with him. With a heart full of love for him who has died for us, every true heart can respond to the closing language of Scripture: "Even so, come Lord Jesus."

AN EXPLANATION.

FROM various sources, we learn that many of our readers are astonished at the rough and unbecoming language used by Mr. Ray in his part of the discussion, and think it ought not to be allowed. Not being used to hearing preachers use such language, they think it rather strange that it has to be endured. But we should remember that it is our duty to endure hardness as good soldiers.

Mr. Ray is the champion debater among the Land-mark Baptists of the South-west; his people have great confidence in him as a debater, and are willing to trust their cause in his hands. He is now set for the defense of the Baptist church, and according to the rules of debate in like cases, he is at liberty to conduct his side as he thinks best for his cause. We have no way of preventing his rough expressions, unless they become indecent, and in that case we know just what to do. If he chooses to devote any of the space allotted him for defending his doctrine, to using unbecoming and abusive expressions, his cause and not ours suffers by it. We prefer letting him have his own way of defending his side, and then if public sentiment turns against him for using abusive language, as it did at Newtonia, he and not us, is to blame.

Our readers should remember that the rough language does not come from our side of the house, and as the entire debate is published in the Baptist paper also, and is read by the Baptists, they too can see from just which side the abusive language comes. There are thousands of Baptists who are just as much opposed to such language as our people, and the thing will have its weight with them. In reading the Quarter and McComell Debate, it can be seen on which side the rough language is in that case, and so it will be in the Stem and Bay Debate. It is Ray's way of debating. We heard him seven days at Newtonia, and his articles in this written debate are not half as rough as were his oral speeches at Newtonia. It is rough yet, but it is hoped that he will become still more. This explanation is made in behalf of many readers who do not like to read such rough language. We shall watch the matter carefully, and should he become as abusive in this debate as he is in some of his discussions of the past, we have the key and it necessary will use it. Hope this will prove satisfactory to all our readers; we ask each one to renew his subscription, watch the matter, see how it is going; try both spirits (Stem's and Ray's) and see which is of God. We are told to try the spirits, and here we have a good chance.

A FEW OBSERVATIONS.

NUMBER III.

If all the periodicals of the brotherhood would unflinchingly stand up for, and maintain the same principle, they too would exert a power for good in the world. Much depends upon the editors of our papers. To a certain extent the church is with them as the clay in the potter's hand. They have much to do with the moulding of public sentiment. If our papers get to opposing the gospel order of the church in the simplicity of dress, the power and influence of those who contend for non-conformity will be greatly crippled, and the church thereby proportionally injured. Pride is something that does not need encouragement, it needs to be discouraged on every hand. In former years too much was said in our papers against the doctrine of Christian plainness, and in some instances we can see the effect of it. Every periodical in the church wants to stand up for our distinctive features. Were this faithfully done, we would be less annoyed by pride.

The editors of our papers want not only to teach our distinctive features, but live them out—set a good example before their readers. A fashionably attired editor, among the Brethren, is a walking advertisement of inconsistency. He professes to belong to, and edit a paper, in behalf of a people holding the doctrine of non-conformity, while he himself patronizes the ways of the world. I have fully made up my mind that when I get ready to oppose, and try to overthrow the Gospel order of the church, I will have manhood enough about me to step down and out, and do the square thing. We always tell people that the BRETHREN AT WORK is a one-sided paper—it is for the Lord and not for Baal. We do not propose to run a religious paper in the interest of Satan's cause, and those who look into this paper with the expectation of finding something in defense of a departure from the ancient landmarks of the Gospel, will look in vain.

All the ministers among the Brethren should be consistent advocates of plainness. If corruption should creep into the church, it will come through the ministry. Their influence has much to do with the purity of the body. In fact they should be ensamples to the flock; being under shepherds, the flock is inclined to follow them and learn of them. It is useless to attempt to keep a church plain where there are finely dressed ministers. If ministers do not have respect enough for the cause to obey the Gospel in all its parts, there will also be a departure from the simplicity of the truth among the laity.

The extremes to which other denominations have gone on the question of dress, is alarming. Most churches in former years were plain, and many made fine dressing a test of membership. The Methodist church, for instance, fifty years ago was as strict about dress as the Brethren, but gradually gave away to the effects of pride till now its members are as stylish as any church in America. John Wesley himself was opposed to pride in all its forms, and did his utmost to prevent it. Old people tell me that fifty years ago they could tell a Methodist preacher by his plain dress wherever seen. They wore a plain, simple unostentatious people with no steeples on their meeting-houses, no ornaments in their rooms of worship, nor were ornaments of any sort allowed on the band-members. Plainness and simplicity characterized them in their daily work and appearance. I do not mention these things to cast any reflection on the M. E. church, but introduce them as a warning to our people that they run not into the same excess or error. We see what has become of other churches that have used too much lenity regarding dress, and it therefore behooves us that we put on the brakes in time.

Brethren and sisters, it is my candid impression that some of our people may have made a few mistakes in teaching and enforcing the doctrine of Scriptural plainness. I do not mean that our united Brethren erred in this respect, for they probed their authority for plain dressing on the Gospel, their only rule of faith and practice; but of late years there are those who aim to make the Minutes the basis of plainness. They take the Minutes to church meeting and decide questions by them instead of leaving the Minutes at home and settling things by the Bible, as did our ancient Brethren before the Minutes were in existence. Our ancient Brethren could enforce the Gospel law of plainness without referring to the Minutes as authority, and so can we. The Minutes are good enough in their place as advice, and to show how former brethren looked at the Scriptures, but as a rule of faith and practice, let us stick to the Bible. If we constantly refer to the Minutes for authority to enforce plainness, some will finally conclude that the Gospel says nothing about how we shall dress, and in that way a bitter feeling will be produced against the Annual Meeting and its work. Let us go direct to the Bible for our authority in defense of plainness, and our arguments against fashions and jewelry, then, and not till then, will we be able to reproduce and maintain that plainness and simplicity that characterized the primitive churches.

REVEALED RELIGION.

THERE are three theories extant concerning revealed religion.

1. That God has not spoken, and that what we receive as the revealed religion from him, is simply the inventions of our minds. Those who thus teach, are called Infidels.

2. That God's voice is heard in every system of religion in the world; that He has not favored one more than the other, and that He has endowed us with the faculty of selecting the best from each system. This class is quite numerous, and may be termed Spiritualists, Freethinkers, &c.

3. That God "at sundry times and in divers manners spake in times past unto the fathers by the prophets," but "in these last days hath spoken unto us by his Son." Heb. 1: 1, 2. This positive declaration of an inspired writer, we accept as the true theory. God spoke not conditionally, but with supreme authority. He spoke by the Lord Jesus Christ. "I have given them," the disciples, "the words which thou gavest me," says Jesus; "and they have received them." John 17: 8. God, the Father, gave his Son, our Savior words, and these words the Lord gave to his disciples. And more: those disciples received those words, and by or through them, believed that God sent Jesus, the Christ.

By this Christ, the Father revealed a system of religion which stands above all other systems. It is the best system on earth. It is the best because it comes from God who is superior to all other beings. Other systems may pretend to have come from God; but this system introduced by the Lord Jesus not only pretends to come from the Father, but locks up the pretension by many infallible proofs. Not only proofs, not simply infallible proofs, but by many infallible proofs. Revealed religion and invented religion are two distinct and entirely different things. Revealed religion is in harmony with all Divine Law—was with the Father from the beginning, but invented religion took its rise on this side of the creation of man. Revealed religion took its rise before man existed; invented religion after his creation.

This revealed religion is designed for our will, our reason, judgment, conscience, affections. It is therefore personal, but cannot be resolved into matter. It is addressed to the mind, and is designed to control that, fitting it for a nobler and higher life. To reveal that Law, required no less a personage than the Son of God. The voluntary existence was sufficient guarantee that the Son would perform the mission acceptably and successfully. An angel could not be entrusted with such an important work—a man translated, remodeled and fashioned in the mold of Deity was not the proper soul, but the Son of God alone possessed all the qualifications to reveal the grandest system of religion ever conceived.

How can we actually know anything about God or of God unless He in some way actually makes Himself known? When He said, "I am the Lord thy God," he did so. Nor could He thus speak without revealing Himself; and His purpose to thus speak, must have been a will, and there can be no will without a person. God therefore exists personally. "The proof of revelation is in the thing revealed," that is, the Person who is made known. In this case the thing revealed is God, the will of God; hence the best evidence of the reality of the Divine revelation. A man tastes an apple. He knows that he tasted it and the best evidence that he has to support his knowledge of the matter is that he tasted it. So with revealed religion. The best evidence that it has been revealed, is that it was revealed. You can see the clear light of the sun, but because you have no organs by which you can analyze it, tell what it is, does not prove that there is no such thing as light. Because you see the blade of grass, green and beautiful, enlarging day by day and cannot tell how it is done, does not prove that the blade does not grow and become beautiful. It exists and enlarges whether we know wherein the life is or is not.

To present the Revelation of God to the skeptic so as to induce him to believe, has been a question with the great school of theologians. That the skeptic has a soul to save, and that he needs a Savior, a change of heart, and the hope of eternal life just as much as any other man, is not at all doubted by those who believe on the Lord Jesus Christ; but how to get him to move in the matter, how to awaken him, is the important question. It seems to me that if God were presented to him as a loving Father, as One who knows us, pities us, desires to help us, the skeptic's heart would be softened. Such a God cannot be impersonal, but possesses all the attributes of personality.

There are three lines of theistic argument, two of which have been urged by the majority of those who attempt to meet the skeptic. 1. Metaphysical theism, which has for its basis reasonings on the ideas of time, space, the absolute, the unconditional, the infinite and causation, which thrown together end in a necessary Being. 2. Cosmical theism, or the purely physical principle of evolution. 3. Spiritual theism, or the gradual development of our spiritual being in harmony with the growth principle of a holy, loving, gracious Father. This theism cannot be found to be at variance with our sense of right and justice, and is in harmony with the revealed will of God. The revelation of each dispensation was suited to the state of those for whom it was given; yet so complete was it in its workings that it lifted higher and higher into truth and holiness all who strictly obeyed it. It did not take hold of a man and make him a child of God in full stature in an instant, but by degrees brought him to that state which satisfied Divine Justice and Divine affection. That the Old Testament was adapted to the people for whom it was designed, there can be no question. That it is the revealed will of God to a particular people, in a particular age of the world is a settled fact. But was it a homogeneous whole, thrown together at once for all men in all ages? It was not; but it was gradually revealed or brought into existence as the state or the condition of the people demanded. Great darkness covered the human mind, and God saw fit to let the rays of Divine Light shine on it gradually. Dimly it shone at first, and as time passed by, God by degrees, increased the Light until it shone in full splendor in the person of Jesus Christ. This is the True Light.

Ask the skeptic to look at God's Revelation from this standpoint. He can see the propriety of such a course and the beauty of a gradual unfolding of the Truth. Point him to a loving, holy Father, rather than to the metaphysical and abstruse. He is cold now; do not heap the ice upon him. Warm him with the sunshine of God's love and he will spring into life. Let him see that it is nothing against God if he did use "imperfect representations of Divine things;" so long as more perfect ones were above the capacity of those whom He sought to save. Because God chose to thus slowly and patiently lead them through many ages, till the Sun of Righteousness rose in full splendor, does not prove that the Revelation is untrue. Not at all; but rather proves that God loved them exceedingly, with much patience. And then, too, it is in harmony with the manner of God's doings in nature. He gives us man fruit in a moment of time. Days, weeks and even months are required to produce a perfect grain of corn. Its development is gradual. No less so was the present gradual system of revealed religion. That it began to show itself in a single ray way back in the days of Adam, and went on expanding and developing water and water, until the mighty Sun of Righteousness arose in the land of Judea, only shows the wonderful care and love of the Father for us.

Our Bible Class.

The Worth of Truth no Tongue Can Tell.

This department is designed for asking and answering Bible questions, and for the solution of Scriptural difficulties. All questions should be stated with candor, and answered with as much clearness as possible, in order to promote Bible Truth. Articles for this department, must be short and to the point.

Please explain Daniel 2: 44, 45. In the days of what kings? What does the word kingdom refer to, and what the stone? WM. T. HARDING.

Will the BRETHERN AT WORK give an explanation of the latter clause of the 30th verse of the 2nd chapter of Luke, which reads as follows: "And he that hath no sword let him sell his garment and buy one."

Also, Mark 23: 15, which reads as follows: "Woe unto you scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte; and when he is made ye make him two-fold more the child of hell than yourselves." S. A. ULERY.

Please explain 1 Tim. 1: 9; Luke 10: 15; Mark 9: 23; Mark 16: 17, 18. To what law has the Scriptures reference and to what extent should it be used? What is the most esteemed? Has it reference to any particular thing?

QUERIES ANSWERED.

1. Please give your views on Luke 10: 4. "Carry neither purse, nor scrip, nor shoes: and salute no man by the way."

2. Also Matt. 23: 9: "And call no man your father upon the earth: for one is your father which is in heaven."

"The wife is bound by the law as long as her husband liveth; but if her husband be dead, she is at liberty to be married to whom she will; only in the Lord."—1 Cor. 7: 39.

Please give us your views on the covering spoken of by Paul in Cor. 11: also tell us who, or what that head is the women distort by praying or prophesying with their heads uncovered, both the married and unmarried?

SALUTING BY THE WAY.

GET the idea of urgency from the above, that they should go forth and preach and not be encumbered with baggage, "and salute no man by the way," especially implies urgency; don't spend time upon the road in conversation, for remember that souls are perishing for want of the bread of life. Go forth and proclaim the glad tidings, "and salute no man by the way." Also Matt. 23: 9. "And call no man your father upon the earth; for one is your Father which is in heaven." Call no man father, in a religious sense, but let God be all in all.

THE COVERING.

The apostle Paul is establishing the fact, that man is the head of the woman. The woman does not, in this respect, change her relation to man by becoming a wife. Man is head of the woman, whether married or unmarried; hence the Christian man is dishonored when the Christian woman refuses to take her place in the Christian headship, appearing there with uncovered head. That power or sign that should characterize the Christian woman, becomes a sacred covering on account of its significance, placing her under the combined protection of man, whose head is Christ, whose head is God. The Christian lady, whether married or unmarried, who takes her place in the organization as heaven has ordained, is three blessed. It, the power, speaks the silent language, I acknowledge the Heavenly, and hence the truthfulness of the saying, The greatest sermon that was ever preached, is acted out.

THE LAW OF MARRIAGE.

The Lord God instituted marriage, and that union is indissoluble while they both live; but if the husband die, the Lord grants the wife liberty to marry another, and vice versa. Second marriages are "in the Lord" only when one of the party is dead. T. D. LYONS.

CHRIST'S SECOND COMING.

J. M. KILGOUR:—

IN answer to your query in relation to Rev. 20: 13, 14, I will give you my humble opinion. It would seem that many things had yet to transpire before this prophecy will be fulfilled, namely, the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, His calling the bride, His return to earth with His saints to reign for the space of a thousand years as personal King of the Jews, &c. Then cometh the end when He shall have delivered up the kingdom to God, who shall be all in all, and when all things shall be subdued unto Him, then shall the Son also Himself be subject unto Him that put all things under Him that may be all in all. Why not then the "sea give up the dead, and death and hell deliver up the dead, and be cast into a lake of fire," when God is all in all? "For we shall have a new heaven and new earth; for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away and then there was no more sea." Rev. 21: 1 "John saw a holy city coming down from God, prepared as a bride for her husband." And God Himself makes His tabernacle with men to dwell with them and be their God. See the joys that await the regenerated man. No more tears, no more sorrows nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away. Picture to yourself the era from where this takes place, clad with sublime sunshine of unknown skies, glorified with divine presence in a perpetual harbor of ethereal peace—God with us.

Read carefully the divine Scriptures and make them the study of your life. They teach us that we are now in the time of the Gentiles, where partial blindness has come to the Israelites and they are scattered among all nations of the earth. But God says, "I will bring them again from among all nations whithersoever I have scattered them, and they shall be my people and I will be their God." 1 Thess. 4: 13-18, teaches us, that the Lord will come in the air, not to earth, but in the air, in the clouds to call the church, the bride. And the dead in Christ shall rise first, then they which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together in the cloud to meet their Lord in the air. Observe those that are alive in Christ, (not the common masses huddled together in sin), but they that are Christ's shall be changed in the twinkling of an eye: two shall be in one bed, one taken, the other left; two at the mill grinding, one taken, the other left; two in the field, one taken, the other left. Paul says, "Blessed and holy is he who has part in the first resurrection." John says, "For they shall reign with Christ a thousand years." Christ prayed that they might be in the world, but not of the world, that the Spirit of God might dwell in them richly that they might have life and have it more abundantly. These joys are only for the regenerated man who has fought the good fight, &c.

In other parts of the Scriptures we read of the short time of tribulation. Rev. 12: 13; Matt. 24: 21, 22. Might not this time fit in snugly between the calling of the elect and the glorious appearance of our Lord, with His ten thousand saints? Jude 14, 15; Zach. 14; Acts 1: 9-12; Matt. 24: 30; Mark 14: 62; Rev. 20: 4. When the Lord shall establish His kingdom.—"Thy kingdom come, thy will be done,"—all to be fulfilled yet. The Scriptures are plain as to our duty; in my estimation the Brethren here very closely to the line, more so than any other denomination I know of; and I believe them to be the true church of Jesus Christ. I am not a member of any church and may differ with them on a few unimportant points. The great fundamental principle of the Christian religion revolves around Christ Jesus, to Him you must look, and to Him alone. If He says thus and so, then it is safe for you, but do not look to man. Go to the Scriptures, read for yourself. Christ is the key; and if you will only look up through men, way beyond to the Lord, you will soon see for yourself.

I do not believe as many of the popular churches of to-day teach, that feet-washing, self-denial, humility, virtue, simplicity, charity, brotherly love and many other things which Christ and His disciples enjoined upon mankind, are no longer essential to our salvation, but have been laid away upon the polemical, theological shelf with Levitical Code, and other obsolete fragments of the Law. Christ's sayings are still in force. When He commands His disciples to go down into the water, to wash one another's feet, &c., we should obey them; not because there is power in them to save us, but because there is power in Christ who instituted them. You may travel all around the valley of feet-washing, cross the plains of pride with sandals, soap and stool, but if you can come to Christ without feet-washing, you can do better than Peter did. R. A WEEK WITH ONLY SIX DAYS IN IT.

W. L. STUBBS, CHICAGO, WIS.

REMEMBER, when I was a boy, that a sailor told me that in making voyages round Cape Horn, they had one week which had eight days in it. He said there would be an extra day, so that there would be two Thursdays, or two Saturdays, or whatever day was thus doubled.

A very marvelous statement I thought it was, and I was very ready to disbelieve it; saying to myself, that I know enough to know that it couldn't be true. But I did not know as much as I thought I did, for when after awhile I went to sea myself, I found a week with only six days in it, and I might have found one with eight if I had gone in the right direction. Let me tell you about how this happens. The sun does more for us than simply give us light, much more, though that is what we think of first when we think about it. For one thing the sun is our great clock, by which all clocks in the world are regulated. It divides the time into days and nights for us, and if this great clock should stop, there would be no more days or nights, and a week would not be seven days, but a week or a month or a year of time would be one long day or night according to what part of the earth you were on.

Suppose that, some day when you were in school, the clock in the school-house should stop when it was just about four o'clock, and time for school to be out. If no one noticed that the clock was not going, you would know, for all the clock said, if the teacher would not let you go for an hour, say till five o'clock, and then you would go home and expect to have two hours to play in before supper-time, at six o'clock, just as usual. And if when you were going home some one should say that sometimes there was a day with only one hour between school and supper-time, you might think to yourself that that must be a mistake. For isn't school out at four? And isn't supper-time at six? And isn't that two hours?

That is like the way I should have thought, if I had been told, sometimes there are only five days between Sunday and Sunday. But when you got home, where the clock had been going all the time, you would find that it was nearly five o'clock; and they would tell you that you had lost one hour, and you would have to reckon according to the time at home just as the rest were doing.

Now, suppose that our great clock up in the sky should stop some day. I know you all know that it is the earth that moves and the sun really stands still; but it seems as though the sun moved and it is simpler to talk about it so. Suppose it should stop just at noon, and stand overhead for just an hour, and then go on into the West and set as usual. You see we should have gained a whole hour between the sunrise and sunset; and between the midnight before and the midnight after, which is the way we count the days, you know, would be twenty-five hours.

Now our great clock never stops. I am not going to ask you to believe that; but suppose once more that some day just at noon you should start and travel west, and should go just as fast as the sun did, you see you would keep the sun right overhead all the time, and it would keep noon just as long as you kept going, and if you traveled for one hour and then stopped, and the sun went on and set in the West ahead of you, you would have gained an hour, just as though the sun had stopped.

Now, no one could possibly travel as fast as the sun does; it takes the lightning to do that; but if you went from the East to the West all the day long you might really gain a little time. The sun would not go down in the West and get out of sight quite as soon as if you had stopped in one place and not tried to keep up with him at all.

And if you traveled on, day after day, you would go around the earth, and you would gain as much time, taking all the days together, as it takes for the earth to turn around once; that is, just twenty-four hours. Now, I do not mean that we really get any more time by traveling than by staying at home, but we do make each day a little longer, as the sun makes them off, and so it takes less of them to fill a certain length of time; it takes just one less to fill the time that it takes to travel round the earth from East to West, than it does to fill the time of those who stay at home. Does not that sound queerly; but it is true, nevertheless. And so when you get home from your traveling, you would say, perhaps, "Now, this is Monday," the ones who had stayed at home would say, "No, this is Tuesday." And you would have to come to their reckoning, and drop out one day and call it Tuesday, just as the rest did, and so you would have a week with only six days in it.

As a matter of convenience, those who circumnavigate the earth, at least many of them, have agreed to drop out, or take in the day at one fixed place, that is, at the meridian of 180 from Greenwich; and I remember in going from San Francisco to the East Indies a few years ago that we crossed this line about four o'clock on Monday morning, so you see Monday was four hours long, then Tuesday was twenty hours, and what would have been the next Saturday was Sunday, and so we had a week with only six days in it.

We should count every day of stirring account with an evening of thought. We are taught nothing by experience unless we muse upon it.

CORRESPONDENCE.

From Jones' Mills, Pa.

Dear Brethren:—

AS an item of news I will just say to the brethren and sisters that our Love-feast in the Indian Creek branch, Westmoreland Co., Pa., is now among the things of the past.

By special request Bro. Stephen Hildebrand was with us. Also, elder Abraham Summy Bro. Silas Hoover and John Myers, from adjoining districts, with Bro. J. B. Miller from Bedford Co., were with us. All seemed to take a good interest in the meeting and preached the Word with power. The meeting commenced on the 12th and closed on the evening of the 14th of October. Two souls were added to the church by baptism. The meeting was largely attended. Only half the people present could be seated in the house. The order among the spectators was not quite as good as it might have been. If only the people would fear the Lord, and learn to respect his people. Otherwise the meeting was good. Doubtless good impressions were made and resolutions formed that will not soon be forgotten. May the Lord help us all to treasure up the good seed sown, and carry out the principles of the same in our daily walk and conversation.

Dear Brethren:—

BY the kind hand of providence I had the pleasure of meeting with the brethren in the Tippecanoe district, Kosciusko Co., Ind., on the 12 of Nov., at their Communion.

Bro. Berkey had the oversight of that district for two years or more, but told them, he would soon leave there, as he intended soon to start for Texas, there to locate a colony and organize a church. He then preached his farewell sermon, and so many tears as were shed at that time, I have not seen for some time.

Bro. Berkey thought it a good idea to go across Red River, and there tell the good, old Gospel story. Who will go and do likewise? This is a good missionary movement. The brethren in the middle and Western States ought to give this subject a serious thought. — Remember Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Florida, and perhaps other States, that have never had the doctrine of Christ preached in its ancient purity, as believed and practiced by the Brethren.

Many of the territories have not yet heard a brother preach, and often we hear many Macedonian cries for the bread of life.

We have a brother living here, who, twenty years ago, left the New England States. Recently he went back to visit, and his singular appearance excited their curiosity, which made them ask him many questions in regard to his religious principles.

The inquiry naturally comes up in our mind, why not go down there and explain the Gospel more fully unto them? What do the Brethren East say to that? The command is, "Go into all the world," and that is a part of the world. Let the church awake to her duty, and God will not withhold his blessings.

From Gettysburg, Pa.

Dear Brethren:—

I AM sorry to say that we have not as good news to give as some. There have been but very few additions last year. The Brethren still try to sow the seed, hoping the harvest is not far distant, when we will have a bountiful harvest of souls.

Yesterday we held our quarterly council-meeting. Bro. Daniel Heller and Bro. Daniel Hollinger from Cumberland Co. were with us. All passed off very pleasantly, which is very gratifying indeed. It is pleasant to attend council-meeting where all are of the same mind and speak the same thing. An election was held for a deacon, the choice falling on Bro. J. H. Bosserman. May he ever have the grace of God to sustain him in his duties, so that he may be a helper in the church, aiding to guide the Gospel ship up the rugged channel through which she must pass. And as much depends upon the faithfulness of the deacons, may he receive plentiful grace to become one of God's servants, whose examples may be worthy of imitation, and his zeal be kept alive by the hope of obtaining a crown over in the other world. — There all that are faithful will get a reward in that blissful abode.

To-day held two meetings, one in the morning and one in the evening, when the two above-named brethren spoke in the forenoon, and Bro. Hollinger in the evening. Hope that all were benefited by the services.

Yours in Christ,

C. L. PFOUTZ.

Dear Brethren:—

YESTERDAY I came to this place, where I expect to remain a week or ten days, (if the Lord will).

I labored one week, about ten miles West of Henry, Marshall Co., with about the same result as in Bureau Co. Good interest manifested both in attendance and attention; a general assent being given to the truth presented, but the parable of the Savior is applicable thus far in my labors. They all with one accord consent

MAKING EXCUSES.

One says, I have bought a piece of land and am in debt, and may get into trouble, before I get through; I pray thee have me excused. Another says, I have bought some oxen, and they trespass on my neighbor's corn. He has such bad fences, and they are so provoking. I may get into trouble with neighbor B. about it. So I pray thee, have me excused for the present.

Another, I must first be reconciled to neighbor A. He is offended at me for some reason, and I am sure I never done him any harm or laid a single thing in his way, so I cannot come now.

Another, the doctrine you preach, is all true according to the Scriptures, and I always liked the Dunkard church. I believe they are nearer right according to the Scriptures than any other people. Yet I think you are more particular than you need be in some things. You require the sisters to have their heads covered while in worship, and I think the hair is given for a covering, and if another covering is required, I don't think it must necessarily be a cap, why not a bonnet or a handkerchief?

Another says, I believe Trine Immersion in baptism is nearest the reading of the commission given by the Savior to the disciples in Matt. 28, but I cannot see why one dip will not do just as well.

Again another says, I cannot see the propriety of washing one another's feet in this age. It is true the Savior did it, commanded it to His disciples and gave them the example how they should practice it, but I think he only meant to teach them humility. The apostles wished to know which of them should be the greatest in the kingdom of God; hence he taught them, that we should rather choose to be a servant, or as a little child.

Here another, I am satisfied that to salute one another with a holy kiss is frequently commanded by the apostles, but it does seem to me that a hearty handshake would answer the same purpose in this more enlightened age.

Another, I always love to hear the Brethren preach, that we shall love our enemies, for the Savior said so, and I know it will work well in a community, for love will work no ill to his neighbor, and I know if we feed him when he is hungry, and give him drink when he is thirsty, it will do him more good than anything else, we could do to him. But I do not see how I would get along if the robber would come and murder me or my family; or the enemy would come against our country and we would likely be overcome, I am pretty sure I would fight the enemy and I cannot do that and love him at the same time. So I pray thee, have me excused.

Just such a string of frivolous excuses, with many others, we hear offered time and again, from even intelligent people, after laboring with and for them with the little ability God has given, to convince them of the necessity of obeying Jesus, and of the awful consequences of living in disobedience to the divine will of God, and knowingly

NEGLECTING THEIR DUTY.

We are forced to turn away with a sad heart, bleeding because of their hardness, and exclaim in the language of Isaiah 49: 4, "I have labored in vain. I have spent my strength for naught and in vain." With a heart softened with love to the sinner, (and which no one can realize but a faithful servant of Jesus), and with eyes bathed in tears, he can only repeat, (not sing) the appropriate language of the hymn:

"Who can describe the pain,

Which faithful preachers feel,

Constrained to speak in vain,

To hearts as hard as steel,

But who can tell the joy, that's felt,

When sturd' on hearts begin to melt.

In conclusion I would say to many among whom I have gone, and by whom I was kindly treated, that none of the excuses above alluded to, or any others you may feel to offer, justify you in the presence of the judge of all the earth for a neglect of your duty; hence we still entreat you not to slight your dear Savior, who has done and suffered so much for you. Though you may lightly pass by the entreaties and invitations of the minister, we humbly pray you to yield to the convictions of your hearts, and obey the Word of the Lord and heed the voice of the good Shepherd, lest the time come, when he shall say, "because ye have set at naught my counsel, and would none of my reproof, I also will laugh at your calamity; I will mock when your fear cometh as desolation, and your destruction as a whirlwind. Then you shall call; but he will not answer. You shall seek him early, but shall not find him." Prov. 1.

Dear Brethren:—

OUR Love-feast came off Oct. 8th at our meeting-house in the Springfield church. The weather was fine and all passed off in the best of order. A large number of members communed. There were twenty-one ministers present. A few days previous, we were informed by Bro. Sadler of Nankin, Ohio, that our Communion would be represented by about forty members from Ashland Co., and that they expected conveyance from Akron to the meeting, distance, six miles. Ashland is about sixty miles West from here, and they were brought in on the A. & E. W. R. R. on half-fare excursion rates. We very much enjoyed their visit. There was however a general expression of regret by the members here and others that their visit was so short, as they all went home the next morning and had to be at the depot by 6:30 A. M. We had no time to get acquainted with but very few. We hope when they come again, they will make their arrangements to stay longer.

When the train arrived they were all there, but one young sister had lost her ticket. May this fact sink deeply into each and every heart, for the time will come at the great Judgment day, when we will "all be there." But will there be any, that have lost their tickets? In this world we can procure other tickets, but there it will be forever too late.

To the best of my knowledge the Springfield church is in union, peace and harmony. No discord among the members, of any kind, for which we should, and I hope we all do feel thankful to the Giver of all good.

To our brethren and sisters that were here from a distance, I would say, if we should never see each other again in this troublesome world, may we so live that we will, when our pilgrimage here is brought to a close, be so happy as to meet again in the celestial regions of love, in the Paradise of God, where parting will be known no more, where all is peace and love, and where we can enjoy the sweet music of the heavenly choirs and sing the songs of praise forevermore.

Dear Brethren:—

THE Brethren here have just closed a pleasant series of meetings, which commenced with our council of Nov. 2nd. Sunday, the 3rd, our meeting-house, was dedicated, and an appropriate address delivered by Elder Isaac Billhimer to a large and attentive audience.

Right here I would say, we are under many obligations to our dear brother, George W. Cripe for his untiring energy, and zeal for the cause in erecting us so comfortable a house, where we can meet and worship God.

Bro. Billhimer preached Sunday night to a crowded house. Upon giving an invitation, one man, a member of Disciple church came forward, desiring to unite with us. Another applicant on Monday night, and two on Tuesday night, making in all four persons. Bro. Billhimer still continued the meeting alone up to Friday, the 8th, when brethren John Metzgar, Joseph Hendricks, G. W. Cripe, and S. M. and M. Forney came to his assistance. Saturday, the 9th met at the church at nine o'clock. After services all went to the water, where baptism was administered to the above-named applicants, according to Christ's command.

At four o'clock P. M. all met again at the church for examination services, preparatory to our Love-feast. Quite a number of brethren and sisters from adjoining churches were present and right here I would remark that at our council-meeting the question of feet-washing came up, and all agreed to practice the single mode. I must say, I never saw as good order and less confusion attending the ordinance, as on this occasion.

Sunday the 10th, met at 10 o'clock, where previously announced, brother John Hart's funeral was preached by brethren Hendricks and Cripe. Sunday evening met at lamp-light; was addressed by brother Cripe, with a few appropriate farewell remarks, by brother Billhimer. Now our meeting closed, and we all feel sorry to part with our dear Brethren; but we feel that the Lord has blessed us. We had a good time together, and we would say to the Brethren, come again. Hope the Lord will bless us all, is my prayer.

From Blountville, Tenn.

BROTHER Joseph Wine and I left our homes for Mitchell Co., in North Carolina, on a mission of love, about the 1st of August. We reached the place on the 6th of Aug. The next day we attended meeting at Brumit's Creek. Attendance small, but good attention to the Word preached. We continued preaching twice a day until the 10th; the congregation increasing all the time. On the 10th we held church meeting with the dear brethren and sisters, and tried to set in order things that were out of order; and reclaimed one sister. Meeting again at night and the next day, it being Sunday, the attendance was large, with good attention. We then returned home and found all well. Thank the Lord for the blessing. A few days after we left there were five added to the church by baptism. On the 28th and 29th of September brother F. W. Dove and other brethren visited them. They held a Communion with them, and baptized fourteen and reclaimed one or two. So we say in the language of Paul: "Paul may plant and Apollos may water, but God gives the increase." We confess the hand of the Lord was in the work; and to Him belongs all the praise.

Brother Wine and myself visited the same place again the 10th of Oct. Found the brethren and sisters well and in a prosperous condition. Thank the Lord, for His mercies endured forever. On the 11th, we commenced meeting at Brumit's Creek meeting-house. We continued preaching twice a day until the 17th. We had good congregations all the time. We truly had a feast of fat things. Many were made to cry, "what must we do?" We told them to bring forth fruits worthy of repentance, and be baptized in the name of Jesus, for the remission of sins, in order to receive the refreshing showers from the presence of the Lord. We can truly say with King David, the Lord hath done great things for the people in that country, whereof we are glad. We were made to believe that the Lord added unto the church, for while we stayed with the Brethren there, thirty-four confessed and were baptized. We hope and pray that they will let their light shine like a city that is set upon a hill, which can not be hid, and thereby be an ornament to the church and a light to the world.

Some of the brethren from Washington Co., Tenn., visited a brother in Pake county North Carolina and preached Jesus and Him crucified, and about twelve or thirteen believed and were baptized.

HENRY GARST.

From Brownsville, Missouri.

ACCORDING to previous arrangements I left home on Wednesday, Oct. 23rd, to attend a few appointments in Cass Co. I arrived the second evening, by conveyance, a distance of about seventy or seventy-five miles. — Preached five discourses and baptized one. Unfortunately our notice of coming was not received until two days before our arrival; so our meeting at first was not well attended, from a lack of a proper notice. Another drawback was, that the general community did not know until about the last day or so, that there was English preaching, as the Brethren there had secured the Mennonites' meeting-house for our services, in which they preach exclusively the German language. They, the Mennonites, have a large membership. Their hospitality towards us there made us feel like we were about at home. Their plainness and neatness added much to encourage us. There were about forty of their sisters present on Sunday; and they in every respect, resembled those of our own sisters. But I found trouble and confusion in their ranks, which as a matter of course destroys and disturbs a true fellowship; hence dissatisfaction exists. Some have not handed in their letters of membership, and the most, if not all of them, have relatives that are members of our church, and they seem to be warmly attached to our church. Their minister expressed this to me, as did some others.—The interest in our meetings increased and the congregation enlarged, and we received many earnest solicitations to continue our meetings longer, and I believe much good would have resulted, if we had complied, but owing to considerable uneasiness in regard to the health of our family, not leaving them very well, we were pressed to close and return home; but fortunately found all in pretty good health. The Shepherd soon learns to love His flock. I do think that I never became more greatly attached to a congregation, than I did there in so short a time. There were tears shed freely in our closing services. One sister said there were more tears shed than she ever saw in that house before. Now I certainly am forced to the conclusion, that the Brethren can do much good there. Hence this lengthy detail of affairs, so as to induce our ministering Brethren who live more convenient to attend and fill this opportunity to do good. There is no use in holding one or two meetings there at a time, unless it is regularly kept up, but if the brethren go in there to preach, they should calculate to stay and labor as long as there is a prospect of doing good. We have eight members there now. They have a beautiful country—rich and fertile, plenty of water and timber. Those emigrating would do well to see this country.—May God prosper the cause there, and give those few members the consolation and comforts of a large membership.

D. L. WILLIAMS.

From Woodland, Michigan.

Dear Brethren:—

I WILL give a short sketch of our meetings in the Woodland church. Brother Young, of Ohio, came to us October 19th, commenced a series of meetings on the 20th and preached sixteen interesting sermons, holding forth the Word with power, and encouraging the church to press onward, and warning sinners to flee the wrath to come. May the Lord reward him for his labor of love. We are glad to say there were four additions by baptism. Four young sisters formed the good resolution to forsake sin and enlist under the banner of King Jesus. We hope they may prove faithful.—May all true ministers be encouraged and labor on in the vineyard of the Lord as faithful watchmen, standing upon the walls of Zion, and if we are no more permitted to meet them here, hope we may all meet where there will be no more separation in the portals of eternal glory. Dear brethren and sisters, let us all be earnestly engaged in prayer to God, for the peace and prosperity of Zion.

MARY C. FLODY.

From Central Pennsylvania.

IT has been my privilege to attend the following meetings: On the 8th of October, met with the Brethren of Buffalo Valley, Union Co., Pa., at a Love-feast. Good weather, fair attendance, and excellent behavior, by the congregation present. This church seems to be in a prosperous condition at present; upwards of fifty having been added by baptism the past year.

On the 19th, was permitted to meet with the Brethren of Lost Creek congregation, Juniata Co. We had an enjoyable meeting. Everything seemed to pass off pleasantly. One added to the fold. Oct. 14th, was the time appointed by the Brethren of Spring Run, Mullin Co., for their Feast. Before the meeting commenced, one sister was baptized. A strong ministerial force was present, among whom was Bro. J. Quinter. Also a very large attendance of members, quite a number not having room at the tables during the evening exercises. A Sunday-school Convention having been called to meet at this place on the 15th it was called to order in the evening at 6 o'clock, and organized by electing brother John Spanogle, Moderator, brother S. W. Bolinger, Transcribing Secretary and W. J. Swigart, Corresponding Secretary. Four sessions of the convention were held, and thirteen schools represented by delegates and four by letter. A number of important subjects were discussed, and a pleasant and harmonious feeling seemed to inspire all present.

The church here at Lewistown, early in the Fall decided to hold their Love-feast on the 8th of November, and to have the occasion preceded by a series of meetings. The Brethren of adjoining churches coming to our assistance, we had meeting continuously in the evening, from the second until the 12th ult., and part of the time during the day. The ministerial help present during our Love-feast was ample.

The church believing that an increase in her ministerial would be beneficial to the cause, a choice was held, and brother Albert Steinbarger was elected and properly received as an assistant in the ministry. While, as the immediate result of these meetings we can chronicle but two additions, we fondly hope the seed so liberally sown will in God's own time, yield an abundant harvest.

TRULY Kansas City is one of the most enterprising and flourishing cities in the great West, being a great R. R. center. Trains may be heard moving to and fro every hour of the day and night. At the Union depot we notice a crowd of travelers all the time. The emigration into Kansas, to say nothing of other points to which many are bound, is immense,—yes we might say astonishing! We noticed the roads lined with emigrant wagons and the cars are crowded. The railroad companies are holding out every inducement to persons to come and settle along their lines. Many will no doubt, find good home and prosper, but we fear many will meet with unlooked for disappointments and have to suffer more or less.—On yesterday we accompanied a gentleman, (an earnest worker for the spiritual welfare of those usually found in our hospitals and prisons), to the city hospital, and by request, had religious services. One can find there, food for thought, in regard to the dire consequences of disobeying the laws of our being and the lamentable consequences of turning from the path of virtue to that of immortality. We had an interesting conversation with an old colored woman, who is over one hundred years of age. She says she well recollects the revolutionary war. Was nurse during one siege of the yellow fever at New Orleans. Says she saw them dump the dead out of carts into pits, just like so many rocks.

From the hospital we went to the work-house, where we found sixteen men and six women behind iron bars, with heavy clanking chains on their limbs. Some were young men of fair appearance, but whiskey brought them there. Oh! that the young man of the land would only shun this monster demon—rum. The sluicoms stand open night and day, holding out every inducement to have men and women enter and take the first step to perdition. It is first the saloon, then the work-house, then the jail, then the penitentiary or gallows, and then—yes young man what then?—then—then the yawning gulf of eternal misery and woe!

Have met with brother Franklin Holzinger, since here. He is engaged in the fruit and nursery business, about four miles from the city; there being a small body of members in his neighborhood. I have an appointment to be with them the 25th inst.

GLEANINGS.

From J. F. Neher.—In No. 46, page 7, in the Correspondence, under my name it should read, Elder David Frantz, from Marion Co., instead of Marion Co.

Salem, Ill.

From Hudson, Ia.—Dr. J. E. Gillin, of Reinbeck, Iowa, having very poor health, abandoned the practice of his profession, returned home, and was enrolled in the Lord's army, by baptism on last Monday. DANIEL WATERS.

From Deep Church, Iowa.—We held our Love-feast the 4th of Oct. Brethren Jacob Brown, Jacob Snyder, Daniel Brubaker and Charles Hilary, were the strange ministering brethren present. Two were baptized. Meeting continued over Sunday. We had a good meeting and had reason to exclaim with one of our old, "Lord it is good for us to be here," and trust we were all strengthened in the inner man. Did it not encourage us dear brethren and sister when we heard the Truth proclaimed as we did? I pray that we may live nearer God in the future. It is not only the ministers, but there is a great responsibility resting upon each of us. We all have a work to perform, and our influence is either for good or bad.—May God help us to still go on in the good work, as the prayer of your unworthy sister.

JESSIE MILLER.

From Bringhamst, Ind.—We, the brethren and sisters of Bachelor's Run church, held our church council November 12th; and the cloud that has been hanging over us for a long time, has been removed, and the church is in peace and union again. Amidst all our troubles we are once in a while made to rejoice, that sinners are joining in with the people of God. A few days ago a young sister was carried from a dying bed and was baptized. One week after she died, in the triumphs of faith. To-day three more came out on the Lord's side. May they hold out faithful. The church unanimously agreed to hold a Love-feast.

HENRY LANDIS.

From Elk Lick, Pa.—I came to this place very unwell; rested two days and then, Nov. 3rd, commenced preaching, and continued our meeting until Nov. 11th. Had large audiences all the time. The weather was not very favorable, and my health did not improve much, but I did the best I could under the circumstances. A brother said when I came here, that we could not get up a revival as there was but a few to join the church. The result of the meeting was, twenty-eight added to the church by baptism and still more said, "We are almost persuaded to become Christians."—May the good Lord bless all these precious souls and others, that they may soon come. Many thanks to the dear brethren and sisters for their kindness and especially to brother S. C. Keim, with whom I made my home every night. The time of our parting now came, and many farewells were given, with tears.—We hope to meet in heaven, if no more on earth, which with many will not be the case. Oh what a happy meeting when souls meet to part no more! God keep us all faithful until death.

HOFFMAN.—In the Indian Creek Branch, Westmoreland Co., Pa., October 21st, Bro. Philip W. Hoffman, aged 47 years, 2 months and 11 days.

Brother Philip had to leave this world like many others, quite unexpected; he caught net in a tumbling shaft of a separator, and was sadly hurt that he died in four days, at the house of brother John Horner, where she met with the fatal accident. He had his senses to the last, and had good hopes of going to a better world. Funeral services in Stahlstown, in the Methodist church to a large audience, by J. M. Bennet and the writer.

D. P. HORNER.

SHULTZ.—In Clinton Co., Iowa, Nov. 10th, sister Catherine Shultz, aged 61 years and 20 days.

In her death brother Joshua has lost a beloved companion, the children a kind and affectionate mother, ever ready to administer to their wants; the church has lost a faithful member. She was mounted in the name of the Lord, some ten days before her death, by elder Daniel Fry, from Ill., while on his visit with us. She left bright and glorious evidence of having fallen asleep in the arms of her Redeemer.—Her disease was thought by some to be cancer, with other badly afflictions, all of which caused her to endure much pain and suffering, which she endured with much patience, and seemingly resigned to the will of the Lord. Funeral services from Rev. H. H. by the brethren.

CHRISTNER.—In the Indian Creek Branch, Pa., Nov. 7th, sister Magdalene Christner, Christner, aged 62 years, 5 months and 29 days.

In the death of sister Christner the family has lost a pious mother, the church a worthy member, and the neighbors a good citizen.—Funeral services in the Brethren's church to a large congregation, by Silas Hoover and the writer.

D. D. HORNER.

HILARY.—Near New Sharon, Mahaska Co., Iowa, Oct. 20th, 1878, of membranous croup, William Henry, only son of brother Charles and sister Lizzie Hilary, aged 4 years and 25 days.

His suffering was severe, but of short duration. Little Willie was too angelic to live long in this world of sin. He was ever ready to do the will of his parent, and welcomed all with a sweet smile. All his words were mild. He was not only loved by his parents, but was his grandparents' favorite, among their children, and was loved by all who knew him, which was proven the day of the funeral, as there was a large concourse of people out to pay the last tribute to the little lamb, whom the good Shepherd saw fit to call home; and tears were seen to flow from every eye, when they took the last look at little Willie. He lay in his little coffin as if naturally sleeping. Did not look as if death had chilled his fair brow.

Brother Hillarys now have but one child, little Martha, who is in her sixth year. She was never known to strike her little brother in anger. But now her mate is gone. May she maintain those gentle qualities, and should she be spared to years of maturity, may she make her peace with God, that when called from time to eternity, she can strike glad hands with her angel brother. Little children, if any read this, follow little Martha's example. Never strike your brothers and sisters in anger. We deeply sympathize with the sorrowing family. We know you reel beneath the stroke, but your sorrow is light, compared with that of parents who must see death claim their children who have grown to mature age and have not made that most needful preparation. You know that little Willie's sufferings are now all over, and that you have a jewel in heaven.—The lifeless form was consigned to the dark and silent tomb on the 22nd.

BRETHREN AT WORK SUPPLEMENT.

STEIN AND RAY DEBATE.

Prop. 1st—The Brethren (or Tunker) Churches Possess Bible Characteristics entitling them to be regarded as Churches of Jesus Christ.

J. W. STEIN affirms.

D. B. RAY denies.

D. B. RAY'S THIRD NEGATIVE.

ALTHOUGH, according to their own showing, the Tunker churches had their origin under Mr. Mack in Germany in 1708, yet my friend contends that Christ and the apostles were Tunkers!

He tries to creep out of the trap in which he is caught, by saying that he only used "the term 'regenerated' in its derivative sense," not to include the "new birth"!

Then he has "regenerated" unpardoned children of the devil!

According to this, "regenerated" persons will be lost? Still worse, he has "regenerated" persons still "seeking after a good conscience," in baptism. Surely his confusion is worse confounded. Mr. S. says, Ray admits "that believers put on Christ and are clothed with him in baptism." Every one not blind, knows this is a figurative allusion to the outward public profession of those, that are already "the children of God by faith in Jesus Christ." Gal. 3: 26. As they are the children of God by faith prior to baptism, therefore it is impossible to baptize them to make them children of God.

In connection with the fact, that Paul was a chosen vessel before his baptism, Mr. S. asks: "Are not all saints chosen of God before their pardon?" Then he has unpardoned "saints"!—Concerning Cornelius we do say, that no one ever had the baptism of the Holy Spirit prior to pardon. Cornelius had the baptism of the Holy Spirit prior to water baptism; therefore his sins were pardoned prior to his baptism.

Yes, one may be in Christ spiritually and not a member of his church—his organized body. Was the thief on the cross a member of his church?—Mr. Stein admits that true baptism can only be received by one after he loves God. This will do; for "whosoever loveth is born of God and knoweth God." 1 John 4: 7. My friend is coming to the light. "We know that we have passed from death into life, because we love the brethren." 1 John 3: 14. If they are born "of God" before baptism, how can my friend baptize unpardoned children of Satan? Then, of course, the keeping of the commandments is the love of God manifested.

Mr. S. surrenders another point by saying: "The Brethren usually examine a candidate for baptism very closely to be satisfied that he (the old man) is dead, before they bury him" in baptism. This is exactly right. Paul says of this very death: "For he that is dead is freed from sin."—Rom. 6: 7. This is what the Bible teaches.—When one dies to sin—"is freed from sin," then he should be buried in baptism. But the Tunker churches propose to take a child of the devil with a guilty conscience and baptize him to free him from, or kill him to sin! But Mr. S. has surrendered this point. The Tunker doctrine of baptismal salvation is false, because of its absurd consequences. We read in history of six men who were tried for heresy under Romish persecution, and finally burned to death. Three of them had professed faith in Christ, but had not been baptized. They loved Christ so well that they died for him. But the Tunker doctrine says that "they went to hell for want of baptism"! Prisoners have professed faith in Christ, and even wished to be baptized, but military power said no; so they died and were lost according to the Tunker doctrine.

According to the Tunker doctrine, Jesus may wish to save a penitent sinner, the minister may desire his salvation, and the sinner may be "regenerated" and desire salvation with all the heart; but a tyrant may forbid his baptism, and send him to hell!

Mr. Stein becomes excited over our treatment of his analysis of the forged Tunker commission, and charges us "with impious skepticism and unbelief"! He thinks that we did "not dare to grapple" with his "seven incontrovertible proofs" that the "grammatical construction of the commission 'exactly suits' the Tunker doctrine. We have neither denied the use of "ellipses," or "grammatical construction;" but we do emphatically deny that the commission in dispute is elliptical. Jesus put every word into it that is necessary to the true Bible, and grammatical construction.—The Tunker doctrine of three immersions is based upon that which was "omitted," left out—never was in the commission, but "must be added mentally as a matter of course"! No Tunker can analyze or parse the commission without adding ten words to it. The disputed part of the commission reads: "Baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit." Concerning which, my friend makes the following blunders: 1st. He divides this one clause into three clauses. 2nd. He adds ten words where there are no ellipses. 3rd. He makes Latham's Hand-book teach, that "there are always two propositions where there is one conjunction!" Any average school-boy knows that a conjunction connects words, phrases, clauses or sentences" (Kerl). 4th. He then parsed the Tunker, not the Bible commission. As to our friend's grammatical references, except where he has perverted Latham, we make no serious objection. They do not militate against our views of the commission.

Connot does not sustain him, and the opinion of Meyer on this point is worth no more than his views of the Lutheran church. The Bible, not the Tunker commission reads: "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit." We only have space to call attention to the points of dispute. The preposition "of" occurs three times.

First, it shows the relation between Father, and the antecedent term name.

Second, it shows the relation between Son and the same expressed antecedent name.

Third, it shows the relation between Holy Spirit, and the same one expressed antecedent name. Rule: "A preposition shows the relation of an object to some other word on which the adjunct depends." (Kerl's Grammar).

The conjunction "and" occurs twice. First, it connects the two adjectival phrases "of the Father" and "of the Son." Second, it connects the two phrases "of the Son" and "of the Holy Spirit." Rule 15 (Kerl): "A conjunction connects words, phrases, clauses, or sentences." See also Brown, Clark, and Harvey.

And in like manner all the other words may be parsed in perfect harmony with the rules of language, without adding one word to the commission. Our Tunker friends overlook the fact, the three persons in the Godhead are but one Being. "For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Spirit; and these three are one." 1 John 5: 7.

We repeat that the Bible commission demands one baptism "in the one name of the triune God." But Mr. S. wants to know "what the one name is." That one name was revealed in the Old Testament by the Hebrew plural title—Elohim, rendered God—the One God.—That one name is revealed to us in the New Testament in the glorious character called Jesus. His name shall be called "Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins." This "Wonderful" character called Jesus, includes Father, Son and Holy Spirit. He is the "Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace," (Is. 9: 6) and he is the Son; and he is also the Holy Spirit.

it; for he, "the last Adam was made a quickening Spirit." I Cor. 15: 45. Jesus is to remain with his people forever, by the Holy Spirit. In the light of these wonderful Scriptures, we may boldly say that in Jesus dwelleth all the fullness of the Godhead bodily." Col. 2: 9. "Therefore, Jesus is 'a name which is above every name: That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth.'" Phil. 2: 10.

That the great commission contains only the one "name" of the trine God is proved from the fact that under it the apostles baptized "in the name of Jesus Christ." Acts 2: 38. Of the Samaritans it is said: "Only they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus." Acts 8: 16. Also, "When they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus." Acts 19: 5. Evidently, the formula "in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit," was used in these baptisms, but these three are but the one name. — But his "examples analogous?" Mr. S. quotes: "They builded and finished it [the temple] . . . according to the commandment of Cyrus, and Darius, and Artaxerxes." Ezra 7: 15. He then asks, "Was it not according to three edicts?" Yes; but the analogy does not lie in the temple. The real sense of the passage is, that, "in the name of Cyrus, and of Darius, and of Artaxerxes, they builded and finished" the temple. Did they build and finish it three times? According to the Tunker grammatical construction, they did! The superscription in Greek, Latin and Hebrew is not analogous to the commission, because the three languages do not sustain the relation of unity as Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. "These three are one." — No one can be in the Son, without being in the Father and Holy Spirit; but the writing can be in Greek, without being in the other languages. Can Mr. S. see the difference? The same applies to his other examples. Not one of them is like the commission in construction.

Mr. S. wishes to know, why mention "Father, Son and Holy Spirit in baptizing?" We answer, in Bible baptism we have the trine God set forth, the trinity in the mention of the three persons, and the unity in the one burial in the one name. Our readers will remember that Mr. Stein failed to grapple without negative argument, based upon the admission that baptism represents the resurrection of Jesus. Did Jesus die three times? was he buried three times? and did he arise from the dead three times? Will Mr. S. answer? Will the saints arise from the dead three times?

We now proceed to give an example of the Tunker "grammatical construction." Jesus said: "And I say unto you, that many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven." Matt. 8: 11. Now if Mr. Stein's Grammar rule be correct, which always requires two propositions where there is one conjunction," then he must analyze this passage thus: "Many shall come from the east and [shall come from the] west and shall sit down with Abraham, and [shall sit down with] Isaac and [shall sit down with] Jacob!" So, according to his grammatical rules, they must come twice, first from the East, then go and come from the west; and they must then sit down three times, once with Abraham, then with Isaac, and finally with Jacob! Is not the Tunker Grammar, as well as doctrine, "moon-struck,"—crazy?

For illustration, the one government is composed of three departments—the legislative, the judicial and the executive. These three are one government. The President says to the generals of the army, the power is given to me: "Go ye therefore and slay our enemies, burying them in the name of the legislative, and of the judicial, and of the executive, and you shall be rewarded for your services." Mr. Stein and all the Tunkers must understand this commission to require three burials of the dead!!! We repeat that the Tunker churches are not churches of Christ, because they willfully add to the words of our Lord's great Commission. Tunkerism must utterly fail unless ten words be added. MILDRED.

BY J. W. SOUTHWOOD.

Mildred, oh, why did you leave us,
When you know we loved you so?
Why, did you forsake our mansion,
And, up to the Saviour go.

Oh, we know that Jesus called you,
Then of course you had to go,
But our home is sad and lonely,
All because we miss you so.

But we'll try in heaven to meet you,
And be with you evermore;
There to live with Christ the Saviour,
On that happy golden shore.

Yes, dear Mildred, you are happy,
With your Saviour over there;
Free from sickness, pain, and suffering,
In the land that's bright and fair.

Oh, dear Mildred may we meet you
In the glory land of bliss;
There we'll part no more in sadness,
As we have done here in this.

Oh, dear parents, love the Saviour;
Try his precepts to obey;
Then you'll go and meet your dear one,
And without forever stay.

STEIN AND RAY DEBATE.

THE REPROACH OF CHRIST.

BY MATTIE A. LEAR.

By faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season, esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt; for he had respect unto the recompense of the reward."—Heb. 11: 24-26.

To be reproached, is to be an object of blame, censure, scorn or derision. Those who are familiar with the history of our Saviour, in the days of his flesh, know that according to the above definition, he was truly an object of reproach. But it may be asked, "How could one, who lived many hundred years before the incarnation of Christ, suffer his reproach?" The promise of a divine Son, being given in Eden, was not restricted to any particular family until the time of Abraham; previous to that time, all nations possessed that promise in common. But when the promise was given to Abraham, that he should be the progenitor of the Messiah, this promise was restricted to his family and race, hence they became the Messianic people, and consequently were the envy of all other people. It was probably for this cause that the descendants of Abraham were hated and persecuted by other nations. They sought, if possible to destroy, or at least to invalidate their claims, and appropriate their glorious privileges to themselves, hence the divine titles and claims of the kings of Egypt, the lofty assumptions of the kings of Babylon, the anxiety of Alexander the Great to be recognized as the divine son of Jupiter Ammon, and to receive divine honors from the priesthood, also the blasphemous names and titles of the kings of Syria. It is probable that the design of crushing out the expectation of the Messiah from among the Jews, and transferring these claims to himself that instigated Antiochus Epiphanes to his deeds of dreadful cruelty. Hence, we may suppose that the sufferings of the Hebrews in Egypt, were at least partly caused by the hatred of the Egyptians, prompted by this envious feeling. Therefore, Moses, who had a high appreciation of the distinguishing honors, and glorious privileges that had been conferred upon his nation, justly esteemed the reproach of Christ, greater riches than the treasures of Egypt. No marvel, he refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter; had he accepted that position, he would have been enrolled among the Pharaohs, and as such would have been the recipient of earthly honors and distinctions, but as such he would have forfeited all the spiritual blessings promised to the house of Jacob.

Thus the most exalted position in the gift of the world, with all the honors, and emoluments to it belonging, but with the loss of all his rights as a son of Abraham, were accessible to Moses on the one hand. Poverty, toil, suffering, reproach in this world, but bright visions of future glory, were accessible to Moses on the other hand. He had the privilege of choice between the two; he accepted the latter, or as the apostle expresses it, "Choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season." What madness, says the wise and prudent of this world, thus wantonly, to refuse a throne. What! prefer to cast in his lot with these poor despised toil-worn slaves, these ignorant degraded people, when he could wield the proud scepter of Egypt, and associate with the polished and refined? The man is certainly devoid of taste, he must be bereft of reason. But such is the worldly side, the surface view of the matter. Moses with a more profound wisdom, with a deeper insight, could see far more glory, far more dignity in associating with these, then despised, down-trodden people, than to wear the proud diadem of the Pharaohs, and why? because these people were the recipients of the most glorious promises which God had ever vouchsafed to man, to whom pertained the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law, and the service of God, and the promises; whose were the fathers, and of whom as concerning the flesh, Christ came."—Rom. 9: 4, 5.

Paul tells us that Moses "had respect unto the recompense of the reward, for he endured, as seeing him who is invisible." By an eye of faith, Moses could span the long period of years intervening between him and the time the promised Deliverer should take upon himself human form. He was permitted to see his immensity, his lawfulness, his agony, his sufferings. These things that were invisible to others of less faith were seen by Moses, the faithful servant, and he esteemed it a privilege indeed to bear the reproach of Christ, an honor to share his sufferings, his shame, an honor in which he would gladly forego the treasures of Egypt.

To willingly and cheerfully share the sufferings of Christ, is an unmistakable mark of true discipleship. Upon one occasion, when Peter asked his Master, what they who had forsaken all for him should have, Jesus, answered him thus, "Verily I say unto you, that whosoever shall have followed me, and in regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit on the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel." Regeneration means the new birth, the change from carnal to spiritual, the infusion of spiritual into the soul. Now says the Saviour, ye that have followed me in the regeneration, ye who have imbibed my Spirit, that have walked in my footsteps, that have obeyed my commands, for you there is great honors and distinctions in reservation. Spiritual pride, arrogance, and lofty pretensions are the invariable marks of false systems of religion. Note for instance the Pope of Rome with his arrogant assumptions of authority and blasphemous titles, claiming as he does, spiritual dominion over all Christendom, and styling himself, or permitting himself to be styled the vicar of Christ, Lord on earth, with many other extravagant names, also the lofty pretensions of Mahomet, of Joe Smith, each of them claiming to be the only true prophet of God through whom alone he would reveal himself to the world. But if we examine the workings of either of the above systems, we find they do not possess in the least degree the principles which characterize the religion of Jesus Christ; on the contrary, their fundamentals are the exact opposite of the principles that underlie our holy religion.

Meekness was the grand cardinal virtue taught and practiced by our Saviour and by him alone was it first inculcated, hence his gracious invitation is, come unto me, take my yoke upon you and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in mind. Humility, meekness and submission, being the prominent traits in our Saviour's character, are in striking contrast to all that which proceeds from the carnal or unrenewed heart. False religions have had their martyrs, their self-tortured penitents, devotees, but alone in the religion that emanated from Jesus, is taught true humility and meekness. Charity which is the legitimate fruit of these principles, is by the apostle Paul placed first in the category of Christian virtues. So important is this holy principle that the apostle says, though he possess all knowledge, all power, or make every sacrifice, yet if he is devoid of charity, he is nothing.

Do we then desire honors and distinctions? It is right that we aim high. The religion of Jesus Christ is only calculated to elevate and exalt. But while we desire the immunities and the honors, let us not forget that it is written, "He that humbleth himself shall be exalted, but he that exalteth himself shall be abased." The great Captain of our salvation must pass through awful scenes of suffering and deep humility ere he could be exalted on his mediatorial throne. What a wonderful picture is the following, drawn by the master hand of the apostle, and he exhorts, "Let this mind be in you, which also was in Christ Jesus," and this is the portraiture of our divine Master, drawn for our imitation. "Who being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God, but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men; and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." But what was the final result of this deep humility? "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name.

The path to glory for Christ was through humility and suffering, and the only path to glory, for his followers, through humility and suffering. He plainly told his disciples that they must indeed drink of the cup that he drank of, and be baptized with the baptism that he was baptized with. Let us not then vainly hope to share his honors, unless we are willing first to share his reproach, and to esteem this a reproach greater riches than the treasures of the world. Peter says, "If ye be reproached for the name of Christ, happy are ye." Why? "For the pain of glory and of God resteth upon you." A princely honor indeed to share anything in common with the King of glory. It is indeed a great privilege to suffer for the name of Jesus; let us hear what the Master himself says, "Blessed are ye when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely for my sake. Rejoice and be exceeding glad." Why rejoice? "For great is your reward in heaven." Oh let us then follow Christ in the regeneration, let us not vainly hope to be renovated, and purified by any other process than by being cast in the mould of Christ. If we would join in the new song before the throne, we must follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth. Oh let us then "Gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, hope unto the end for the grace that is to be brought unto us at the revelation of Jesus Christ; as obedient children, not fashioning ourselves according to the former lust in our ignorance; but as he which hath called us, is holy, let us be holy in all manner of conversation, because it is written, 'be ye holy, for I am holy.'"—1 Peter 1: 13-16.

STUDY THE BIBLE.

BY AMOS CHAMBERLAIN.

NOTHING is more worthy the study of man than the Bible. It is the only Book that points us to heaven, and shows the way. It tells us of our wicked desires and what we must do to be happy. Its precepts are so plain that "wayfaring men, though fools shall not err therein." Yet it is an inexhaustible mine of truth. We are reminded by some that the Bible is the Book of mysteries. But we think if we study the words of God as we should, with a prayerful heart and a desire to be made wise unto salvation, that the Holy Spirit will guide us into the way of all truth. The seeming mysteries will mostly all vanish. Too many study the Bible with their minds biased. They have conceived certain opinions to be correct and taught by the Bible; then, after this they go to the Bible to find proof for what they always believed. Of course they do not always find the Bible to teach what they thought it did, and then they conclude that it is dark, mysterious and difficult to understand.

It is said by some, "these things are too deep, we don't understand them, had better leave them alone." We think such do not try to understand. We refer them to John 24: 26, and 2 John 2: 20, 27; 1 Cor. 2: 10, 14. We are taught that the natural man cannot understand these things, for they are "spiritually discerned." We should not only read the Word of God, but study it earnestly and honestly, anxious to know the truth as it is in Jesus, beseeching God with a prayerful heart to enlighten our minds by the guidance of his Holy Spirit.

If we would then read the Bible instead of depending upon what the Rev. Mr. so-and-so says, it would be far better for us, in time and eternity. It is sad to consider the amount of ignorance existing on Bible truths. When we stand before God's throne, and the books are opened and judgment commences, oh how we shall wish we had studied the Word when we had opportunity. But all will be over then. We shall only know we had the revealed will, neglected to read it and are now doomed to destruction.

A BEAUTIFUL ALLEGORY.

A TRAVELER who spent some time in Turkey relates a beautiful fable which was told him by a dervish, and which seemed even more beautiful than Stern's celebrated fable of the accusing spirit and recording angel.

"Every man," said the dervish, "has two angels, one on his right shoulder and one on his left. When he does anything good, the angel on the right shoulder writes it down and seals it, because what has been well done is done forever. When he does evil, the angel on the left writes it down, and he waits till midnight. If before that time the man says his heart a prayer, 'Gracious Allah! I have sinned; forgive me!' the angel on the right says, 'I will not, at midnight he seals it, and the left angel on the right shoulder weeps.'

DEATH OF JESUS.

BY J. W. SOUTHWOOD.

JESUS died upon the tree: There He bled for you and me; So to God we may return, If we will the tempter spurn.

On the rugged cross He died, And the blood came from His side, To atone for sinners lost; Oh! do think how much it cost!

Darkness spread all o'er the scene, Oh, what did that darkness mean? Ah, it meant that Christ was slain, So that we with God may reign.

And the temple's veil was rent, So there need no priest be sent To make intercession now,— All before their God can bow.

All can enter in as priests, And enjoy the heavenly feasts; All can pray to God on high, And draw near, then He draws nigh.

Now as Jesus has thus died, Can we not in Him confide? Banish all the cares of earth, Pomp and pride and carnal mirth.

And make sure our journey home To that land where saints shall roam? There to live with Christ on high, Who no more will bleed and die?

Then let all in humble prayer, Cast on Him their every care; Have a life to please Him best, Then we shall in heaven be blest.

THEIR ROCK NOT OUR ROCK.

BY J. W. BAILEY.

"For their rock is not as our Rock, even our enemies themselves being judges." Deut. 32: 31.

BROTHER S. H. Garman and I went to hear a Free Methodist whose text was, "For their rock is not as our Rock." I turn his own gun against him. God is the Rock of our salvation. In Him we trust. We find Jeshurun waxed fat and forsook the God which made him, and highly esteemed the Rock of his salvation. They provoked him to jealousy with strange gods, with abominations. And while we look around us, we see such people going after strange gods, therefore their rock, is not as our Rock. But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among us, who finally shall bring damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them with a price, and bring upon themselves swift destruction, therefore their rock, is not as our Rock. 2 Peter 2: 1. "And many shall follow their pernicious ways by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of." We see this around us every day. Let us be up and doing; let us not shun to declare the whole counsel of God; let us stand fast to the truth as it is in Christ Jesus; let us pray God to send more earnest laborers into his vineyard, that the work of Zion may be pushed forward and battle against the enemy of ourselves, for they have been bought with a great price, it has cost the blood of the blessed Savior upon calvary. O, brethren let us stand upon the Rock Christ.

Last Sunday brother S. H. Garman and I went to meeting where we saw two men baptized by pouring the water on the head (about one gill of water). They called it baptism; they claim holiness and perfect sanctification, and say, they cannot sin; that they are saved in God, yet they deny him in works; they have no works at all, therefore our Rock is not their rock; they have built their house on the sand, and when the storms come and beat upon it, it will fall, and great will be the fall. They say, you must bear your cross or do your duty. This they bind upon their members; they must all speak,—their mouth confesses, but in works they deny him,—they have a great quantity of God in the mouth, but I fear they have but little in the heart; "Therefore their rock, is not our Rock". They reminded me of Elijah when he mocked the four hundred and fifty false prophets, and said, "ery aloud for he is a God, either he is talking, or he is pursuing, or he is on a journey, or peradventure he sleepeth and must be awaked." They got into one of their big ways, they came into the school-house shouting and leaping. I cannot find any Gospel for such doings. They are sayers and not doers of the Word.

We also saw them partake of the bread and wine, and called it the Lord's Supper, and eat this Supper before dinner. They claim to be intelligent men, learned of Christ and filled with the Holy Ghost—men of God learned to know all the fullness of the Godhead; yet they can't discern between dinner and supper. Christ ate and went out and it was night; they ate and went out and it was one o'clock in the day! therefore their rock is not as our Rock.

They claim that a man must keep all the commandments of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, yet they keep none of them. "If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit; be not deceived, God is not mocked, for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap, for he that soweth to his flesh, shall of the flesh reap corruption, but he that soweth to the Spirit, shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting." Gal. 5: 25; 6: 7, 8. "Beloved believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God, because many false prophets are gone out into the world." 1 John 4: 1. They are teaching false doctrine—the doctrine of men, leaving Christ and going after men. Therefore their rock is not our Rock. Let us stick close to the Rock Christ. Christ says, "Upon this Rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." The world has tried to destroy the foundation of the church, but in three days it was raised again triumphant over death, hell and the grave, and is sitting at the right hand of the Father interceding for us, and oh, how thankful we should be to our heavenly Father for such a foundation, so firm and solid that the gates of hell cannot prevail against it.

"It is not every one that says, Lord, Lord will enter in, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven," and the Father's will is, that we should do the will of his Son, that we might have a right to the tree of life, and enter through the gates into the city.

Now may the grace of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ be with us all.

TEMPTED AS WE ARE.

BY P. A. ROSS.

THE subject to which we invite your attention, will be based upon the latter clause of Hebrews 4: 15. "In all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin."

By reading the context, we discover that the apostle desires to impress upon our minds, the great truth, that there has never lived a person who was too good, or perfect to be tempted; for Jesus Christ was the purest and most perfect man that ever existed. He was the subject of the most trying and difficult temptations that were ever brought to bear upon any individual. In three particu-

Jar instances, we notice, that he was tempted by the greatest enemy,—the adversary of souls. Having fasted for forty days and forty nights, and afterwards he was an hungered, and as his physical nature was about to perish, for the want of the requisites of life, Satan appeared unto him and said, "If thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread." Satan did not only desire to see him convert the stones into bread, but also said it in such a manner as if he doubted the truthfulness of his being the Son of God, and that he would believe it more fully if he would but convert the stones into bread to appease his hunger. But Jesus did not do it; he only said unto him, "It is written, that man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word of God." The devil, in order to try his steadfastness, taking him up into a high mountain, and shewed him all the kingdoms of the world, and said unto him, "All this will I give thee, and the glory of them; for that is delivered unto me; and to whomsoever I will, I give it. If thou therefore wilt worship me, all shall be thine." But Jesus answered him and said, "Get thee behind me Satan; for it is written, thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve."

Again, he brought him to Jerusalem, and set him on a pinnacle of the temple, and said unto him, "If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down from hence; for it is written, He shall give his angels charge over thee." And praise God, the angels did have charge over Christ, and they kept him in all his ways, and all the attempts of the devil, to get Jesus to worship him, were frustrated by him saying, "It is said, thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God," notwithstanding he endured and overcame temptations while ministering, even after he was nailed to the accursed tree. His persecutors used his same words in the form of a temptation; for when he was rendering up his life, not only for those who gloried in his crucifixion, but also for all of Adam's posterity, his crucifiers mocked his dying groans by saying, "Thou that destroyest the temple, and buildest it in three days, save thyself. If thou be the Son of God, come down from the cross." O! could we but fathom the agonies the blessed Son of God endured, while there suspended between heaven and earth, what a lasting impression it would make upon the mind; an impression, that time with all its varied scenes, and not even eternity itself, could obliterate. Although he was surrounded by temptations, yet passed through them all without receiving a spot or blemish or any such thing. If we, the poor, weak, worms of the dust, for whom Jesus died to save, are tempted, we can go to that One who was "In all points tempted like as we are," and with prayer and supplication, and through his mediation, obtain that grace which will enable us to overcome sin, the devil, and the world. "For in what he himself hath suffered, being tempted, he is able to succor them that are tempted."

If our souls are about to sink beneath the great burden of this world's trials and difficulties, we can go to him who hath said, "My grace is sufficient for thee," and by what we will be enabled to fight the good fight of faith, and at last come off more than conquerors through him who hath loved us and gave himself for us. If the heavy hand of grief and affliction is about to crush us out of existence, we can rely upon the precious truth that our Mediator was a man of affliction and acquainted with grief.

Do our friends and those we love, forsake and leave us, and are we made to depend upon our own resources? Was not the blessed Son of God forsaken when he was about to render up his life as a propitiation for our sins? And he having realized that his pilgrimage upon earth was growing shorter and still shorter, and as he repaired to the Garden of Gethsemane, and there upon his knees implored his Father, if it were his will, to let that bitter cup pass from him; and as his earnest prayer, through cries and tears arose to his Father, behold an angel appeared to strengthen him, so that he would be enabled to bear his great burden of sin resting upon him, and he arose and returned to his persecutors; and as they bound him hand and foot and nailed him to the cross,—the sun refused to shed its illuminary rays, while the blessed Son of God was dying. And as the earth was shrouded in darkness and mourning, the mountains and the vail of the temple were rending, the earth quaking, the graves opening, and the dead arising, Jesus realized that his time upon earth was about to terminate, and in all this commotion, with great drops of blood oozing from his brow, his Father (in humanity, forsook him, and in the anguish of spirit he felt at that moment, exclaimed, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" Are we stricken by the pinching hand of poverty? Are we abused and scoffed at by the ungodly of this vain world? Are we so poor that none of its inhabitants, not even those who profess to be God's children, and joint-heirs with our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, will give us a cup of water or crust of bread or a place in which to lay our heads? If we are thus forsaken by every one, we have the pleasure and comfort of knowing that we are not the first who has been treated in this way, for Jesus, when he was here attending to his Father's business, said, "The foxes have holes; the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of Man hath not where to lay his head." "Blessed is the man that endureth temptation; for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised to them that love him."

Although we are surrounded with temptations, sorrow, affliction, forsaken friends, and poverty; yet we can, with prayer and faith, obtain the blessings God designs to give; and also comprehend the vast profundity contained in God's Word, when he says, "Seeing then that we have a great High Priest, that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast our profession." "For we have not a High Priest which cannot be touched with the feelings of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." "Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need."

EXPERIENCE OF A METHODIST WOMAN.

[The Free Methodist is publishing a series of articles written by a Methodist lady, who is giving a bit of her experience. We want every sister in the church to read the following, and if the doctrine of holiness, as advocated by the lady writer, will keep rings, jewelry and ruffles of sisters, and possessing women generally, we say amen to that doctrine.—Ed.]

THE Holy Spirit began to lead me very gently and sweetly, and I found it so easy to follow his leadings.

There was nothing in my heart but what was in perfect harmony with God's will, and when he told me, through his Spirit, to do this or that, it was a pleasure to obey. The day following my sanctification, while alone in my room, I removed from my finger a very beautiful ruby ring I had been wearing, and then a plain gold one, all I had ever worn. I felt as though they were wholly out of place, and that the temple of the Holy Ghost needed them not. My gold pin, a simple one, was also laid aside, and needless trimmings on dresses and other garments. I could not wear them; they belonged to the world; I belonged to God, and there was a separation, just what the Word says there must be. And this work of separation kept going on. Novel reading, of which I had been very fond, went out. I was spoiled for that. The line was drawn a little closer all the time, but God was very gentle with me. And then he began to show me about my business. I had lost much of the pleasure I formerly took in trimming and beautifying the garments I made, and I told my customers that I must spend less time in trimming or I could not do their work. I worked on through the Winter, but the business grew more and more distasteful to me, until when Spring came I was heartily sick of it, and I felt that I could not make that progress in holy living that I wished to if I continued at the business.

Along in May, while away from town sewing, I asked God to open some way for me to get out of dress-making. I went home at the close of the week to find my mother dangerously ill, and I staid with her all Summer, never expecting her to recover. I hoped that I should never be obliged to go back into the business again. God gave me much light that Summer, and I saw that I could not do the work I had been doing, spending so much precious time in trimming dresses merely to gratify the pride and vanity of the owner. My hands were consecrated and they must be clean. That I must forever come out of it, I was sure, but how to get out was the next question. I had no other means of support, had no home of my own, but boarded. When my earnings stopped everything would stop. My faith was not yet strong enough to give it wholly up and trust God for my living. When Fall came mother had so far recovered as to be able to do without me, and I began to have calls again. I was in a tight place. What should I do? Oh, I thought, if only the ladies would have their clothes made nice and plain as I would like to make them, everything would be all right, and some of my best friends said, "Don't leave the business. Try and induce the ladies to dress more plainly, and you can bring about a reform among the ladies of Wheaton." Well, I thought, there's need of a reform, and perhaps I had better try it.

But one night as I was alone in my room, thinking the matter over, and asking God to show me his will, these words were brought to mind and forcibly impressed, "Ephraim is joined to his idols, let him alone," and so that nice plan was overthrown. Calls kept coming in, and one of my most intimate friends wanted me to come and advise her a little about her dresses. I went, and fashion was all the theme. How shall I make this, and how trim that? My heart sunk within me, for I found that I was expected to study up the fashions and then go and make those dresses as stylish as possible. I made no promises, and went home feeling very sorrowful, for I could not see the way out. It seemed that I had come to a high wall that I could not get over nor around. The next day brought no relief, and I felt like asking God to take me out of the world. The next morning something said to me, "Advertise for plain, family sewing at moderate wages." I did so that week. It was humiliating to me, who had for years been working in the wealthiest families, making to their satisfaction their richest garments. The flesh had a fall, but oh, how my soul went up, up into such a heavenly place. I cannot describe the three days that followed, they were so blessed. I could express it in no other way at the time or since, only, the being gathered right up into the loving arms of the Father. I thought all was settled. But no plain sewing came, there did come, however, urgent requests to do a little cutting and fitting, if no more, and make some plain school dresses. I thought, well I will try it, and promised for a certain day; but the night before-hand I fell from the sidewalk and hurt my thumb finger quite badly, so that I could not use it for nearly two weeks. The lady was obliged to get some one else to do her work. Another one came to have some fitting done, and again was I hindered by having my hand severely cut in a window the evening before I was to go. That got well, and again I promised, and my sister injured her hand so that I was obliged to stay and help her.

I thought it strange that I was so hindered, and felt that God was hedging up my way. Finally, a dear lady whom I loved best of all, and at whose beautiful home I had spent many pleasant days, wished very much that I would come and do some work for herself and daughter, saying that she would have them made as plain as I wished. I always loved to work for her and went, and had no trouble until it came to putting some trimming on a skirt. I had so far made the dress plain, but she thought she must have some trimming on the skirt. I began to cut it, when the Spirit spoke to me, "Can you do this to the glory of God?" My heart answered, "No, I cannot." I could not go on with it, and laid it aside for something I could do honestly. That night when I went to my room, I felt that the time had come when I must decide once and forever. God had plainly shown his will, and I must do it. I must leave that dress unfinished or displease God. There was a test of my love to God. I was determined to obey him. But oh how hard to go back and tell my friend—she who had been so kind to me—that I could not finish her work, and must leave it. I would not decide and promise God that I would do it that night, and darkness came over me. Morning came, and I felt that I could do anything rather than fear God's displeasure, and I went back, and for hours could not bring myself to speak of it, but kept silently to work, until I could wait no longer, and I was fairly shivering with cold and my hands all tremble as I told her how I felt and what I must do. Those who read this may think that I was a coward. I do not deny it, but it was an awful test to be willing to be thought a fanatic and peculiar, and perhaps displease my friend and lose her love and friendship, which I could not bear to think of. She was all kindness, and though she could not see it as I did, yet she respected me for doing what I felt was right, though she was to be a loser. And I must say to God's glory, that I believe I have that woman's friendship as strongly to-day as ever, though I am hundreds of miles from her, she writes and assures me of her love and the interest that she feels in my temporal and spiritual welfare. God never suffers his children to be losers by obeying him. That was my final struggle with dress-making. I had very little work of any kind after that, and Satan often threatened me with want and dependence, which did not frighten me in the least, for my Father had given his promise that I never should want for any good thing, and I never have and never expect to. And though I was sometimes called half crazy, narrow-minded, fanatical, etc., I was not moved, for I had a conscience "void of offence," and I also had "clean hands and a pure heart," and could sing with a heavenly peace in my soul,—

"Jesus, I my cross have taken,
All to leave and follow thee,
Naked, poor, despised, forsaken,
Thou from hence my all shall be."

EVIL SPEAKING.

BY S. S. W. HAMMERS.

HERE is not a neighborhood in the land that has not more or less difficulty, arising from that important member, the tongue. Life and death are in its power. How desirable then that it should always be under restraint. There are a great many ways of offending and doing mischief with the tongue, but the heading of this article says, "Evil speaking." Let us define the sin: "Evil speaking" consists in divulging the faults of others. It is not necessary to the committal of this sin that we circulate what is false, but what we say may be partially or wholly true, and yet we have no right to say it, unless under certain circumstances. We may be called upon to testify to facts, as in courts of justice, when we are compelled to bear witness, but then it is generally through the tongue that we get there. We say things that we should not.

It would be well to speak to the person whom we know to be guilty of evil, and with affection reprove and rebuke. Evil speaking is oftentimes committed by dwelling on the faults of others, making them the subject of frequent reference and general conversation—taking satisfaction in exposing them by dark and partially suppressed insinuations. Involving the reputation of others in mystery, and leaving persons to form the worst judgment possible of them by greatly coloring and exaggerating the faults of others. People sometimes pass the boundary of truth in talking of their neighbors, aggravate the offense and bear false witness against them.

Now I consider this palpable and deep-toned wickedness. But the general causes of evil speaking, are always found to be wickedness and cruelty of disposition. It is a want of those feelings of tenderness and love which alone can cause us to respect the interests of our fellow-men. Then, again, it turns out to be the result of malice and revenge. We may have really or imaginarily been injured, therefore think we have a license to speak evil without hesitating. Then again, it arises from envy. Individuals wish to monopolize all the reputation for goodness, by detracting from others. Evil speaking, sometimes arises from a spirit of wantonness and diversion. Some people will let fly their poisoned arrows, then raise the fiendish laugh and say, that it was all in spirit. If true, it is very bad. It exposes defects, sinks credit instead of casting a mantle of charity over the person. If false, it is verbal assassination, the next thing to murder.

Evil speaking is a violation of the Law of God, it debases, hardens the heart, increases guilt, and will greatly aggravate future misery. We should do all in our power to avoid evil speaking. Better love than hate. Evil speaking, implies a judging of others which is an invasion of God's prerogative. God will not give his judgment or glory to another. Evil speaking is opposed to the general tenor of God's Word, it is opposed to the principles of fraternal love, we are bound to love our neighbor as ourselves. If evil speaking is persisted in, it will bring certain destruction upon the soul. God will not approve of it, for through it we evidently turn out to be the children of the wicked one.

THE CURE FOR GOSSIP.

[The Alliance.]

WHAT is the cure for gossip? Simply culture. There is a great deal of gossip that has no malignity in it. Good people talk about their neighbors because they have nothing else to talk about. There comes to us a picture of a family of young ladies. We have seen them at home; we have met them at galleries of art; we have caught glimpses of them going from a bookstore or library with a fresh volume in their hands. When we meet them they are full of what they have seen and read. They are brimming with questions. One topic of conversation is dropped to give place to another, in which they are interested. We have left them, after a delightful hour, stimulated and refreshed; and during the whole hour not a neighbor's garment was soiled by so much as a touch. They had something to talk about. They knew something and wanted to know something more. They could listen as well as they could talk. To speak freely of a neighbor's doings and belongings would have seemed an impertinence to them, and of course an impropriety. They had no temptation to gossip, because the doings of their neighbors formed a subject much less interesting than those which grew out of their knowledge and their culture.

And this tells the whole story. The confirmed gossip is either malicious or ignorant. The one variety needs a change of heart and the other a change of pasture. Gossip is always personal profession, either of malice or imbecility, and the young should not only shun it, but by the most thorough culture relieve themselves from all temptations to indulge in it. It is a low, frivolous, and too often a filthy pastime. There are country neighborhoods where it rages like a pest. Churches are split in pieces by it. By it neighborhoods are made enemies for life. In many persons it degenerates into a chronic disease which is practically incurable. Let the young cure it while they may.

THE LIFE OF MAN.

HOW graphically the varied aspects of the leaf, picture the various seasons of a man's life! The tenderness of its budding and blooming in Spring, when that rich golden green glints on it that comes only once a year, represents the bright beauty and innocence of youth, when every sunrise brings its fresh, glad hopes, and every night is holy, trustful and calm. The dark greenness and fresh vigor of the Summer leaf portray the strength and self-reliance of manhood; while its fading hues on the trees, and its rustling heaps on the ground typify the decay and feebleness of old age.

The Brethren at Work. PUBLISHED WEEKLY.

J. H. MOORE, M. M. ESHELMAN, EDITORS.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent at $1.00 per annum in advance. Any one who will send us eight names and $12.00 will receive an additional copy free of charge.

MOORE & ESHELMAN, Lanark, Carroll Co., Ill.

LANARK, ILL., DECEMBER 5, 1876

Now is the time to hold night meetings in every locality.

If you would prosper, as a Christian, do not neglect secret prayer.

THANKSGIVING meeting at Cherry Grove last Thursday was largely attended.

BROTHER Enoch Eby has returned home from the Illinois Central Mission field.

READ Bro. Sharp's appeal on another page, and act in behalf of the good cause.

THE reason some men understand the Bible so well, is because they study it well.

WE go to press for early this week to give any account of the District Meeting.

CONSIDERABLE correspondence is crowded out this week, will make room for all we can next issue.

THIS is a good season of the year to send for a bunch of pamphlets to lend to your neighbors to read.

If preachers would study the Bible more, and other men's sermons less, they would make better preachers.

BROTHER S. H. Bashor's address, till further notice, will be Congress, Wayne Co., Ohio, care of P. J. Brown.

PARENTS who commence family worship early in life will find it a great help to them when they grow older.

THE Brethren at Arnold's Grove commenced a series of meetings last Friday evening. Bro. Delp, from Yellow Creek was with them.

THOUGH writers may express different views on Scripture, in the Bible Class department, yet no controversy will be allowed.

WHEN sending donations, state distinctly whether they are for the Poor Fund, or to be used in sending paper to outsiders.

I HAVE not the least doubt but that the day will come when all infidels will believe that the Bible is true, but it will be too late.

HOW ministers need not wait for foreign help in order to commence a series of night meetings. Put the home talent to work.

BROTHER D. B. Gibson, under date of Nov. 15th says: "I have just closed a week's meeting in Ray Co., Mo., with 15 additions, and one restored."

ON the amount of new subscribers coming in faster than we had made calculations for, we have run out of No. 18, and therefore cannot fill orders for it.

BROTHER Bashor commenced meeting at Ashland, Ohio, Nov. 21st, expecting to remain several days, and then go to Wayne Co. to remain 10 or 20 days.

SOME of our generous contributors must bear with us, if their articles had to appear as soon as they would like to have them. We will do the best for you we can.

DAY after the old time in the world, being its influence as a city of commerce. Many of the houses and shops are emptying, and the streets filling with beggars.

THE printing of the debate on separate sheets enables us to supply hundreds of new subscribers with the debate from the beginning. The extra sheets are sent to about 300 new subscribers this week. Should any fail to get them they will please inform us.

It may be the "snout" men who are in great demand now, but people will soon learn that it is the honest men that we so much stand in need of.

C. BUCHER, Schaefferstown, Pa., wants to know if there are any members in Ellis Co., Kan. Some one who knows will please write him.

BROTHER, can you conscientiously return thanks over your cigar before you commence smoking it? We should be thankful in all things.

WE would like every preacher, during his travels, to act as agent for the BRETHREN AT WORK, for it will greatly aid you in spreading the truth.

THE Brethren in the Lowell church, Kent Co., Michigan, are building a meeting-house, size 10x50. They expect to have it ready for services by Christmas.

NOW is a good time for brethren and sisters, and their children to meet together of evenings and practice singing. To become good singers requires practice.

PARENTS should not allow their children to contract the habit of running out and in during church services. The habit is a bad one, besides it is very annoying.

MATTERS seem to be moving along nicely in Denmark. A letter just received from brother Hope informs us that one more has been baptized. Their meetings are well attended.

A LETTER from Bro. E. K. Buchley informs us that he is still in California, and doing considerable traveling among the Brethren there. He did not say when he expected to return.

FATHERS and mothers, if your son or daughter is away from home, send them the BRETHREN AT WORK one year. It may help to water the good seed you have planted in their hearts.

Of the late Benj. Franklin, who died some weeks ago, it is said that he averaged one and a half sermons for each day during the last twenty five years, besides editing a weekly paper most of the time.

WE will have something more to say about the contemplated Danish paper in a few weeks. We are waiting for further particulars from Bro. Hope, regarding the amount needed to start a small monthly.

SOME of the money intended for the Poor Fund this week is reported with that intended to be used for sending the paper to outsiders, but used as intended by the sender. Will report it separate hereafter.

BROTHER Abram Gesel, of Pa., is preparing a catalogue of his extensive Antiquarian Library, which consists of about 250,000 books, pamphlets and papers. His library contains some of the oldest and best works in America.

BROTHER J. D. Trestle, of Langston, Md., says: "Brother D. F. Scofield spent some time with us, and labored faithfully. The result was, that souls were converted to the Lord, and the church much revived, with a good prospect of more additions."

THE amount of money we are receiving to be appropriated for sending the BRETHREN AT WORK to outsiders is becoming both one of the most interesting and interesting. Look on the last page, what is being done, and send in your mite to help along the good work.

BROTHER Lemuel Hilber has returned from Kansas, having been called home because of illness, and is now with his family at Schaefferstown. He preached for the Brethren in Lanark, Mo., Thursday and Friday evenings. Next week we will say something about his colony project.

Excursion arrangements from Lanark to Hagerstown, Md., have been made for the benefit of those wishing to visit the East. Round trip $21.00. To let's good friends. Write for rates also Dec. 15th. Parties can travel Chicago over either the Baltimore & Ohio R.R., or the Pennsylvania Central.

LATELY an attempt was made to erect a monument to the infidel, Voltaire, upon a public ground a few miles from Geneva. The first man who undertook the work was struck dead, also the second, and third. The fourth man lived to see the bust erected and was, too, struck dead, and lately the fifth man has died. Verily there is a God.

WILL the second coming of Christ be literal? Was not the destruction of the world by water literal? Was not the downfall of Sodom literal? As it was in the days of Noah and Lot so shall it be in the coming of the Son of man. Those who do not look for a literal second coming of Christ will one day be as badly disappointed as were those who did not at first believe the preaching of Noah. They will be compelled to believe it when it is too late.

IS the first number of the Children at Work for next year, its editor will give a detailed account of the manner in which the Brethren's Bible School is conducted in Lanark. Those who are interested in this kind of work should not fail to secure the Children at Work for their family and schools. The workers of the above school did not go to the world for their methods, but to the Lord in prayer, who is abundantly able to supply. We prefer the best methods of studying the Bible.

WHENEVER heard from our agents are doing good work. Many of them are sending in good lists of new subscribers. We look for a considerable increase in our circulation the coming year. Last year we more than doubled our list, and by proper efforts the same may be done the coming volume. Hope our agents and friends generally will do their best for us from now on. Our success depends largely on the efforts made by our friends. We are doing our utmost here in the office to give them a good, reliable paper, but must depend upon our many workers to work up the circulation.

THERE is considerable excitement in Tennessee over the capture of a wild man in the Cumberland mountains. The age of the man is not known, but for the last eighteen years he has been running wild and was the terror of the community. He is about six feet and five inches tall, with black, coarse hair and beard, very large, restless eyes, extremely fleet on foot, and his entire body is covered with scales like a fish. He is said to be the son of a respectable family living in North Carolina, and at the tender age of five left home, and has since been running wild in the woods, living on roots, fish, and whatever else he could capture. He will likely be exhibited throughout the country.

STRONG MEN—TRUE MEN.

MEN of steel are needed in every community. The wooden men, and men of clay are multiplying rapidly, and duly we see the effects of their pliancy. It is good to be as clay in the hands of the Great Potter, but to be clay in the hands of men is to bow and twist for selfish purposes, and help thousands on to destruction. Show the people that we are living in the dispensation of humility, and not in the glory dispensation, and then the field will be quite clear. The weeds will be for want of nourishment, and the wheat will not develope sunshine necessary for its proper development. Christ came in humility, did his work in humility, and the harvest will be abundant. When He came "in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory," then will open up the glory dispensation, and all its subjects will be exalted. As I now in my are talking and walking with lolly heads, as if they were already living in the glory dispensation. Those who have "put on Christ," are not so weary in well doing, nor in the shadow of His glory, but then in the day shall. Then mind fast to meanness, self-denial, humility, whether the "means" be true or not. Often the "power of God" will stretch itself out before you, but let it not come upon and leave you. Keep your feet on Christ, let your temple upon it, and then it will fit you. The eyes are set up high, so that you may see the dangers and avoid them. Profit by this, so that you hold the sword of the Spirit by the hilt when wielding it, otherwise it will be a failure.

A PARABLE.

A CERTAIN ruler, severe in his rulings, sent for one of his people, and said to him: "What is your trade?" He answered: "I am a blacksmith." "Go I say," said the ruler, "and make a chain of such a length,"

Away went the blacksmith, and for several months he worked hard on the chain, and he got no pay for all the time he was working. He, at last, brought it to his Master, who said: "Go and make it twice as long." At work he went again, but still without pay. He brought it again to the tyrant, the hard-hearted master, who again said: "Go and make it longer still." And longer it was made, taking more time, and getting no pay. Truly he had a hard time of it. When he brought it up again, the rough Master said to his servants: "Take the chain, bind the blacksmith hand and foot, and cast him into a furnace of fire." This was his pay for making the chain. Poor man! How he worked day after day for his master and then, at last had to be burned for it. "O what a cruel master," you say. Now for the plain facts.

The devil is the master. He has been telling some persons fifty years to make a chain (of sin), to make it longer and longer, and they are still obeying him. He gives you no pay as you work along and serve him. At last when you have finished it, and brought it to him, he will tell his servants, "Bind him and cast him into the lake of fire."

To-day he tells you, "Cheat neighbor B and put a link on; to-morrow sell rum and make some one drunk and thus add another link."

Thus you will serve him ten, twenty or more years, and Satan will keep on saying, "More links still." "The wages of sin is death," says the Book of God.

FIRE AND BRIMSTONE.

TERRIBLE the doom of him who lies. "All liars shall have their part in a lake of fire and brimstone." Rev. 21: 8. Some read it, "A few liars shall have their part in a little pond of fire and brimstone." Some read, "A certain class of liars shall have their part at or near by a lake of fire and brimstone." Others read, "All liars shall have their part in a figurative lake of figurative fire and brimstone." But the voice of God says, "All liars shall have their part in a lake of fire and brimstone;" read, literal fire and brimstone. This sounds harshly on some ears. It cannot be avoided. It is the Lord's language, the Lord's arrangement. We are not the author, the creator of the lake of fire and brimstone or anything else, and never expect to be, but we are here to warn, to cry aloud, to give no uncertain sound about this matter. We are anxious to have people keep out of the lake of fire and brimstone, to see them go the right way, the holy way, God's way. Then be not deceived. Liars shall have their part in a lake of fire and brimstone—a vast body of seething, boiling, flaming brimstone. The dark, sulphuric flames will go rolling forth from that terrible lake; the smell of brimstone will be there. And more; that burning brimstone will hurt, it will cause pain. O fearful the condition of liars!

"See here," replies one, "can't I misrepresent a little, and still be up the lake of fire and brimstone?" No you cannot. The man who willfully misrepresents another is not telling the truth, and that is a sin, constitutes a liar—one who does not tell the truth. God says, "All liars shall go into the lake of fire and brimstone." Not at it, nor near it, but in the lake. You tremble, do you? That is right; tremble now and turn back on the way of truth.

Lying commenced with Satan in the garden of Eden. He said, "Thou shalt not die." There is his negative against God's positive. And the man who tells lies is doing his very best for Satan; or I wish poor pay he gets for it. Liars shall have their part in the lake of fire and brimstone. You say, "That is awful." It is; and if you do not want to get into the awful lake, just cease telling falsehoods and turn to telling the truth. This is a certain way to escape.

"Well out," says one who is a little guilty, "how about little white lies? Can't I put large potatoes at the mouth of the sack, and the small ones at the bottom?" Yes, you can do that, and may be so deceiving you tell the purchaser that such is the case; but if you put the large ones at the top and the small ones below in order to sell them at a high price, look out for the lake of fire and brimstone. Honestly always makes the measure full, pressed down, running over, and abiding throughout; but the measure gotten up to sell, deceive, and drive a "sharp bargain," shows that the one who goes that way is on the road to the terrible lake. The way for such work is poor indeed.

Now here comes the merchant, who says: "I must sell goods; can't I misrepresent a little, if compelled to? I have goods, part wool and part cotton; times are close, profits small, can't I sell the mixed goods for the real genuine stuff, and escape the luke?" No man is compelled to misrepresent in order to effect sales. Such lying, such deceiving must necessarily lead to the lake of fire and brimstone unless repentance will step in and hold back. If you choose to go that way, you will certainly get your choice, but the crackling flame will be inharmonious music to your ear.

Away back in prophetic times the man of God said: "Behold ye trust in lying words, that cannot profit." Jer. 7:8. That is also terrible,—terrible that men will trust in lying words. Men talk about others, misrepresent them, do their best to impress their sayings upon those whom they address until it is believed. Men thus trust in lying words, and that to no profit. We do not say that the lake of fire and brimstone is for those who thus trust in lying words, for the Book does not say so, and we want to stick to the Book, but there is no profit in that kind of trusting; the sooner one quits it, the better. "O well," says another, "there can be no harm in telling my opinion of this or that thing." Certainly a man may give his opinion, providing it is given to help others; but alas! too often they are dearly paid for. How many aches of the heart have been produced by an opinion! How many dear ties have been broken by opinions! How many communities have been rocked and disturbed by opinions! Then they were dear, were they not? Not so cheap as you thought. To express an opinion to injure some one is so near "luke" business that we know not how to divide it from downright lying. The man who persists in lying, twisting the truth, misrepresenting and avouling the exact thing, must take all the consequences. If he will go with the sorcerers, the murderers, the idolaters, and amidst their groanings, moanings, twistings, writhings, and shoutings, send up his bitter wail of anguish, then there he will go. There you can cry and say, "I did the work; I lied; I misrepresented; I did all I could to injure others; now I have my reward." O may your heart be changed now! May you learn to speak the whole truth, nothing but the truth, wear it like a girdle, and keep it as a jewel.

A FEW OBSERVATIONS.

NUMBER IV.

BY this time the reader will perceive that for our authority in defense of plain dressing, we want to go beyond all human confessions of faith, beyond all man-made creeds and predicate our reason on what was taught by Christ and the apostles. This is the original ground occupied by our ancient Brethren who were first in this reformatory movement. The Bible was their authority for plain dressing, and they enforced it as they were Scripturally authorized to do, and thereby preserved that simplicity that should characterize every true church of God.

They adopted a uniformity in dress, not because the Gospel under all circumstances required a particular uniform, but because they thought by that method they could maintain among the members, Scriptural plainness. They thus banded together for mutual defense against pride and fashion. It was their method of evading and warding off fashionable dressing. The Gospel required them to dress in plain apparel, and not costly array, and in order to carry out this Scriptural injunction, they agreed upon the plain method of dressing that has been handed down to us. It is worthy of note that every church which has strictly adhered to this method of advancing plainness, has kept fashionable dressing out of the church. I do not know of an exception. Just as long as the Methodist church adhered to the principle of plainness, they remained a plain people. So it is with the Quakers, and just so it will be with our people. Those congregations among us which have departed from this simplicity are now drifting off into pride, and in too many instances are making rapid strides towards popular religion.

This doctrine of non-conformity, however, has been greatly injured by some of its advocates. Too many of them have not been consistent in their plea. Their lives did not correspond with their preaching. Many have made a hobby of dress and in some localities have well nigh rode it to death. Every time they preach, it must be on dress, and often abuse people for fine dressing instead of reasoning the case candidly and coolly. Too many have used soft arguments and hard words, instead of hard arguments and soft words. And in some instances those who are wonderfully particular about dress, are careless and unconcerned about other things just as important. There are those, who, when the question of dress comes up, are alive to the work—they want all the members to dress plain, and come into the general order—that is right and good; but when it comes to doing missionary work—to raising money to send the Gospel to the perishing sinners—they are as unconcerned about it as if they did not care whether anybody else was saved or not. Now brethren, this is inconsistent, it is not apostolic.

Then again, a young, fashionably attired lady makes application to unite with the church. A couple of well-established visiting brethren call on her, and tell her what the church expects of those who unite with the body of Christ. Among other things, it is required that she absent herself from all places of amusement, lay aside her jewelry and fashionable attire, and adorn herself in modest apparel as becometh holy women. With a gentle heart full of love for her Master, she responds, "For Christ's sake I will make the sacrifice." The resolve is a good one, and I would to God that every sister in the church could make such a sacrifice for their Master's cause. The young lady is received into the church, and becomes a model sister. But how about the two visiting brethren? More than likely one of them is following a worldly fashion just as much as that young lady before she was received into the church. You ask that brother to quit the use of tobacco for Christ's sake—no, he cannot do it. He is very particular about dress, but when it comes to using tobacco he is just as fashionable as the world. Then there are preachers who are very strenuous about the order of the church in dress—every member must conform to the order, and may be that very preacher is following a worldly fashion by using tobacco. Is this consistent? Then there are others, who, when it comes to parting the hair, are just as precise as they can be—it must be done so and so,—but when it comes to dealing with their fellow-man, they are as close-fisted as the world dare be. Is this not following the ways of the world? Is this not downright inconsistency? Is this Bible non-conformity? Then there are those who injure the cause of non-conformity by making a hobby of dress; they are all the time talking and preaching about it. Every sermon they preach, and have something in about dress, while other subjects, equally important, are left untouched; they do not preach the whole truth, for many of the commands thereby remain untaught. Preaching is a little like planting seed; there is such a thing as getting so much in a hill that none of it will grow to maturity. The best way to kill the doctrine of non-conformity is just to make a hobby of it, and get people tired and sick of hearing it. It is like breaking a child of eating sugar; let it eat till it gets sick—the case is the same. Just so with preaching on Scriptural subjects. I once knew a man who was preached on the design of baptism till the whole neighborhood became disgusted, and a really bad effect on the doctrine men preach; he did it more harm than good.

Another thing that has greatly injured this doctrine among our people, is that some years ago we had a few more young men, who were very strenuous for the order of the church, and yet, by their unbecoming actions, have brought disgrace upon the church, and shook it to the very center to no advantage. Such things, these hurt, they do more harm than the fiery darts of Satan. Men who are extremists in anything as important regarding another or equal importance, are the men who injure the cause.

Brothers, these are facts that cannot be gainsaid. There is too much inconsistency among some of those who dwell with particular emphasis on the order of the church. Too many of them are careless about other things, too many of them do not pay due attention to the work of their master, at a holy and a consistent life. They may be very precise in dress, but when it comes to driving sharp bargains, laying up treasures on earth and neglecting prayer, they are just as worldly as anybody else. In contending for the doctrine of non-conformity, in public, as well as private, these are the most difficult points to overcome; they do more harm than all the enemies put together. I would sooner fight Satan and all the fiery darts of the dark regions any time than to apologize for a "wolf in sheep's clothing." I never did blame a wolf for being a wolf, and acting like a wolf, but when it comes to a wolf getting into sheep's clothing to deceive, then woe be unto the hypocrites.

Shall we give up the doctrine of non-conformity because a few of its advocates are inconsistent? Nay indeed. It would be as logical to give up the Bible because there are "false brethren." It is my candid opinion that it is the only way of keeping the church unspotted from the world in dress. I notice that those congregations that have departed from the order, are fast drifting into the current of popular religion. Those who have gone out from among us, because of this doctrine, have either gone off into the ways of the world, or else dwindled to nothing. And just so it will be with the church, unless she carefully guards against every appearance of evil. Let those who hold so firmly to the general order of the church, show by their walk and conversation that their heart have been renewed, and that they have non-conformity in the heart as well as on the body, and then God's name will be glorified in our bodies and spirits which are his. J. H. M.

WERE THEY ELDERS OR DEACONS?

THE day of Pentecost was a memorable day in the early history of the Christian church. Three thousand persons were converted in one day, and so rapid was the increase of the church, that in a few days it numbered five thousand, Acts 4: 4, and in order that none might suffer, and that the Word be not hindered, they had all things common. Acts 2: 44.

A difficulty finally arose: the Grecians murmured "against the Hebrews, because their widows were neglected in the daily ministrations." Acts 6: 1. The twelve said, it was not reason that they should leave the Word of God and serve tables. They did not have time to settle difficulties; their work was to preach the Gospel. They decide that this murmuring must be attended to by other parties.

Here we find a valuable lesson for preachers of modern times. It is too often the case, when there are difficulties to be settled, the elders are called to do it, while there may be others, just as well qualified, who could attend to such matters and let the elders give themselves continually to prayer and to the ministry of the word. When this difficulty arose, the apostles did not appoint some elders to attend to it, but called the whole church together, and told them to "look out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business." Acts 6: 3. The men were to be chosen from the church, by the church.

Were these seven men, after they were installed, elders or deacons? One party affirm that they were elders, while the other party think they were deacons. In my judgment they were neither; some of them may have been deacons, but I do not believe there were any elders among them. They are not called elders, nor are they called deacons.

Their manner of being called out, shows that they constituted a special order or class for some special purpose. "The church was told to select seven men," when we may appoint over "this business." The apostles did not say, "Select seven men to be ordained to the eldership; or, seven men to perform the work of deacons; or seven men whom we may appoint over this church—when we may appoint over this business." What business? To see that the Grecian widows are properly provided for in the daily ministrations.

The widows not being properly provided for, had caused the murmuring; and as the apostles did not have time to attend to the case, the church selected a committee to see after the trouble and see that the murmuring was stopped, and the Grecian widows properly provided for.

The church at Jerusalem at that time was very large, and it is not reasonable that she would have been without deacons, whose duty it was to see after the wants of the multitude, but in this case they could not serve alone, for there was a difficulty to be settled, and the church must have a hand in it. The apostles refused to take hold of it, but instructed the church to select seven men to look after that business. These men were duly set apart to their work by the laying on of hands.

To say, that these seven men were installed as elders, does not look logical. They were not chosen till a difficulty arose, and it would seem strange that the church would wait until the members got up a difficulty, before choosing elders. The same argument may be used against the idea of them having been deacons. And then, why select and install seven elders all at one time? If they were elders, why appoint them over just a certain kind of business, and not over the church? If they were elders, why did not Philip, one of them, have power to lay hands on those whom he baptized, while preaching at Samaria? Have not elders power to lay hands on baptized converts?

It is generally conceded that the apostles were elders, and there were twelve of them.—Were not twelve elders enough for one church? Why install seven others, thus making nineteen? What would they want with nineteen elders in one church? There was a difficulty in the church at that time. Is it right to select and install elders when there is a difficulty in the church, or should they not wait till the difficulty is settled?

We are generally taught that the church should always be at peace when any officers are to be selected, but if it be conceded that the seven were elders, then it would be perfectly right to elect and install church officers while the church is in difficulty. The narrative says, that one of them, Nicolas, was a proselyte of Antioch, a city something over two hundred miles from Jerusalem. Why would the church at Jerusalem select an elder who lived over two hundred miles away in a city where there were no members?

Neither is it reasonable to suppose they were deacons. Does it look reasonable that the apostles would have organized a church of five thousand members without any deacons in it? And if there were a ready deacons in the church, why go to work and select seven others to attend to this special work? Why could not those already in the church attend to it? And, as stated, one of them lived over two hundred miles from Jerusalem. What would the church want with a deacon who lived 200 miles from the congregation?

If they were neither elders nor deacons by virtue of their installation, what were they? I answer, they constituted a business committee, whose duty it was to oversee and look after the proper distribution of the charities of the church. The already chosen deacons and others could attend to the distribution of the food, but as a difficulty had arisen, there must now be a committee appointed over that business, to superintend the work, and settle whatever dissatisfaction may have arisen. When their work ceased then their office ceased also. Some of this committee we know were preachers, for we afterward find them engaged in preaching.

I leave the reader to ponder over the above, and get ready for reading an article relating to whether it is expedient that elders and able preachers should leave the Word and spend their time serving on committees in settling church difficulties when there are plenty of others who could do the work just as well? Remember what course the twelve took when that difficulty got up in the old mother church at Jerusalem. J. H. M.

Those Universalist preachers, who are going around over the country, telling the people that there is no hell, would better go slow. They might be mistaken. The antideluvians did not believe there would be a literal flood, but the day came that they had to believe it.

The Mormon women of Salt Lake City have passed resolutions avowing their belief in "the patriarchal order of marriage, as revealed to Adam, people in past ages, which it is duty to, work on to increase the strength and glory." How about those who lived before the flood? Adam had but one wife, and so it was with all the men saved in the ark. Mormons who have a multiplicity of wives, are just as good as other people.

Our Bible Class.

"The Worth of Truth no Tongue Can Tell."

This department is designed for asking and answering Bible questions, and for the solution of Scriptural difficulties. All questions should be stated with candor, and answered with as much clearness as possible, in order to promote Bible truth. Articles for this department, must be short and to the point.

Will the BRETHREN AT WORK give an explanation of the latter clause of the 26th verse of the 22nd chapter of Luke, which reads as follows: "And he that hath no sword let him sell his garment and buy one."

Also, Mark 23: 15, which reads as follows: "Woe unto you scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte; and when he is made ye make him two-fold more the child of hell than yourselves." S. A. ULERY.

Please explain 1 Tim. 1: 9; Luke 16: 15; Mark 9: 23; Mark 10: 17, 18. To what law has the Scripture reference and to what extent should it be used? What is the most esteemed? Has it reference to any particular thing?

A COLT TIED.

Please give an explanation of Matt. 21: 2; also Mark 11: 2. Do both mean the same? If so, what is meant by the ass tied and the colt with her; louse them and bring them into me? Did he ride both, or only the colt? I. H. CRIST.

BY turning to Mark 11, we can gather more direct meaning of our Savior's language as recorded by said evangelist. As every parable of our Savior has its direct meaning, because "spake he not without a parable," then it is for us to read and understand. We think Jesus only rode the colt, for Mark 11: 7 tells it plainly. When the disciples were sent into the village "they went their way and found the colt tied by the door without, in a place where two ways met."

First, The colt represents the infantile part of the human family. "Tied at the door without." The colt represents that class naturally tied outside the kingdom of grace Jesus promised to set up in the hearts of mankind. "Two ways met," meaning the two roads, the broad, and the narrow, leading to eternity. "Whereon never man sat." That is, the class referred to has not been controlled and influenced to travel on either, until they are loosed and brought to Jesus. "Sat upon him and rode triumphantly." Meaning Jesus has complete power and control over such. In our natural state, before crossing the line of accountability, we are tied by nature and are the children of wrath, even as others. Before we have brought nature into action, we are not travelers on either road until loosed from nature's bonds, then Jesus rides triumphantly into that Jerusalem within us. "For," said He, "repentance and remission of sins must be preached among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem." So when this takes place within us, Jesus has complete power and control over our young nature whereon never man sat. A. BEARSS.

LEAST IN THE KINGDOM.

"He that is least in the kingdom of heaven, is greater than he."—Matt. 11: 11.

THE Savior in speaking of John the Baptist made the above remark, and also said in the next two verses following. "And from the days of John the Baptist until now, the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force. For all the prophets and the law prophesied until John."

Now the point He wished to show seems to be on the "kingdom of heaven," so by comparing Scripture with Scripture, we can get the meaning of what He wished to convey. "But if I cast out devils by the Spirit of God, then the kingdom of God is come unto you," Matt. 12: 28, showing conclusively to be the power of God by which he did the mighty works He performed. He also said unto His disciples in answer to their question why He spake in parables, "Because it is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given."

Now it seems to me, the reason we do not come up to the full standard that we might attain to, is not on account of the rule being incorrect, but the fault is in not complying as the rule demands, or in other words, we "yet lack one thing." We will be perfect, when we find the treasure hid in a field, the which when a man hath found, he hideth, and for joy thereof goeth and selleth all that he hath, and buyeth that field.

"Neither shall they say, lo here! or lo there! for behold, the kingdom of God is within you," Luke 17: 21. "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do; because I go unto my Father." John 14: 12.

I have gathered the above quotations to give an idea of what a believer may attain to, to come up to the standard given in the text above, as requested by Bro. H. H. Myers, and I hope some more able correspondent may take up the subject and do it justice.

QUERIES ANSWERED.

I HAVE noticed in the last number of the BRETHREN AT WORK quite a number of questions asked, concerning certain Scripture passages, desiring to have others give their views. I am very much interested in the Word of God, which is my life. It is therefore my desire to give my views on some of the most important questions.

"Now to him that worketh is the reward not reckoned of grace, but of debt. But to him that worketh not, but believeth on him that justifieth the ungodly, his faith is counted for righteousness." Rom. 4: 4, 5. Now if we turn to Rom. 3: 9-12, we find man's condition in the sight of God, without a Savior. Paul, including himself, says, all have gone astray. Also Rom. 5: 12. We now have man's condition while here in existence. By turning to Rom. 6: 23, we find that the wages of sin is death; but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord. How to obtain this gift,—eternal life, is plainly shown in John 3: 14, 15: "And as Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up: that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life." Also turn to John 6: 28, 29: "Then said they unto him, What shall we do that we might work the works of God? Jesus answered and said unto them, This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath sent." Rom. 5: 1: "Therefore being justified by faith we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." Also verse 2: "By whom also we have access by faith into the grace wherein we stand and rejoice in hope of the glory of God." Rom. 11: 6: "And if by grace, then is it no more of works: otherwise grace is no more grace. But if it be of works, then is it no more grace: otherwise works is no more works." Eph. 2: 8, 9: "For by grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God: Not of works, lest any man should boast." Now by turning to John 11, we have a beautiful illustration of man yet in sin, being helpless and a lifeless form. "The wages of sin is death." Rom. 7: 9: "But when the commandments came, sin revived and I died." John 11: 39: "Jesus said, Take ye away the stone. Martha, the sister of him that was dead, saith unto him, Lord, by this time he stinketh: for he hath been dead four days." "He stinketh" may be compared to man's righteousness which he seeks in his own works. Philippi 3: 7-9. John 11: 43: "And when he had thus spoken he cried with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth. And he that was dead came forth, bound hand and foot with grave-clothes; and his face was bound about with a napkin. Jesus saith unto them, Loose him, and let him go." We know that all the by-standers knew Lazarus was dead—he could do nothing, but the moment Jesus called him, he moved, he received life; every eye that was present beheld the change; Jesus had the glory and Lazarus had the life,—a gift of God through our Lord Jesus Christ. The life that was revealed through Lazarus, was made manifest to the world. So it is also with every sinner which has passed from death unto life. The life which he has received through Jesus, by faith, will be made manifest to the world, to the glory of God. We have the fruits of the spirit, the result of faith in Gal. 5: 22-26. J. B. STOLTZES.

KINGS AND KINGDOMS.

Please explain Daniel 2: 11, 45. In the days of what kings? What does the word kingdom refer to, and what the stone? WM. T. HARRISON.

IN the vision, the prophet explains the king's dream thus: "This image's head was of fine gold, his breast and his arms of silver, his belly and his thighs of brass, his legs of iron, his foot part of iron and part of clay."

1. Now Daniel explains that this "head of fine gold" as the Babylonian Empire, particularly Nebuchadnezzar, its proud and haughty sovereign. This head represented the "fine gold"—its riches and its splendors, of which gold was the established emblem.

2. "The breast and arms of silver" are said to indicate a second Empire, still rich and splendid, but inferior to the first, and means no other than the Persian or Medo-Persian Empire of which Cyrus was founder.

3. "Belly and thighs of brass" indicates a third Empire, which very appositely represents the Macedonian Empire. This Empire, though perhaps more extensive than either of the preceding (as the belly is larger than the head or breast), was yet inferior.

4. "Legs of iron, his feet part of iron and part of clay." This is unquestionably the Roman Empire, and intimates that though part of its elements were like iron, its constitution being heterogeneous, had in itself, elements of division; besides, its legs may represent the Eastern and Western branches of the Empire, and the toes the smaller kingdoms which afterwards succeeded. I will not descend to every minute particular; but this much is certain, that by this image was represented the world as known then, the Empire of Babylon lasted about 70 years after this period; the Persian about 190; the Macedonian, 320; the Roman, which subdued the Persians, and conquered nearly the whole world, still longer.

The fifth Monarchy is Christ's Kingdom, and is itself a rock, formed without human aid, and can never be destroyed; it will survive and surmount all human governments, and extend into the state of eternity.

THE STONE.

We will turn to Psalm 118: 22 where it reads thus: "The stone which the builders refused, is become the head stone of the corner." Hear it shows that Christ is the great foundation stone of the Christian church, "the head of the corner;" also to Matt. 21: 42; 1 Pet. 4-10; Eph. 2: 20; Acts 4: 4. Builders tell us, this corner-stone was the key-stone of an arch. "It is a chief stone, and in the most conspicuous place, the highest, it is generally precious or valuable, a picked piece and generally sculptured or engraved, it is exactly in the centre of the arch, or at the very point where the prophets and the apostles—the old and the new dispensations meet; and it is the foundation or security of the whole; for if the key-stone were removed, the whole building would fall to ruins."

SLEEP.

BY A. S. ROGERS.

SLEEP is the intermediate state between life and death. Life is regarded as the active state of all the functions of the body, and death as that of their total suspension. Sleep exists in two states: in the complete and incomplete, or the sleep of health and the sleep of disease.

The sleep of health is full of tranquility. In such a state we remain for hours in unbroken repose, nature banqueting on its sweets, renewing its lost energies and laying in a new store.

This accomplished, slumber vanishes like a vapor before the rising sun—languor has been succeeded by strength, and all the faculties are recruited in this delightful state.

Man assimilates most with that in which he exists. Adam sprang from his Creator's hands, fresh, buoyant and vigorous, rejoicing as a racer to run his course, with all his feelings and faculties prepared for exertion. Reverse the picture, and we have the sleep of disease, with its short, feverish, unrefreshing, and melancholy dreams.

Night is the time for sleep; but I fear too much of the time allotted to us by God for our soul's welfare and sustenance is spent in sleep or in idle conversation. Let us ever be careful, for we are informed in God's Word, that on the day of judgment men shall give an account of every idle word they speak.

When we meet for worship, I am sorry to say, we permit ourselves to be overcome with a kind of sleepiness which certainly is not very becoming, or very encouraging to the minister trying to explain God's Word. Let us watch that we be not found asleep when God comes.

Some say, "O, I cannot stay awake; our brother speaks in such a dull and lifeless way." We should remember that God's Word though spoken in a "dull, lifeless way" is sharper than any two-edged sword. When we spend our time at divine service in sleeping, it is evident we have not the essential interest. Let us with the Psalmist say, "I will not give sleep to mine eyes or slumber to mine eyelids" until I have worshipped God according to His revealed will.

THE just man says, "Do not let me hurt;" the good man says, "Let me bless." The just man says, "Let me take nothing from my fellow-men;" the good man says, "Let me bestow much upon them." The just man says, "Let me be pure;" the good man says, "Let me draw all men into purity." One is equitable; the other is benevolent. One seeks his own perfectness; the other seeks the welfare of those about him.

Besides these materials, the microscope has brought to light the remains of river shells, fish, and insects; the seeds of wild and cultivated flowers, corn and barley, the flax-plant and the common flax, cultivated probably both for food and textile purposes, and the radish, with many others known to science. Manufactured products were also found, such as fragments of tiles and pottery, and small pieces of string made of flax and sheep's wool.

Reciprocal Joy by the Water-side—The Tomb—Human Sympathy—The Paternal Roof—Working for Christ—Bleeding Hearts—The Lord's Interest.

[From Our Special Correspondent.] NUMBER V.

SELFISH joy is not happiness, neither is the joy of one person only great in quantity; but if it is mutual and interchangeable, given and received it is great, and much to be enjoyed. This is the joy that promotes happiness. It may be obtained and enjoyed at the fireside, around the domestic altar, at our labor, with our neighbors and friends. The most prolific source is, when laboring in obedience to the divine Master. This was a source of comfort and joy, when we entered the sanctuary, to-day, to worship the Lord in the beauty of holiness. It was talked among the saints, that another soul was making application to be initiated into the church, which caused joy to flow from heart to heart, and the angels catching the strain, carried the joyful news to heaven, that sinners are coming home, returning to the Father's house. The meeting was opened after our usual manner and Bro. I. Deardoff, of Ind., addressed us, setting forth the necessity of obeying God and becoming reconciled to Him.

After the close of the exercises, we repaired to the waterside, according to Gospel order, where prayer was wont to be made; and there as Philip did the eunuch, the administrator baptized the applicant, rejoicing in God. Oh! what a safe example we have to follow, we also can approach a certain water, both applicant and administrator go down into the water and perform baptism in the order of the Gospel.—Let the reader look at the 8th chapter of Acts, and read the narrative concerning the baptism of the eunuch.

Next day went with the Brethren, to attend the funeral of our dear brother, Daniel King. The sermon was deferred until the sister will be able to attend the sanctuary. A large assemblage of people, and after offering a few words of consolation to the bereft, by reading singing and prayer, we slowly wended our way to the Brethren's churchyard, to deposit the dead. Assembling there by the gaping tomb—a pause, and then slowly and sadly we saw our dear brother lowered to his last resting place.—After which we joined in singing a funeral thought: "Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep, etc."

All fondly hoping to see our dear brother in climes of heavenly bliss, we dispersed to our homes. In those hours of sad distress, we need sympathy from our fellow men. Alas! is there a heart so hard that it cannot melt with sympathy towards the bereft? No, we think not, all seem to feel each other's woes and fully realize that amidst all our joy, sadness is the common lot of all.

Next day in company with our dear family went to visit mother, under the old paternal roof. O! the many fond recollections that cluster around the name of mother. While there at the old homestead many recollections of the past, came to our memory. We remembered the scenes of early childhood, when we knew no cares and our hearts were filled with innocent glees. We remembered the sainted dead of the household, of the two brothers, and sisters and latterly a fond father, who are waiting the sound of the trumpet. We thought of the marital occasions of joy, when two hearts were united in one and left now and then, to pitch their tent elsewhere. Thus by those occasions of joy and sorrow the once large family has been reduced to one son, grand-son and our dear widowed mother. We gathered around the home altar in the evening prayer, and then we keenly felt the loss of the departed. May God bless our aged mother in her declining days, and with her many others in similar conditions be held in grateful remembrance. Children everywhere, remember the name of mother, and to her show every mark of kindness.

Be kind to thy mother, for let our hearts know
How many of sorrow be seen,
Oh! will not'st thou cherish and comfort her now,
For loving and kind hath she been,
Remember thy mother, for there will she pray,
A long as God giveth her breath,
With accents of kindness then cheer her for aye
Till to the dark valley of death."

Today we joined the army of workers for Christ and the glory of His cause, in aiding the spread of His Gospel. Brethren E. Rosserman and J. Witmore, filled the appointment at Pleasant Ridge, Bro. W. C. Teeter at the Wood school-house, at 10:30 A. M.; service was opened by Bro. Teeter. The 330th song of praise, "Come to me," was his selection. The 45th chapter of Isaiah was read; and he selected as a motto for his discourse, the 22nd verse of the chapter, "Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth, for I am God, and there is none else." He discoursed upon the following propositions:

- 1. The character of God, and unto Him must we look for salvation.
- 2. The invitation.

He produced many evidences in which people were saved by looking unto God and otherwise insured their utter destruction. The service was closed by using the 337th hymn, and then went to prayer. In the evening we met at the Pleasant Ridge church for divine services. Had good hearing and attention. The speaker based his remarks mainly upon the declaration of the Psalmist, "O God, thou art my God." Deliberated upon the character and purity of the eternal; and set forth the ideas that the people of the different ages had of God, in regard to his power, holiness and purity. How they failed and when they succeeded. For us to become successful, we must come to God after His own appointed way. Then can we understand His character and sustain proper relations to Him.—become heirs of God and joint-heirs with the Lord Jesus Christ. Oh that more light with heavenly rays may fall upon the human heart, that they might seek Him early and reap the advantages of early piety and the joys that are consequent!

Next day the tolling of the funeral bell was heard conveying the sad intelligence of a departed one to the spirit world. We repaired to the United Brethren church, to hear the sermon and lend our sympathy, mingle our sorrow with those bleeding hearts, who mourn the loss of a kind mother and companion. Services by the Rev. Ulverston, based on "The righteous hath hope in his death" Prov. 14: 32.—The occasion was a very sorrowful one. The fond mother was in good health and without a moment's warning, was summoned to eternity. May this prove a warning to others to "be ye also ready." She was a consistent member of the "C—" fraternity. Husband, she proved her fidelity to you until death called her over the river, where she is waiting for you.—Children, mother is gone to try the realities of another world, follow her footsteps so far as she walked with God, obey the Lord in all His appointed ways, and when you, too, are called, you may be prepared to go. In those seasons of sorrow we are reminded of our mortality, and soon we, too, must obey the call and bid adieu to earth. Weeping friends may stand around our bedside, and however reluctant to give us up, we cannot go. Oh! God help us to be prepared for that final hour, that we may die in the triumphs of a living faith.

On Saturday evening, in company with Bro. J. Witmore, we went to the Poorman school-house, near Forest, Ohio, to care for the Lord's interest there. Found a full house, and had good attention. For the night, stayed with Bro. G. Warren. Next day we re-assembled at the school house, for divine services. Had good attention, and we think good impressions were made upon the minds of the auditors.—Bro. Witmore selected as a closing song of praise the 337th hymn, and then went to prayer. Thus the Lord's children work. Paul may plant, Apollos water and we hope that God will give the increase. May God inspire us to greater zeal in the Master's cause, laboring earnestly until He will call us to lay down the cross and take up the crown.

Wayside Notes.

WHEN we wrote last we were at the meeting at Zimmermann, Green Co., Ohio.—There was a good meeting at P. A. M., after the love-feast; and when this was over, at 10 A. M. we, in company with Bro. Henry Duncan, hurried away to the love-feast at the Grove church. We arrived at this place in time for preaching, and found a large crowd in attendance. The location is a most pleasant one, with a good large house; and we should judge a large body of members.

This church is under the care of our aged Bro. Abraham Flory. The resident ministers are brethren Joseph Arnold and Henry Gump. Those in attendance were—brothers Abraham Flory, John Vantz, Joe Gardner, Samuel Coppock, Isaac Studebaker, W. Boggs, Frank Darst and Henry Duncan. A large number of members took part in the love-feast at night, and the enjoyment was good, and might have been much more so, had it not been that some among the spectators did not seem to respect age, the worship of God or anything else. Some might think that young men should have more respect both for themselves and others, than to do thus, and so we then thought; but the young men were not all who were in the fault; there were those who without doubt claim the title of ladies, yet for all that she, the lady is, who, the lady acts.

There was all provision made for the accommodation of the membership at one table, that could well be done, but still it was not enough, and quite a large number had a table prepared for them after the first had eaten and these did then partake. This of course took more time, but it gave us all a better opportunity to look by faith unto that great marriage supper of the Lamb, where there will be ample room for the millions, who shall meet from all the nations.

It is a question that will soon, if not now, enlist the attention of our Brethren, "How and where shall we hold our love-feasts, so as to accommodate all the members present?" The work goes on, the number increases, and with more workers, more work will be done. The number will still increase in all the churches, we hope, and it will be then a question, to meet by those who see it. For the present let us watch and pray and still work on.

On Sunday morning Bro. Duncan and I came thirteen miles to where we spoke to an attentive people of the "Goodness and the power of God." After meeting Bro. Duncan returned home and we went for dinner with brother and sister Kiehl. Here we spent a pleasant afternoon with Bro. Henry J. Kurtz, of the Children's Paper, and the members of this kind and intelligent family. We notice here, what we find in many places; fathers and mothers, that are very anxious to have their sons and daughters come into the church. This is right, and to all such, we will say: Do not let this wish of yours remain hid from them; for to know that such was a parent's wish will have its effect for good. Do not think that the minister must do all the preaching, but let each one do his part.

At night we spoke of the advantage of a knowledge of Scripture to children, from 2 Tim. 3: 15, 16. We did this by request of a mother, whose heart would leap to know that her offspring were with her in the fold.

The church at Dayton does not seem to have many members, but those we met seemed to have great interest in the work. The location and advantages afforded here, are good we think for the up-building of a large church. Quite a large number of the ministering brethren live within the reach of the city, and many others pass by on the trains; so we think that the little church at Dayton should not suffer at any time for preaching. Brethren, do not let the cause suffer in any place, but get all you can and hold all you have.

Monday was spent in the city with Bro. Kurtz and at his office in the Christian Publishing House, near the Union depot, also, with a brother and family, whose kindness we remember; but whose name we have forgotten.—Names may be lost to the wearied mind, but good words, never. With Bro. Kurtz we did not have a good opportunity to converse; although we were with him on both Monday and Tuesday, for, his paper for the little ones, must be put to press, and he must look to it. We see that a lazy man cannot succeed as a printer any better than he can on a farm. Workers we want every-where, but laziness, nowhere.

LANSON WEST.

From the Mission Field.

Dear Brethren:—

(N)O more I come to your column with a suite of news from this little mission field. I took my departure from the brethren and sisters and many kind friends, with whom I went in and out in Marshall Co., about five miles south-east of Lazon. On last Monday the 18th, came to Spickard, on the branch R. R. of the C. B. & Q. Had a good meeting in the evening, with a good interest.

In this place we find the humble home of our dear brother and sister, Plu her, with quite a family of small children, who in the present unfortunate condition in a special manner, demand, not only the prayers, but the practical sympathies of the church. The sister having badly broken her ankle bone, and dislocated the joint, by stepping through the side walk, which was under a board, may be a cripple for life. We hope this will serve as a warning to all trustees of village or city corporations, and remind them of the necessity of keeping walks in good repair.

On Tuesday morning, 19th, I came on level the train to Henry, where I was met by brother ren S. Darby and H. G. Breese, who conveyed me to this place, (Florida, Putnam Co.) the last point of my labors in this field, and where I expected to meet brother George Studebaker, of Yellow Creek, Ill.; but instead, received a card, informing me of his non-appearance; hence am laboring alone as usual, as best we can, feeling to say in the language of the hymn; "Are we almost there, are we almost there?—Says the weary saint as he sighs for home."

In Marshall Co. I remained five days. On the fifth day brother J. R. Gish and companion came to our assistance, whom, when we saw we thanked God, and took courage. According to previous arrangements, had a church meeting, next day, where some matters of an unpleasant nature, which had existed for some time among some of the members, were investigated, and disposed of in a Gospel way, and seemingly to general satisfaction, and with a desire to improve in the future. Hence according to previous understanding, we went next day to the house of Bro. John Fike, to hold a love-feast, and to administer baptism, and to organize. The Communion season seemed to be an enjoyable one to all who participated in it. Some were young members, who never communed before, and others not for ten years, for want of an opportunity, and for want of room. Only a few of the neighbors, outside of the membership, assembled with us, for which we felt a degree of sorrow; having a desire that all should see the old apostolic practice, and walk in the light and have fellowship with us, for truly our fellowship is with the Father, and that Jesus might cleanse them, with us, from all sin; but all that were present manifested that degree of solemnity, which is always so desirable on such occasions. May the Lord remember them in mercy. Then after the solemn services of the observance of the ordinances of the church was ended. We, by the consent of all the members present, proceeded to organize, by electing one brother to the office of the ministry and one to the office of deacon, which was done, by first reading the Scriptures, setting forth the qualifications of church officers, and briefly showing the necessity of officers, possessing those qualifications, and that if the Holy Spirit through the apostles, has instructed us so plain, it becomes the church's duty to strictly give heed to those instructions. A departure from it will jeopardize her purity and spiritual prosperity.

We then proceeded to take the vote of all the members present, for a minister, which resulted in the election of brother Solomon Darby. We in like manner took the vote for a deacon; the bot falling on brother Henry G. Breese. They were then installed into their respective offices, with that degree of solemnity, which usually characterizes such occasions; and which seemed to say, "we will bear one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ." With the knowledge we have of the dear brethren elected, of their fidelity to God and zeal for the cause, and the willingness manifested on the part of all the members to encourage them, by standing under their arms. I took my leave of them, feeling much encouraged in the thought, that in the course of time, Israel will prevail in those parts, for we had good reasons to believe that some were not far from the kingdom.

The organization above alluded to, includes all the members in Marshall and Putnam counties, numbering at present about thirty in all, scattered over a territory of about twenty-five miles square, which makes it somewhat inconvenient for some of the members, and may to some extent, retard the spiritual growth of the church, but if the members are lively saints, and shining lights, and the Lord prosper their labors, which he surely will, this territory may in the course of time be divided to good advantage to the cause.

Some of the members, just before I left, asked me what they shall call their district. Inasmuch as it was not presented to the members while together, I would say, at some convenient time consult and decide and send it to BRETHERN AT WORK.

We now feel to recommend this newly organized district, in its infancy to the prayers and sympathies of the general brotherhood, and ministering brethren in their travels should remember them and at convenient, to stop and labor with and for them. For information, address brother Solomon Darby or Henry G. Breese, Henry, Marshall Co., Ill.

"CRUCIFIED WITH CHRIST."

BY LINDON WEST.

Jesus the Lamb they sold and bought,
The broken price of sin,
And oh, dear sinner, is there naught,
That we can break for Him?

Yes, this our Lamb His cross did bear,
On which He died for sin,
And is there not some little cross,
That we can bear for Him?

As died the spotless Lamb of God,
To save a world from sin,
So can we all in His life-blood
Be crucified with Him.

Now may our souls be warm with love,
Our ev'ry thought in frame,
And ev'ry word and action prove,
That we have died with Him.

No more let Satan bind his claim,
Nor find a place within,
Let him no more attempt his reign,
We're dead indeed to sin.

And now may all those dead with Him,
A life of faith begin,
To prove in life and ev'ry thing,
That Christ now lives within.

Let come what may, the seal is set,
Our life we live by Him,
The work is great, but ne'er forget,
We'll die no more to sin.

To live for Christ, is now our aim,
We're now dead unto sin,
The life we live is for His name,
We'll only die for Him.

Sabbath-day Thoughts — Our Meeting for Worship—The School of Christ.

(From our Special Correspondent)

NUMBER XIV.

NOVEMBER, 24th. This is a bright and very beautiful day. During the past week we had about forty-eight hours of cold, rainy weather, and thinking of such days, we are made to appreciate more sensibly the pleasantness of a clear, sunny day. I have known many persons who have no patience with wet weather. They fret and grumble at a great rate, and make every one feel unpleasant about them. Now we should be reasonable. We should at least think of the necessity of changes in the weather, and doing so we doubtless will thank God for all sorts of weather, since this is but the issue of His laws in Nature. But we need patience. So shall we appreciate every good gift. As we enjoy a fair and sunny day after clouds and storm and rain, so we also learn to value the day of rest after a week of care and labor and weariness. Jesus said the "Sabbath was made for man," and that man is very ungrateful indeed who does not observe the day set apart for leisure and rest from toil. Our employments during the week may be all right, and we are commanded of God to labor, but one day should be given particularly to the service of God. We often determine upon a special kind of work on a particular day during the week, and then we attend to it well. Just so it ought to be with us in regard to the Lord's day—Sunday. It should be truly set apart for the worship of God. It should be a consecrated day. To the child of God it is, of all the week, the brightest and best day. When we think of the blessed moments of the Sabbath, and its hallowed enjoyments, we ask in wonder, Who does not love it?

The day of rest is like the little grassy meadow in the wilderness, where after six day's journey, the traveler halts for refreshment and rest, where he may repose under the shades of the lofty palm trees, and dip his vessel in the waters of the calm, clear, stream, recovering his strength to go forth again upon his pilgrimage in the desert with renewed vigor and "good cheer." Thus the Christian rests from his busy cares, and the day is one blessed influence. He gives himself to the reading of God's Word and good books and papers. At the hour of worship he mingles his praise and prayer with God's worshipping people. He edifies those around him and seeks edification. He loves the church and the Word of Truth, and takes no pleasure in the ways of the world. But he is "growing in grace and in the knowledge of the Truth." Heaven is his home and he is getting ready for it. God's people are his choice and he loves to associate with them. The Sabbath is a great blessing of God, and we can make it a great advantage, not only recuperating our washed power, but in gaining a closer walk with God, and learning more and more about Him.

At the Amsterdam appointment to-day at 10 A. M., brother Benedict spoke upon these words: "Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth My word, and believeth on Him that sent Me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from death unto life." A beautiful passage! So full of promise to every believer in Jesus! They are the words of our Lord and Master. "Verily, verily." Truly, truly, it is a welcome and comforting message. Who will not hear it? Seems as though everybody should be a follower of Jesus, since there is so much grace and salvation in His teaching. But sin has taken away our hearing, and we need the revivifying efficacy of the Holy Spirit of God

- I. Hearing the Word
- II. Believing in God.
- III. Free from condemnation.
- IV. From death to life.
- V. The present warfare.
- VI. The final triumph.

Our evening service in town was well attended. The 13th hymn suggested the sentiment of praise. After prayers brother Oiler directed our attention to Matt. 11: 29 "Learn of Me" is well worthy our serious consideration and prompt action at all times. It is a command of the highest authority, and shows that He who knoweth all things, also knows that our knowledge is very incomplete, and we have need of wisdom that is from above. The leading thoughts are

- I. The Teacher.
- II. The Lessons.
- III. The Disciples.

Jesus has been, is, and ever shall be the Teacher of all teachers. Many make great professions to the wisdom of this world, obtain by long years of diligent study in colleges and seminaries, and then do not seem to have learned the very first lesson in the school of Christ, that is, to take the Heavenly Teacher at His word. Perhaps there never was a time when the words of Jesus were so variously construed to suit the fancies of the people. There is but One True Teacher, and at His feet we must learn the way of salvation if we are at all saved. But so many are heeding the "new ideas" and "new amendments of men," that the Divine Teacher is not consulted and heard. His lessons are ignored and the disciples are most lamentably confused and divided. This course of things brings about many discouragements and hindrances to the advancement of the cause of "pure and unadulterated religion." O that we would come to the blessed feet of Jesus, and confess with deeply repenting heart, "We knew Thy word, a Teacher came from God,"

But until His love is shed abroad in our hearts, we shall not be able to recognize Him as our Teacher, His word as our lesson, and yield ourselves His faithful disciples to learn of Him, and walk quietly, carefully, devotedly in the pathway He has left behind Him. To this end may we seek to live.

Yesterday the funeral service of brother John Friedly took place at the Antietam meeting-house. He was in his 62nd year, and was a member of the Falling-Spring district. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord," for when the Lord shall come again, they will be with Him. Our dear brother has gone from the scenes of earth, but we hope he will return with the ransomed of the Lord. Isa. 35: 10.

CHRISTMAS.

BY LIZZIE MILLER.

THE anniversary of the birth of our dear Redeemer is once more drawing nigh, a time we all look forward to with delight, though in many different ways by different classes, but to the Christian it is a day of all days. Go back to the city of Bethlehem, view the babe in the manger, and think what wonders there, the Savior born, our redemption made possible through the lamb which taketh away the sin of the world. Angels were heard praising God. Now what is due from man, for whom so much has been done? The very best thanks we can offer, are nothing to compare with the gift we have received. Christmas, then, should be held very sacred by the Christian.

The custom of giving gifts on this occasion, is a very common one, and not objectionable if done in the proper manner, but as it is very generally done, I do hold it not the proper way for the Christian to do it. I mean the custom of telling children the story of "Santa Claus," of his "coming down the chimney," and other like tales, all of which as soon as children are old enough, they will find are false, yes, all untrue. Just think of it, you who are parents, if you never have before now. If your children should acquire the habit of telling untruths and justify themselves by this act of yours. It is a more serious matter perhaps than many suppose. No harm at all in giving gifts, but do for the sake of truth tell who is the giver. How much good might be done by instructing children what is the origin of this great Holiday, and the sacredness of it, how humble that Christ who loves and blesses little children, was born, so much so that the poorest class of human beings are not below him, and need not fear to approach him. While at the same time he is King of kings and Lord of lords. That we may all improve our way of celebrating this great event, is the desire of a lover of truth.

DESIRE TO MEET IN HEAVEN.

BY MARY E. HENZ.

WE are taught by the Scriptures that it is appointed unto man once to die. This is a truth revealed in the Bible that we frequently bend going into oblivion. Knowing this to be a fact how necessary that we prepare for the solemn change, so that our spirits may ascend on high into the arms of him who will hold us hence.

How pleasing it is when our tears are dried away into another state of existence, as we can but entertain the thought that they are gone happy, and that we shall be able to meet them in the unsullied climes with the blest washed millions above. It floods us a consolation that bears us through the trying hour. There is no place on earth so desirable as a pleasant home, but what is our earthly home when compared to the heavenly one? Heaven is the Christian's home. Jesus has gone to prepare a mansion for all who love him. How sweet the words, "a home in heaven"! O what an animating thought that we may all once meet again. A little more self-denial here will add much to our happiness there. Be encouraged brother and sister a few more toilsome days and our race is run; we shall meet again.

REMISSION OF SIN.

BY DANIEL LONGANECKER.

SOME believe repentance, faith, prayer and the mourner's bench for the remission of sin. Others believe and hold repentance, faith, prayer and baptism for the remission of sin. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved. Acts 16: 31. The jailer believed and was baptized into Christ. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." Mark 16: 16.

HOW SIN AFFECTS US.

BY MATTIE A. LEAR.

IT is always better to be sinned against than sinning. We cannot prevent others wounding our feelings, and injuring, insulting and mistreating us, but these things cannot harm us, unless we give them an enjoyment in our hearts. It is not what others do to us, or how others treat us that really affects us, but our own conduct. Our happiness or misery must ever depend upon ourselves. God in his wisdom would never intrust the happiness or misery of an individual to another's keeping. Our happiness does not depend on our outward surroundings, but on the inward state of our hearts.

"AND LO I AM WITH YOU"

BY J. E. NEHEM.

WE often hear ministers console themselves and members with the above promise. But if we examine the pre-text, we find that it is given on certain conditions, which are as follows: That we go and teach all nations; and baptize them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, and that we teach them to observe all things whatsoever I (Jesus) have commanded you. When these conditions are complied with—not before—then we may expect this promise, "Lo I am with you, even unto the end of the world," to be verified.

DON'T LOAF.

YOUNG man, don't be a loafer; don't keep company with loafers; don't hang about loafing places. Better work for nothing than sit around all day with your hands in your pockets. It is better for your health, better for your reputation. Bustle about, if you wish to have anything to be let for. Many a lawyer has got a pining client by working for a poor and needy one, as also has many a doctor got a good practice by attending closely to a poorer one. Such is the way; to him that will shall be given. Quit loafing and cony cony; keep busy and mind your chances.—S. L.

He that waits for repentance waits for that which cannot be had as long as it is wanted for. It is absurd for a man to wait for that which he himself has to do.

That which is good to be done cannot be done too soon; and if it is neglected to be done early, it will too frequently happen that it will not be done at all.

WHY NOT FORGIVE HIM?

WHY not forgive your brother,
If he comes to you in sorrow?
Why not your anger smother
Ere the dawning of to-morrow?
You say he has reviled you
Your dearest friends among;
But has error ne'er beguiled you?
Have you ne'er committed wrong?
Why not forgive him?

He is penitent and humble,
He is weak and in your power—
Who is not apt to stumble
When passion rules the hour?
He wronged you in his blindness;
Now act the Christian's part,
And pour the balm of kindness
On his sad, repentant heart.
Why not forgive him?

Can you look for sweet contentment,
Or can love your bosom fill,
While you cherish fierce resentment
For the one who treats you ill?
No! spite of proud position,
Of place, or power, or pelf,
Unblest is your condition
Till you triumph o'er yourself.
Why not forgive him?

With his grief his heart is riven,
And can you with reason pray
That your sins may be forgiven
When from him you turn away?
Vainst not your pure condition,
Nor back forgiveness keep—
Think of heaven's admonition,
As you sow so shall you reap.
Why not forgive him?

A LOUD CALL.

“REVEREND and beloved Sir: It is with the utmost satisfaction that we welcome you by this installation service to be our pastor. Under your predecessor our pew rents fell off sadly, and we were compelled to offer him a few personal affronts in order to extract a resignation from him. A few months more his preaching would have put our church into the hands of a receiver, and the stockholders in the church felt obliged to protect their interests by getting him to withdraw. He was a man of good ability, and a pleasant speaker, but what ever calls he made, he made among the poor people, who sat in the free seats up in the gallery. He never called on our well-to-do families; they very naturally felt slighted, and while some of them reduced their contributions toward the payment of our debt, others with drew wholly, and we lost even the pew rents.

“In spite of several suggestions made by officers of the society, he insisted on preaching uniformly on religious subjects. The number of conversions during his ministry was considerable, but they were all among young people, who paid almost nothing into the treasury. Clerks, young professional men, and unmarried women count just as much on the list of communicants as do men of wealth and position in society, but they don't add much to the revenues of a church. He had a revival that was quite fruitful of conversions, but he didn't convert anybody who was rich, and his meetings every night and the monotony of his exhortations to repentance disgusted and drove away some families that we could ill lose.

“But, sir, we are persuaded better things of you, and things that minister to the salvation of our ecclesiastical society. We have heard of your brilliant Sunday evening sermons on the Berlin Congress, on the Potter Investigation, on Buddhism, on the Challenger Exposition, on the phonograph, and on the trial of Guickar of Baroda. We have learned, sir, of late the fact that the officers of your late church were enabled to raise the pew rents year after year. We, therefore, congratulate ourselves on having secured your services.

“You declined our proposal to give you a certain percentage of the receipts in lieu of a salary, on the ground that there was no way of settling differences of opinion that might arise between you and us as to the sum the receipts amounted to. We recognize the force of your objection, and you recognized the hand of Providence in our offer of $7,000 a year, and accepted our call. We desire, therefore, at this time to give you some information, regarding our financial condition, and offer some suggestions regarding your policy.

“Our bonded debt amounts to $75,000, the annual interest on which is $6,000. Your salary is $7,000, our choir costs us $3,000, and our miscellaneous expenses are $2,000, making an aggregate expense of $18,000 a year. Our church as you see, is very large and elegant, and in the center of a fine part of the city. If all of our pews were rented, even at moderate rates, we should have an income of fully $18,000. If we didn't receive quite as much, it would make no great difference, as we could make up a small deficit out of the collections for missions and the dissemination of the Scriptures.

“You will readily see that our interest can't be reduced except by reducing the principal. Our miscellaneous expenses are as low as they can be, and it is out of the question to reduce our expenses for music, because our choir would leave us and go to a church only five blocks away, to which they have a standing invitation, if their salaries were reduced, and many of the most liberal members of our society attend here exclusively on account of our superior music, and these persons being leaders of society, their attendance secures us the attendance of others.

“You observe, therefore, that there is but one item of our expenses that can be reduced. If the pew rentals fall below $18,000 a year, the loss must fall on that item. You see the importance of keeping the pew rents up to the figure I have named.

“If a lively competition for the pews in our church could be aroused, we could raise the prices so that the total would reach $20,000 or even $25,000. Your success in this direction would be regarded by the trustees as good ground for an increase of your income. If you should succeed in getting some wealthy gentlemen, whose families attend our church, to materially reduce our debt, we should have less interest to pay, and should favorably entertain a proposition to increase your income.

“You will find it necessary to preach two sermons a week, all equal, in a literary point of view, to the articles in our best magazines and reviews. Our people are highly educated, and they don't want any sermons that are not equal to the best lectures or magazine articles. You will have to visit a good deal among the most worthy and liberal of our people. They won't stay with us unless they get a good deal of attention from the minister. Your morning sermons may contain a good deal of general religion, aspirations after immortality and the civilizing influence of Christianity, and all that sort of thing, but it won't do here to preach a great deal about repentance, or sin, or other unpleasant things. Some of our people like that kind of preaching, and you must give them some of it, but a good many people won't stay and hear it all the time, and our pew rental must be kept up to $18,000 at the least. Your evening sermons should be on characters in history and fiction, the last thing out in science, literary criticisms, politics, ethnology, and reminiscences of travel. These things are interesting to young men, and we all mourn the fact that our churches do not get hold of the young men as they ought to.

“Such, sir, is our financial condition, and such seem to us the only methods by which our church can be managed successfully, at least until the debt is paid.”—Exchange.

WHAT HINDERETH THE GROUND?

BY E. P. LEHR.

I AM a farmer, and have followed farming fifty-eight years, and always took delight in the business; but the last few years could not follow the plow any more, yet could not be idle. So I would go in the Spring of the year through the wheat fields and pull up the cockle and other noxious weeds that hinder the growth of the grain. Then, also go through the corn field and pull up the weeds that escaped the plow and cultivator. You know there are some that stand so close to the corn stalk that the plow cannot reach them and they are generally very thrifty, because of the cultivation they get that was designed for the benefit of the corn. Some of these weeds can be pulled up with one hand, but others require both hands, especially if they have stood long. But I show them no mercy, out they must come, why should they be left to draw nutrition from the earth, and receive the dew, rain and sunshine from above, and give no return to the husbandman?

I am, also, a preacher. Not by my own choice; but by the choice of those who had a right to choose. I did not like it much at first, for it hindered me from attending to my home concerns, besides keeping me from reading the news of the day, and participating with the public affairs of the world. I could not serve two masters and work under two yokes at once. For I must of necessity study myself to be approved unto God, a workman that needed not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth. But oh! what a field to work in. Forty years of my time, aside from my temporal toil I labored in that field. It is not for me to tell with what success, eternity alone can reveal, yet I may not transcend the bounds of modesty by saying, I have not labored in vain. If Paul has planted and Apollos has watered, God gave the increase. To him belongs the praise. When my strength failed I left the plow in the hands of others. Also, when I found my strength failing to guide the Gospel plow, I left the guidance of it to alder hands and betook myself to reconnoiter or in other words, to do what my hands might find to do, for I cannot stand idle.

In looking over the Gospel field, my heart is ravished, and my spirit is elated to see a mighty host of the redeemed of the seed of that woman, John speaks of in Rev. 12: 17, equipping and making ready to go forth in battle, to fight him that is cast out of heaven, and to set up the banner of Prince Emmanuel. But ah! how it chills my heart to see here and there of those rank weeds, that stand where they ought not, absorbing all the moisture and dew from heaven and hinder those which might be fruitful plants from thriving, by throwing their dark shade over them, that the Sun of Righteousness cannot ripen the fruit. I mean those of whom Paul speaks to Timothy, 6: 5. Well would it be for all of them to read that whole chapter every day till it would renovate their whole being and make Christ to them all in all. But alas! why do I talk to them, they will not read this? They all have the papers that tell them of the market, money matters, politics, murders, frauds, swindles &c. But the BRETHREN AT WORK is too high in price, they cannot afford to waste money to learn what the church is doing and wishes to do. There are even mullen stalks in some part of the field that have absorbed all the nutrition of plants around them, and everything seems withered, the soil is dry and hard, themselves have taken such deep root that it requires strength combined sometimes to pull them up.

In reading over what I have written so far, I found to have made a great blunder, done wrong, in comparing some of my dear brethren to weeds. I should have considered them as true plants, when they come into the Gospel-field, but for want of proper cultivation perhaps those weeds I spoke of got the advantage and the true germ or plant became dwarfed and weeds grew over the genuine plant, so that little corn did appear.

Now my object from the beginning was, not to root up the spear of corn, but to destroy that which hinders its growth. I beg your pardon, dear brethren, I mean you, that stand aloof from the great work that is to be done yet, ere the great and notable day of the Lord shall come. Don't you see that the devil suffers himself with all his host, and hell itself to be annihilated so that there may be no need of a Savior. The great and the wise men of this world exert themselves to the utmost to gain their object. Will not you my brethren, do something to stem the flood? Will you still cling to your gold and your silver until it becomes cankered, and the rust thereof be a witness against you? Nay, my brethren, you will act a nobler part; you know you are not your own; you have been bought with a great price; and all that you are and have belong to the Lord. You are called upon to secure the salvation of your offspring—your children. Bring them together and as many of your neighbor's children as possible every Lord's day, make them acquainted with the Word and will of God, to fortify them against the delusions of the wicked one and the world. Open your purse-string, send out papers and pamphlets where your preachers cannot go, where the number is too small and the field is too large. Spare not your dollars and your means with which God has blessed you to assist in every way possible that the Gospel might be preached in its purity. Fear not that giving will impoverish you. Remember the rich man and Lazarus; remember the rich young man; and remember the unjust steward. Remember Calvary.

“SNAKES IN THE GRASS.”

To Elder D. B. Gibson, an Evangelist of Jesus Christ:—

My very dear Brother:—

CONTINUED silence in the physical universe, is death, and forms an appropriate figure of an extended want of communication in the sphere of friendship and love. We are creatures of sympathy and confidential communication, but both are too highly developed in the physio-mental organization of many of our created brethren. Many men have lost positions of pre-eminence, religiously, politically and financially by a too free admission of object and aims. Confidence misplaced usually resulted in a sustained loss, but no confidence is worse than many sorrows. We should never expect others to keep that which we cannot keep ourselves. Our secrets lose their name the moment we impart them to others. Our object and efforts in life should tend to high, moral and religious attainments. Our ends to accomplish should be noble acts, righteous deeds, and conversation pure and good. This is the object of our being manifested in the design and revelation of the Elohim of ages past, and the eternity to come. Life consists in more than days and years; its deeds should be pure, elevated and noble. Our daily lesson to learn, should be, the most consistent manner of living, that will enable us to act a part in life, useful to ourselves, advantageous and beneficial to others. This will reflect back the image of God in our being, and the rich, noble, and unselfish devotion to the cause of our holy religion. As the Sun is the Divinity of matter and governs material change, so is the essence of supreme holiness the nuclea of magnificent change of mind. Experience has her lessons to teach, life her great lessons to learn. Experience is a severe school, but her lessons are the most impressive and lasting. Selfishness is the winged arrow of poison to moral growth; jealousy and prejudice the well primed howitzer of hell to the overthrow of religious progression and holy ambition.

Great results, flow from earnest, unselfish efforts. Selfishness may attain to preponderance for a time, but its final end will be with the chaff in the fire of the cleaver. Men who will make religion subservient to financial gain, are seducers in the temple of God. Ananias and Sapphiras in the sanctuary of holiness.

Old orderism in its true sense signifies death to the works of the devil, and combustion of sin. In its modern signification, it is varied and obscure, sometimes having stronger reference to the coating of the sepulchre than the decay of the dead bones within it. Old order is right so far as its lineaments are Gospel and is sanctioned by the authority of Jesus Christ. The trouble is, we have too little of the old order among us. We must except things as we find them, but purify them as they pass through our hands.

Appearances should not deceive us. Self-praise is scandalous, but eulogies of our powers and virtues spoken by others are ravishing and precious.

"Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall," is of divine origin, and undermines the human idea of safety and steadfastness in the strength of our own arm and intelligence.

Preaching is the holiest calling among men, but carries with it a terrible end for the man who will preach only a part of the Gospel. The holy work of ages past has been to proclaim the Gospel, and its effects are seen in the glorious conversion of atheists, infidels and skeptics. Darkness and superstition have retreated before the powerful march of sanctified truth. Witchcraft, ghosts and hobgoblins are things of the past, and live only on the pages of shadowy records. Christianity, as it has followed in the footsteps of Gospel-preachers, has enabled, educated and elevated the human race. I love good preaching and good preachers. There is no excuse for poor preaching, when men have such a theme as Christianity. I am thankful for all the good preaching that was ever done; I thank Paul for his noble, unselfish zeal in pushing forward to my days the glad news of the Son of God; I thank him for all the good things he has left written for me. I thank Peter and James and John for their powerful testimony in favor of Christ; and the burning words of love they have recorded for us. I thank Judas Iscariot for his three years of devotion to Christ, but despise his breach of trust. I thank Ananias and Sapphira for accepting Christ, but despise their lying to the Holy Ghost. I love Simon Magus for accepting the truth, but despise him for his offer of gold. I thank Luther, Wesley, Calvin, Melancthon, for the reformation and reviving of orthodoxy, but regret that they did not proclaim and practice what they avowed, they knew the ancient church did. I love old father Mack for reviving Christianity in all its purity; I thank the old preachers among us for their noble work in the past. I thank the minister who was the means of my mother's conversion, and oh, how I thank her for all the sermons she ever preached to me, and the sweet prayers she offered. I thank the minister who brought me to Christ, and all the preachers that have stood by the cross where I have labored in the past. I thank the pen of C. H. B., and all of the declaimers of our holy profession.

I am now in the field again, and as the battle rages I pray that many may fall. Three years ago I stood almost alone in evangelistic work, to-day a score or more of strong men are engaged in the contest, and the dead falling thickly around. May the victory be ours now and forever.

I wrote this for the want of something wiser and better to say. Accept it as it is given; I am glad of your increase in winning souls to Christ.

Yours respectfully,

S. H. BASHOR.

INCONSISTENCY AGAINST CONSISTENCY.

BY DANIEL BRIGHT.

WELL has it been remarked that "The evil of the church to-day is inconsistency." Inconsistency exists where profession of a truth is made with the mouth, but denied in practice. To profess to be a child of "light" and not reprove darkness in both word and deed, not shew forth the virtues of him that has called us from "darkness into his marvelous light," is inconsistency. To profess to be born of God, having the "love of God shed abroad in our hearts;" and manifest hatred and envy towards our brethren or fellow-beings, is inconsistency. To confess faith in Almighty God; in that his eye is all-seeing, his ear all-hearing; in that his fatherly care is extended toward every one of his creatures, so much so that not even a "sparrow can fall to the ground without his notice," and much less can anything threaten to happen unto his re-adopted child without seeing it; and to profess to be the re-adopted child of that Omnipotent Being; the object of his tender mercies and his fatherly care, as much so, or in such a degree, as the "apple of our eye" is an object of our greatest care; and after confessing and professing all this, not being willing in our daily walk and conversation to confide and trust in him (after we have done our duty), but trust in man, make flesh our arm, with the heart depart from the Lord, Jer. 17: 5; this is inconsistency; and it is, and always was the greatest evil in the church, and extremely hurtful to her progress.

To confess the truth is consistent, for truth must be first confessed; and not to walk according to the profession made, not to walk in the truth, though it is inconsistency, yet not in the truth, for truth has no inconsistency, but with the confession made, it is inconsistency, and it works upon the influence thrown out by the confession of truth, like as fire operates upon chaff.

It is true when we say, that consistency "is a jewel," but is equally true when we say that inconsistency is a vial of agua regia (a solution which dissolves gold). For take your bright jewel of gold, consistency, and put a drop of the acrid "royal water" on it and it will receive a dark spot, and immerse it in that solution and it will destroy it, will dissolve it. Hence, inconsistency in our daily walk and conversation will destroy all the influence that the confession of the truth and short abidance therein has thrown around us.

Consistency, or confessing the truth and beginning to walk therein, is like unto Pharaoh's seven rank and good ears of corn upon one stalk; or like unto the seven well-favored and fat-fleshed kine feeding in the rich meadows. But inconsistency in our practice, our daily walk and conversation, is like unto the seven ill-favored and lean-fleshed kine, which ate up the seven fat-fleshed; or like unto the seven thin ears, blasted with the East wind, which devoured the seven rank and full ears. Gen. 41. Thus it is with the professor of religion. To confess Jesus before men has a powerful influence for good, but to deny him, wholly or in part, in our practical life, this inconsistency will destroy all our influence for good, however strong the power thereof may have been. When the preacher professes to be a Christian, and holds forth the Word of Truth with power, he wields a most wonderful influence over men. But when in his private life he does not manifest the principles of the kingdom of heaven,—love, peace, meekness, humility, long-suffering etc.; and in his office as a "worker together with God," does not, "in all things" approve himself as "the minister of God," but loves those who speak well of him, shunning and despising others who kindly tell him of his faults, such deportment is inconsistency, and destroys the influence for good he wielded before.

Love is the center, the focus of the vivifying rays of the Sun of Righteousness. It is the atmosphere of the "new earth." It is the "bond of perfectness and the fulfillment of the law." It is the concentration of all the commands of God into one. The possession of love is the convincing evidence in the Christians that they are the disciples of Christ. "By this all men shall know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another." John 13: 35. Every person possesses love. Even publicans and sinners love those who love them, and call everything right that they do. But to love our enemies or those who do not speak so well of us and do not honor us as much as we would like them to, requires one born of God. But if we profess to be born of God and yet harbor malice and ill-feeling towards our fellow mortals, in our hearts, we are inconsistent and a stumbling block to seekers of the Truth. "If the light that is in you be darkness, how great is that darkness?"

Every true disciple of Christ has promised to be a witness of the Truth till the end. O let us all pay unto the Lord this our vow, and we shall be the happy possessors of this precious jewel—consistency—and truth will bear us out on the judgment day.

WHAT STRONG DRINK DOES.

IT costs $1,000,000,000 annually in money.

It makes 50 per cent of our insane.

It makes 65 per cent of our paupers.

It is the direct cause of 75 per cent of the murders committed.

It makes 80 per cent of our criminals.

It sends forth 95 per cent of our vicious youth.

It sends one every six minutes to a drunkard's grave, or, $7,600 every year.

In our own happy or unhappy America, in this enlightened 19th century, facts and figures show that 60,000 lives are annually destroyed by means of intoxicating drink, 4,000 commit suicide, and 200,000 orphans are made.

The crimes resulting from intoxicating drink cost the country annually $40,000,000 and send to prison 100,000 persons.

New York City spends annually $70,000,000 for strong drink and only $3,000,000 for public education. In the State of New York there are 21,242 licensed dram-shops, and perhaps one-fourth that number more not licensed, and only 7,000 churches.

In the State of Pennsylvania $83,487,000 is annually spent for strong drink, and only $6,000,000 for public education.

In the United States over 400,000 more men are engaged in the liquor business than in preaching the Gospel and teaching the youth.—The Shaker.

A SHIP IN A CALIFORNIA DESERT.

MORSE'S MILLION.

BY many it has been held as a theory that the Yuma desert was once an ocean bed. At intervals, pools of salt water has stood for a while in the midst of the surrounding waste of sand, disappearing only to rise again in the same or other localities. A short time since one of the saline lakes disappeared, and a party of Indians reported the discovery of a big ship, left by the receding waves. A party of Americans at once proceeded to the spot, and found imbedded in the sands the wreck of a large vessel. Nearly one-third of the forward parts of the ship or bark is plainly visible. The stump of the bowsprit remains, and portions of the timbers of teak are perfect. The wreck is located forty miles north of San Bernardino and Fort Yuma road and thirty miles west of Los Palmos, a well-known watering place on the desert. The road across the desert has been traveled for more than one hundred years. The history of the ill-fated vessel can, of course, never be known, but the discovery of its decaying timbers in the midst of what has been a desert will furnish important aid in the calculations of science.

Peace does not dwell in outside things, but within the soul. We may preserve it in the midst of the bitterest pain, if you will remain firm and submissive. Peace in this life springs from acquiescence even in disagreeable things, not in an exemption from suffering.

LANARK, ILL., DECEMBER 12, 1878

ONE was baptized in the Lanark church the first day of December.

A MAN who has a beam in his own eye is not competent to pick a mote out of his brother's eye.

WE cannot fill orders for "Chrystal's History of the Modes of Baptism." The work is out of print.

THE address of elder John Barnhart is now changed from Mahomet, Ill., to Mansfield, Platt county, Ill.

BROTHER S. Z. Sharp, who is now at his old home in Maryville, Tenn., expects soon to return to Ashland, Ohio.

AT the late District Meeting, Bro. Enoch Ely was added to the committee having charge of the Danish Mission.

IT is just as easy to find pleasure in work as play, if people would only think so. Men who love to work, enjoy it, and feel happy over it.

DO not conclude that much reading will make you intelligent. It is not what a man reads, but what he remembers that makes him intelligent.

HEREAFTER Bro. Bashor's books will be sold at the following rates: Any one sending six names and $3.00 will receive a book free.

WHEN sending in money to pay for your past subscription, always say by whom your name was sent. It will save much perplexity in business.

THE address of elder John Wise is changed from Waterloo, Iowa, to Mulberry Grove, Bond Co., Ill., where he is now located in his new field of labor.

THE first number of our weekly supplement is folded in with the paper this week. It enables us to give our subscribers that much more reading matter.

MOST people send their children to school too early. Where it can be done, it would be best to teach them at home a few years before sending them to school.

BRETHREN and sisters should not neglect family worship. If you can do no more, read the Scriptures to your family once each day, or sing a suitable hymn.

IF people would eat less before going to meeting, have the house better ventilated, and get more energy in the preacher, there would be less sleeping in churches.

THE church at Huntingdon, Pa., has been greatly refreshed. During a late series of meetings held by their home ministers, four were added to the church by baptism.

IN answer to inquiries we will state, that the price of Pertullin's complete works, in four volumes, is $12.00. The work is becoming quite scarce, and but few are to be had.

THE Brethren at Hudson, Ill., have appointed a series of meetings to commence on Christmas, and much desire some of the ministering brethren to come and help them.

WHEN sending in money for the Danish Mission, always send it to C. P. Rowland, Lanark, Ill., and not to us. It makes less trouble, and renders misunderstandings less liable.

A EVIL from Bro. Daniel Brower informs us that he is holding meeting in Idaho Territory. Thus the truth is spreading, and we hope the day is not far distant when the Brethren will have churches in every State and Territory in the United States and Canada.

IF you do not receive what you order from us within three weeks after ordering, do not fail to notify us of it. Please do not wait two or three months.

THE twenty-six dollars raised at our D. M., for a poor, crippled sister in the Central Mission field has been forwarded to her. It is good to remember the poor.

SPECIAL attention is called to the "Business Department" on last page this week. Read the instructions carefully, and when sending in money be sure and say just what it is for.

OUR office was favored with many warm-hearted visitors last week. It was a source of great pleasure to us to receive a visit from so many of our readers, and be cheered by their good wishes.

BROTHER F. P. Lehr, of Michigan, has been with us over one week, and preached several times for the Brethren. Though quite old, he has not lost his zeal for the cause, and is a friend to missionary work.

THERE are only a few more numbers of the BRETHREN AT WORK for this year. This makes No. 50, and the year will soon be at an end. Hope all will renew at once so that their names will be in before the next volume commences.

BROTHER L. Hilbery has concluded not to do anything in the colony business at present, but will likely turn his attention entirely to preaching. This explanation is made for the benefit of those having made inquiries in regard to the colony project.

SATAN is an enemy to the spreading of the Gospel, for it being "the power of God unto salvation" tends to destroy his influence over the minds of the people, and for that reason he does not want the Gospel preached to every creature.

FROM the Waynesboro Village Record we learn that an oral discussion, between Bro. S. H. Bashor and M. P. Bergstresser, a Lutheran minister, will likely take place some time during the Winter. The discussion is to be held at Waynesboro, Pa.

A WELL-informed minister was one time asked to return thanks at a wedding dinner, composed of sweet cakes and indigestible food generally, and refused, saying, he saw nothing on the table to thank the Lord for. Those who prepare wedding dinners should give this subject some thought.

A BROTHER writes: "We think the BRETHREN AT WORK quite a help to young members to become acquainted with the faith and practice of the Brethren." The coming volume will be found quite valuable in that respect. We shall give special attention to the distinctive features of the Christian religion.

BROTHER John D. Switzer, of White Rock, Kan., wishes us to say, "There is a splendid opening at Jewell City for some brother or some other man who is a good miller and has some money to invest in a mill. They have a water-power there and a splendid wheat country, and no mill nearer than fifteen miles."

NUMBER 48 of the Primitive Christian contains an able "Appeal to the Brotherhood," from the pen of Bro. Quinter. The article is well worth preserving, and no doubt its publication is timely. He calls on every lover of the truth to "mark them which cause divisions contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned."

THE District Meeting here last Tuesday morning was opened by old Bro. Lehr, who, after having the opening hymn read, "Brethren, this is a memorable day to me. Fifty-eight years ago to-day I placed feet on the American shore, on the wharf at Philadelphia. I came from the land of slavery to the land of liberty."

IT is sad that Central and South America are in a threatening condition. "In Panama the most fertile and populous portions of the republic have suffered fearfully from grasshopper, and all the crops have been completely ruined. A severe earthquake has destroyed a large portion of the city of Menidaze, the capital of Antioquia. No lives were lost. Revolutions and political and financial troubles are reported in Peru, Izalco and Santa Nuna, are in a state of tremendous activity. The inhabitants of neighboring villages are terribly alarmed."

ABOUT the last thing done by the late District Meeting held at Lanark, was the placing of all the business connected with the home mission work into the hands of deacons. There is not a minister on the board. We hope the day is not far distant when our people will see the importance of giving more business into the hands of deacons, and let the ministers apply themselves "to the ministry of the word."

LET every brother and sister, who is able to do so, send and get one of Bro. R. H. Miller's books. It will serve as an excellent Christmas present if given to some one who may appreciate it, and then Bro. Miller, who is in limited circumstances, needs the money, the publishing of the book having cost him a good deal. Address him at Ladoga, Ind.

SOME 40 years ago the Presbyterians began their missionary work in Siam, and after 20 years of patient toiling and waiting, they received the first convert, and now the church in that country numbers 50 members. This shows how patiently missionaries labor to build up a church, yet there are those—not very familiar with missionary work—who conclude that unless a few hundred are converted each year the mission is a failure.

MR. Moody is laboring at Baltimore. Chief among the evils in the churches, he said in a sermon, are church choirs—ungodly men and women who happen to have good voices, and often drunken organists. Mr. Moody denounced the methods employed in raising money by church fairs. Lotteries, voting and raffles were discouraged. The young men now, instead of going to a low gambling den, could go to God's church and gamble. Actually, at one church fair, the sum of 25 cents was charged for the privilege of kissing the handsomest young woman in the church—presumably to help the work of God.

THE following from Bro. J. W. Stein will explain itself fully:

Dear Brethren:—
I see you make a mistake in No. 48 of BRETHREN AT WORK, about my speech not appearing last week. Though Dr. Ray's speech reached me a day late, mine left here in time promptly. Hence I am in no way responsible for the delay.
Affectionately,
J. W. STEIN."

THESE PERILOUS TIMES.

THE time has come for greater activities upon the part of both the ministry and the laity. We do not predict that the church is going to ruin, or that infidelity is going to predominate, but do raise a warning voice against coming evils already at the door.

IT is perilous times for children and young people generally. We allude to the large circulation of obscene literature and pictures that is disgracing our land, and corrupting the minds of children. Men of corrupt and depraved minds make it their business to keep such matter afloat. They are doing their utmost to get their corrupt teachings before the children and young people of the land, in order to ensnare and defile them.

THERE are millions of copies of low-toned, coarse-grained literature in constant circulation, narrating stories of terrible adventures, frolics and murders by the wholesale, written in a flashy style, well calculated to fire the imaginations of boys and girls, with an unholy flame for committing similar deeds, and undertaking like daring exploits. Add to these a few million copies of the dime novels, and we have running through our land a stream of corrupt literature that, if continued, may ruin the morals of most of the youth of our times.

PARENTS will find it to their good to keep a careful watch over the reading matter that comes into their families, for their children will partake largely of the nature of that which they read about. A French proverb says, "Tell me what a man reads, and I will tell you what kind of a man he is." You need not try to keep your children from reading, for that is useless, but furnish them with that which is good and will not corrupt their minds, and they will grow up strong and useful.

ALL kinds of inducements are being held out for young men and women, to entice them into sin and ruin. Satan has his secret snares at every available spot, and he who does not tread with cautious steps, may be deceived. He has his agents at work, arrayed in the garb of the angels of light. They are skilled in all the accomplishments of deception. Their winning ways are hard to resist, while their cunningly devised plans are difficult to detect. If ever there was a time when people needed to be as wise as serpents and harmless as doves, it is now. "Watch and pray, lest ye enter into temptation." J. H. M.

THE DISTRICT MEETING.

AS early as Monday evening, Dec. 2nd, brethren and sisters began to arrive from various parts of Northern Illinois, and by seven o'clock our meeting-house was well filled with members, many of whom were ministers and delegates. Elder David Rittenhouse, the pioneer preacher in this part of the State, preached to us.

THE next morning at an early hour, the house began filling, and by nine o'clock everything was ready for opening the meeting, which was done by singing, prayer and the reading of the Scriptures. Every congregation in Northern Illinois, excepting one, was represented by delegates. After some discussion regarding the legality of the meeting, a rising vote was called for, and resulted unanimously in favor of the meeting proceeding to business.

THE following officers were chosen by ballot: Enoch Ely, Moderator; D. E. Price, Reading Clerk; J. J. Emmert and M. M. Eshelman, Writing Clerks. The entire forenoon was spent in reporting and looking into the financial condition of the district. Since last Spring about six hundred dollars have been raised for the various missions, leaving three hundred dollars to be raised till the next District Meeting. All expressed a willingness to make up their quota as stated by the District Meeting last Spring. A number of speeches were made regarding the best methods of carrying on missionary work in Central Illinois, and in a few instances considerable zeal was manifested. It was finally agreed to appoint two committees to draft plans to be presented to the meeting the next day. Meeting adjourned at two o'clock to meet next morning at nine.

AT seven o'clock in the evening the house was well filled to listen to old Bro. F. P. Lehr and Bro. Daniel Bierdorf.

MEETING was opened the next morning at nine o'clock, when the two committees presented their plans.

FIRST PLAN.

"We recommend that a committee of five brethren be appointed by this meeting for the purpose of consulting and selecting a brother, with the necessary qualifications as a resident minister, for one year or more, in the Central Mission Field, and committee to assist in locating said brother in such a way as to partially, if not wholly support himself and family. Should said committee fail to obtain such a brother, then they shall select six brethren from Northern District of Illinois for the purpose of visiting and seeing how they do, as often as once a month if, in their discretion it may be thought necessary. The committee of five to report to next District Meeting. Also to confer with the Evangelists of the Southern District of Illinois with reference to co-operative effort on Central Mission Field. Also, that the members in Bureau Co., be placed under the care of the Rock River church."

SECOND PLAN.

"We suggest that no change be made before next District Meeting, and that if any of the four already selected cannot fill his place on the field, he should get some other brother to fill it for him.

Those who go, should not scold their meetings, but if possible, make thorough work of it, staying as long as possible, thus curtailing expenses.

We further suggest, that a committee of five deacons be appointed, whose duty it shall be,

To make an effort to get some well-established minister to move into the Central Mission Field for at least one year, or more, if possible.

This minister to be so circumstanced that he can devote one-half of his time to the ministry in the Summer season, and all of his time in the Winter.

He shall do what he can toward supporting himself, and what he may lack, the Northern District will supply.

But if this committee cannot succeed in locating a minister, then they shall make an effort to get some brother to take charge of the field during the Summer season—doing his traveling by private conveyance, having a horse and buggy that are to be the missionary property of the District, and to be used in doing missionary work, whenever and wherever it may be practicable to do so.

This minister to enter the field immediately after the District Meeting, and remain till the middle of November. He is privileged to return home occasionally during the Summer as prudence may dictate.

For the Winter's work, the committee to select four ministers, who in turn, are each to spend one month in the Central field, commencing the middle of November and ending the middle of March."

The first plan was adopted without much discussion, and five deacons, named by the first committee, were instructed to carry out the plan adopted. The next move was to place the Wisconsin Mission under care of the same committee of deacons.

No change was made regarding the Danish Mission. There was a warm feeling for the success of the Mission, with but few opposers. The meeting instructed the Moderator and Clerks to prepare an address to the general brotherhood.

How to raise the money to carry on our mission work, called up considerable discussion. The meeting decided to make no change. The plan adopted by last District Meeting was, that each congregation should raise, on an average, $95.00 to the congregation. Those that are wealthy should give more, and others less. The meeting closed at two o'clock. Had public services at seven in the evening. Brother Joseph Lehman preached, followed by brother Allen Boyer.

COMMITTEE WORK.

AS committee work among our people, in the method of church government, has become a feature of no small importance, I conclude to offer a few remarks regarding the class of men from whom committees should be selected.

The settling of church difficulties, requiring the services of committees, is perhaps the most perplexing business belonging to church government, and therefore requires special attention. It is a work about which the church cannot well be too careful. There is too much at stake to act hastily. Come, let us look at the subject carefully.

Prudence would dictate to every intelligent Christian, that it is best to so conduct business as to obviate the necessity of a committee. In this, as well as other matters, an ounce of preventative is worth a pound of cure. The grand secret of keeping the peace is the preventing of difficulties. If people would work as hard to prevent difficulties as they do to settle them, we would have far less trouble in the church.

Under the existing circumstances, we need not expect to get entirely rid of committee work, for there will occasionally arise difficulties requiring the attention of committees, and in some parts of the brotherhood we fear harm has been done by the present method, hence suggest a few improvements.

The suggestions I now offer, have not been hastily formed; they are the result of considerable thought and observation, and have been explained numbers of times to brethren who have had much experience in committee work.

When it comes to settling difficulties, there is too much of a disposition to refer it to the preachers. If the difficulty is arbitrated, it is too frequently turned over to the preachers, and if two members chance to fall out, it is generally expected that the preacher must have some hand settling it. There cannot be a committee to settle church difficulties, but that it must be composed of elders, who are compelled to neglect the preaching of the Word in order to see after matters that might be adjusted by others. Besides this, some elders have been on committees so much that they have well nigh lost their influence. However honest they may be, or however good their decision, somebody will censure them.

Supposing a church gets into a difficulty, and the members are about equally divided on the question. They call for a committee. On that committee is a minister of great ability as a preacher, and the congregation has much confidence in him; his preaching has a salutary effect. The committee hears both sides and makes a decision in favor of one side and against the other. I do not care how good the decision is, that minister can never have the influence in that congregation he had before, for a part of the members will not feel just right toward him—they lose confidence in him. But, says one, this is not right—members ought not to have such feelings. That is true, but how can you help it? How can you keep members from disliking preachers when they are in this kind of business? There is no way in the world of doing it, unless ministers are left to give their attention "to the ministry of the word," (Acts 6: 4), while others be appointed to attend to settling church difficulties.

Elders are human, and are just as liable to make mistakes as anybody else, and when they do make mistakes, in trying to settle church difficulties, the cause has to suffer by it. They are censured by those who ought to stand under their arms—lose much of their influence, and often go away from the church, where they have been laboring, down-hearted and discouraged. No wonder some of them dread committee work.

Besides, they are caused to lose a great deal of time that might otherwise be employed in preaching. Elders and ministers have a hard time of it at best. They get nothing for preaching, must lose the time at their own expense, neglect their business at home, and in too many instances neglect their own congregations. Their families often suffer, and worst of all, the cause has to suffer. I know elders who have so much committee work to attend to, that they have to greatly neglect the missionary work they were appointed to do. This has been experienced to a considerable extent in Northern Ill. Our missionary field had to be neglected for months, just because one of our missionaries had to spend much of his time serving on committees, settling difficulties that might have been settled by deacons just as well. If committee work is an honor, let us divide it, but if a burden, let others help to bear it.

The wisest piece of church business I ever heard of elders doing, was done by the apostles at Jerusalem. When "there arose a murmuring of the Grecians against the Hebrews, because their widows were neglected in the daily ministrations," (Acts 6: 1) the apostles did not appoint a committee from among themselves to attend to the matter, but told the church to select seven men whom they (the apostles) would set over that business, thus leaving them to devote their time to looking after the spiritual wants of the church, while others could see after the temporal affairs. In this case no doctrine was involved, it was a murmuring over temporal matters. The complaint came from the "Grecians" who had it in against the "Hebrews," because a certain class of widows were not supplied with food. The setting of others over that business left the apostles free to devote all their time to the "ministry of the word."

Why not the church be that wise in disposing of committee work now? As it is, elders and many of the ministers, have enough to do. All their spare time and attention should be devoted "to the ministry of the word"—to attending to the spiritual wants of the church. Most difficulties that committees are called to settle, could be properly adjusted by deacons or ministers who are not so burdened with preaching, thereby economizing labor. The church is blessed with a number of well-established deacons who could do good services on committees, and I believe it would add much to the advancing of the cause, if the greater part of this work were turned over to them. It would have this advantage:

1. It would enable many elders and ministers to devote more time to spreading the Gospel and building up churches. This alone would be a great advantage.
2. As elders and ministers have to lose the time employed in preaching and doing committee work, at their own expenses, it would be wisdom to divide the burden, and turn the greater part of the committee work over to the deacons, thus relieving the ministers of a great burden.
3. In too many instances ministers have lost some influence by serving on committees, thus diminishing their usefulness as preachers, and proportionally injuring the cause. Relieving them of committee work will enable them to exercise more influence over the church in preaching the Word, and thereby do a greater amount of good.
4. Should any part of the church become displeased with the deacons, because of an unsatisfactory decision, it would in no way affect the preaching of the Word

5. By placing committee work in the hands of the deacons they will become better acquainted with church government, and take more interest in the affairs of the church generally.

6. As a general thing there is more wealth among the deacons than among the ministers, and by dividing the burden, some of it will fall on those who are better able to bear it.

7. My impression is, that deacons are less liable than ministers to become biased by the thought of losing influence.

8. An elder who has served on committees for years, tells me that about nine-tenths of the cases that come before committees, involve temporal matters, or grow out of troubles that in no way affect doctrinal questions. Now, we all know that our deacons, as a body, are better financiers than the ministers, and when it comes to adjusting difficulties involving financial matters, their judgment cannot be excelled by any in the church.

Where there is a difficulty, involving doctrine, to be settled, then the committee should be composed of well-informed elders. When that doctrinal difficulty, involving circumcision, broke out at Antioch, the case was referred to the apostles and elders at Jerusalem. Acts 15: 1, 2. "And certain men which came down from Judea, taught the brethren, and said, Except ye be circumcised after the manner of Moses, ye cannot be saved. When therefore Paul and Barnabas had no small dissension and disputation with them, they determined that Paul and Barnabas, and certain other of them, should go up to Jerusalem unto the apostles and elders about this question." It was a doctrinal question, hence referred to the apostles and elders, who, in framing their decision, consulted the church.

The duties of ministers, regarding difficulties that grow out of temporal matters, may be learned from Luke 12: 13, 14. "And one of the company said unto him, Master, speak to my brother, that he divide the inheritance with me." Then Jesus "said unto him, Man, who made me a judge or a divider over you?"

Elders and ministers who keep off of committees and give themselves "to the ministry of the word," and the care of the churches, will not only save themselves from a great deal of trouble and perplexity, but will be enabled to accomplish vastly more good in spreading the truth.

CHILDREN'S MEETING.

ON the evening of the 4th it was announced that on the morrow evening our aged brother F. P. Lehr would talk to children, hence all the little boys and girls were invited to come and hear him. When the time came, many were found there in the front seats, while the remaining part of the house was filled with those who are older. The contrast was truly marked, for there were people from six years of age to seventy-five, all eager to be fed by the Word of Truth.

Brother Lehr is 75 years old, but retains his mental powers and physical activity remarkably well. On questioning him, he said that he had given up the care of the church to younger heads, as he had passed the age of labor in that direction. We could not help admiring that wisdom, for it is indeed rare. Few men are that wise at seventy-five. But for the meeting. All the children, big and little, were eager to hear the dear old brother. He spoke to them of the angels, of the first bar, Cain, of Jesus' concern for them, of the necessity of studying the Bible, and how the early or primitive Christians assembled and taught their children. Both old and young could find plenty of crumbs of comfort, and go away feeling that they were none the worse for coming together. Such meetings should be held frequently, for the children need just such instruction. Fathers and mothers are often wearied by the mischievousness of their children, and if they were brought together occasionally and preached to, much good might be done, and the work of parental government made less burdensome. After all, our children are just what we make them. If we are cross and fretful towards them, you may rest assured they will be so too. Great loving-kindness, firmness, truthfulness, and patience are needed to bring a child up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. Then bring them together in the public assembly, and teach them the best way to behave themselves and to love and honor God. A boy that is brought up at the fish pond on the Lord's day, or in the grove hunting, or on the commons, playing ball, or in the barn, playing hide and go seek, is pretty hard to reach with the Gospel. In too many neighborhoods this is the work of children on Lord's day, and then their parents complain that their children are saucy, disobedient, and hard to get into the church. Is it any wonder that they are so careless and disobedient? Have you not opposed their coming together to study and read the Bible? Have you not failed to take them to meeting, to sit down with them in the evening and morning and read the Bible with them? Ah! when we look up the facts you are more or less to blame, are you not? Come, take your children by the hand, go with them to the public assembly of the people of God, and do your part of the great work. Now a few words to preachers.

You are not all cut out to talk to children. It is a gift, to be able to talk to them. Their natures must be understood, and the simplest speech must be used in addressing them. Never talk to them in a loud tone, nor make excessive gestures. Go right up to them, and speak to them ever so gently. Draw their attention by your kind manners. Their hearts are tender, and if you would make a mark for good, you must come down to childish nature, childish feelings. Theory is not for them. Give them practical talk, matter that they can understand. I would like to talk to every boy and girl in this broad land. I look upon them as too much neglected in holy things, and desire to do them good. God bless them and their parents!

And for the encouragement of the children I will here add that, during his travels Bro. Eshelman will make preaching to the children a specialty. Most of the preaching now is intended for grown people, while the lambs are neglected. Great efforts should be made to properly instruct the children in the ways of the Lord so that when they become men and women they will not forsake the way of truth.

BABYLON.

BABYLON was the most remarkable city of ancient times, having attained its greatness about 600 years before Christ, though founded by Nimrod soon after the flood.

It was laid out with great regularity on both sides of the river Euphrates, and was fifteen miles square, or sixty miles in circumference, with the river flowing through the centre from north to south. The city was surrounded by a wall, composed of brick, made from a very durable substance. This wall was 350 feet high and nearly 88 feet thick. The height was enormous when we come to consider it. Most trees are not over 50 feet high, yet it would take seven tall trees, one upon the top of the other, to equal the height of the wall surrounding Babylon. On this wall were 1560 lofty towers on the top of which watchmen were placed to guard the city and surroundings.

Within the city was divided into 674 blocks by twenty-five streets running each way. At the end of every street was a gate in the wall. There was also a wall on either side of the river, and also gates where the streets crossed the river. In all, there were 150 gates, which were always closed at night and opened in the morning, except in time of war when they were kept closed all the time. These gates were made of solid brass, and were one hundred feet in height. There were also two great lever gates across the river—one where the river entered the city on the north, and the other where it departed on the south. These gates were raised and lowered by powerful machines on the top of the wall.

Around the city, and on the outside of the walls, was a deep canal 350 feet wide, over which, opposite of each gate, was a draw bridge, which, by means of heavy chains and engines, could be drawn up against the wall, thus cutting off all chances for the enemy to cross. In fact, the city was the strongest fortified place in the world. It was never captured by force, but was twice taken by stratagem.

Her greatness is gone, her glory has departed. Her walls have been entirely demolished, her huge gates battered in pieces and carried away by the Arabs, her treasures scattered among the nations, and so utterly has the city been destroyed that the precise spot on which it stood is a matter of conjecture. The place where once stood the grandest city of antiquity is now a desolate and barren wilderness, where roam the wild beasts of the desert, and the owls dwell there.

Our Bible Class.

"The Worth of Truth no Tongue Can Tell."

This department is designed for asking and answering Bible questions, and for the solution of Scriptural difficulties. All questions should be stated with candor, and answered with as much clearness as possible, in order to promote Bible truth. Articles for this department, must be short and to the point.

Will the BRETHREN AT WORK give an explanation of the latter clause of the 30th verse of the 22nd chapter of Luke, which reads as follows: "And he that hath no sword let him sell his garment and buy one."

Also, Mark 23: 15, which reads as follows: "Woe unto you scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte; and when he is made ye make him two-fold more the child of hell than yourselves." S. A. ULLERY.

Please explain 1 Tim. 1: 9; Luke 16: 15; Mark 9: 23; Mark 16: 17, 18. To what law has the Scriptures reference; and to what extent should it be used? What is the most esteemed? Has it reference to any particular thing?

GO AND PREACH.

BY DAVID LONGNECKER.

"Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned."—Mark 16: 15, 16.

TO preach the Gospel to every creature is a command as well as baptism, feet-washing, or communion. The Gospel is the power of God unto salvation to all them that believe. Preach it to every creature at home and abroad, to old and young, poor and rich, moral and immoral, to publicans, harlots, drunkards, liars and adulterers. Jesus died for them. He preached and prayed for them. He came to seek and save the lost. We should not do like the self-righteous Pharisees, run away from penitent sinners, who were better qualified for salvation than themselves.

Preach the Gospel to every creature—to all nations, to Jew and Gentile, Dutch and English, Greek and Latin.

It is said that the Campbellites began long after the Brethren and now they number six hundred thousand, while the Brethren number something less than one hundred thousand. It is said the Campbellites have a church in every nation.

We hear of sisters weeping and praying, "Brethren, send us some ministers, for we are starving for the Bread of Life. We have not heard a brother preach for a year, or since we are here." May the Lord move the church to love and pity those calling for help, and send them preachers, not by saying, "go," but by providing the means necessary to carry on the work, and sending them.

WHY IS IT?

BY THURSTON MILLER.

WHY is it that sick patients almost invariably put off their "call for the elders" to officiate in "anointing with oil in the name of the Lord," until they are quite sure that death is very nearly approaching? For surely from this reading, the Scripture does not limit them to that condition; but says, "If any be sick let them call," &c., not if any be DYING.—Generally, so far as my own knowledge extends, very few of the sick survive beyond a few days at most, and often but a few hours, after this solemn religious service.

2nd. How is it that the view so generally prevails, that, in the event of restoration to health again, after having called for, and engaged in the above service, they may never make the second call?

3rd. Why is it this subject is never discussed publicly, and the people, as well as many of our members more fully enlightened regarding this very important and heaven ordained religious duty? I am frequently astonished at the ignorance of members upon this subject; often meeting members in my little journeys "through this vale" who scarcely know anything about such a practice among the Brethren, and while many grown up children, of parents long in the church, have never heard that there was such a thing. The following will illustrate: Not long since while calling at the house of a worthy old German brother and sister, long time members, I was relating the dangerous illness of a very aged brother of our church, when I alluded to the circumstance of his having called for the elders to officiate for him in this service, but a day or so previous, when a sick son (man grown) lying in an adjoining chamber, heard through the open door the conversation, turned upon his pillow and immediately began interrogating me in regard to the essentiality of its observance. At this moment a married daughter came into the room, and upon turning to him, she stood exhibiting the most profound astonishment, and asked, "What do you mean by anointing? Why I never heard of such a thing!" I found the old people, however, well informed, and entertaining quite correct views upon the subject, but had failed to impart them to their children. Verily I think such ignorance should not prevail.

THOUGHTS UPON DIFFERENT SUBJECTS.

BY MARY C. MILLER.

WHEN Paul said he magnified his office, he did not say his office magnified him.

If we wish to do what is right we must not be afraid of the world. And if we do what is right, there is no need of being afraid.

Cleanliness is said to come next to godliness, yet it is not what goes into the mouth that defiles the man, but that which comes out of it.

All things are open unto Him with whom we have to do. If we wish to live, we must work. We must be open-hearted, warm-hearted toward one another. If one should do wrong or speak wrongly, convince him of his error to his face. Speak not reproachfully of him.

I have seen a good many instruments of music in the houses of professing Christians, but to the best of my knowledge, I have never yet seen one that was used expressly for sacred music.

If we want to gain our brother, we will talk to him of his faults; if not, we will talk to others of them.

Christ is the head of the church and He is poor, He is holy, He is free from sin. He says, "My Father and I are one." Why are they one? Because they are alike in purpose and alike in works. Now if the church has such a Leader, should she not be so too? Next to Christ are the ministers. They who are to teach and be "watchmen on the walls of Zion" if they shrink not from duty, oh how good it is. Then the church prospers. As it was under the Jewish economy, so it is at present. When they had a king who did right in the sight of the Lord, then Israel was strong, they went forward, God was with them, but when a man arose who knew not God to love Him and walk in his appointed ways, Israel was weak, she was God-forsaken, she went in by and forbidden paths.

A Christian lives in holy fear and confidence. He knows the eye of his Master is upon him. He lives in peace with all men as far as he can, but he has not the fear of man within his breast.

To read the Bible and contemplate or meditate upon its contents is the duty and blessed privilege of every Christian. But the young, and those who are newly converted to the faith, how necessary it is for them to be very diligent in searching the holy Scriptures, that they may become acquainted with that law which is to govern them in all their transactions through life. We should all search the Bible continually. It will teach us watchfulness, steadfastness, diligence, prudence, bravery, meekness, kindness, truthfulness, impartiality. Yes it will teach us all that it is good for us to be.

A flame of fire in the wrong place should be put out if possible. So with an evil report about a brother or sister. Don't let the fire spread or you cannot get the control of it. If we would stand up for each other as we should, wicked and designing people could not make so much trouble among us.

It is not the darts of Satan which hurt Christians, but his smiles. When our actions please him, then we are hurt, not when he is angry with us.

Let the minister of God take the Bible, which is his sword, and let him become acquainted with its holy teachings, let him learn to "rightly divide it" and to use it skillfully, then with God's help, with God's blessing he will be able to overthrow the mighty. This battle is not gained by those who are strong in themselves, but by those who are weak. When we are strong, we depend upon ourselves, when weak, upon God. Therefore Paul says, "When I am weak, then am I strong."

"Where there is smoke there must be fire." This is often said where evil reports are going about against our neighbor, but we find that the most illustrious personage ever upon earth, was much spoken against. The only perfect man that we have any account of after the fall of Adam, was crucified as a malefactor. Was there any truth in the reports brought against him? It is true they pretended to have foundation upon which to build these reports, but after all, were they not false? Was He guilty of wrong doings in any way? "The king of terrors loves a shining mark." Reader, think of these things.

READ YOUR BIBLE.

BY SARAH EARLY.

AS the Brethren have many books, pamphlets and papers for us to read, which are good in their place, let us not forget our Bibles. It is the fountain head of all our religion. Let us often draw from its healing streams; let reading it be our daily practice. When we consider the divine Author of this holy Book, and estimate its importance, we should ever esteem it above all others. What a matter of lamentation it is, that this sacred Book is so much neglected, and how inexcusable must such be for this negligence. There are many families, it is to be feared, which have not so much as a Bible in their houses, nor do they desire one. There are others who have the Bible, but let it lie as an unfashionable book. What amazing ingratitude and stupidity is this. Oh, may we all be humbled in the dust for our negligence.

This heavenly food, the Word of God, abideth forever, and shall nourish our souls unto everlasting life. This ought to be our daily bread, for here we learn all things profitable for our salvation; great ones learn humility; rich, charity; poor, contentment; the oppressed, patience; the afflicted, comfort.

AN EAST WIND.

THE East wind, coming from the parching desert, is very destructive to man, beast and vegetation in Palestine. A late writer, in the Christian Weekly, thus describes, from personal observations, the effects of one of these winds:

"Have you ever thought what is meant in the Bible by an East wind? Had you been here last week, you would have learned all about it by bitter experience. No wonder that Jonah's head was scorched by it. In the Arabic version we read (John 4: 8), "And it happened at the rising of the sun that God prepared a hot east wind, and the sun smote on Jonah's head, and he wilted and he asked death for himself, and he said, My death is better than my life." An East wind began to rage here on Wednesday, August 22. A deadening and oppressive heat settled over the land. The next two days it grew more intense; the air was dry and hot as the breath of a furnace. The birds sat motionless in the thick trees; the green leaves of the fig trees grew crisp and dropped to the ground; book-covers curled up as though they were being held by a coal-grate; doors, bureaus and tables cracked with a loud noise and warped with the heat, even the wooden ceilings cracked as if the boards were in agony. Men and beasts panted as if gasping for breath and parched for want of water. Our children awoke almost every hour of the night calling for cold water.

"I have rarely enjoyed anything more than I did the sight of a great flock of sparrows driven by thirst to our yard, where there is a long trough of water. They plunged in, drank, and drank again, flew round, and fairly exulted with delight at finding in this arid mountain and on such a day an abundance of water. A huge centipede plunged into our wash-bowl to shake his thirst; and although obliged to despatch him for fear of his injuring some of the family, I could not help allowing him to live long enough to enjoy the luxury of a draught of cold water. Writing was almost impossible, and the ink dried on the pen between the inkstand and the paper.

"I had to ride four miles on horseback during the heat. Returning after sunset, I met Mr. Bliss just coming up from Beirut. His first question was, "Is anybody left alive on the mountain?" No wonder Jonah "wilted." Thousands of Syrians "wilted" on Friday, and I doubt not many said in thought, if not in words, "My death is better than my life, if this East wind continues."

LET your sleep be necessary and healthful, not idle and expensive of time beyond the needs and conveniences of nature, and sometimes be curious to see the preparation which the sun makes when he is coming forth from the chambers in the East.

What a sad record some Christians make for themselves by absence from the Lord's table! An old elder, who died a few years ago, did not miss one Communion in forty-five years; and another still living in Western Pennsylvania, who was confirmed in 1817, has not in all these sixty years, missed one Communion. What a comfort to themselves, and what an example to others!

CORRESPONDENCE.

A Trip to the West.

LEFT home August 26th. Stopping at several intermediate points from various causes, we did not arrive at Lanark until the 28th.

Lanark is a fine business town. The Brethren have a neat and commodious building in which they hold services twice each Sunday. The church seems to be in a very prosperous condition.

Aug. 31. Attended the council meeting at Dutchtown, in the Milledgeville congregation. Brethren J. S. Hanger, Martin Myers and Tobias Myers, are each ordained elders. They are assisted by three other ministers. The meeting passed off as usual on such occasions. More system and discipline would add to the proficiency of these meetings.

September 1. Attended meeting at brother M. Kimmels. The preaching was in German. In the evening went to Dutchtown to meeting. Brother Brinkworth preached. Meeting was then announced for Tuesday evening. I tried to preach for them; had good order and attention.

Sunday 8th. Went to brother Henry Livengoods to perform a marriage ceremony, and then to Sunday-school at Dutchtown, superintended by brother Zack. Livengood. After Sunday-school I tried again to preach to them. This was my last meeting for that place. The large and commodious house was almost filled. In the evening came to Lanark to hear brother S. H. Ba-hor preach.

September 9th. Left brethren, sisters and friends of Lanark at 2 o'clock. We truly feel thankful to all for their kindness and love bestowed upon us while with them. We have sung and prayed together. How sad it was to take the parting hand, knowing that we would meet no more in this life as we did this time.

We arrived at Waterloo on the day after leaving Lanark. Waterloo is the capital of Blackhawk Co., and contains about seven thousand people. Visited Brethren, relatives and friends until Sunday, when we tried to preach in the Orange Grove school-house. In the evening preached in the Hall at Waterloo.—Had good attendance and attention. Here the Brethren greatly need a church building.

Saturday 20th. Met with Brethren in council at Waterloo. This church has had serious difficulties, but a better day is near at hand.

Be ye steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the works of the Lord.

Sunday 21st. Had our last meeting.

September 22nd. Left Waterloo for Augusta, Ill., where we arrived at 8 P. M.

September 26th. Had meeting in the United Brethren church. Good attendance and attention.

September 27th. At 8:30 A. M. took the train for Mt. Pleasant, Pa., where we arrived the 28th. Had preaching the next day (Sunday), in the Brush Run school-house. Arrived safe home Monday evening, found all well.

Thanks be to Almighty God for his providential care over us. We thank all the Brethren and friends with whom we met, for the unfeigned love and kindness bestowed upon us while with them. May the love of God and the comforting of his spirit rest and abide with all his people. D. D. HOEXER.

Death of Elder Wogoman.

ELDER Joel Wogoman died Nov. 16th, from a severe attack of the erysipelas. On Sunday was our regular meeting, and while we were waiting and wondering of the cause of his absence, a messenger came with the sad and solemn news, that he was numbered with the pale nations of the dead. This caused sorrow throughout the Wolf Creek church, and to-day, (Nov. 18th), as an expression of that sorrow, and in sympathy with the old sister and children, the church, neighbors and friends assembled together, to pay the last respects to the departed. The meeting-house was filled to its utmost capacity, and a deep sadness and solemnity prevailed the entire assembly, as they listened to the words of the men of God. We were reminded again, that death is the end of all earthly perfection; that we belong to that race to whom it was said, "Dust thou art and unto dust thou shalt return," and that here we have no continuing city, but shall seek one to come. It was a sad and impressive occasion, well improved by the ministering brethren.

Several traits in the Christian character of our beloved elder, deserve more than a passing notice.

1. His punctuality of attending worship;

the inclemency of the weather, the impassability of the roads, and the infirmities of old age, did not deter him from meeting in the sanctuary of God. He knew the import of that apostolic injunction, "Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together;" and he experienced the blessings that follow a compliance to it. "For they that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk and not faint." Isaiah 40: 31.

2. His habit was always to be at the place of worship in good time. This was his invariable habit,—so much so that it came to be a proverb among us, "Brother Joel is always on good time;" and this should be the habit of all who have named the name of Jesus.

3. He had a great delight in the law of the Lord. He spent much of his time reading the Holy Scriptures, and he loved to talk on heavenly themes. His conversation was in heaven. Hence when disease made him delirious, we are informed that he, thinking perhaps he was in meeting, sat up in bed and spoke a short sermon from the following language of Paul: "Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which, no man shall see the Lord."—How sweet it is to live and die a Christian; and how transportingly sweet the bliss above, "Joy unspeakable and full of glory!"

Brother Wogoman's age was 75 years, 5 months and 27 days. He lived in the bonds of holy matrimony 52 years, and raised a large family of children, some of whom are walking in the footsteps of their lamented father. God help them all to do so. May God bless them, their aged mother, and the Wolf Creek church in their sad bereavement, and may we in return glorify God. More anon.

Report of Series of Meetings.

ON the 2nd of October, I left home to attend a Love-feast with our Father's children in Lower Twin Valley arm of the church, Preble Co., Ohio. Arrived at Camden in due time; spent the night with brother Henry Brubaker and family, who conveyed us to place of meeting next morning, where we met many brethren, sisters and friends, with whom we were glad to meet. Brethren D. N. Workman and John Mohler from a distance, and brethren from adjoining districts met us here.

This congregation is under the care of Bro. Abraham Younce, assisted by a corps of ministers and deacons. This congregation is alive to its duty, and is increasing quite rapidly.

Brother Younce has been seriously afflicted for about eighteen months, which impairs his usefulness very greatly. He has the sympathies of his entire congregation.

The Love-feast was a very pleasant season to the Lord's children. The crowd being very large, the order was not all that could be desired. On the morning of Oct. 4th, brother Mohler left. Brother Workman and I continued until Oct. 6th, when he also left. I continued until Oct. 10th, then returned home to go to another field of labor.

The result of the meetings was, six conversions, encouragement of God's children and discomfiture of those far from their Father's house. On Nov. 3rd, I returned to this congregation again, and preached once and sometimes twice each day until Nov. 18th. The congregations were so large, that at different times they could not all gain admittance. The order was all that could be desired. During this series of meetings, there were twenty-two added to the church, making twenty-eight for the two meetings. A number of others promised to come soon, and we hope they will do so.—Thus ended one of the most pleasant, as well as one of the most interesting meetings we ever attended. We tender our gratitude to the brethren, sisters and friends, who cared so well for us, while among them.

On the 18th of November we returned home and found the oft repeated prayers for our little family were answered, for all of which may the Lord be praised.

THE members of the Ephrata church, have just closed a very interesting series of meetings, conducted by brother John M. Mohler, of Lewistown, Mifflin Co., Pa. Our Brethren united some time ago to have a Communion meeting, and set the 7th and 8th of Nov. for the time. Also concluded to have a series of meetings connected with it. Hence brother Mohler came to us on the 2nd inst., and preached the word with wonderful power and effect; so that by the 7th, the day of our Love-feast, eleven souls were made willing to enlist in the army of the Lord, and by the 13th, eight more volunteered into the ranks of Jesus, and by the 15th, ten more were buried in baptism, and yesterday, (17th), one more, making thirty in all during the meeting, and one shortly before; and we have reason to believe that several more are almost persuaded, who we trust, will come before long, unless they still their conviction and open the heart again for the admittance of the unclean spirit.

Brother Mohler was with us from the 2nd to the 15th, when he bade farewell to meet another call. Brother Adam Beaver, from Union Co., Pa., being on a visit among relatives round here, also, was with us, and took some part in the meetings, especially after brother Mohler left us. We also had a good refreshing Love-feast, plenty of ministerial aid, and a goodly number of lay members from adjoining congregations. We thank the Lord, and take courage; and rejoice in his might to bring the wandering lost sheep home to the fold again. I think we as a body, have received a heavenly shower, and new vitality and zeal for the good cause. I hope we shall never forget these meetings; and that we may all have a mind to serve the Lord with more diligence and fear than heretofore; and that we may all try anew, to shape our lives in accordance with the Word of God. If any of our new converts chance to read this, I would say to you all, be of good cheer; be strong; be faithful; stand firm in the Lord; try to keep your baptismal vow undefiled; take the yoke of Jesus, broad side upon your shoulders, and his word in your hand, and be not ashamed to bear the name of Christ before the world, and if you meet with trials and temptations by the way, then cast your cares on Jesus, and don't forget to pray; for you may rest assured that the Lord is faithful to all who are faithful to him, and in death he will receive all his, into everlasting glory and bliss. Dear Brethren:—

WHILST meditating this beautiful November morning upon the past with the many events that we have experienced, I began to think of some of my Christian experience and of some of the sore trials that it has been my lot to pass through. I have thought of the joy of the days when I first found Christian comfort, and peace in the Brethren's church, and then of days of subsequent trial and temptation, when during the grasshopper devastation, I feared that our little congregation was going to be broken up and then worst of all when I was led away in a measure and was disowned by the church I loved so much and the dreary days that followed, and then oh joy! of how the light began to dawn again, and the day grew brighter and brighter until I was re-instated again, and then brightest of all, when brother Lemuel Hillery came and preached for us the word of truth with such manifest power and love.

The best days that the White Rock congregation ever saw was, while brother Lemuel was here preaching, and perhaps the sorest trial we have had, was to part with him. But then we know that as come the bright days in Winter and the dark days in Summer, so comes our Christian experience, and we must bear the trials as well as enjoy the blessings.

Brother Lemuel's work with us, was a good one, though too short to do what was to be done. The beginning was not encouraging, but before a week's preaching was done, our school-house was packed full of eager anxious listeners, and many, many were the compliments paid our brother by all classes and persons present; and dear indeed was the look of disappointment, visible upon the faces of many, when he announced his last sermon.

Our little congregation all knew that if he would stay, our number would be increased and hence our bitter disappointment, and is a closing expression, I am constrained to say why, why cannot our Brethren in the East send us more such laborers or allow us the labor of our brother longer? We are in need of such preachers, and for such there is a rich harvest in our country here and God grant that our ability to render temporal assistance may be increased. Remember us Brethren, and if possible among our home mission work, so that we may be more blessed with good effective ministers and I am sure that good be accomplished.

Brother Hillery went to Burr Oak from here and we still hope to have him return to preach for us, and while we hope for such a blessing, may God's blessing rest upon us all as a fraternity.

Yours in Christian fellowship,

CATHERINE McCORMICK.

Dear Brethren:—

ON the 9th of October I met with the members of the Huntington church, Huntington Co., Ind., where a goodly number of members met to celebrate the sufferings and death of our dear Savior. There were not very many ministering brethren present, but enough to make a good meeting. We had a feast long to be remembered. From here we went to the feast at Roann, Wabash Co.; plenty of ministers present. Had a very good meeting. This was the second Love-feast I ever attended where they had no eating but the Lord's Supper. We have come to the conclusion, that this is the way, we see the order is much better. When services are over, people go home quietly, next day meet in order for preaching. At this place meeting continued for several days and nights. Had very good attendance.

A. Neff and Jesse Meyers are the elders in this arm of the church. B. Neff, D. Swihart and J. Deardorff, are helpers in the ministry.

On the 16th of October, met with the Brethren and sisters in the Santifree arm of church, Miami Co., Ind. Not a very large congregation. Plenty of ministers. We have learned long since, that it is not the large number of ministers, that makes the best meeting. Had quite a good meeting here.

On the 18th, we attended the Communion in the Upper Deer Creek church, Cass Co., Ind.—Not so many ministers, yet we had quite a good meeting, some confusion outside. Had preaching several days and nights. Good attendance and good attention. From here we went to our home, to rest a while. On the 11th of November, attended the Communion in the Monticello church, White Co., Ind. Not very many ministers, but we had a very good meeting. From here we went to Roann, then to Wabash, then to Huntington, then out in the country. Did some visiting in the Solomony congregation.

On the 5th of November brother Click took me to Huntington, where I took a coach for Lafayette, there changed cars for Ladoga. On the 7th met with the members of the Ladoga church. Bro. R. H. Miller is housekeeper. Not very many ministers present, and not very many members, yet we had a very good meeting. We preached several nights after the Communion. Had good attention.

At this time of writing I am at Bro. Samuel Mohler's, Clinton Co. I came here yesterday, from Ladoga. Last evening we preached our introductory discourse, from the words, "What is man, that thou art mindful of him." We expect to continue eight or ten days at this place. We tender our thanks to our dear brethren and sisters, wherever we have met with them, for their kindness shown towards us. O, may the Lord bless them and us to be faithful in our calling, so we may be so happy as to meet in heaven, where parting will be no more, is my prayer.

Dear Brethren:—

BROTHER Enoch Eby came to us on the 8th of Nov. Commenced meeting on the 8th. The weather was not very favorable some of the time, the nights being dark and raining some; yet we had a good turnout and quite an interest was awakened among the people. The order and attention was good during the meeting. On the 14th, brother James R. Gish came to brother Eby's assistance. On the 16th, one precious soul united with us by being baptized with Christ in baptism. Yes, we may say precious soul, for it was our own dear daughter. Oh! may she be as a bright and shining light in the church of Christ, that others of her young associates may see her good works and soon follow her example. One that had wandered away, retraced her steps, and is again in love and union with the church.

On the evening of the 19th, we held our first Communion, at the house of brother John M. Fike. A goodly number of the brethren and sisters were present. It was indeed a feast of love to our souls; and while commemorating the death and suffering of our blessed Savior, our minds were carried back to the scene on Calvary's height. With an eye of faith we could view Him on the cross bleeding, groaning and dying, that we poor sinful creatures might not perish, but have everlasting life. After the

BRETHREN AT WORK SUPPLEMENT.

STEIN AND RAY DEBATE.

Prop. 1st—The Brethren (or Tunker) Churches Possess Bible Characteristics entitling them to be regarded as Churches of Jesus Christ.

J. W. STEIN affirms.

D. B. RAY denies.

J. W. STEIN'S FIFTH AFFIRMATIVE.

My friend fails to show that the apostles were not Tunkers. The Brethren do not teach that any who "wish to be baptized," but cannot, "go to hell for want of baptism." I stated our position in the out-of, viz: "Baptism, like repentance and faith, is designed only for those who can receive it." — God requires no impossibilities. Not to do what he does not require is not to disobey him. To answer my friend's criticisms I ask: Can one repent without being begotten by the word? Is a sin-sick sinner properly a child of the devil? Does not repentance precede pardon? Are men not chosen of God before they are pardoned? Are not all the pardoned, members of Christ's general body? — Did Paul allude to any but the baptized in Rom. 6: 3-7? Was not the Spirit of God upon Baalam, Saul and his messengers, imparting the gift of prophecy? Were they pardoned? Num. 24: 2, 5-9, 17-19; 1 Sam. 19: 20-24; 28: 6, 15, 16, 18; 2 Pet. 2: 15; Jude 11; Rev. 2: 14. Touching the preparation for baptism, Bro. Nead says: "Begetting must precede baptism, or the change will not be according to the plan of salvation. . . . Our Heavenly Father begets all his children by his word. . . . A change of heart must precede the act of regeneration (new birth), which is equivalent to being born of water and the Spirit." Nead's Theology, 247, "For a person that has not been begotten of God, to be baptized, is not born of God, he is still dead," Ibid. 280.

Such are teachings of the Brethren as far back as we have any account. But my friend has admitted that our qualifications for baptism 'will do, and are exactly right.' Persons thus qualified are born of God, in baptism. John 3: 5.

4th Characteristic, and my second reason under it, continued. — My friend asks, 'Was Christ buried three times,' &c. When he shows that the Word of God requires agreement in number between figures and the things they allude to, I will answer these questions. I ask my friend to give us the original of 1 John 5: 7, and tell us plainly, if he holds baptism to be one in the sense that the Father, Son and Holy Spirit are one? Does he profess to baptize into the name, 'Elohim'? or 'God,' or 'Jehovah'? or into the single name Jesus? 'In (epi) the name,' (Acts 2: 38) indicates the ground and source of baptism. 'In (en) the name of the Lord,' (Acts 10: 48) denotes the authority — 'into (eis) Christ,' Rom. 6: 3 Gal. 3: 27; or 'into (eis) the name of the Lord,' etc., (Acts 8: 16, 19; 5) refers to subjection to Christ's authority, entrance into his government, the benefits of his death, etc. An oath of allegiance, truly administered in the name of the government, must be according to the constitutional form. So the allusions to the administration of baptism in the Acts and epistles are to be understood in harmony with the constitutional law and form of baptism in Matt. 28: 19.

My friend denies the commission to be elliptical and yet admits that he finds 'no serious objection' to my 'grammatical references,' which prove them to be elliptical. Thus he refutes himself. My quotation from Latham does not deny the office of conjunctions in connecting words, etc. I applied it to elements involving propositions. When my friend tells a candidate, 'I baptize you into the name of the Father,' he uses a complete grammatical sentence, containing a complete proposition, and if he does what he says, he puts the candidate under water, to which 'and' brings similar additions. 'Baptizing' is modified by the compound element, viz: 'in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit.' This is made up of three simple elements, viz: 1. 'into the name of the Father.' 2. 'of the Son.' 3. 'of the Holy Spirit.' These elements are connected by 'and,' hence they are similar, which proves the ellipsis 'into the name' before 'of the Son,' and before 'of the Holy Spirit.' My friend's fruitless effort to get 'into the name' out of the first of these adjunctive elements, in order to deny the ellipsis of it in the second and third, is an unwarrantable perversion of the rules of grammar. Neither Kerl, Brown, Clark, Harvey nor any other author justifies him in his attempt to make 'name' the joint possession of Father, Son and Holy Spirit. In order to that the formula would have to read thus, 'Baptizing them into the name of Father, Son and Holy Spirit,' which, according to what grammarians call 'hyperbaton' or 'inversion,' is equivalent to 'Baptizing them into the Father, Son and Holy Spirit's name.' This is what my friend wants the commission to teach, but it contains no such formula. He tries to make three prepositions, i. e., three different and separate connections, convey the relation of the one noun 'name,' and quotes Kerl, viz: 'A preposition shows the relation of an object to some other word,' etc. To support my friend, Kerl should have said, 'several prepositions show the relation of an object to some other word,' etc. Green says, 'Possession is denoted by of which shows the relation of the possessor to the object possessed; as 'the estate of my father,'—'my father's estate.' Analysis, 95. Accordingly, 'name of the Father' is equivalent to 'the Father's name,' and 'of the Son' is equal to 'the Son's,' and 'of the Holy Spirit' is equal to 'the Holy Spirit's.' Hence the formula when transposed reads, 'Baptizing them into the Father's name, and the Son's, and the Holy Spirit's.' Here Son's and Holy Spirit's have the sign (') annexed to each, corresponding to 'of,' and are governed by name understood. Covel says, 'Nouns, denoting a possessive relation to the same object, have the sign (') annexed to the last only; as Mason and Dixon's line; nouns denoting a possessive relation to different objects, have the sign () annexed to each, as Adam's and Jackson's administration, i. e., Adam's administration and Jackson's administration." (Digest of Eng. Gram.; see also Green's Analysis, 78; Boune's Art of Prose Composition, 305.) This proves three names.

My friend's appeal from the language of the commission to the Divine unity, don't help him, because it is as true that the Father, Son and Holy Spirit are three, as that they are one. If special pleading is admissible in one case, it is also in the other. The real issue is, How does the commission present them?—as one? or as three?

5. The Scriptures never allude to baptism as commanded or performed in, or into any name which represents the unity of the godhead, but always in one or more of the different names which represent the distinct and non-interchangeable offices and relations of the three Divine Powers, in all of which Christians are said to be. Rom. 8: 9; 1 Thess. 1: 1.

I will here examine my friend's examples.—'Many shall come from the East and West and shall sit down with Abraham and Isaac and Jacob in the kingdom of heaven.' Matt. 8: 11.

This proves partly too much and partly too little for him. "Many shall come from the" is understood before 'West! Those who will come from the East and West are different parties. 2 'Sit down' is intransitive and has no object. 'Baptizing' is transitive and has an object. Let us try a transitive verb. Suppose they "shake hands with Abraham and Isaac and Jacob." That's little more like the commission. How many actions would that take? But my friend proposes a construction as analogous, viz., "Burying them in the name of the legislative, and of the judicial, and of the executive," &c. This lacks the important analogy of relation. 'In' here refers only to the joint authority of the names, therefore the sentence is incorrect. It should have read, "of the legislative, judicial and executive," omitting 'of the' before 'judicial' and 'executive.' Christ commands baptism "into (eis) the name," &c. Matt. 28: 19. Suppose the President commissions foreign diplomatists to present their own petitions, "putting them into the department of the judicial, and of the legislative, and of the executive," &c. This is analogous to the baptismal formula in its parts of speech, construction and relations. It presents my friend's own illustration of the Trinity in Unity, and a man who never saw a grammar can see that it requires three efforts. If my friend will adduce one example like the baptismal formula, having the same construction, with the same parts of speech, connected in the same manner and expressing like relations, that don't require three actions, I will give it up. Is that fair?

6. The baptismal formula was understood by the primitive Greeks to require trine immersion.

As the testimony of the Greek fathers has been generally depended on, in defending the genuineness of the Christian Scriptures from the attacks of skeptics and infidels (see Horne's Introduction to the Critical Study and Knowledge of the Holy Scriptures, 1 pp. 41-45, 280, 281, 288, 289, 347), it cannot be unimportant in understanding them. Dr. Clark refers to its importance, touching the Biblical use of the Greek article thus: "As they lived nearer to the primitive times of Christianity than we do, we must allow that they were at least as competent as ourselves to pass judgment in any subject of theological discussion; but in the case now before us, their authority must be vastly greater. In addition to the circumstance of the Greek being their native tongue, some of them were men of very extensive learning, and of distinguished skill in philological researches; they must therefore have had a more accurate perception than the most learned among us can pretend to, of the precise application of every rule in syntax, the exact meaning of the minutest particle, and the determinate effect of the slightest inflection in the language." Commentary, 6, p. 457.

(a) "Theodoret" says Bingham, "charges Eunomius as making an innovation upon the original institution of baptism delivered by Christ and the apostles, in that he made a contrary law that men should not be baptized by three immersions, nor with an invocation of the trinity." Antiq's of the Chr. Ch., 1, p. 540. (b) Pelagius condemns the single immersion of Eunomius as "contrary to the gospel given by Christ who appointed every one to be baptized . . . with three immersions, saying to his disciples, 'Go, baptize all nations in the name of the Father,' &c. Ibid. (c) Gregory Nyssa says: "Eunomius perverted the law of Christ . . . and taught that baptism was not to be given in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit, as Christ commanded." Ibid. 1, p. 487. (d) Chrysostom says: "Christ delivered to his disciples 'one baptism' in three immersions of the body, when he said to them, 'Go, teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit.'" Ibidem. 1, page 540. (e) Jerome commenting on Eph. 4: 5, says: "We are thrice dipped in water that the mystery of the Trinity may appear to be but one, and therefore though we be thrice put under water to represent the mystery of the Trinity, yet it is reputed but 'one baptism.'" Chrysal's History of the Modes of Baptism, 72, 73. Jerome understood Paul's 'one baptism' to be trine. (f) Monulus about A. D. 256, says: "The doctrine of our holy mother, the Catholic Church has always, my brethren, been with us, and doth still abide with us, and especially the article of baptism, and the trine immersion wherewith it is celebrated, our Lord having said, 'Go ye, and baptize the Gentiles in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit.'" Work of Cyprian, 1, p. 210.

These distinguished Greeks of the third, fourth, and fifth centuries, read the Greek commission in their native tongue as it first stood in the sacred canon. They tell us it requires baptism into each name of the Trinity. If my friend will adduce just one ancient Greek, who says it don't teach trine immersion, I will give up these six witnesses for his one.

THE DEBATE

This week is not put up in a very convenient form. This is caused by not having suitable paper for the purpose, but next week, and after that, it will be put up in a form convenient for preserving.

INVITATION TO YOUTH.

COME youth and people one and all,
And hear the Lord in friendship call,
I love your souls extremely dear,
Therefore incline your ears and hear.

His heart is of great tenderness,
His house the blessed house of peace,
His servants shining angels are,
Who shall attend you everywhere.

He'll clothe you with his pure wrought gold,
And all his wonders you'll behold,
You shall appear bright as the morn,
Fair as the moon, clear as the sun.

Now if your souls to him attach,
Come quickly close the happy match,
While looking on his lovely charms,
Give up your souls into his arms.

Thus far I've strove to set you forth,
My love, my beauty and my worth;
It now remains for you to say,
Come answer me without delay.

And if you truly willing be,
To follow Jesus come with me
And march along the Gospel road,
It is the only way to God.

Why then if I to this agree,
What will my brave companions say?
This world will sore upon me frown,
I will mow my flow'ry honors down.

Besides all this I see no need,
Why I to Christ should thus make speed,
Because I am both well and young,
And do expect my life is long.

Have me excused a few years more,
Till I take ease in earthly store,
And then I will with this comply,
And fly to Jesus by and by.

O lovely youth don't me deny,
Nor put me off for by and by;
Your soul and body both may lie,
In ruin before you by and by.

The Redeemer's call is to-day,
Come answer me without delay,
It fills my heart with grief and woe,
To see kind Jesus slighted so.

And if you thus put off the Lord,
He'll whet his flaming, glittering sword,
He'll cut you down and lay you low,
In shame and misery and woe.

And if you thus his grace refuse,
And still some earthly pleasure choose,
You surely will be left behind,
And such a Savior never find.

FEET-WASHING.

BY S. T. BOSSERMAN.

"He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me." John 14: 21.

THERE is perhaps no Christian body in the known world but lay full claim to the truthfulness of the Bible, and assert that "all Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness." Paul in using this quotation did not mean that a part, but all of the Scripture was profitable. Hence the faithful observance of all the commands of Jesus Christ, is essential to obedience. Though the means which are provided are simple to the minds of man, it is a command of God—a boundary set, and he who goes beyond shall not go free, and shall be held individually responsible before God. The way of salvation is so clear, the highway of holiness so prominent that all can see, and a "wayfaring man though a fool shall not err therein."

The Babel-like confusion in which the Christian world is thrown at the present time, is deplorable. Agitation everywhere on points of doctrine. Some discarding this, while others another portion of the Word of God, that the seeker after truth who is looking on, becomes confused, and concludes with the masses that there is nothing obligatory in the observance of the commands of God and drifts into atheism and infidelity.

Paul says, "God is faithful, by whom ye were called unto the fellowship of his Son, Jesus Christ, our Lord;" and he further enjoins upon us, "Now I beseech you, brethren, by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind, and in the same judgment." 1 Cor. 1: 10.

The beloved apostle made this appeal to the church many years ago, ere there were divisions which are now prevalent. He did not make this charge in his own name, for neither man nor the church was responsible to him, nor could he reward for obedience or punish for neglect. But the charge was made in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, because it is him with whom we have to do, to him we are made responsible. He will handle us as his justice and judgment may dictate, his words judge us at the great day. Hence the importance of reasoning together out of the Scriptures and uniting upon the basis of the Gospel. With God all things are possible, doubt is in the mind of man. God does his part to perfection, and while he employs means in the great plan of salvation, it rests upon man to regard those means as faith put into practice, and then when our blessed Master commands us to wash one another's feet, we can see the propriety to obey.

Our first argument to establish the command of Feet-washing to be observed as an ordinance in the church, is because Jesus Christ has said so, and his command is superior and supreme. "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth." Matt. 28: 18. And acting under this authority, he manifested his law by precept and example. And in this ordinance in which he has engaged himself, in order to show our love to God and humility to one another, he gives us the example by a practical illustration of the work and gives the precept in imperative terms: "If I then your Lord and Master, have washed your feet: ye also ought to wash one another's feet."

Next it denotes a cleansing, not of the filth of the flesh, but a spiritual cleansing, which fact is firmly established in this, "He that is washed, needeth not save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit: and ye are clean, but not all," John 13: 10. The Savior's words, "he that is washed" evidently refers to our baptism, which denotes a washing, a cleansing from sin, as the following will show, Acts 22: 16: "And now why tarriest thou? Arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling upon the name of the Lord." "But ye are washed, but ye are sanctified, but ye are justified in the name of our Lord Jesus." 1 Cor. 6: 11. "Having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water." Heb. 10: 22; Peter 3: 21. Inasmuch as we have been washed, Christ now says, "he that is washed needeth not save to wash his feet," to further cleanse us and to show our love and humbleness to our fellow-Christian. By this act the humble follower of Jesus is reminded of his impurities, his imperfections and unworthiness, and by this act of obedience can be made pure again and qualified to have a part with the Lord Jesus, become better qualified for a higher and nobler life, and free from sin, stand ready for the call of the Master.

Again, for the violation of this law there is a penalty attached, and hence is made obligatory. Feet-washing is of great antiquity. Aaron and his sons, before entering into the tabernacle of the congregation, had to undergo a cleansing, a washing to qualify them for the holy work assigned them. And the penalty attached for the violation of that law, was death. "So they shall wash their hands and their feet, that they die not." Ex. 30: 21. This is the first witness, and in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established. Now for the second: In that dark and doleful night in which Jesus was betrayed, when they sat down to eat that sacred meal, "He riseth from supper, and laid aside his garments; and took a towel and girded himself. After that, he poureth water into a basin, and began to wash his disciples' feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded." His example, as he was practically exhibiting, was to wash his disciples feet. Approaching Peter, he met with opposition to this divine law. Now the penalty is about to be attached and applied, "If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with me." Ah the penalty! No part with my Master here upon earth, his company pleasant and his counsels sweet. No part with Jesus; no part with God,—Ah this cannot be. "Lord, not my feet only, but also my hands and my head."

Now the third witness. The law governing the church, in the receiving of widows into their number, was upon certain qualifications being complied with, and one was, "if she have washed the saint's feet." 1 Tim. 5: 9, 10. Thus we have three witnesses producing the law for their government in the church. One under the old dispensation in which they were to wash their own feet. One laid down by Christ himself while in the flesh in which they were commanded to wash one another's feet. And the last in the apostolic church. In each the command was divine, and the penalty for the violation of the same was separation from God and the fellowship of saints. The objections against this act of humility are various, a few of which we might notice.

1. That it was a sandy country and Christ and his apostles wore sandals, therefore it was only necessary to remove the filth from the feet. In the first place the objector forgets that during the betrayal, trial and crucifixion of Jesus Christ, the institution of the last Supper, etc.—that it was cold. Mark says, that while Peter was warming himself, a certain maid questioned him in regard to his discipleship. Luke says, "And when they had kindled a fire in the midst of the hall, and was sat down together. Peter sat down among them. But a certain maid beheld him as he sat by the fire, and earnestly looked upon him, and said, This man was also with him." If this mark was for the literal cleansing of the feet, then our blessed Master failed to perform a perfect work, as he declares after washing his disciples feet, "Ye are clean, but not all, for he knew who should betray him; therefore said he, Ye are not all clean."

2. That this command is not binding upon the followers of Christ. The term "ought," is binding and obligatory. Ought, 1st, To be under obligation to pay, Webster. Hence "ye also ought to wash one another's feet," is obligatory upon the Christian church and will be until the end of time.

3. That this command ceased with the apostles and was not practiced because they say nothing about it on that memorable day of Pentecost, (Acts 2), when they were filled with the Holy Ghost. Was the church then first organized? If so, what does the Savior mean in Matt 18: 17. "If he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church." Admitting, then, that the church was organized on the day of Pentecost, did the apostles say nothing about Feet-washing? Let us see, "For Moses truly said with the fathers, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you, of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things, whatsoever he shall say unto you. And it shall come to pass, that every soul which will not hear that Prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people." Acts 3: 22, 23. This Prophet was Jesus Christ, and among the all things which he said and commanded was Feet-washing, and hence is obligatory upon us.

4. That it is not perpetuated in the church. Jesus Christ in commissioning his disciples said, "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." Matt. 28: 19, 28. Among the all things, Feet-washing was a command and perpetuated in the church, and by the observance of all those commands we have the promise, "lo I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

Again the language of Paul in regard to the qualifications of the widow, shows perpetuity. It was in practice in the church then, also why would it have been required of her? Hence we conclude that Feet-washing was commanded, that it is binding and obligatory upon the Christian for observance, and that it is perpetuated and that God will require it of his people until the end of time. One more thought, and then we are done. Paul exhorts us to "run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the Author and Finisher of our faith." Heb. 12: 1, 2. Jesus is acknowledged, by the Christian world, as being the Author of their faith, but how many do not accept him as the Finisher of their faith. Jesus commands Feet-washing and other ordinances to be practiced in the public assembly of the the saints. We have faith, we believe this. But man says they are not essential to salvation. Hence we discard them and hold Jesus as the Author of our faith, but make man the finisher of our faith. Thus condemnation rests upon us.

In conclusion, let me appeal to you, kind reader, to take Jesus at his word. Whatever he says, will you not hearken and obey? May you be enabled to trust him at all times; obey him in all his commands. May you ever show your faith by your works, remembering that works is but "faith put into practice." Then when our blessed Master comes to collect his jewels home, you may be found among the faithful of God.

POWER OF GOD.

BY GEORGE WORST.

"For I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first and also to the Greek." Rom. 1: 16

THIS is the language of Paul, written from Corinth and sent by Phebe, a servant of the church at Cenchrea; for the benefit of the believers at Rome, one of the churches established by Paul; no doubt wishing to strengthen them in the faith; says "I am ready to preach to you the Gospel that are at Rome; for I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation." We are sometimes charged with having the form of godliness, but denying the power thereof. Such charges we deny. Noise does not always signify power. The power of God is what we wish to look at more particularly in this article. The power of God is demonstrated to us in many ways, to teach us the greatness of God, and by comparison showing the smallness of ourselves.

Mau is full of self-esteem and thinks he can do wonders, and in fact by his ingenuity can accomplish things that look remarkable in our eyes; but when we try to compare it with the power of God, we soon get lost and bewildered in amazement, must come to the conclusion that we are as nothing compared to God with all our combined power and wisdom.

The Savior said, in Matt. 28: 18., "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth; go ye therefore and teach all nations, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and I am with you unto the end of time." Having such promises from such a source, we need not fear to enlist under the banner of King Jesus; go forth with the little power we have; by the aid of the power of Jesus, we can do the necessary work to be accomplished; so Jesus will be satisfied, God be honored and glorified, and we saved.

Again, we can see a demonstration of the power of God, through Jesus Christ when his body was weakened by fasting, when the devil said, "Command that this stone be made bread." How wisely the answer was, "man liveth not by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." The devil not succeeding in this attempt, tries another, taketh him up on the mountain, shows him all the kingdoms of the world and their glory, "now if thou wilt fall down and worship me, all this shall be thine." But thanks be to God, the answer was, "It is written, thou shalt worship the Lord thy God and him only shalt thou serve." God also is worthy of all praise and adoration from the intelligences of heaven and earth; for if his Son Jesus Christ had been overcome on the mountain of temptation, our salvation would have been sealed. Now by the power of God through Jesus Christ, the devil was overcome and silenced, by that means the door of our salvation stands open, and an invitation with it for us to enter and work for the Lord, and the promise of everlasting life to be the pay for the labor performed in the vineyard.

Now dear reader, have you confidence in God that he is able or has the power to give what he has promised, and do you desire to have everlasting life? If so, then enter the fold and go to work. You can do nothing outside; the harvest is great and the laborers scarce. More are wanted, and such as will earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints, and stand ready to give battle to all isms and schisms within or without. With the power of God's Word and the aid of his Spirit, we can come out more than conquerors through him that loved us; we need not doubt the sacred Word of Truth which was given by inspiration of God, in which there are so many demonstrations of his power, such as healing the sick. Oh how many cases were brought to him, and he never failed in a single instance; so that the people were amazed and said, "we have never saw it on this fashion," cleansing the lepers, the most stubborn cases had to yield; casting out devils, they had to obey, and an instance is given where even the evil spirit exclaimed, "I know thee who thou art, the holy one of God," and raising the dead when he touched the bier the young man arose, and at the grave of Lazarus, he was heard to say, "Father I know that thou always hearest me, but because of the people, I said this, that they may believe thou hast sent me." John 11: 42. Then in the 43rd verse, he cried with a loud voice, "Lazarus, come forth," and he was obeyed,—the dead coming forth bound hand and foot with grave clothes. This was all done to demonstrate the power of God to the people. After hearing and seeing this exhibition of power, the wicked priests and Pharisees, called a council to kill him. Is it not remarkable? We need not wonder so much at the wickedness of our day; but let me assure you, friendly reader, you will not go unpunished for your wicked deeds. Judgment is deferred unto a future day when no wrong will go unpunished; for the Lord said by the apostle, "So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God." Rom. 14: 12. "For every man shall bear his own burden." Gal. 6: 5.

Now taking these evidences with the many more that might be adduced to show us the great power of God and the wickedness of men, that if Jesus had exercised his power upon those wicked Jews, they would have been as chaff before the wind, and because he did not exercise his power, is no evidence that he did not possess it. Through the light of the Gospel we can see a fearful future for the wicked, for those who live in open rebellion to God, and also those that neglect their salvation. Paul says, "as I live saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue confess to God." Rom. 14: 11. We need not expect to hide ourselves behind our sins; for God has eyes like a flame of fire, at one glance can behold the whole universe,—the heavens and the earth and all therein and thereon. So the best advice we know to give, is to present our bodies, "a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable, which is our reasonable service, and not be so much conformed to this world, but be transformed by the renewing of your mind, and prove that acceptable and perfect will of God." Then when we come to judgment, we can come with some degree of boldness, knowing that the power of God will not be exercised over us in the shape of punishment; but will hear him say to us, "Come up ye blessed, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

"Oh the depths of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God, how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out; for who hath known the mind of the Lord or who hath been his counselor?" Rom. 11: 33, 34.

WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE?

BY M. B. FOWLER.

WHAT is the difference whether mother arranges the dishes on the table and places eatables in proper order, or whether little Mary does it, provided Mary does not have things quite so nicely arranged as mother does? What is the difference if little Mary did set the jelly at one corner of the table? Is it any the less jelly? Does it lose any of its delicious flavor because mother did not place it on the table? Does the bread, the meat, the potatoes lose their life-sustaining properties, simply because little Mary placed them before you, and not mother, although the child has taxed her physical and mental powers to their utmost capacity to do it as near as mother can? But because there has not been a more experienced hand engaged in the arrangement of matters, we will not go to the table to partake, although we be starving. "Ah," says one, "this is foolishness." Well may be it is; God chose the foolish things of the world to confound the wise. What is the difference, viewed from another stand-point? What is the difference whether Paul preaches or some one else less experienced, so he tell the truth? "Ah, there is a great deal of difference; when I go to meeting I want to be told something that I do not know myself; if I cannot learn something that I do not know, I would rather stay at home and read my Bible." Yes, sad truth, very little our Bible gets read the day we stay at home because our favorite preacher is not going to preach. Likely we spend a part of the day looking over the news of the week, and then we are tired and we must have a little rest; and we lie down and take a sleep; and thus we spend the day and the Lord is cheated out of the day's labor that we owe to him; and our souls are cheated out of the rich blessings that God wanted to give; and Satan has gained the victory over us, and night finds us farther away from God than we were in the morning; all because little Mary set the table.

Does the Gospel lose its life-giving power simply because our bishops or some other very talented brother does not hand it out to us? Does truth become less true because some young or old brother tells it to us in a simple way? Perhaps he has taxed all of his mental and physical powers to make his discourse as edifying as he could, and teaches some good lessons, if we would be taught, but because little Mary set the table, we will not eat. Is not this true? I speak to our shame.

I sometimes hear brethren and sisters say, "well if there is no one going to be at meeting to preach to-day but brother B., I am not going." How wrong this is: First. Our minds are not spiritual. Second. We set a bad example to our family and neighbors. Third. Our influence over the young members is not good. Fourth. It is discouraging to the minister; it dampens his zeal, he becomes disheartened and in a measure destroys his usefulness in the church; and last, but not least, we by so doing, become a hindrance to the progress of the cause of Christ. O, God give us all more charity, more zeal, more faith,—in short, more spiritual life.

TO PARENTS.

BY J. F. SEHER.

"Bring up your children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." Eph. 6: 4.

NOW, as the Mosaic dispensation was a type of the Christian dispensation, and is similar in many instances, therefore we will notice the instruction given by God through Moses, with regard to how the children of Israel shall teach and instruct their children.

After they were in bondage, and oppressed a long time, God sent them a deliverer, who after showing many, many signs and wonders, brought them out and liberated them from their oppression. Now in consequence of their deliverance there were commands and ordinances given them to observe throughout their generation, and they were to teach them diligently to their children, as you will see by reading Deut. 6: 20. "And when thy son asketh thee in time to come, saying what mean the testimonies and the statutes, and the judgment which the Lord our God hath commanded you, then thou shalt say unto thy son, we were Pharaoh's bondmen in Egypt, and the Lord brought us out of Egypt with a mighty hand. And the Lord showed signs and wonders, great and sore, upon Egypt, upon Pharaoh and upon all his house, before our eyes; and he brought us out from thence that he might bring us in, to give us the land which he swore unto our father. And the Lord commanded us to do all those statutes, to fear the Lord our God for our good always, that he might preserve me alive, as it is at this day. And it shall be our righteousness, if we observe to do all these commandments before the Lord our God as he hath commanded us." The 7th verse reads, "And thou shalt teach them diligently to thy children, and shalt talk to them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down, and when thou risest up."

If it was necessary for the children of Israel, so strictly to teach their offspring, with regard to their deliverance, which was only of a temporal nature, which was only a salvation of their physical bodies. How much more shall we who have been delivered from spiritual bondage, who have salvation by grace, instruct our children. All were in bondage to sin, in consequence of Adam's transgression, but God sent his Son to redeem us. "He tasted death for every man." "We were not redeemed with corruptible things, such as silver and gold, but with the precious blood of Christ."

Parents, do you diligently teach your children, concerning our great deliverance? When you sit with them in your house, is your conversation about our redemption? Do you entertain them upon the subject of the "great salvation," when you are traveling with them by the way; in the evening is it the last thought impressed when lying down to rest? Is the first subject introduced, on rising in the morning, of Jesus and his dying love? If so, you may feel assured that you are bringing up your children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

THE DOUBT OF A LADY.

"BROTHER Pomeroy, do you think it is hurtful for me to read the Ledger and such kind of papers?"

"My friend, that depends much on your moral condition. They say crows can eat carrion and thrive on it, while it would kill some birds. Some ministers are not hurt by going to horse-racing, theatres, various shows, and becoming Freemasons, etc.; while others say their conscience, the Word and Spirit of God, require them to abandon all such association. It is the pure spirits who get hurt with badness. And if I am to judge of your moral state by the folly hanging on to your apparel, I doubt if a dozen Ledgers would hurt you. It is probable that you are unburtable by such things."—Bible Banner.

There is a sanctity in suffering when meekly borne. Our duty, though set about by thorns, may still be made a staff supporting even while it tortures. Cast it away, and like the prophet's wand, it changes to a snake.

The Brethren at Work.

M. M. ESHELMAN, } EDITORS.

THE BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent at $1.50 per annum in advance. Any one who will send us eight names and $12.00 will receive an additional copy free of charge, and for each additional name (over and above the one named) the agent will be allowed ten per cent., which amount can be deducted from the money before sending it to us. If it is a check, it costs us 20 cents to collect, while a draft can be collected free. Postage stamps may be sent for amounts under 1.00, but always send the money if you can get it. Subscriptions, and communications intended for the paper, as well as all business matters connected with the office should be addressed

LANARK, ILL., DECEMBER 19, 1878

It is said that there are fifteen counties in Missouri that do not contain a saloon.

The address of brother S. Z. Sharp is now changed from Maryville, Tenn., to Ashland, O.

BROTHER M. T. BAER, of Mich., has moved to Kansas. His address is Mapleton, Bourbon Co., Kan.

If people were as keen for the truth as they are for riches, the world would be a good deal better off.

A CAMPBELLITE elder has lately been baptized and received into the Brethren church in California.

"EZEKIEL Robinson, lately deceased, the oldest preacher in Maine, had read the Bible through 166 times."

REMEMBER, that all who send us eight names for the BRETHREN AT WORK and $12.00, will receive an additional copy free.

SEVERAL members of the Maple Grove colony have been to Norton Co., Kan., and taken up their claims for early settlement.

The word "last" should have been "best" in the first line, in the first item, in the third column, on page five of last issue.

BRO. LEHR held a series of meetings at Cherry Grove last week. Large congregations and good attention. Two were baptized.

BRO. J. M. Snyder, of Grundy Centre, Iowa, gave us a call on the 8th, and preached one sermon in the Brethren's house in town.

BRO. DANIEL VANIMAN started on a preaching tour, Nov. 25th, intending to visit the churches in Adams and Pike counties, Illinois.

THAT Delaware church, which has lately purchased 187 spittoons, would be a better light to the world if it were composed of converted members.

BRO. A. J. Hixon, of Highland, Ohio, is to have a public discussion with Mr. H. H. Witter. Of the time and subjects we have not yet been informed.

MEN who magnify mole hills into mountains, are also in the habit of reducing mountains to mole hills. They can turn the spy-glass to suit the occasion.

SOME of the Campbellite churches in England are getting rather fast. In order to economize time, they give thanks for the bread and the cup at the same time.

THE Health Reformer, published at Battle Creek, Mich., is to have its name changed to Good Health. It is one of the best monthlies coming to this office.

SOME of our agents are highly pleased with our cash system, saying they can get just as many subscribers as before, and then it saves a great deal of trouble for them and us.

PEOPLE who refuse to lay up treasures in heaven, and yet want to go to heaven, must expect to enter that place as paupers. They have sent nothing ahead to be placed to their account.

THOSE who tell outsiders that they can have the paper for $1.00, are mistaken in regard to our terms. When those not members subscribe, they must pay the same as anybody else. The paper is sent to outsiders for $1.50 a year only when paid for out of the fund DONATED for that purpose. See instructions, under the head of "Business Department" on last page.

AT Newtonia, Mo., where the debate was held last Spring, five have been lately added to the church. Two of them were from the Campbellites, and one from the Baptists. Truth will stand the test.

THE ground is now covered with snow, and the weather quite cold. Winters here are not so disagreeable as some might suppose, as the cold weather is generally steady and one soon gets used to it.

THE first book printed, after the invention of printing, was the Bible. If printing were an invention of the devil, does it look reasonable that he would have printed the Bible the very first thing?

"So great has been the power of moral teaching in Wales, that in some sections the jails have been abolished as useless institutions. This is the country in whose language not an infidel book has ever been printed."

PEACEMAKERS are those who labor for peace, and work to avoid difficulties. Men and women who try to stir up strife, are not peacemakers—they are strife makers, and therefore have no promise of the kingdom of heaven.

WE are in receipt of a long, but interesting letter from Bro. D. C. Moomaw, giving an account of his trip by sea, to New York city, and what he saw and heard there. The article will be commenced in No. 1 of next volume.

AS the world and the fulness thereof is the Lord's, it is evident that he has plenty of means for the spreading of the Truth. But as long as this means remains in the hands of those who will not use any of it in spreading the Gospel, the cause will have to suffer.

OUR readers express themselves as highly pleased with the weekly supplement, as it gives them more reading matter. We are gratified in knowing that they appreciate our efforts in trying to give them a good paper, and in turn hope they will do their utmost to enlarge our list.

THE man who makes the "faith principle" his reliance in conducting his business, is simply asking God to set aside the conditions which he himself has ordained for the development of character. Nobody doubts that God can do them; but it is not reasonable to suppose that he will.

THE publishers of the Sunday School Times have favored us with a copy of the Scholar's Quarterly, a neatly printed pamphlet of 40 pages, and published quarterly in the interest of Bible study. It contains much valuable instruction to teachers and others.

WE would suggest that every minister put in a few weeks this Winter, holding a series of meetings. You do not need to wait for foreign help, but let the home ministers go to work wherever they see a good opening, and ask the Lord to bless the work.

BROTHER Bashor closed his meetings at Maple Grove, Ohio, with five additions by confession and baptism. The meeting closed with a love-feast, at which 100 communed, reminding those present of the grand feast in the coming kingdom. Bro. B. is now holding meeting in the Moberg church, Wayne county.

WE are now out of back numbers of the debate, though we printed a large amount of extra copies. Should the demand be sufficient we may yet reprint the back numbers so as to supply all who may want them from the beginning. We still have on hand a few numbers of the last speeches which will be furnished to new subscribers as long as they last.

MR. Talmage is delivering a series of sermons, showing up the underground wickedness of New York, and some of the papers of that city are howling most wonderfully over it. They do not want their sins so widely advertised. Another preacher gets on the other side of the question, and preaches up the bright side of New York, telling its good qualities. These preachers might do more good if they would confine themselves to the Bible a little more.

BROTHER Isaac H. Bashor pointedly and truthfully says: "We often hear it spoken of members not coming in the order, but seldom hear anything mentioned about the money spent foolishly, which might be given to poor members, who are willing, yet not able to come in the order. 'He that hath pity upon the poor, lendeth unto the Lord; and that which he hath given will he pay him again.' Prov. 19: 17."

ONE of our agents says: "I have succeeded in obtaining nineteen subscribers for the BRETHREN AT WORK, commencing with the 1st of Jan. 1879, and expiring with Jan. 1st, 1880. Enclosed please find $27.00 for which send the paper as directed below. I send five new names, this makes up for five others who have withdrawn, saying, money is too scarce with them. But when the money is spent for tobacco there is not a word said about its scarcity. But worst of all is, that Brethren are so inconsistent, even officers of the church."

WE are thankful to our agents for the neat and business-like manner in which they send in the names of subscribers. It enables us to do our work better in the business department, and avoid many mistakes from which misunderstandings generally arise. By following instructions, you assist us greatly in the work of getting the names properly spelled and assigned. It is encouraging to get a neat prospectus filled with names all plainly written.

THERE are two classes of persons who will have to suffer pretty severely in the world to come. One is the rich preacher, who is abundantly able to spend much time and means preaching the Gospel, but will not do it, preferring to lay up treasures on earth. The other is the rich member, who cannot preach, yet has plenty to help some poor minister to save souls, and refuses to lend a helping hand to advance the Lord's work.

THE Scriptures should not be read in our public assemblies for mere form, but to edify and to instruct. They should be read in a plain, simple manner, so as not to yield any part of the meaning, but to give life and expression to all that they teach. To read in a professional style, an inflated style, or in a trilling manner, can do no one any good; but to read, feeling that it is the voice of God to men, that the words have in them life and power, is to send home to the heart, the seeds of truth in such a manner as to insure their growth and proper development.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

WE had thought of printing fifty-two numbers this year, but the time is short, and our hands would like to have a few days' rest. They have been working hard, and faithful, from early morn till late in the evening, and sometimes after night, and we conclude to let them rest a few days.

The next number will be dated January 2, 1879, and will be mailed in time to reach the subscribers by New Year's day.

Those who have not yet renewed will please send in their names immediately, and as many more as they can get. The next number will be sent to all of our subscribers, both old and new. After that only to those who renew.

TWO GOOD PREACHERS.

SAID a neighbor to an old brother one time: "Your people have two good preachers in their church. One is Mr. —. He is no talker, but he preaches by his actions. He is good to all the poor, will not let any of his neighbors suffer if he can avoid it. And then when he lends money to a poor man he refuses to take interest. His character is without a blemish."

"Who is the other?" asked the old brother. "Mr. —. He is rich, and last year raised a big crop of corn, but up North of him the corn crop failed, so he sold his corn to those who had none. But he would not sell to any man who had the money to pay for it. He sold to those only who had no money."

There are some good things about humanity after all, and the above are two instances that need no explanation, while the recording angel has many more preserved.

FEET-WASHING QUERY.

THE following query was sent us by brother Landon West, and referred to brother J. W. Stein whose answer will be found below. There is a valuable point in the query and answer:

THE QUERY.

"We wish some of the brethren, or any who feel to do so, to examine John 13: 10, and tell whether it is proper or not to supply the word 'his' in our Savior's answer to Peter. To leave it out, corresponds better with the command given in verse 14; while to leave it in, would make each to wash his own feet. In all copies we have examined, we find the word in italics, which we learn are used to designate the words supplied by the translators. This work being only human, may we not fear that more were supplied than should have been? Or, may we not think that the right one was not always put? Our understanding of it is, that it was not the washing that each one needed so much, as the doing of it. True, Peter needed Jesus to wash him, but it was the example that he and they all needed, more than the water, and that Jesus gave to each and to all, that they should do as he had done. Feet-washing was here done not because feet needed washing, but because the Apostles needed an example to show them that Christians should wash one another's feet.

THE ANSWER.

The word "his" in John 13: 10, is unwarranted by the original. The Greek is "τους ποδας," i. e., "the feet." J. W. STEIN.

WHAT IT IS NOT.

THE revealed religion of the true God is not sex. It is neither male nor female, but for both male and female of mankind. It is not personal, but for personal beings. It is not head, but for the head. It is not heart, but for the heart. It is not body, but for the body. It is not soul, but for the soul. It is not to put on, but to put in. It is not faith and worship, but the system of faith in God, the worship of God. It is not something to be had, but something that binds.

IT IS NOT AGE.

God's religion is not old or young. Age implies time, and the revealed religion of the great Father is not time. Time is one thing, religion is another. Men may be old or young, and religion may be in old or young people, but that does not prove that religion is age. It is not religion because it manifests itself in old people, but because it is religion. It is not religion because, some young people may possess it, but because it is God's system of faith and practice. We are not required to accept the one true system of faith and practice, the one religion sent down from heaven, because a young man exemplifies it, or because an old man gives evidence of it, but because it came from God. It is not an old man, not a young man, not a thousand men, nor ten thousand times ten thousand men, but the infallible system of God to men. It is not maturity, but that which brings to maturity. It is not a generation, nor for a generation simply, but for all generations. It is not character, but the producer of character. It is not dim and gray headed, but for the dim and gray headed. It is not rosy cheeks, fair hands or brown, but for youth, aged and every condition of mankind. It is not reputation, but makes reputation. It is not

A COMMODITY.

It cannot be bought or sold, but is free. It is not commerce, not an article of commerce, but a system of perfect practice. It being no commodity, it cannot be compared with that which is a commodity. Money is a commodity, hence religion cannot be compared with money. Then it is useless to consider the cost of being religious. It is not money, not goods, not property, but the great system for the government of the soul. It is for the control, and perfection of a model character, not for the pulling down of character. It is not dumb, not ignorant, not smart or sharp, but a perfect system for man's salvation. It is not pride, but produces humility. It is not boastful, but produces self-denial. Now when we have learned what it is not, we will know what it is. When we know what it is, we will not call it age, nor sex, nor a thing to be bought and sold, nor a plan of man.

M. M. E.

"I HAVE never known a Baptist minister to quit his church and join another denomination who had not become offended from some cause. The same is almost true of the lady."—Western Baptist.

It would seem that the editor of the Western Baptist is not very well posted on the history of that church.

WHEN writing business letters please observe the following:

1. On the first line write your address, giving post office, county, and State.
2. On the second line give the date of your letter.
3. Make no apologies, but state distinctly just what you want.
4. Sign your full name very carefully.

Were these rules strictly observed, many errors would be avoided.

CLOSE OF VOLUME III.

ANOTHER year is past, and we are still numbered among the living. One more volume of the BROTHERS AT WORK is now finished; fifty-one times has it visited, and gladdened the hearts of thousands. Hundreds of articles have been sent broadcast over the land, and the good news from the churches has been heralded in nearly every State and Territory in the United States and Canada.

We take a hasty glance at our part of the work. It is now finished; we have done the best we knew. True, we made some mistakes, but they were not intentional. Had we the work to do over, a few improvements could be made, but taking the work as a whole, we are satisfied with it, and now with increased experience as editors and publishers, shall do our utmost to make the coming volume much better than the one just completed.

Our contributors have performed a noble part during the last year. They have kept us well supplied with articles, many of which remain unpublished. To some, this has been a little annoying, but we have done the best we could. The want of time to look over and correct some of them, as well as the want of room in the paper has caused this delay in the publishing of many articles. During the coming year we shall be better prepared to see after this department.

Our contributors have been a great help to us in another way. They have done nothing to engender strife and contention in the Brotherhood. There has been no controversy between members, going on in any of the papers published in the Brotherhood. This feature has had a good effect among our readers. It has also had its salutary effect on the Annual Meeting. The last Annual Meeting is thought to have been the most harmonious meeting of the kind ever held among our people; never was the church more firmly united than at that meeting. And why was it? We unhesitatingly answer, because controversies and contentions, between members in the Brethren's papers, have been stopped. That is the foundation of the whole secret. There has been but little controversy, between members, in our papers for over three years, and just see what a good effect it has had! Thousands have been converted, considerable missionary work done, and a good, harmonious Annual Meeting, with prospects of greater good in the future. Brethren, "In union there is strength."

Papers are good things if rightly conducted; they can accomplish much good, but if given up to controversies and contentions, between members of the same body, we may as well say, good-bye to peace and harmony. There is no use in praying for, and preaching peace and union in a church where the papers publish controversies and contentions between Brethren. We thank our contributors for the peaceable and commendable spirits that have so far characterized their articles. May God bless them for their labors, and assist them in the future.

Our agents have also done a good work, all that could be expected of them. They are essential to the success of the paper; without them it could not prosper. They have helped it to a good list of subscribers, and not content with the past, many are working hard to increase the list. May God reward them for their labors.

We feel especially attached to all our readers. Most of them we have never seen, and perhaps never will till we meet "beyond the river." Thousands of you have read the BROTHERS AT WORK the last year, and we trust it has been comforting to you. May the lessons you have learned from it be of lasting benefit. Many of our readers are old, and almost ready for their departure. Others are in the prime and vigor of man and womanhood. May God help them to be earnest workers in his vineyard. Many are young and tender in years; for them we feel a great concern, for the future government of the church must one day be left in their hands. We do not ask God to take them out of the world, but we do pray God to keep them from the evil of the world.

Then there are many who are not members of the church; some belong to other churches, and not a few are away from Christ. May God help them to see the truth, and speedily embrace it.

May we all be prepared to enter the New Year with new vigor, new resolutions, and a full determination to love God more, and serve him better. May God help us to be faithful.

J. H. M.

EXPLAINED MORE FULLY.

SOME of our readers seem to misunderstand the import of a few expressions in the article entitled "Committee Work," published last week. They take exception to the following:

Elders and ministers have a hard time of it at best. They get nothing for preaching, must lose the time at their own expense.

As elders and ministers have to lose the time employed in preaching and doing committee work, at their own expense, it would be wisdom to divide the burden, and turn the greater part of the committee work over to the deacons, thus relieving the ministers of a great burden.

There is nothing in the above implying that ministers do not have their traveling expenses paid, when doing committee work. I referred to the fact they "must lose the time at their own expense." Nothing said about traveling expenses. The idea intended is this: As ministers have to lose so much time at their own expense, would it not be best to divide the burden, and let others do a part of their work? I do not mean that you shall pay committees for their time, but let others help share the burden.

I repeat again, that some of our ministers have a pretty hard time of it. Just a few days ago we received a letter from an able minister who has to sell his farm and other property, and says it will take about all of it to pay his debts. He spends so much of his time preaching that his business had to be neglected thus occasioning the loss. There are other ministers in the same condition, and it is time their wants were being looked after. I do not refer to ministers in good circumstances, who have to preach but three or four times a month, but to those who are poor, have families to support, and cannot afford to lose much time. It is not right that they bear the burden alone while others of means go free. I pity the poor, hard-working minister and his family. While others are sleeping, he must be studying. Sunday brings no rest to him, and he must often neglect his work to attend funerals and other meetings. Then his wife often has a hard time of it—at home, alone, with her little children she spends many lonely, and often gloomy hours. May God bless the poor preacher and his family!

I have traveled that way, and know the rudiments of poverty from youth up—and think it a blessing to the cause that I have "passed through the mill," for I can now appreciate the wants of others, and assure our readers that the BROTHERS AT WORK will ever remain a friend to poor, hard-working ministers, as well as all others who are willing to work in the Master's vineyard.

WHERE TO FIND WISDOM.

WISDOM is that prudence and discretion which enables one to see what is the best to be done, time and place being considered. That inspired man, James, teaches the children of God, that if any of them lack wisdom, the place to find it is with God. Men who rarely ever go to God in prayer, in obedience, in holiness, are not noted for wisdom in divine things. Wise men never rejoice when another is abused, or rebuked, or slighted, or cast down. Wise men never abuse, never set at naught, never seek opportunities of revenge. Wise men never scheme, plan, plot and devise how to annoy their fellow-man, how to make others feel bad, do wickedly, or overthrow. All such work is devilish, comes from beneath, where the wisdom of God is not.

"I wisdom dwell with prudence." Prov. 8: 12. Now, go to the house of prudence and you will find wisdom there. Go to the house of the upright and you will find wisdom there. Go to the man who always shows Gospel courtesy and you will find wisdom there. Go to the family that is brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord and you will find wisdom there. Go to the church that obeys all the commands of the Gospel, and you will find wisdom there. Go to the congregation that is awake to the necessity of inviting outsiders to the good seats in the house, with a view of converting them, and you will find wisdom there. Go to the meeting where there is good singing,—where the people "sing with the spirit and with the understanding," and you will find wisdom there. Go to the assembly that is not afraid to pray, not afraid to live all the requirements of God, and you will find wisdom there. God puts wisdom wherever people conform to his will. Stiffness, coldness, distance,—marks of selfishness—are so many evidences against wisdom.

Some men can only go on crutches, others need a cane in order to move along in the work of the Lord. Others have so much grace that they can walk right along without any extra helps, while others think they are so strong that they can run at full speed. Well they may for a little while, but they soon get out of breath, and then they must stop to rest. This is dangerous, for just so soon as a man stops, Satan has him sure. Now wisdom says, "carry the lame and the halt; go not ahead of them. Let those who seek to outrun the others, be content with the ordinary pace, and then the army will be compact: Satan cannot break the ranks." "The simple believeth every word; but the prudent man looketh well to his going." Prov. 14: 15. The prudent man loves company; not only company, but good company. Truly "the prudent are crowned with knowledge."

Very true, when we lie long in a bed of our own making, we are slow to give it up, even for a much better one. A certain people looked back to the flesh pots of Egypt, though filled with bitter herbs, and wanted them, while angels' food was set before them. It is difficult to move us out of an old rut, when we have long stood in it. Our selfishness loves its own the best. That which we make always seems superior to what God makes. But it is not. O what loads of folly cling to our selfish natures! We are always looking back, but ah! not far enough. The vision that reaches not to Palestine through eighteen centuries, is certain to see amiss. The man who looks not through Gospel glasses, will see but little wisdom. He will always be fearful and unbelieving, for there is no well of living water near for him to draw out and drink. The thirst that is not quenched from the great Well of Water, will soon become dry and parched. The hunger that is not appeased by the Bread of Life will hunger on. Therefore get wisdom from God, from the supreme Standard, the Holy Law. Get it by prayer; get it from the great Fountain which is free from the notions and opinions of men. "A man of understanding hath wisdom."

CHRISTMAS.

CHRISTMAS is by many, supposed to be the anniversary of the Saviour's birth, and as such is celebrated in most parts of the civilized world, though there is a lack of evidence to prove it. It is far more likely that he was born sometime in October, while the shepherds were yet watching their flocks by night in the field, Luke 2: 8. The custom of celebrating Christ's nativity on Christmas, originated in the latter part of the fourth century, and has been kept up ever since, though in many instances much abused.

By the time this article reaches our readers, most of them will be preparing for Christmas. As is the custom, many are preparing to give presents, and for this purpose much money will be wasted. There is nothing wrong about giving presents, provided they are useful, and will be of some benefit to those receiving them; but to give just for the sake of giving, regardless of doing any good by the act, is a waste of money. Let those who give gifts, be sure that they are giving something that is profitable.

But the most foolish habit is, teaching children that Santa Claus will come down the chimney, or through the key-hole, and leave gifts for them. Thousands of children believe the story just because their parents have taught them so, and hence hang up their stockings in full faith that the "little old man" will fill them. Parents should never teach their children such falsehoods, and I want to say to the little folks who read this article, that there is no such thing as "Santa Claus." The whole story is false. Most Sunday-school papers have pictures of Santa Claus and his adventures, thus more firmly fixing the falsehood in the minds of the children. Publishers should be more cautious about such things.

Christmas is usually occupied with feasting and revelry. It is also a time of much extravagance. If the money that is generally wasted on these occasions, were applied to missionary work, the Gospel might be carried to every part of the globe. Thousands of dollars will be wasted, and hundreds of churches desecrated by performances the evening before Christmas. Loud laughter and merriment will ring within the sacred walls where God alone should be worshiped and adored. The house of the Lord will become the house of mirth. Instead of prayer and singing praises to the Lord of hosts, the Christmas tree will be the centre of attraction. The actions of those who assemble there, will be more like the world, than the humble life of Christians.

In high glee, these people profess to celebrate the birth of him who neither engaged in levity or attended the halls of mirth. What would be their feelings were Christ to come while they are thus engaged? Would his walking in their midst not change the scene? Would he not say to them, "My house should be a house of prayer, but ye have made it a house of mirth?" When will the churches learn to respect him whose birth they claim to celebrate?

While this mirth is going on within these sacred walls, sufferings will be realized without. The rich and gay can meet in the house of the Lord and have a general good time, but without are thousands of poor wretches, suffering for the want of food and raiment. What a sight for angels to behold! The house of God becoming the house of merriment, and the Lord's people (?) spending their money foolishly, to gratify carnality instead of helping the poor and needy. May heaven speed the day when the daughters of Zion will arise and free themselves from the filth of sin.

THE DANISH MISSION.

To the Brethren and Sisters, Greeting:—

AT the Missionary meeting of Northern Ill., Dec. 3rd and 4th, 1878, the undersigned were requested to issue an address to the general Brotherhood in behalf of the Danish Mission, stating its condition, progress and needs. The brethren and sisters in Denmark are laboring in "the same mind and in the same judgment," being at peace with each other, and firm in "the faith once delivered unto the saints." In numbers they are also steadily increasing, and their prospects for further increase are good. As to their needs, we find that Bro. Hope will require the amount stated at last A. M., viz., $500.00 to successfully carry on the work; hence we kindly request the overseers of each congregation to present this claim to the charity of the brethren and sisters, so that there may be no suffering by Bro. Hope and family. This request is in harmony with the decision of A. M. of 1875, on Danish Mission. See Ans. to query 17. This duty devolving upon this District, it was deemed expedient to thus notify all. We hope, therefore, that this "notice" may enable you to make up "your bounty that the same may be ready" in due season. Send all money to C. P. Rowland, Laurock, Ill. "Now he that ministereth seed to the sower both minister bread for your food, and multiply your seed sown, and increase the fruits of your righteousness; being enriched in every thing to all bountifulness, which causeth through us thanksgiving to God." 2 Cor. 9: 10, 11.

THE BROTHERS AT WORK, and the Children at Work will be sent for $2.00.

NEXT issue we will publish a letter from Germany. We hope to receive some interesting letters from that part of Europe.

BROTHER Hope's letter in this issue shows that he has very lively times with some of the Danish people, when he gets to opposing their doctrine.

Do not fail to read the interesting letter from a "Baptist," written from New Jersey, and published on seventh page of this paper, and see what good pamphlets and papers will do.

A MINISTER speaking of his two years' experience with a certain congregation says: "We heard not one—not one—single angry word or sentence from any member in the council in the entire two years. If the members differed in opinion, as they sometimes did, they always had grace and sense enough to do so without quarreling." It would be a blessing to the cause if that could be truthfully said of all congregations. Harsh and unbecoming words never come from a loving heart.

Our Bible Class.

"The Worth of Truth no Tongue Can Tell."

This department is designed for asking and answering Bible questions, and for the solution of Scriptural difficulties. All questions should be stated with candor, and answered with as much clearness as possible, in order to promote Bible truth. Articles for this department, must be short and to the point.

Will the BRETHREN AT WORK give an explanation of the latter clause of the 36th verse of the 22nd chapter of Luke, which reads as follows: "And he that hath no sword let him sell his garment and buy one."

Also, Mark 23: 15, which reads as follows: "Woe unto you scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte; and when he is made ye make him two-fold more the child of hell than yourselves." S. A. ULERY.

Please explain 1 Tim. 1: 9; Luke 16: 15; Mark 9: 23; Mark 16: 17, 18. To what law has the Scripture reference and to what extent should it be used? What is the most esteemed? Has it reference to any particular thing?

THE STONE KINGDOM.

Please explain Daniel 2: 44, 45. In the days of what kings? What does the word kingdom refer to, and what the stone? W. S. T. HARDING.

THE above questions seem to beg an answer. Nebuchadnezzar, the great king of Babylon, was permitted to behold the rise of three great earthly Empires, viz., the Medo-Persian, Macedonian, and Roman. During the existence of the latter, the God of heaven would establish the kingdom of His Son,—the stone kingdom, which shall endure forever.

At the time of the birth of the child, that was to be the Ruler of the stone kingdom, the world was nominally at peace. The Empire of Rome held undisputed sway over all the then inhabited portions of Europe, Western Asia, and Northern Africa. The Roman Empire at the time of the crucifixion was divided into two nearly equal parts—Eastern and Western; these were sub-divided into five kingdoms. These ten kingdoms were the ones alluded to by Daniel when he said, "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven" &c. Read the 44th verse carefully.

Nebuchadnezzar, who reigned about six hundred years before Christ, by his great riches, splendor and honors ascribed to him, represented the head of this gigantic image; the Medo-Persian, the portion represented by silver. Next came the Macedonian; lastly, the Roman, representing the legs and toes of the image.

"Forasmuch as thou sawest a stone cut out without hands," etc. This is in allusion to the establishing of the Messiah's kingdom on Mt. Zion at Jerusalem from whence it was to grow in greatness and increase in power, notwithstanding the opposition from human governments. Isaiah alludes to the same kingdom only in different language in 2: 2, 3. The foundation of this kingdom (faith) is alluded to in our Lord's reply to Peter: "On this rock will I build my church." This same stone kingdom is also alluded to in Luke 20: 17, 18.

ANSWER TO QUERY.

"If the church is the bride, who are the guests?"

SOME time ago we wrote an article entitled, "The Bride of Christ." Since that we received a query like the above, desiring us to answer it by private letter, but we will here take occasion to say, we cannot answer queries privately; we cannot possibly spare the time; our many duties forbid this. As the above came through the BRETHREN AT WORK, desiring us to answer through that medium, we will try to do so.

When we wrote the article above alluded to, we had simply imbibed the popular notion that the church is the bride of Christ, and had never taken a critical view of the matter. Of late, however, we have examined the subject more closely, and the result of our investigation is our conviction that the bride, and the guests are terms expressive of two different states and periods in the church. The former term, we think, refers to the triumphant or glorified state of Christ's church, the latter, to her militant state. Now for the proof.

By referring to Matt. 22: 1-14, we find recorded the parable of the marriage feast. In verse 10 we read that the servants, the ministers of the Gospel, were directed to gather together all, as many as they found, both bad and good, that the wedding might be furnished with guests. But when the king came in to see the guests, he saw there a man which had not on a wedding garment. "The marriage feast, represents the economy of the Gospel, during which, men are invited to partake of the blessings purchased by, and consequent on, the incarnation, and death of our blessed Lord." Clark. By the preaching of the Gospel, multitudes are gathered into the visible or militant church, these compose the guests, the material, so to speak, from which Christ's bride is chosen. These guests must be further inspected and sifted; they must pass the scrutinizing gaze of Him who knows the secret intents and thoughts of the heart.

A guest is one who is received and entertained for a short time. This definition is very applicable to the present condition of the church, which is the fold, containing both sheep and goats, wheat and chaff, consequently the great Inspector finds some here not having the wedding garment on; such are never admitted to the marriage supper of the Lamb.

The parable of the ten virgins also represents the present condition of the church, where the wise and foolish mingle together, but only the wise, the truly converted are permitted to enter the marriage chamber. The apostle tells the Corinthian church that he was "jealous over them with a godly jealousy." Why? "For I have espoused you to one husband that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ." 2 Cor. 11: 2. The apostle here evidently alludes to an officer among the Jews, called a paranymp, who had the care of virgins, and whose business it was to see them well educated, kept pure, and properly prepared for married life. This was a most important and responsible office, since the proper training of the virgin, her purity, and her accomplishments determined the efficacy of her paranymp. If he was conscious of having done his duty, and if his efforts were successful in the most perfect purity, and most splendid culture of his charge with what perfect confidence could he present his ward to her espoused husband. This friend of the bridegroom could stand by and rejoice greatly when he witnessed the entire satisfaction and joy of his master, knowing that his faithfulness was appreciated and approved. John, the Baptist represents himself as the paranymp of Jesus Christ, see John 3: 29, and Paul calls himself the paranymp, having charge of the Corinthian church, hence his jealousy over them and his anxiety to have them preserve their purity, to see them properly cultivated that he might have the satisfaction of presenting them to their heavenly husband in the highest state of perfection. Paul felt that much depended upon him as a minister of the Gospel. The purity of the church and her full development depended upon the proper discharge of his duties. Christ had entrusted His betrothed to him, her training and culture was given into his hands; the great apostle appreciated his honorable, yet difficult position. And does not every minister of Christ occupy this most responsible position? Oh, think of it, ye heralds of the Cross. To your care has been entrusted His dearly purchased betrothed. You are His paranymps. You will be held strictly accountable for your conduct. Should you fail to give proper warning of danger, or to impart proper instruction, and should the church prove unworthy through your neglect, how terrible will be the consequences. On the other hand, how great will be your joy, if at the appearing of your Lord each minister can deliver up his charge as a chaste virgin.

The seer of Patmos was permitted to see the church arrayed in her bridal robes, ready for the great nuptial feast. To John it was announced that the Lamb's wife had made herself ready, and he was directed to write, "Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb." Dear reader, are you getting ready for this great and glorious consummation? Are you clothing yourself with the wedding garment? Do you desire to be called to the marriage supper? Soon, it may be very soon, the midnight cry will be heard resounding through the universe, "Behold the bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him." MATTIE A. LEAR.

CALL NO MAN FATHER.

2. Also Matt. 23: 9: "And call no man your father upon the earth: for one is your father which is in heaven."

THIS language is spiritual. God is the Father of all that are born of the Spirit. Spiritually speaking, we should not be called rabbi for Christ is our Master, and we should not have a spiritual Master or Father on the earth. That is, we are not to say, I am of Paul or of Apollon, for that would be glorying in men and not in God. This Scripture prohibits the Lord's people from assuming, giving or receiving complimentary or honorable titles. To give such honor to men is to rob God.

The above Scripture does not prohibit the child from calling its parent, father, as some might suppose, for it is then used in a temporal sense and does not detract from honor due to God. But to call an elder, bishop, or minister that instructs us in the way of life, and baptizes and receives us into the church, Father, is detracting honor from God, and giving to men the praise due Him only.

HOMES.

BY MARY O. MILLER.

IN this our beautiful land, there are many homes. God looks into many happy homes in America. Yes, He sees them all; but God sees not as man sees. Man judges by appearances. God judges a righteous judgment. But which is the home that man would call happy? All men seek alike, wealth and happiness; so the wealthy home is considered the happy one. What does God say? "He that will love life and see good days, let him refrain his tongue from evil and his lips that they speak no guile. Let him eschew evil and do good; let him seek peace and ensue it. For the eyes of the Lord are over the righteous and his ears are open unto their prayers." How many run after happiness but mistake the means by which it is attained. "To love God and keep his commandments is the whole duty of man." If we can find a home like the home of Josiah, then no doubt we have found a home that is truly a happy one. Would to God that every home in this beautiful land this afternoon was such a home. How it would please our Creator to look upon and bless us with all needful blessings.

DOING GOOD.

BY A. W. VANIMAN.

AT the beginning of this century the Congregationalists contributed an average of eight cents for missionary purposes, now the average is $7.52 per annum, the largest sum contributed by the members of any congregation. — Golden Censer.

How does the Brethren's work compare with this? Estimating our members at one hundred thousand at that rate it would amount to $752,000.00 annually, and would support 1,504 missionaries, allowing each $500.00, or furnish over 500,000 persons with the BRETHREN AT WORK. But let us suppose each member only gives ten cents, it would then amount to $10,000.00, and support twenty missionaries, or furnish 6,666 persons with one of our papers. Although ten cents is only a dime, and seems but a trifle, see, picture, imagine, if you can, what might be accomplished by the above means: as you see dimes make dollars, and may be the power of bringing many souls to Christ, and what is one soul worth? Just stop and think! tremble at the consequences of your own covetousness, when you cannot give even one dime to forward the Master's cause. But, says one, what shall I do with my dime? Your way is open; here is the Danish Mission, and our editors propose to furnish their paper for one year for one dollar of money paid out of the Poor Fund. So ten dimes like yours would send a copy of the paper to some poor friend, and might be the means of bringing him upon the strait and narrow way.

Suppose a brother pays five dollars for tobacco in one year, which is a very low estimate, that would send the paper to four poor families, and leave one dollar to spend for tracts to distribute, and help the Danish Mission a little. Our brethren, as a body, seem to be very slow to take hold of such matters. Don't be afraid, it won't hurt you to send a dime for the Poor Fund or Danish Mission, and fifty cents, or a dollar, even, won't hurt. It is a good investment; for "He that giveth to the poor, lendeth to the Lord," and there is no danger but that He will pay up in due time. Let us who have the whole Truth, not keep it to ourselves, but impart it to others; it will do them good in time, and in eternity.

Vreden, Ill.

There are many persons who think they are Christians because they have had experience; but they do not feel it to be their Christian duty to use their tongues according to the laws of kindness. Nor do they think, in the confession of their sins, to confess that day in and day out, they are making somebody unhappy by the manner in which they use that member.

It is the good we do much more than that which is done for us that promotes our highest enjoyments.

Mourning pains are taken to appear good, or make vice pass for its opposite, than are required to be really virtuous.

So far but one life is reported lost. A great earthquake has probably occurred in South America, or in the South Pacific ocean.

—JEWISH religious papers have been publishing reports of cruelties perpetrated by Bulgarian peasants, some of which are almost too much for belief. One story is, that the president of the synagogue in Kasanlyk having been killed, his blood was caught in a bowl and mixed with the blood of a number of dogs. This liquor the Jews of the town, who were driven together with thrusts and blows, were forced to drink; and it is said that only the arrival of a body of Russian troops saved them from death.

—ENGLAND has been at war with France 226 years out of 670. The declaration of war passes sentence of death on thousands of our innocent fellow-creatures. If the legislators who provoke the battle were sent to fight, there would be more peace. The battle field is a theatre of immense cost for the commission of crime on a grand scale. A concentration of all human cruelties. It turns man into a beast.

CORRESPONDENCE.

From D. N. Workman.

ON Saturday, Nov. 2nd, at 7 o'clock P. M., met with a very large congregation in West Charleston, a small, but enterprising town in Miami Co. It is known as the Grove District church. I remained with the brethren of this town until Monday, the 4th. Baptized six; among the number was one brother, who had been raised a Catholic; hence had not enjoyed the privilege of seeing a Bible until seventeen years old, at which age he commenced to look after his duty for himself. He was then led to, and joined the Campbellites. After he joined them, he kept on searching carefully after his duty, toward God. After carefully looking the matter over, he saw that it was necessary to come to the Brethren, in order to comply with all the commandments of the Gospel. His wife, also, having previously joined the New-lights, became convinced she should also change relations; hence came with her husband to the Brethren.

In fact our visit was short, but sweet; and what added to its sweetness, was, that so many of the brethren and sisters from that thriving little church, known as the Gingham, or Middle District, where we had previously enjoyed many pleasant meetings, came over to see us at the thriving village. This District and Middle district of church, lay side by side. The Miami river is the line between them. May the Lord bless both of these churches, is my prayer.

Ashland, Ohio.

From Webster, Kansas.

WE have had meeting three miles south of Sabetha, Kansas. We moved here last March, and no members lived here except two families about three miles off. The people here soon tried to find out to what church we belonged and what our doctrine was, which we tried to explain to them as well as we could. They seemed to have heard of such people, who practiced such a doctrine, but never saw them or heard them preach; so they requested us to have some one come and preach for us. We saw the Brethren, and they were willing to give us a meeting every four weeks during the Summer. The people seemed to be very much interested, and during this Fall it was requested for the Brethren preach on doctrinal points, which was agreed to. Elder Jonathan Liehty and Epharim Cober then began a series of meetings, commencing on the 11th of November, and continued one week. They preached on doctrine three nights, with very good attention, the house being full every night, and could not all get in. The word was preached in its purity and with such power, that three precious souls were made to believe, and came to Christ by baptism. One was an elderly man about fifty years of age. He was a Campbellite preacher. His son, also, was made to believe the same night and come out and go with us to Christ. This seems to have caused a great lamentation in the C— church, as they have no preacher now to preach for them; and our doctrine was made so plain, that it seems to have caused some trouble amongst them in theirs. I hope they will consider it well and take the word of God to decide with. This seems to have been the first time true immersion was ever practiced here, and every one that knew it and could get there, seems to have been here. The applicants were immersed on Sunday the 17th, with about two hundred and fifty spectators present; a deep impression seemed to be made upon a great many of the people.— There are now thirteen members of us here, when E. Cober has moved to Sabetha, (which he will in a few days), consisting then of one preacher and one deacon and eleven members. The prospects are now that a good many more will come before long. I hope they will consider well and come before it is too late.

In the close I would say a few words to the Brethren and friends that wish to come West. We have a very fine country here, with plenty of timber and living streams running through it. There is yet plenty of raw prairie to be had at from six to eight dollars per acre, the very finest and close to the railroad and market. Also very fine improved farms can be bought very cheap. This is I think as fine and good a country to live and for farming and cattle raising, that can be found any where in the West. All those coming West, had best come through here and stop off at Sabetha, Kansas, and examine this part of the country, before going farther West, or purchasing elsewhere. I think most any can suit themselves here; it is beginning to be thickly settled, good schools and a very kind and sociable people living through here, about one-half Pennsylvanians. Think of us when you are coming West.— Brethren and sisters pray for us, that we may prove faithful until death, is the prayer of your unworthy brother, E. J. BEEHLEY. Sabetha, Kansas.

From C. F. Detwiler.

Dear Brethren:—

LIKE you, I have not yet fully learned the leaving out part, but have no complaint to lay against you on that point. It seems as though a person could take care of his own writings better than an editor could take care of that of a score of correspondents. I have told my scholars, you have each of you only one person to take care of, while I have often upwards of sixty, and so you ought to take good care of yourselves, and I suppose the rule holds good with editors and correspondents.

In one of my previous articles there were some mistakes made at your office, which made me say what I had not said. I think one of the editors was absent at the time. It is in the article on "On Improperities of worship," where I had written: "It does not follow that the atonement was incomplete," it read complete instead of incomplete, making me say the contrary of what I wanted it to say. It was an oversight very easily made, and yet somewhat injurious to the article. I might mention a few others, some of my own, but it is not necessary. The future is to some extent in our power, but the past is gone. I will try to do better in the future.

Beaver Ridge, Knox Co., Tennessee.

From C. Hope.

Beloved Brother:—

GREETING to you and all our spiritual relations in the far West. I have now been here in the vicinity of this town nearly one week, and held meetings every night. The weather has been very rainy from the beginning, and the priest and the Baptists had done all before hand to scare the people; of course slander, misrepresentations and lies are all they can use, but be it said to their honor, they use it every-where and all times very earnestly and faithfully. It did seem we should get only one meeting, as we tried in vain to get any place to hold more, and when the time came we had eight or nine persons present to preach the Gospel to. But I have learned now to preach as well for one as for one hundred. When meeting was closed I told them if they wanted more meetings they had to say so and furnish a place. A lively discussion then commenced; they all wanted meeting but none were inclined to give us their house. Finally I told the man who urged the others the most, that he was the one who ought to show a good example, and open his house. He then agreed to do so, providing I would invite people, and among them also the priest to attend. This we did, and had then a good gathering of about thirty or forty that night, (the priest was from home and could not come). Since then we have had meeting in this neighborhood every evening, with crowded houses, and an attentive, weeping congregation. We have had some little opposition, enough to make people more earnest.— One night as I spoke about Christ, that had blotted out the handwriting, a zealous old woman, belonging to a free Lutheran church, got mad and interrupted me. I told her to keep still till I was done, and then I would give her liberty to speak as long as she wanted, but this she would not do; she wanted to speak to me; I told her I would visit her the next day, and then she was calm. I went to see her; she had then gathered some of her friends, with whom we got along well, while she got still more mad and ran off crying, "heretic, heretic."

Last night when I was about to close, I remarked, perhaps some of you resisted the Holy Ghost until you now are old and grey-headed, and stand with one foot in the grave, how much do you need to take earnest heed lest you die in your sins. Just when I had half finished this sentence, an old man who had come here on a visit, tremblingly exclaimed, "That you do not know." I calmly answered, true I do not know it, but God does, and you yourself know it. After meeting we came in love to speak the matter over, and all, even the old man said, "Nothing but the truth was told them," but he did not like I would speak so personally to him. One man sitting by him said, "Well I for one am far more gray-headed than you, how can you know then he meant you more than me?" I told him I was glad he took it home to himself, for that was what I wanted every one to do. I certainly had meant him as well as every other old man and woman in the congregation. We parted as good friends, and he promised to come to meeting to-night.

The country here is good, rolling land, much like Carroll county, though soil not near as rich, but like all Denmark, most people have farms from ten to one hundred or a hundred and forty acres, yet the last sized are exceptions. The crop this year of all kinds is very good, but times for the working class are as hard yet as last year.

Some make inquiry where Thyland is? To such we will say that it is the south-western part of Wensyssel, some seventy miles from Hjorring. We have two members here, whom brother Christensen, now in Lanark was an instrument in the Lord's hands, to make them seek information about the Brethren. Now I fear some of our dear brethren and sisters commence to look on the Danish mission as old; hence feel to ask for more earnest faithful prayers for the progress, as well as for sufficient grace for myself and for our little church, to do what the Lord wants, and what you expect; and if you can more than pray for us, the church here, need badly your aid, give them a lift to push them forward. Remember always the Danish church is a child of yours. Please take care of her as such evermore. And now I will close with our love to you all.

Thisted, Thyland, Denmark, Nov. 13th, 1878.

From Pine Creek Church, Ind.

THE Lord is with his people when their entire dependence is in Him, in whom they live, move and have their being. We are still gathering souls and adding to the Lord's people traveling to the spiritual land. Our journey is but three score and ten, if long but four score and ten. Let God's people work while it is day.

To-day we preached the second funeral, assisted by brother Amos Peters, to a large, attentive and sympathetic congregation, in which many mingled their sorrows and prayers with the bereaved family of George Himes', who parted with two of his family in one week. Disease diphtheria; Elva Jane first, aged 12 years and 17 days; Cora, aged 2 years, 2 months and 7 days. Gone to rest. JACOB HILDEBRAND.

From Nebraska.

WE are highly pleased with the BRETHREN AT WORK, and think it brings us many useful instructions, if we are only willing to put them in practice.

The Bethel church, Nebraska, is progressing a little; one more was added to its number by baptism on last Sunday. May God give us grace to live near the foot of the cross, that we may at last receive a crown of glory, that fadeeth not away, is my prayer.

Letter from a Baptist.

Messrs. Moore & Eshelman:—

THROUGH the medium of the Toledo Blade, I first came into possession of a copy of the BRETHREN AT WORK, also, the Primitive Christian, by Mr. C. A. Mason, and have since received another copy from your office. Let me say right here, that I am a very plain open-spoken person. I was reared in the nurture and admonition of the Lord. My father deceased long ago; never made any public profession of religion, but was a very charitable, good moral man, and attended the Baptist church, of which my dear brother, and now, all of our family are members, but my oldest brother. I became a member of that denomination in the Winter of 1867. I have never attended any other church but a very few times. They seemed to me to be pursuing, us near the right course, according to my understanding of the New Testament as could be, except, recognizing that haughty pride as to all denominations, that I ever knew any thing about, and that is one thing I have always despised, and is contrary to divine teachings. Pride has worked a gigantic evil in the churches under my own observation, and is, I do regret to say, on the increase. I know of a great many of the middle class, and of the poorer people here, that stay away from meeting, for no other cause, only because they know they cannot go there in style. Go there feeling that they had come among Christian Brethren, to worship God according to the dictates of their own consciences, by having searched the Scriptures again and again. I am not a classical scholar, competent to express my meaning as a master in literature, but fan-minded and well-disposed people, will readily conceive what I infer. I have spoken of style. They do not wish to go there for style, far from it. They know that our blessed Master is no respecter of person. They hear preaching; but see another practice. They may go and return many times, and not one of the members (professed Christians), will even extend to them the hand of fellowship, much less inquire into the welfare of their families, simply because he or she is a poor person, and earns their bread by the sweat of their brow; and they say if that's Christianity, it's a misconception of mine. I will stay at home and read and study the Gospel myself, and pray to God for wisdom, knowledge and understanding of his holy will, concerning me, that I may inherit his precious promises. I am persuaded, their chances are better than the hypocrites; whilst others say they wont go where they are looked upon with scorn and contempt, but will likely spend their Sabbath in drunken revelry, and say it's no more than such and such professed Christians do.

I would to God that all people would try to serve Him in all his teachings. Pride is a curse, and it is a great hinderance to the advancement of the Gospel, in its true light among mankind.

Enclosed please find one dollar and fifty cents, for the BRETHREN AT WORK. I like its advocacy, also, fifteen cents for "Treatise on Trine Immersion;" that I know nothing of. If it is the only valid baptism, I want to know it, by proof from the Scriptures. I know there are commandments omitted in our church, for instance, feet-washing, anointing the sick with oil. I want to do my whole duty, whilst a probationer here; for I shall pass this way but once.

Yours respectfully,

JOHN P. SCHENCK.

Holmdel, New Jersey, Dec. 2nd, 1878.

From D. B. Gibson.

Dear Brethren:—

WHEN I arrived home from Ill., I learned that the feast at home (Smith's Fork church,) was a very enjoyable one. One from another locality baptized. The visiting ministers were, elder George Witwer, of Hamilton, A. Harper, of Ray County, Bro. Shomberger, of Nodaway, Samuel Shirkey of Ray, and others.

Brother Harper continued the meetings for a week, and I am glad to say, that three were added to the Lord, whom we longed to see engrafted in the "Living vine" Brother Harper, although in his seventieth year, is in the full enjoyment of his mental vigor and full of zeal for the cause of the Master. May the Lord give him many years to labor in his vineyard.

I remained home a little over two weeks to rest with my family, and was called by the Pony Creek congregation, Brown Co., Kansas, where I arrived on the 9th ult. Held meetings till the 18th. The Lord blessed our labor here; several made the good confession, and were baptized.

On the 19th I boarded the train for St. Joseph, Mo., where I arrived too late for the train. So I took another road for Cameron; thence home. I arrived home at 3 A. M. of the 20th, and in a few hours was en route for Ray Co., Mo. I arrived at the meeting-house just in time for services. The congregation is large and increasing every night. The order and interest is excellent. Several have already been added to the church, and we believe there will be more still. The church seems to be awakened, and a much improved feeling seems to prevail.

This is the congregation presided over by our old veteran brother, Addison Harper, who is assisted in the ministry, by Brother David Rhodes, Samuel Shirkey and William Mason.

I am now enjoying the hospitality of brother David Moore, father of brother J. H. Moore. Ray Co., Mo., Nov. 23rd, 1878.

From Lewistown, Winona Co., Minn.

Dear Brethren:—

PERMIT me to say to your numerous readers through the BRETHREN AT WORK, that our Love-feast held on the 2nd of November, was one of interest to all the members present, and one long to be remembered and should indelibly fix in our mind, the dying love of our Redeemer, whose dying love redeemed us from sin, that we might enjoy the fusion of the children of peace in that great Love-feast above. O, that that may be the happy lot of us all! Amen.

The call for ministerial assistance was responded to, by only one, and that was our worthy and beloved brother W. J. H. Bauman, of Nora Springs, Iowa, through whose instru-mentality, the blessed Lord worked to the edification and building up of the little branch here; also pointing sinners to the lamb of God, that taketh away the sin of the world. Three precious souls embraced the truth, fled for refuge to the out-stretched arms of mercy, and were brought into the fold by baptism.

Yours in the one faith,
C. F. WINT.

Timely Notice.

BY your permission, I pen a few lines for the columns of the BRETHREN AT WORK, for the satisfaction of the many members that are moving and looking West for homes. One of the many places that the Brethren are moving to and settling in fast, is Beatrice church, Gage Co., Neb. For the satisfaction of those members that are moving West, and intend making this their home, and that only feel at home, where the church contents and carries out the order of the Gospel in the point of dress, as is understood by the church, (that is to give shape to dress), need not fear to make this their home, for only such feel at home here. We have long since learned, that this is the only successful place to keep pride out of the church, in its various forms. When we speak of order, we do not only mean in the point of dress; but in keeping a strong guard around the members of the church, in attending all places of mirthful amusement, in which all Christians should blush to be found in such company, from the fact, that this is the desire of the carnal mind; and to be carnal minded, is death. I feel to say, dear Brethren, watchmen with me on the walls of Zion, send forth as peals of thunder, the alarming voice, to keep out the elements of death. For this cause, many are weakly and sickly among you, because the spiritual laws are violated. So we need not wonder at such a lukewarmness, and such an indifference in many places of the brotherhood; because they are associating with, and giving encouragement to that element that leads to death.— There is a good reason why many ministers do not raise their voices against these growing evils. The apostle says, "Ye that are spiritual, restore such that are overtaken in faults." How can they that are guilty of the same, restore such, when they are not in the spirit themselves? Suppose I give a remedy in the case referred to: Come together and confess your faults one to another, and form a resolution to follow the things of the spirit, then you can be restored in the spirit of meekness.

For the benefit of those that are moving West, or at least to this point, that are indifferent to the above named rules of the church, and do not conform to them; (I mean non-conformity to the world in dress, and all things referred to in this article). I will give you timely warning, that the church here will not patronize such customs, and if you think you can not come to the order of the church in these matters, and determine, not to comply with the promise you made to the church, and continue to carry out your own selfish notions and carnal desires, in love I would say to you, you had better select some other point for a home in the church, for you would not be at home here, (I mean in spiritual matters).

I truly hope the brethren and sisters will not take any offense at this article, for I feel constrained through love to my dear brethren and sisters, so they will not be ignorant in these matters; because the Brethren always love to know these things. Hence I thought an explanation of this kind would render great satisfaction, from the fact, many have a delicacy to write for information on these points, and many have these things in view, not only for their own benefit, but for the welfare of their children. May the Lord strengthen his faithful, to labor in love and wield more of that influence, to instill more of that divine converting influence over his church. Not my, but thy will be done.

Yours in love of the truth,
HENRY BILKAWER,
Beatrice, Gage Co., Neb.

To the Brethren of Western District of Maryland.

HAVING been appointed Treasurer of the Missionary Association of this District, and there being inquiries concerning the work, I will say that collectors have been appointed by the Executive Committee in the several churches. In our church the work of collecting has been carried forward as well as could be expected. As yet no money has been received by me. May we hope that our benevolent amount may be donated to send our brethren to those who have not yet learned to obey the whole Gospel? What say our beloved brethren and sisters? Shall the good work go on?

Dear Brethren:—

AS church news are interesting to all, I will try to give an account of a series of meetings, held at the Shaprell school-house. Bro. W. Myers commenced meeting on the evening of the 22nd of November, preached again on the evening of the 23rd; then elder George Wolf came and assisted him. Preaching Sunday at 11 A. M. Also in the evening.

On Monday we visited sister Lauer. She is seventy-six years old, and it has been twenty-six years since she has had the privilege to commune. She says that she has always prayed that she might meet with brethren and sisters again. Her faith has grown stronger and stronger. She expects soon to hold sweet communion with her Redeemer, there to meet that blood-washed throng, that surrounds the throne of God, singing praises to the Lamb forever and ever. Her daughter, who she is living with, requested to be baptized. Preaching again Monday evening, also, Tuesday evening. Two came forward and were baptized.

Our meeting closed Tuesday night. Since then we learn there are three others that will go along, and we think there are many others, if they would only obey what they know to be the teaching of the word of God. O, that they might give up their own will, and do the will of Him, who died to redeem all those that walk in His ways, and observe all things whatsoever he has commanded them! Then the promise is sure, and we will never be doubting; always pressing onward and upward to the high calling, which is in Christ Jesus.

We had a very good meeting, and one long to be remembered. The brethren preached the word with power, warning sinners to return, and exhorting all to live a quiet and peaceable life, in the fear of the Lord.

Sunday-School Conference.

NOTICE is hereby given, that the Northern District of Ind., will hold their Annual Sunday-school Conference at the Solomon's Creek church, Elkhart Co., Ind., January 2nd, 1879, commencing at 10 A. M. Those coming from the South, will stop off at the Baltimore crossing, and those from the North, at New Paris, on the R. R. running from Goshen to Warsaw. This is the 4th annual session of the Sunday-school workers of this district, and it is hoped the brethren and sisters interested in the advancement of the cause, will make special arrangements to attend this meeting, and assist to make it pleasant and highly beneficial to the general cause of Sunday-schools.— May all bear in mind there is an important work to perform; and of such a character, that a good representation is necessary to accomplish the object of the meeting.

When the 3rd Annual Conference adjourned at the Union church, Marshall Co., Ind., Dec. 5th, 1877, the meeting agreed to meet again at such a time and place, as a committee appointed to attend to the business, should designate. The Chairman of said committee notified me to give notice as above, with no programme accompanying, which, we presume, will be given in due time. It is supposed all will know their duty, and promptly discharge the same, by attending the coming Conference; and make it one of the greatest efforts in the cause of the Sunday-schools of Northern Ind. May God inspire our thoughts with love divine, to work in the cause of our Master, in the vineyard of Sunday-schools.

Notes of Travel.

BROTHER Jacob Rife and myself left our homes Nov. 7th, and met in Montgomery Co., Ind., to be in council with brother R. H. Miller, in regard to the numbers living in Martin and Warren counties, as brother Miller has the oversight of them.— After being in council we started on the Mission Field. We commenced traveling the same evening, at West Lebanon, Va. and continued till the 13th inst. In the evening we had a lovely evening, which was only a season of enjoyment. As we were over, we bade them farewell. Many of us should come again. On the morning of the 14th, we started for Jackson Co., a distance of 169 miles. Arrived at Crothersville 9:15 P. M. Stayed with brother and sister Schoonover, living near the depot. Next morning went to brother and sister Wilson. On the evening of the 15th, we commenced meeting. At first the attendance was not so large, but after a few meetings, we had a full house, with good order. We continued the meetings for thirteen days, and baptized eight. Brother Rife did not stay all the time, as his health failed. The prospects are good for many more additions. We will return again as soon as convenient. May the blessings be with them, is our prayer.

JOHN W. METZGER.

BRETHREN AT WORK SUPPLEMENT.

We take this Method of addressing you.—of talking with you, because we think it the best. We aim to have as little business matter as possible in the paper, since many of its readers use them as "silent missionaries" after they read them. There are thousands of observing persons, who make no profession, that know what should constitute a religious journal; hence we shall try to keep our paper as free of objectionable matter as possible. This sheet is purely business; can be read and treated as such, while the BRETHREN AT WORK proper, can go on in its mission of love and good works.

Through the kind providence and tender mercies of our heavenly Father, we are permitted to thus address our numerous readers regarding the preparations for the coming year, and the publication of Volume IV of the BRETHREN AT WORK. We take this method of having a talk with you regarding that which will be, both to your interest and ours. It is evident that our success depends largely on the efforts made by our readers, hence the importance of having a clear understanding with them in reference to our work. We have many reasons to feel thankful for the aid and encouragement already received. So far our success, as editors and publishers, has been far beyond what we had any reason to expect, thus placing the BRETHREN AT WORK on a good, solid footing. When we first started into business, we had no experience as editors or printers, but were full of zeal and a determination to work for the interest of the cause. To save expenses and make our work a success, we had to do double the amount of work that we ought to have done, and so passed weeks with work that most all of our editors had to be written after night, and mostly in great haste. But now we have so arranged that more attention can be given to the contents of the paper, and are satisfied that we can make the paper far superior to what it has been.

The Ray and Stein Debate will add much to the interest of the paper, causing it to be read by thousands with great anxiety to see and understand the truth. This discussion will last over one year, and will be, perhaps, the most thorough thing of the kind ever published among our people. Efforts should be made to get it into the hands of every family in the country, for it will evidently be a power for good.

Special Efforts will be made, to make the entire paper still better. We have now the largest selection of able contributors in the Brotherhood, and are confident that each one will make special efforts to render the coming volume one that will be highly prized by our readers.

The Editorial Department will be conducted with much more care than formerly. Much attention will be given to leading and valuable topics, that will be of great interest to the reader, and tend largely to having the distinctive claims of the Brethren more clearly understood, and more extensively circulated. You know what has been done in the past, and God being our helper, you may look for still better in the future. We shall be at particular pains to keep our readers posted on the great Eastern Question as it sustains a relation to the fulfillment of prophecy. The present grand movement now going on in the Eastern Continent, indicating the rapidly approaching events that are to precede the restoration of the Holy Land to the Jews. This part alone will be very interesting, besides other things too numerous to mention, but known to our readers. Volume IV will commence Jan. 1, 1879, and as not one of our readers want to miss any part of the debate, it is needless that their names be sent in early that they be entered on our books in good time. Please do not wait till the beginning of the year, for at that time we have more work than we know how to get through with, and then just at that time when there is so much to do, is when we make most of our mistakes. Another reason why names should be in early, is this: All the names are set up in type, and if not renewed by the first of January, our rule is to take them out. Then if they renew after that we have to go to the trouble of setting up the names again, which makes double trouble, and renders us liable to more mistakes.

Our Prospectus will be sent to all our agents, and should any be missed, it will be by mistake, and they will come in a favor by informing us of it at once, and they shall be supplied. Any person wishing to act as agent will drop us a card, and we will cheerfully send them an outfit. We would not like too many agents at any one point, as their work might interfere with each other. It is best to help the regular agent all we can. Price of the Paper is $1.50 per annum in advance. Any one who will send us eight names, and $1.00 will receive an additional copy free of charge. Agents will see prospectus for additional terms. In many localities our readers prefer Clubbing Together, and thereby equally share the benefit of whatever reduction may be given. In order to accommodate such, we will give the following terms:

Clubs of 5 and under $1.45, each.
" " 7 " " 1.40, each.
" " 11 " " 1.40, each.
" " 41 " " over $1.35, each.

Care should be used so that clubbing rates will not interfere with regular agents' work. Club rates are more intended for small congregations where agents cannot work so successfully. Parties who avail themselves of club rates, should, without fail, send their names with the names, and not make returns on expenses of sending.

To the Poor who are unable to pay for the paper, it will be sent for one dollar a year, the money to be raised by contributions sent us for that purpose. It would be best to raise the money in the church where such poor persons live. No name can be placed on the poor list, unless one of our agents, or some one known to us, certifies that said person is unable to pay for the paper. We adopt this method to prevent being imposed upon. Hope all our readers will contribute something to the poor fund, and thus enable us to supply many of the poor and needy with the paper. Poor people, who have not much of this world's goods, take great delight in reading the BRETHREN AT WORK, and derive much comfort from it. They do not fail to lend a helping hand to the poor.

Cash System.—So far we have been doing a good deal of business on credit and find the system does not work well, but in many ways gives much dissatisfaction, though it is quite an accommodation to some. Many of our agents are urging us to adopt the cash system, believing it will be much easier on them. The price of the paper is only $1.50, and in clubs less, and it is an easy matter to get that small amount of money. It is not always good to go into debt, especially when you can get the loan of it from a brother or neighbor for a few days, and then you can hand it back to him, whenever you get it. Then it makes one feel better to read a paper already paid for. Hop all our readers will do their utmost to pay their subscriptions when they renew, and thus enable us to fully adopt the regular cash system. We have agents who will not take a name without the money, and yet they send in large bills, and then you know, if your paper is paid for, you will never get "dunned." It is very unpleasant for us to "dunce" any one, we avoid it all we can. By having our money in advance, so we can pay in advance for the large quantity of paper we have to purchase at the beginning of the year, we go this much better besides saving a large amount of money. So let us try the cash system one year, and see how it goes. We have considerably standing out yet, that we would like paid in as soon as possible. All we ask of our readers, is to do the best they can. They have done nobly so far, and we hope we can continue our work together, and work for each other's benefit. Care should be taken in Sending Money. It is not safe to send much money in a letter without registering. Silver should not be sent in letters at all. Send Post Office Orders, Drafts or Registered Letters.

Postage Stamps may be sent in any amount under one dollar, if it is much prefer the money in Postal Order.

The Children at Work is the most interesting, illustrated paper, intended for the little folks. It is now being published weekly, and is an excellent favor to send the children in the Brotherhood, and promises to do a good work in the matter of training children in the way they should go. Price 50 cents per annum. Our first and the BRETHREN AT WORK will be sent to hands of the clerk.

We respectfully solicit the aid of our readers in extending the circulation of our paper. Persons wishing to do so, should send us their names and addresses, and we will send them an outfit for the first year free of charge. Wm. A. S. Brown,

Brethren at Work Supplement.

A PLEA FOR THE POOR.

"Ye have the poor with you always, and whenever ye will, ye may do them good." — Mark 14: 7.

1. The Lord addresses his disciples,
2. He tells them the poor are always among them.
3. Those who can, may do them good, whenever they will.

Now there are many poor members who would receive strength and encouragement by reading the BRETHREN AT WORK, but are unable to pay anything towards it. Nor are we able to supply them all, and bear the whole burden. During the present year we have supplied about 200 persons with the paper, at our own expense, saying nothing about other losses. Having commenced the publication of the BRETHREN AT WORK with less than ten dollars of our own money, and having thousands of dollars of expenses annually, we do not yet feel able to continue supplying at our own cost. We therefore call upon each of our readers to donate something to a fund to be used in supplying the poor of the church the coming year. A little from each one will be a great help, and will gladden the hearts of hundreds who may be comforted by reading that, cheerfully donated to them by others. In this way the Gospel can be preached to many, who otherwise would not enjoy its benefits.

To the poor we will send the paper one year for $1.00, where it is paid for out of the fund donated for this purpose. It would, however, be best, to raise the money in the church where such poor persons live, and in that way supply the poor with the paper. No name can be placed on the poor list, unless one of our agents, or some one known to us, certify, in writing that said person is too poor to pay for the paper. We adopt this method to prevent being imposed upon. We shall publish, in the business department all money received and appropriated for this purpose, in order that the donors may know, just what is being done with their money.

AGENTS' OUTFIT.

Any one wishing an outfit, in order to obtain subscribers, will please send us their address on a postal card.

BACK NUMBERS CONTAINING THE DEBATE.

We can still supply back numbers containing the debate, from the beginning, but they are going pretty fast. Those not taking the paper, and wishing the entire debate, should send in their names soon.

BOOKS AND PAMPHLETS.

On the opposite side of this supplement will be found a list of some of the books and pamphlets, kept at this office. Send for some, read and lend to your neighbors.

POOR MINISTERS.

We desire also to send the paper free to all poor ministers. These require the special attention of all who are blessed with this world's goods. Their hardships are many, and too often they must struggle against poverty amidst their holy calling. Our hearts are enlarged for the needy, and hope all who are able, will come and help us to help the poor. The amount, whether large or small, will be thankfully received.
